The wide-spread demand, all over the country, that Sunday work in postoffices be dispensed with, is receiving due attention by the postal authorities at Washington, and ere long arrangements will doubtless be made by which postal employés may enjoy the privilege of Sunday rest and worship. This is no more than right, and long before this such a concession should have been freely granted. No one can do his best work when called to his task seven days in the week. Then, too, an open post-office on Sunday has always been a prominent factor in secularizing the day. In many instances children are told to call for mail on their way home from Sunday-school. That, certainly, is not training them "to remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy." By all means let Christian people lend their support to the closing of post-offices and all other places of business, and let there be a greater reverence for the day in general.

A Wonderful Change.

Perhaps the most marvelous transformation in heather lands is that of the home after Christ has changed the life of the inmates. Of the humble wife in a Korean home it was recently said that she never knew, before her husband's conversion, what it was to eat a meal in the same room with him. He would eat in the reception room, while she would eat from the earth floor of the kitchen. Often the husband would call her insulting names, and when drunk would maltreat her shamefully. But all was changed when Christ assumed control of that house. Not once has the husband treated the wife unkindly. They have their meals and prayers together and the husband always speaks gently, and considers the wife his equal. With tears of happiness the wife said, "The past life was a bad dream; the present is a foretaste of heaven. We did not know what love was until Christ came into our home to teach us."

Keep Pace with Christ.

"The Christian Sun," in a recent editorial, makes use of these words: "If the church would keep pace with the world, it must undertake great things for God. Undoubtedly many of the deplorable departures in the Christian church today are due to this very thing of "keeping pace with the world." The only safe way is to "keep pace with Christ." The world is going on its own way,—downward,—while the church must needs go in quite another direction,—in the rugged, toilsome way in which Christ walks with all those who are willing to "keep pace with him." If the church would "undertake great things for God," it must go forward under the blood-stained banner of Christ. By that sign we conquer.

Remarkable Changes in Bolivia.

Spanish America, for many years, was closed against Bible distribution, and Protestant mission work in general. Up to a few years ago the penal code of Bolivia decreed that the establishing of any religion but that of the Roman Catholic Apostolic Church should make the person so doing "a traitor who shall suffer the penalty of death." The present condition of affairs in that country, however, tells another story. Rome no longer rules with an autocratic and intolerant hand. Liberty is given to all religious workers to distribute the Blessed Bible and to tell the gospel story. If we may believe the reports, now being made public, Bolivia is ready for the truth as it is in Christ Jesus,—"a field white unto the harvest,"—but where are the reapers?

Liberal Theology a Failure.

Germany has for years been the home of liberal thought in matters of religion. Looking at the actual results accomplished by the movement it is readily seen that the masses have rejected it, and that the educated have accepted it only in small numbers. Dr. Rittelmeyer, of Nuremberg, frankly acknowledges, in one of the leading journals, that "the weakness of liberal theology is its intense intellectualism,—a culture of the head rather than the heart." And we are frank to confess that any departure from the "old faith as it is in Christ Jesus" is sure to bring with it a leanness of soul that is most deplorable. The so-called "liberalism" has, as a rule, robbed humanity of the vital essence of Christianity and given to hungering souls but the dry husks of human theories and "science falsely so called."

Commendable Sunday-school Activity.

That no one is ever too old to attend Sunday-school is being demonstrated most effectually by a class in the Baptist Sunday-school of Marlboro, Mass. Its teacher, eighty-six years of age, missed but one Sunday last year. Most of the eighteen members of the class are grandmothers, and all have the distinction of a ripe old age. All, too, are remarkably regular in attendance, one of the number having been present each Sunday for four years. We mention this most commendable example of Sunday-school activity to put to shame the many who, because of advancing years, absent themselves from Sunday-school and church, thereby not only losing much that is helpful, but inspiring than to see the entire congregation, so far as able, represented in the work of Bible study. Even the oldest is but a learner in the great school of Christ, but none are ready to graduate until the Master says, "Come up higher!"

Russian War on Jews.

For several decades Russian maltreatment and persecution have embittered the life of the Jewish people in the land of the Czar. While the bloody massacres have given place to a more silent but prayerful persecution and extermination, the spirit of intolerance is none the less bitter and implacable. Merciless repression and degradation are now the order of the day. A limitation of the right of residence confines the Jews to certain localities only. Willing or unwilling, about ninety-five per cent of "Israel's Chosen Race" are confined to certain sections of Poland and the "Pale of Settlement." They are forbidden to settle in any of the villages not so designated and are not allowed to move from one village to another. Even a temporary absence from the allotted place is sufficient to forfeit the right of residence. In many places, throughout Russia, a commercial boycott practically deprives the Jews of a means of livelihood, and the Ministry of Education has closed to them many schools and universities. It is not to be wondered at that insanity has increased among the persecuted people and that thousands have become beggars,—not from choice but from necessity. Many Jewish bankers of England, Germany and America have refused to enter into financial dealings with Russia while these atrocities against their brethren continue, but their remonstrance seems to be of small avail. It appears that the unfortunate people must drink, to the bitter dregs, the cup of suffering allotted them by ancient prophecy.

Self-Supporting Churches in China.

Those who have been connected longest with mission efforts in China, rejoice in the thought that some of the older congregations of native Christians are self-supporting, and that others are making every effort to reach the same desirable end. Such a result is entirely logical, according to apostolic precedent. A child learns to walk by actually walking, and it is no more than right that those who have been nurtured in the work of the Lord should finally reach the stage where they can take care of themselves, and, in turn, teach others. A mistake that is often made in mission efforts is the continual hedging in and providing for a mission post that long since should have been self-supporting. In this respect the commendable example of the Chinese Christians, above referred to, might serve to inspire others to a like endeavor, and a "readiness for every good work."

The Bible in India.

One of the most encouraging signs of gospel progress in India is seen in the growing popularity of the Bible. Like in the United States, the Bible bids fair to be the "best seller" in India, and to so continue in increasing ratio. Recently a high-caste Brahman professor, in an address to students in the city of Lahore, North India,—Hindus, Mohammedans and Parsees,—made use of these remarkable words of testimony: "I have read through the Bible carefully, not only once, but many times. I consider the Sermon on the Mount one of the greatest pieces of moral and religious literature in the world. I venture to say that the students of India know the Bible better than they know any book, even that of Hinduism." Such is the impression that the Bible makes on minds untainted by atheistic doubts. Truly, "The entrance of thy Word giveth light."

Sepulchres of an Early Christian Era.

A group of archæologists under Lieut. Bouvet, and working under the auspices of the Government of Tunis, have been making some interesting finds in North Africa, of late, the most important being the remains of a Roman fortification at Ras-el-Ain, Tialet. While similar, in most respects, to the hundreds of fortified legionary camps, once to be found in every quarter of the world that Rome ruled, the Christian remains, found in the underground vaults of this particular fortification, are of special interest. The inclosure is about 300 feet square, with walls five feet in thickness. In the numerous underground cavities and niches are found lamps, vases, and other articles, which, together with the well-preserved inscriptions, clearly indicate that at one time the bodies of Christians reposed in these silent chambers of the dead. The discovery also confirms the previously-urged assertion that during the first few centuries after Christ there must have been flourishing congregations of Christians in North Africa.

Perplexities of a Missionary in Alaska.

Varied were the experiences of a missionary at Cape Prince Wales, Alaska, who succeeded in establishing a church of two hundred members and a Sunday-school of three hundred and fifty. He describes the great difficulty encountered in getting the people to understand the true import of Bible figures and imagery. He found it useless to refer to the words of the familiar first psalm, where it is said of the righteous, "He shall be like a tree," for the natives, whom he was addressing, were two hundred miles from the nearest tree, and had never seen a tree nor its foliage. Their only wood was water-logged, branchless driftwood. The same comment was true of the parables of the fig-tree and the vine and its branches were meaningless to his hearers. Neither the shepherd psalm nor any reference to the sheep, had any significance to his humble listeners, for the only domestic animal known to them is the dog, and that, in Alaska, is neither domestic nor an object of endearment. And yet, when it came to the great, all-sufficient teaching on love, the missionary found a ready point of contact in the figure of the family, in which God is Father and all men and women are children. That appeal proved as forcible to the hardy Eskimos of the North as to the dwellers under the gentler skies of Syria. The Great Book, in some way, adapts itself to all, giving to each "a portion of meat in due season."

The Gracious Call.

BY J. O. BARNHART.

While trav'ling up the highway,
Amid the heat and dust,
When heavy grows our burden,
And weak our faith and trust,
To still the fretful murmur,
And check the labored sigh,
There comes a call of mercy,
A heart-rejoicing cry.

Ho, all ye thirsty ones! Come unto me!
The water of life is now flowing so free.
At the life-giving fountain of mercy there's room,
And whosoever heareth and willeth may come.

Ye who from morn till noontide,
Have labored in the field,
And gathered for the Master
The precious, precious yield,
Beneath the scorching sunbeams,
Ready to faint and fall,
Lift up your drooping spirits,
And hear the loving call.

Oh, wanderer in the desert,
Bewildered and distressed,
No sheltering tree yields shadow,
Where weary souls may rest,
Behold, an ever-living stream,
To cheer and renovate thy soul,
The wondrous stream, salvation,
From Jesus' side it rolls.

Oh, may no thirsty pilgrim
Neglect the gracious call,
For at the sparkling fountain,
There's room enough for all.
Each trav'ler from his trouble
May here find sweet release,
And he that hath no money,
May purchase life and peace.

Follow Me.

BY D. D. CULLER.

As Jesus was one day walking by the Sea of Galilee, he saw Simon, who was called Peter, in company with his brother, Andrew, casting a net into the sea, and he said to them, "Come, follow me and I will make you fishers of men." They left their nets and followed him.

As he was going on a little farther he saw two other brothers, James and John, who were mending their nets. He spoke to them. Perhaps he said the same thing to them. At any rate, they left their ship and their father, and followed him.

When he was talking to another of the disciples, who expressed a wish to first bury his dead father, Christ said, "Follow me and let the dead bury their dead."

And again, when he was passing by and saw Matthew at his place of business, gathering taxes, he said to him, "Follow me," and Matthew did so.

While speaking to Peter Christ said, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, take up his cross and follow me."

When the young lawyer was to be answered, as to the best way to secure eternal life, he was told that if he would be perfect, he should sell all that he had and give it to the poor, and then Christ added, "Follow me." However, the young man did not do as bidden, but went away sorrowful.

When Christ found Philip he said to him, "Follow me."

In the winter time, at the Feast of Dedication, when upon Solomon's porch the Jews came to Christ, begging him to tell them plainly if he were the Messiah, he told them that his sheep knew his voice and followed him. Here he plainly indicated that following is a characteristic of discipleship.

Again Christ said, "If any man will serve me let him follow me" (John 12:26), which teaches plainly that serving and following are, in some respects, synonymous.

I think it will be worth our while to study a bit the phrase, "Follow me," as expressing a characteristic mark of discipleship. In the first place, let us put the emphasis upon the word "follow." If we do so we shall find that we have divided men into two classes: those who lead, and those who follow. Most of us are followers. Some of us follow one thing and some another. Perhaps we have never so seriously considered the result of following, yet I believe that our characters depend very much upon the objects we honor in our following.

If I should follow a dog, I shall likely learn how to bark and bite. If I should follow a fox in his cunning, I shall most likely learn how to scheme and deceive. If I should follow a weasel in his thirst for blood, I shall be taught how to kill for pleasure. If I should follow the proud peacock, he will show me how to strut and to admire myself. To follow a fish, is to learn to swim. To follow a bird, is to learn to fly. To follow a hog, in his selfish independence, may make me a bigot or a millionaire. By all of this I am taught to understand that following is imitating. It is upholding the thing I follow. It is striving to attain to the likeness of the object I follow. For me, in life, it means association, out of which inevitably grows mutual support, comradeship, fellowship, brotherhood.

Those with whom I associate, I support and they support me. Our association makes us intimate comrades. Our communion and fellowship ends in the closest tie of life,—brotherhood,—with a common Father, a common home, a common destiny.

Following ends in the fullest realization of the language of the Psalmist: "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness; I shall be satisfied when I awake in thy likeness" (Psa. 17:15). And also in the realization of Paul's language: "But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass, the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image, from glory to glory, even as by the spirit of the Lord" (2 Cor. 3:18).

Thus we are able to embody his Divine attributes, thus we are able to attain complete fellowship, receiving from him the staunchest support and in our association with him realizing the sweetest fellowship, the closest, holiest bond which can be expressed only by the word brotherhood. We shall be like him as sons of the same Father, as twins in the same home, and this highest and holiest relationship we reach through our following Christ.

Then, if we put the emphasis upon the me, we divide men into two classes again,—those who follow Christ, and those who follow some one else.

Christ said to Peter, Andrew, James and John, "Leave your nets." He said to a disciple, "Leave the dead to bury themselves." He said to Matthew, "Leave your tax-gathering." He said to the young lawyer, "Give away all you have." He said to all of us, when he was talking to Peter, "Leave self behind," and he says to all of us now, "Follow me." And he says it with the emphasis upon the me as well as upon the follow, for he means that we shall follow him, not that we shall follow his teaching, or that we shall keep his commandments, or that we shall do his ordinances, but more particularly that we shall follow him as a person, as a brother. Indeed, the charm of personality far surpasses any power that a teaching or a commandment or an ordinance may possess. This power of the person of a leader lies in the magnetic charm which the flush of life lends to man.

I would not have us forget the exalted moral teachings of Christ nor his direct commandments, neither would I have us lose sight of the ordinances of his house, but I should like to have us make the distinction between the person and the truths which he may teach. In our high ideal there is no conflict between Christ and what he taught, for his life was a constant, concrete embodiment of all that he taught, but his teachings and his commandments, when placed alongside of himself, are as dried grass compared with the living, breathing blossom. In him was life and light and the fullness of power, and we are to follow him as a Leader, as a Savior, as the highest possible Ideal.

In the next place, let me barely mention what the costs of the following will be. As in the time when Christ walked upon earth, so now. If we would follow him, we must pay the price of business, of possessions, of ourselves. No one can be a follower who willfully takes his own way. No one can be a comrade who will not yield to the wishes of his companion. No one can be a brother who will not share the Father's inheritance. For fellowship, then, we must pay the price of brotherhood, though it may cost our all.

Then, in the last place, it is worth while to think where this following will take me, where it will take you. Though I may be upon the troubled sea, the following of the Christ will take me into the calm and the peace of life.

Though my limbs may be stiff in palsy and helpless in self-service, the following of Christ will instill into them new strength and new vigor. Though I may have lost a dearest friend, in the darkest hour of bereavement, the following of the Christ will give to me a ray of hope and the sweetest of all assurances for the future.

And lastly, when time with me shall be no more, and I, too, must pass beyond, I may rest certain that the following of the Christ here will give me fellowship in the world beyond. And then, though the cost may seem great, is not the reward great, also? May the following of the Christ, now, assure for each one of us the sweetest of fellowship beyond the stars!

"The Best Methods."

BY M. M. ESHELMAN.

GOSPEL MESSENGER editorial in No. 4, invites articles on "the best method" for a preacher of common education to prepare for the ministry. What might be the best method to me, might appeal to another as quite inferior; so there is not any "best method" for all. I shall here give the method I should pursue were I again to travel over the pathway of life.

I have been a greedy devourer of truth all my life, and, of course, sometimes got untruth mixed in, for want of "wisdom." The working out of this "inferior stuff" consumed some time and gave prejudice some very hard hurts.

Firstly, I would read the Pentateuch carefully.
Secondly, I would read the Book of John.
Thirdly, I would read the Book of John.
Fourthly, I would read the Book of John.

By this time I should be sure that great bundles of Divine Love would garnish my soul, without which no preacher should go into the pulpit.

Then I should read the Book of John to get the very words of Jesus,—get them to stick fast in my mind.

Next I should go carefully over the Pentateuch to know God's creations (generations) in the physical, mental, and spiritual universes. I would carefully note "generation," in the first two chapters of Genesis; the great "degeneration" in Genesis, three to eleven; the process of regeneration in twelve to fifty. Then I would find out the development of God's government in a national way in Exodus. From chapter one to five, inclusive, I would find out about the "bondage." From six to eighteen, the "deliverance." From nineteen to forty, the "organization."

By this course, through Genesis and Exodus, I would learn how God carried the institution of worship from the beginning, with the altar service, on up through the family to the nation, testing man's capacity for governing and being governed.

Next I should want to study Leviticus and Romans together, with great care. Reading Matthew, Mark, and Luke, rapidly twice, I would note the redemptive features of the Christ. I would find, in Leviticus, "dedication," "meditation," "separation," "consecration," and "ratification." This working with Romans would greatly simplify my knowledge,—the reasons for the redemptive processes.

Now I would want to become very familiar with the doctrine of the Holy Spirit, as taught from Genesis to Revelation. Bro. E. B. Hoff would furnish me with this in a very simplified form, and save me much time in searching for the order of his workings. I should consider myself not half prepared until I knew the work and power of the Holy Spirit, and very poorly equipped for right living until I was familiar with the Holy Spirit, and the Holy Spirit with me. Without this familiarity I might become "lop-sided,"—too mental and materialistic in my ministry. I could not at all get on without the Spirit's animations.

As I moved along on these lines, I would want to put in the spare moments (waiting for meals, riding on cars, walking to the fields for mere sight-seeing, waiting for calls, etc., etc.,) by reading the history of Assyria, Babylon, Rome, Greece, Israel, Moab, Edom, Egypt, Ammon, Amalek, Philistia. I must know these in order to understand the prophetic writings.

"Would you read works that give inspiration to your Bible studies?" Yes, I should find time to read Gordon and Pierson on the Holy Spirit, "Natural Law in the Spiritual World," "Progress in the Life to Come," "Satan and Saint," "From Passion to Peace," the "Brethren's Publications," and other useful helps. I should even then have time to get my Sunday-school lesson well, and preach once or twice each Sunday, write for the press and call upon the sick, go to love feasts, conferences, and make a living.

"Would you use commentaries?" Not until I was so fixed in God's doctrines that men's views against some of his doctrines could not work into my faith. I find that the parallel teaching or correlated passages are far preferable to commentaries. What one ordained writer says is often clearly explained by another of God's Holy-Ghosted writers in the Book, and thus the mind is satisfied and enriched from above. False philosophies are just as ruinous to the mind as the ancient ones. In most cases modern false philosophies are only rehashes of ancient false ones under new names. They are only old bottles with new labels.

In this "method" of preparation I should fervently include the memorizing and use of a number of Psalms. The book should often be read to prepare for excellent worship. No, I would diligently oppose any tendency in my study to be more concerned for my "firstlies," "secondlies," "thirdlies," than for the home-sending of spiritual truths. Often the water is poured out more effectually from "a rusty tin cup" than from a golden goblet. It is not human sound, but the "Divine Sound," as of a mighty rushing wind, that shakes human souls into upward bounds.

Of course, in a brief article like this, some needful details must be omitted, but be sure to get the Book, and then the Book shall get such a hold on you that you can "make full proof of your ministry."

A Buckeye.

BY JAMES N. NEFF.

I PRESUME at least all of the older residents of Ohio know why it is called the "Buckeye State," but natives or residents of Ohio are not the only people that know something of the buckeye, and remember that it is one of the first trees of the forest to put out its leaves in the spring. Here in California we have them, and here they begin to put out their leaves in January. At this writing, about the middle of February, the buckeye, because of its fresh, green foliage, is the most conspicuous object in the woods. There are many native evergreens here, but their leaves have taken on a somewhat dusky, sombre hue, so that the new, fresh leaves of the buckeye by far outshine everything else.

But as to the usefulness of the buckeye, it is generally one of the least prized of all the trees of the forest. In order to get rid of them, and because there was no other use to which they could be put, my father used to chop them up and use them as back-logs in the fire-place.

Simon Peter was a good man, but he was sometimes louder in his professions and more forward than the case required. Early one morning he leaped out of his boat into the sea, went plunging and splashing to the shore and threw himself at his Master's feet, leaving all his fellow-disciples behind. This seemed a fine show of loyalty, but it still remained for him to answer the question, "Lovest thou me" (John 21)?

Too many people have Simon Peter's weaknesses without possessing his good qualities. They are loud and forward in their professions, but never do anything that it is worth while making a noise about. When I see a man that does all his work with his mouth, and so orders his movements as to render himself spectacular generally, I wonder if he isn't a buckeye.

One of the books that came into my possession, when a boy, was "John Ploughman's Pictures." One of these pictures was that of a man holding a large pair of shears in one hand and holding on to a hog with the other. Underneath the picture were these words: "'Great cry and little wool,' said the Irishman, as he tried to shear the sow."

MORAL:—If the good you are doing in the world amounts to no more than that represented by the yield of wool from the pig, be modest in the amount of noise you make. Or if your general usefulness doesn't measure up above that of the buckeye, don't be in a hurry to put out your foliage ahead of everybody else.

Going Up to Jerusalem.

BY W. R. MILLER.

Siege and Looting of Kerak.—No. 2.

WE left Medeba just as the sun was appearing over the plains of Moab, and in crossing these fertile wheat fields we pass many ruins en route; in fact nearly every hilltop has evidence of buildings,—some very old,—but for the most part quite level with the ground. I shall not attempt to write of all these places,—merely some of the more important.

After some five hours from Medeba, we reach Dibon, which belonged to the tribe of Gad (Num. 32: 34), and, probably, was afterwards recaptured by the Moabites, as related by Isa. 15: 2. It was at Dibon that the famous Moabite Stone of King Mesha was found in 1868. This monument dates back to B. C. 897 or 896. The stone is now in a noted museum,—the "Louvre,"—in Paris. As many know, the inscription on the Moabite Stone almost reads like a page from the Bible. The history of this testimony to the truth of the Bible, its finding, the breaking of it into many pieces by the Arabs, and the subsequent efforts of the Museum people to secure these fragments, which had been scattered through the tribes, and the vast sum of money it cost to gather the most of them together again, would make an interesting chapter.

Dibon is quite as dreary and featureless a ruin as are many other of the Moabite desolate heaps. With its waterless plain the prophecy is fulfilled: "Thou daughter that dost inhabit Dibon, come down from thy glory, and sit in thirst; for the spoiler of Moab shall come upon thee, and shall destroy thy strongholds" (Jer. 48: 18). Dibon was a twin city, upon two adjacent knolls,—the cut showing but one of these knolls.

Here is a strange coincidence. In Judges 11: 33 we read about Jephthah in his war with the Ammonites smiting them to the "plain of the vineyards" or "Kurm Dhiban," i. e., the vineyards of Dibon, and this very place is called by the Arabs today by the same name, "Vineyards of Dibon," notwithstanding there are no vines in that district, nor have there been, within the memory of any living man. Says Tristram, "An instance of the persistency of Semitic nomenclature."

In twenty minutes' ride from Dibon there is a depression, with traces of terraces and walls running across it every few hundred yards, and upon the hillside. Upon asking the natives the meaning of these walls, their answer will be, "Kur Dhiban,"—an interesting illustration of a trivial expression in the Book of Judges: "He smote them from Aroer unto the plain of the vineyards." However insignificant, these things still attest to the truth of the grand old Book.

Few boundary lines are more clearly laid down than that of the Arnon dividing Reuben from Moab. The grand canyon of the Arnon does not show until we are close upon it, the plain being quite level on either side, and the somewhat rolling slopes come close to the precipitous descent. No idea of this wonderful specimen of Jehovah's architectural work can be formed till the very edge is reached. The depth of the rift is not less than 2,000 feet, perhaps two and a half miles wide at the top,—and very narrow at the bottom, with the clear Arnon flowing over the rock-strewn bottom of the gorge. It was by this splendid river that our camp was made the third night out. The river abounds in fish, and the rocks with pigeons and partridges.

With our shotgun we soon had enough of both pigeons and partridges for an elegant supper. Inasmuch as game abounds through Moab,—both large and small,—we provided ourselves with a pair of modern rifles and the shotgun above referred to. It was the consensus of opinion, that if we but had the time, we would all have enjoyed a three days' camping on the historic river. Possibly our camp was near the city of which Joshua speaks in Joshua 13: 16, "The city that is in the midst of the river," for there are some very old ruins near the remains of the Roman bridge,—all this indicating that at one time there was a city.

The ascent from the Arnon takes at least one and a half hours, and at many places we were obliged to get off our horses for safety. The next place of interest is the ruins of "Ar of Moab." Here several columns still stand to tell the story of the old city. I stopped long enough to take a picture of the ruins, and then hurried on, for we were anxious to reach Kerak before sundown.

Before relating our experience at Kerak, I am sure some description of this remarkable fortress will be of interest to the reader. The position is so strong by nature, that the most of our party were struck by its advantages from the natural fortification standpoint, and spoke of it repeatedly as we came in view of the city. It is readily seen why it was seized upon as a fortress from the very earliest times. I can do no better than to quote from Tristram, who has made a survey of the city, and describes it very accurately. He says, "A lofty brow pushes forward to the west, with a flattened space on its crest,—a sort of a head,—behind which the neck, at the southeast, contracts, and gives it the form of a peninsula. At the same time the isthmus,—if I may so call it,—rapidly slopes down, before rising to reunite to its shoulder the yet loftier hill to the east. The platform of Kerak stands three thousand and seventy feet above sea level, yet on all sides it is commanded, some of the neighboring heights being over three thousand and four hundred feet high. It is, however, severed everywhere, excepting at the neck, and also in a less degree at the northwest angle, from the encircling range. Two deep wadies, from one thousand to one thousand three hundred and fifty feet deep, with steeply-scarped or else rugged sides, flank it north and south, the Wady Hammad to the south, and Wady Kerak to the north, which unite about a mile west of the city, and form the ravine which we ascend. The escarpment of the third side of the triangle is formed by the Wady Kobeished, which, starting from the depression of what I have called the neck, rapidly descends to the Wady Kerak. The platform of the city, thus surrounded is tolerably level, measuring from eight hundred to a thousand yards on each face of the triangle, the northeast being the longest. The whole place has formerly been surrounded by a strong wall, of which a considerable portion still remains."

Some of these walls, especially the lower portion, seem to be of a very early epoch,—more than likely the work of the Moabites. One can readily notice the older, then that of the Crusaders or Saracens, and, lastly that of the Roman period. There were no gates to the city, but entrance was had to the platform through tunnels.

We continue in next paper with the account of our six days' imprisonment, capture and recapture by the Arabs.

The Prayer Covering.

BY PETER WEIMER.

IN a recent issue of the MESSENGER I find an editorial on the prayer covering, and feel impressed to write something on the subject.

Paul said, "A man indeed ought not to cover his head, forasmuch as he is the image and glory of God." It does not seem reasonable to me that Paul had reference to the man's hat, or that which is worn for the protection of the head. I rather think that some men, in that age, still held to the custom of covering their heads when engaged in solemn devotion, after the manner of Godly men under the law. For my reason I submit the following references: Ex. 28:40; 34:33-35; 2 Sam. 15:30; 19:4; Lev. 10:6; Jer. 14:3, 4; Esther 6:12; 2 Cor. 3:13, 14. From these references we learn that it was the custom for men to cover their heads while praying. This veil, however, was done away with in Christ. For this cause Paul said that "a man indeed ought not to cover his head, forasmuch as he is the image and glory of God." Again, "If any man seem to be contentious, we have no such custom, neither the churches of God."

If we allow that Paul had reference to the hat or head dress, in these words, we must also allow the bonnet as a covering for the woman, since the bonnet is for the woman what the hat is for the man. It is a fact, however, that we consider the veil more sacred than a mere article of clothing.

Since the veil or covering for man was done away in Christ, so a man would dishonor his head (Christ) to pray or prophesy with his head covered or veiled. On the other hand, it is a shame for a woman to pray or prophesy with her head uncovered. With her head covered or veiled she has power "because of the angels."

Then, again, Paul reasons from the natural law, that if a man have long hair it is a shame to him, whether he be saint or sinner. On the other hand, if the woman has long hair it is a glory to her, whether she be saint or sinner, for her hair is given her for a natural covering, as a distinction of sex.

It seems to me there should be more teaching along this line, since there is so much deviation from this principle among our sisters. We are commanded to watch and pray always, and to pray without ceasing. We are "always to pray and never faint." The man is to be the image and glory of God, and the woman is to have power on her head because of the angels. We see that too many of our sisters are much of the time without this power on their head, in the city and away from home. They are not ready to pray should the Lord come suddenly with his holy angels.

We are commanded to be ready, for we know not the day nor the hour when the Lord will come. There seems to be a deplorable falling away on the part of many who are entirely without the covering. With others the covering is becoming shorter and thinner. It is only a mere patch that does not cover the head. Dear sisters, these things ought not so to be.

The Shortcomings of the Sunday-School.

BY PAUL MOHLER.

In Three Parts.—Part One.

BEFORE I enter into the discussion of this subject, I wish to explain my own personal relation to the Sunday-school. I have been connected with Sunday-schools as pupil or teacher or superintendent for twenty-five years; am now a regular teacher, and no more think of leaving my class for a single Sunday without a teacher than I would think of leaving a congregation without a preacher. Moreover, I am a stanch supporter of the Sunday-school, am thankful for what it has done, and am hopeful for its future. But all of this does not blind me to certain FACTS.

In spite of the good it has done, the Sunday-school has failed:

1. To teach thoroughly a single book of the Bible. Last year, indeed, the lessons were in Matthew, but I guarantee to any Sunday-school pupil, no matter how good may have been the helps he used, that if he will go into a good Bible school and study the book systematically, the book will open up to him as a new book to which the Sunday-school lessons have hardly introduced him.

2. To teach systematically and thoroughly the facts of any single period of Bible history. If anybody doubts this, he can prove it to his own satisfaction in any church, and with anybody whose Bible training has been only in the Sunday-school (where the International Lessons are used). In view of the fact that a knowledge of facts must precede intelligent discussion of principles, any one can see that failure on this point is a very serious matter indeed.

3. To give the teaching of the Bible on a single great principle of religion. Some principle of religion is, of course, touched in nearly every Sunday-school lesson, but that is all. Even when a whole lesson is given to one subject, like faith, love, humility, conversion, sanctification, the Holy Spirit, miracles, angels, devils, sin, redemption, sacrifice, giving, church organization, missions, or a dozen others on which all Christians should know the whole teaching of the Bible, that subject is just touched, and touched on only one side at that. Do I have to prove this statement? How many Sunday-school scholars ever learned these things in the Sunday-school? Hands up if you have!

4. To even introduce the scholars to some of the most practical books of the Bible. In a local Bible Institute, held some time ago, we studied the Book of First Peter, to the great enjoyment and profit of all. After the members of the class had given their opinion of this book, I asked them how many Sunday-school lessons they could remember having had from that book. Not one could they remember. Now just take a look at that book and see if you don't think it ought to be better known. And how many lessons from the other Epistles can you remember having had?

5. To give the scriptural ground for any of the distinctive features of the church. True, we did have a lesson from John 13, not so long ago, but the hour generally given to the study of a Sunday-school lesson is not time enough to study, with anything like thoroughness, even John 13, to say nothing of the larger scripture context that must be considered with it. This statement the reader can prove for himself in any church where there is a Sunday-school using the International Lessons.

6. To make real Bible lovers, Bible students, teachers, or preachers of a large proportion of the young people of the church. As I go from place to place, I find very few young members (or old ones either, for that matter) that read the Bible as much as they do the newspapers, mail-order, catalogues, or even as much as they do the Sunday-school quarterly. Very few Sunday-school scholars learn to make the Bible the "man of their counsel."

5. To furnish enough workers for the various lines of work in the church. It is becoming more and more difficult to get enough pastors, evangelists and mission workers for the homeland, to say nothing of the foreign field, and it is still too hard to get laymen to bear their fair share of the expense of the work.

6. To furnish to the children sufficient ground for faith in God and sufficient spiritual development to enable them to withstand the materialistic teaching and influence of their general education and associations. We all know how few of our young people,—Sunday-school scholars though they have been,—come up through the high school, college, or, if not in school, through the social influences of the home community, without losing their interest in religion and their strong faith in God's daily providence.

7. To even hold the attendance through youth to maturity of the majority of the children that start in at early childhood. Everywhere this fact is recognized and lamented. Is it not sad to think that just when they need it most the young people are practically without religious instruction? And we all know how hard it is for the church to get hold later of those that have once dropped out of the Sunday-school. Our loss of members' children is something terrible to contemplate.

This loss is not all to be charged directly to the Sunday-school,—the home and the church must bear their fair share of the blame,—but since it is in the Sunday-school that both the parents, the head of the home, and the ministers and other officials of the church get their training (or should get it) the shortcomings of these institutions are indirectly due to the Sunday-school. In charging this to the Sunday-school, I am not considering it as an institution apart from the church, but rather as the church organized to do these things, each member of the church being in duty bound to help.

And now I am sure I have said enough to convince most any one that the Sunday-school is not what it ought to be. One may say that the Sunday-school is not supposed to do all of these things; but I answer, Why not? Is there any other department of the church that can do them? If not these things, what does the Sunday-school stand for, what does it aim to do? If its purpose is below these things, it is high time we are raising it!

I know much is said of the "progress" we are making, and the reader may be satisfied with that progress, but I am not. These things that have been left undone, must be done if we are to be worth while to the Lord. If the Sunday-school will not do them, something else must, and then the Sunday-school will be relegated to the scrap-heap. In another article I hope to give some of the causes for these failures and then some remedies, but in the meantime, please consider the FACTS.

"Turncoats."

BY A. G. CROSSWHITE.

A GENTLEMAN of my acquaintance,—a Jewish clothier by the way,—had, in some way, obtained possession of a chameleon which, being such a rare and queer little creature, was on daily exhibition at the store, or as often as it could be found. There was a good reason for its occasional absence, as the old gentleman explained to me, which was on this wise: "The little fellow is gifted by nature to adapt himself, in appearance, to the color of any substance on which he happens to be. If he rests on anything black, 'Mr. Chameleon' is black; if on blue, he is blue; and so on. He is always hard to see; for there is a perfect coalition with his surroundings."

This reminded me very much of the expression of an old deacon, who, referring to men without any settled convictions, or those who can so readily accommodate themselves to any kind of society, always called them "wooden men" or "tin soldiers." The only thing such "figure-heads" wish to know is, Which is the popular side? Then they fall into line; but should that side lose out, they manage to hop over just in time to say, "I TOLD YOU SO."

It is said of some people that they never had an enemy, and it may be true, but it is quite likely that they never figured largely in any reformatory work, for the very thought suggests friction and opposition. Such men have been pleased with results, but have never helped to make them.

There is no "neutral ground" except in expression; for every intelligent being has a mental position, and failure to study the situation can not be an excuse; neither will the dodge of indifference help the case, for all are morally responsible for the condition of things to the full extent of their ability and influence. If there is success, all should rejoice together, but if there is failure, all should weep together; for we are commanded to be "perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment."

The "I told-you-so" man is a poor comforter to the teamster who is stuck in the mud or the preacher who has let the church reins slip. The discouragement has been enough already, without adding the "last straw" to the camel's back. Far better keep quiet and show sympathy, first by pushing the sinking wheel forward, instead of deeper into the mud or jumping on the wagon. A politician expects opposition and desertion from his ranks but a minister is humiliated by having to look into the faces of men and women professing godliness who oppose his teachings both by precept and example.

The church of the Brethren is lending a helping hand in the great temperance movement, and has organized for aggressive work. "Can the Lord depend on you?" Some claim a conscientious right to be neutral on political issues, and this the church does not deny; but when this is made an independent issue, what is wrong in exercising constitutional franchise? There are other things that are claimed to be greater evils; and there may be, but intemperance is one of the most immoral, degrading, defiling evils in the world today!

Brother, granting your position, if you had a chance to vote against these greater evils would you do it?

A mass temperance meeting is usually largely attended, but when it comes to counting the ballots it shows up quite differently. Apply the text. See? But what about that "baptismal covenant" and its yearly renewal on the visit, along various lines? Is the church at fault if there is a shortage? Will you help to start a reformation by "beginning at home"?

"Working the Oseirion."

(Cable Dispatch from Cairo to the Headquarters of the Egypt Exploration Fund.)

BY MARIE N. BUCKMAN.

Secretary for the United States, 527 Tremont Temple, Boston, Mass.

Professor Thomas Whittemore, who departed in January to join the staff of explorers for the Egypt Exploration Fund at Abydos, cables his first report from Cairo. Our camp is engaged in excavating the Oseirion. The details of the clearing are of absorbing interest. Just as at Deir el-Bahari Mariette's operations left an enormous heap of refuse, forty-five feet in depth, dumped on the middle platform, the "birth terrace," as his legacy to the Fund, so at Abydos his zeal in clearing the Temple of Seti led him to pile all the debris of his excavation within the temenos at the rear of the temple, thus burying the most unique monument in Egypt under tons of rubbish to the depth of forty feet,—a second burdensome legacy to the Fund!

Our force of trained men are making exhaustive efforts to free this wonderful hypogeum from the wind-blown sand of the desert, the remains of the Roman period and Mariette's archæological additions.

We have long known of the existence of the Oseirion. In 1902 Professor Petrie made a trial working. He located a subterranean edifice with a sloping passage 200 feet long, without determining its terminations. He found the sandstone pavement of the Great Hall forty-one feet below the surface of the desert. This stately gallery measured 34 feet in length, 15 feet in width, with a height of 17 feet. There were three doorways,—one leading to the south chamber; one to the sloping passage on the east; one to a north chamber. The west wall is divided into three parts vertically. The portion to the left contains a colossal scene of the Vivification of Osiris; the middle portion registers the chapter of "Knowing the name of Osiris"; the right-hand portion is occupied with the figure of Merenptah, the accepted Pharaoh of the Exodus, standing before a heaped-up table of offerings, making an offering of incense. The Romans quarried away the stone-facing of the east wall, so that any decorations which may have been there have perished.

Professor Petrie gave us one vanishing glimpse of rich sculptures, unique inscriptions revealing records of the mysteries of Osiris. He named the wonder place the Oseirion; then refilled its chambers with the all-protecting sand, to preserve their precious records.

In 1903, when Miss Murray and Mrs. Petrie arrived to undertake the work of recovery by themselves, the sloping passage looked like a long trench. They entered on their enterprise with the certainty of a long, inscribed passage, to be cleared and copied, and its terminations to be found. They directed the work and governed their camp of laborers and went about with candles and matches in their pockets, pluckily trying, through the deep rubbish, to find roofing stones over the main hall and an opening through which to squeeze into those alluring depths. We learned from their observations that all the roofing stones were gone. Like the wall facing they had been quarried away by the Romans. One cracked lintel alone remained. That and Strabo's description show how the vaulted passages existed, spanned by single stone beams, a truly imposing structure.

In the search for the roofing stones the sloping passage was found to lie in the axis of the Temple of Seti and to lead to the rear wall of the temple itself. Chambers and halls were found to exist,—impressive places of worship.

Such is the present season's inheritance in the Oseirion. No one can anticipate the revelations to come from the sloping passage and possible other apartments. Once again those hidden inscriptions of the Great Hall and chambers are yielding their treasured instruction. Today we may all stand among the initiated of Egypt's priesthood; what was imparted in secret is now declared openly; the very stones speak. We really know more of the esoteric belief of ancient Egypt than the average Egyptian citizen in ancient times ever knew concerning his own faith. It was only to be expected that one day should be found at Abydos this special plan of worship of its dominant deity, the great "Judge of the Dead." That this hypogeum should be a part of the temple dedicated to the worship of the dead, with special apartments for the celebration of the Oseirion rites, is very natural and fitting. A line drawn through the Temple of Seti and the desert pylon to the Royal Tombs passes through the sloping passage and across the center of the Great Hall, thus showing that both were dedicated to the same worship.

The South Chamber is sculptured on the east, south and west walls with the 148th chapter of the Book of the Dead. This is a rare chapter, known only in three papyri,—one in the Cairo Museum from the tomb of Amenhotep II., one in the British Museum of the Twentieth Dynasty, and one at St. Petersburg. Here, however, is the only instance in sculpture of this chapter. In none of these papyri does the king appear, nor are the gods of the first seven Qererts mentioned. Qererts literally means "cavern" but as twelve are treated here, it has the force of divisions of the night. That there is a very close connection between the hidden ritualistic service in these halls, typical of the Am Duat, the underworld, and the ceremonies observed by the populace in the open desert above, is at once apparent. In the representation of the twelfth division of the night we find twelve figures of Osirified gods in shrines and we read: "The gods who are in their shrines upon the sand." Out in the necropolis, close to the tomb of Zer, re-used as the tomb of Osiris, were found four buried figures of Osiris moulded from mud. This is the Osiris of vegetation and generation. "Thou art praised, thou who liest on the sand, the Lord of the ground. The earth lies on thine arm and its corners upon thee from here to the four supports of heaven. Should'st thou move then trembles the earth." So sang the Egyptian psalmist.

The inscription upon the west side of the door within the Oseirion is represented as spoken by the King Merenptah, "true of voice." It may be the very invocation chanted by the priest in the ceremonial offering of the libation cups found in such numbers among the lines of pottery in the desert. It is the "Chapter of Coming Forth by Day," of opening a road for the soul in the underworld, and declares in part: "I have offered offerings in the fields of Aaru. I have made libations on earth and in the fields of Aaru. Hail, O gods, O ancestors, O Ra, lead ye my soul as ye lead the begotten of mankind with you, at the side of the soul of Khenti-Amentiu, Osiris, Lord of Abydos."

The Awakening.

BY L. H. ROOT.

We need to go into the history of recent centuries only, to impress our minds with the wonderful influence of a genuine awakening. Let us recall the Reformation of the sixteenth century. See the church, which had long lain unmoved beneath the exacting rule of papal authority,* She is restless in her deplorable condition. At last, when thoroughly aroused, she follows Luther and others to freedom. She leaves the bondage she has endured so long.

Look, again, at China in this present century. She feels the pulsation of new life throughout her kingdom. Imagine, as best you can, the extent of such an awakening among her millions of subjects, with Christianity and education as the most prominent arousing factors. See heathenism giving place to Christianity, the superstitions of past ages to enlightenment. Love is beginning to have its perfect work!

But there is an awakening that interests us more directly than that of nations, namely, the awakening of the soul of man. There is a time in the life of every being, when the Gospel is preached, when the soul ceases to be careless as to its own welfare,—a time when a man's carnal life and soul life are battling for supremacy, and he ceases to sleep in the sinful lethargy that once claimed him as its victim. The time has come for decisive action and I feel that at that time every soul faces the great crisis of its existence.

Spring comes after the snow and frost of winter have passed away. With it comes the awakening of nature. A few warm days come early in the season; the tree responds readily to their influence and sends forth buds and blossoms, perhaps only to have them killed by heavy frosts a few days later. So it is with the soul in its awakening. The greatest danger comes to it in its tender yearning, while it is forming its new relationship with God. Satan is no sluggard. He sees, in the awakening of the soul, a great opportunity to fasten his clutches securely upon it.

The results of the awakening are twofold:

1. Progression.—The soul sees its opportunity and accepts it. If we, who are quickened and are capable of noting the great changes as they occur in the lives of our fellow-men, are alert and careful, we may form guard lines around those who are being aroused to a higher sense of duty, and thus ward off the blow Satan is determined to make. By our help they may become firmly rooted and established in the doctrine of the church, and the result will be members who do not have a half-frozen service to offer to God, but those who will go forward, adding virtue to virtue until they become workingmen that need not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth.

In order that progress may be the happy lot of the awakening souls around us, we must become their burden-bearers until they are fully able to stand alone. I fear we are too much inclined to think that our duty toward others has been performed after they are once safely in the church.

2. Retrogression.—The soul realizes its danger, doubts its ability to overcome, and gives up. Here again, Satan has appeared with his iniquitous devices and is frequently successful. Oh, what an awful picture! A young man has attended the revival services night after night, enjoyed the sermons, but goes home unawakened. He comes again and the Word falls heavily on him, and he realizes his condition. Night after night the conviction deepens, yet he fails to accept. The meetings close, and he is not saved. He has arisen to where he can view the whole panorama of life and is at a loss, unable to decide. No one seems to see his battle. Satan stands close and whispers, "All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me." No faithful one comes to say, "Resist the devil and he will flee from you." He falls in agony into the embrace of friends and his last state is worse than his first.

But the most awful part of it all is that some one has seen the whole battle! Possibly the minister has seen the conflict and has given but a feeble invitation. After preaching the Word so strongly as to awaken in him such great desires, he fails to help him, by a more earnest invitation, to overcome the obstacles that hold him soul and body in the service of the devil. Possibly father and mother have also seen this struggle with great anxiety, but have not once had courage to ask God in open family worship to strengthen their boy for the contest before him, nor have they given him an encouraging word where it was most needed.

My brother, my sister, your work is to win souls for the kingdom and if, by an overdrawn sense of propriety, or dread of doing a little personal work, you let those laboring souls before you slip helplessly into an eternity of doom,—whose will the greater sin be? Hear now what Jesus says, "Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me."

THE ROUND TABLE

Peace, Joy, Rest.

BY J. HARMAN STOVER.

CHRISTIANITY possesses the noblest words in any language. What nation's literature abounds with such terms as joy, peace, faith, love, light, etc.?

These words abound in our prayers and songs, and sermons are built upon each, so much so that an observer might logically conclude them to form the staple of our Christian experience. But it is a truth demonstrated daily, to earnest inquirers, that when brought into close quarters with the actual experience of most of us, we are unable, when cross-examined and pressed for specific directions, how to attain to such experience, to give any practical, comforting directions.

Drummond says, "The whole popular religion is in the twilight here, and when pressed for really working specifics, for the experiences with which it deals, it falters, and seems to lose itself in mist."

This, no doubt, is true, but we must remember that in order to have joy, we must prove our own work. Then we have "rejoicing in ourselves" (Gal. 6:4), and it is "unspeakable and full of glory" (1 Peter 1:8). Paul's joy and crown were the Philippian converts (Philpp. 4:1). If there is any trouble about our joy, it must rest primarily in the fact that our work won't stand the proof test.

As to the peace which Jesus said he gives to us, and leaves with us (John 14:27), we must remember it is more, almost, than tongue can tell, for it "passeth understanding" (Philpp. 4:7). Then, too, we must not forget that "He is our peace" (Eph 2:14), that through him we have peace with God (Rom. 5:1). Peace comes direct from the Lord, upon implicit faith,—a faith that fills, to the brim, the cup of every known duty.

One can as easily sit upon his front porch and raise grain by mental faith, as he can attain to the peace of God by the mere force of his mind, while occupying the stool of "do-nothing" in the Christian life.

Rest, as a noun, is a word, the meaning of which is so replete with good cheer and comfort that it has no parable in the Good Book. It implies cessation from all effort that has a tendency to worry. It means enjoyment of all that is comforting to the soul,—"They rest from their labors and their works do follow."

Scriptural Difficulties.

BY GEO. F. CHEMBERLEN.

THE Bible is full of difficulties. Perplexities are on every hand in that book so highly revered. In fact it seems to be a record of difficulties, and real difficulties at that. When the doubter says, "There are difficulties in the Bible," he is telling the plain truth about it. And how to deal with the difficulties of the Book is just as difficult a difficulty as how to deal with the doubter. Some employ the old Scotch method,—Look the difficulty bravely in the face and pass on.

Now anything said about the creation, or the crossing of the Red Sea, or the feeding of Israel in the wilderness, or God giving Joshua time enough to finish the Amoritish hordes by daylight, and such things, are not difficulties to me. It is much easier to believe those things than some others I find.

And as to the story of Jonah and the whale, I do not see anything in that to even call it anything out of the ordinary. Why, I have been swallowed by whales, and spued out, too. That is a very common experience for a minister. If you haven't seen the inside of a whale's belly, you have got the wrong message in your mouth. Those are all explainable, but here are some of the things that bother me: "Yield yourselves unto God," "Love thy neighbor as thyself," "Be ye transformed," "Give to him that asketh thee." (This last individual either has such a low voice or else uses a foreign tongue, so I can not quite catch his call. That's where the difficulty lies in his case.)

And then, "Take up thy cross and follow me," "Not to please ourselves," "Look every man on the things of others," "Be content with such things as ye have," "In every thing give thanks," and such like.

For solutions I shall begin with the unquestioned orthodoxy of the "Amen Corner," but please do not rush the line with your answers.

A Small Gathering.

BY EDGAR M. HOFFER.

IT was a cloudy and rainy afternoon, but as the day was dying, it ceased raining, and it proved to be a lovely evening. The janitor was at his post of duty, and the lamps were burning brightly in the little brick church on a certain hill in Pennsylvania. It was the time for prayer meeting, that evening. It was seven o'clock by the faithful timepiece in the church, but no one was there but the janitor. He was meditating, and wondered, "Where are all the dear ones tonight?"

A few minutes before 7:30 the minister and his daughter arrived. After a few minutes of social greetings services were commenced.

The minister led the meeting, while the janitor and the minister's daughter listened very attentively. There were only three in that prayer meeting, but it was a glorious service, and when the meeting closed those three souls received such a blessing from heaven that they will never forget it.

Our Savior said: "For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." (Matt. 18:20). Let me suggest that though only two or three come to prayer meeting, do not be discouraged, for you are participants of the promise. Sometimes the few that assemble leave without having prayer, because no others are there. That is not pleasing to the Lord. Have prayer meeting, and though only a few assemble, you will get the blessing. Thomas missed one prayer meeting, and thereby missed a lot of good things, so those who miss the prayer meetings are sure to miss many rich blessings.

I Want to Go Back.

BY J. H. MORRIS.

WHAT is it that makes strangers want to go back again to your church? Do you think that the stranger who was at church felt in his heart that he actually wanted to come back? What do you do when he enters your house of worship? Do you go out of your way to greet him with a hearty handshake? Ought he to come back? Do you think that your efforts to make him comfortable put him under any obligations to come again?

If you will excuse a personal reference, I will tell you one of my many experiences in strange churches. I did not receive a very cordial welcome at all places, by all people, but to some places, I feel, I want to go again.

At one church the leader came to me at once, and shook hands. He was the president of the Young People's society. Some of the other members also greeted me, but most welcome to me was the kindly invitation of a boy about twelve or thirteen years old. He said: "Glad to see you here, can't you come next Sunday evening again?" I had to answer, "No, I can not; other duties keep me away."

Brother, I think that I am a human being as susceptible to kindness as others, and I believe that one of the things that would take me back to that church would be brotherly kindness. The preacher gave us an excellent sermon; the choir sang beautifully, but the thing that came nearest me was the way they treat strangers. "A hint to the wise is sufficient." Whether you are large or small, this is for you.

Common or Religious.

BY JAS. A. SELL.

A THING to be common or religious depends upon circumstances. Eating bread and drinking the juice of ripe fruit is a very common thing, but when these things are set apart by a Divine command to commemorate the death of the world's Redeemer, they become religious in an exalted sense. There are many common things that are right in themselves and should be done because they are right. Other things are right only because they are commanded. The one is a moral obligation, the other a positive one. All men are bound by moral obligation to observe the amenities and decencies of life. The Christian is bound to obey the commandments of his Savior, in order to be a Christian. Before he might be a man, a moral man, observing all the moral duties of life, but now he has taken upon himself a higher life,—higher obligations,—and is bound to observe a higher law. Paul thanked God that though the Romans had once been the servants of sin, they became children of God by "obeying from the heart the form of doctrine delivered to them."

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

The Last Days of Joseph.

Gen. 50: 15-26.

For Sunday Evening, March 19, 1911.

I. Jacob's Death Caused His Sons to Fear Joseph.—(1) Conscience may slumber but will awake some day. (2) The only way to get away from the effects of wrong-doing is to have it forgiven.

II. Joseph's Brethren Plead for Mercy (vs. 16-18).—(1) "Forgive . . . their sin" (v. 17), shows true penitence. (2) There is hope for one who recognizes his sin. No hope for him who does not (Matt. 21: 31). "Harlots go in . . . before you," because they are less self-righteous, therefore more cognizant of their sins. (3) There is more hope for one who confesses his sins (Prov. 28: 13; 1 John 1: 8, 9).

III. Joseph: His Character.—(1) Joseph's character belongs to all time (Heb. 11: 4; Rev. 14: 13). (2) The root graces are: (a) Parental devotion;—as a boy he loved and obeyed his father (Eph. 6: 1; Col. 3: 20); (b) As a man he honored him (Ex: 20: 12); (c) He was absolutely honest (Luke 8: 15); (d) He was unselfishly upright (Prov. 2: 21); (e) He was humble, regarding himself but the instrument (1 Cor. 15: 9, 10; James 4: 10; 1 Peter 5: 6); (f) He was a man of faith. His faith made all the foregoing possible. His faith was strongly based on God's promises. Nothing will give victory in a dying hour like faith in God's promises.

Notes.—From the lessons we have had about Joseph, we learn (a) that it is folly to fight against God; and (b) that blessedness can only be found in planning and working in harmony with God's will. We also see that the Lord gives free rope to the wicked, but righteousness shall triumph in the end.

PRAYER MEETING

"Blessed Is the Man That Endureth Temptation."

James 1: 12.

For Week Beginning March 19, 1911.

I. Scriptural Teaching on Temptation.

1. A Test of the Believer.—"Count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations, knowing this that the trying of your faith worketh patience" (James 1: 2). Moral discipline is essential to a perfect Christian life. Paul's thorn in the flesh was a messenger of Satan to buffet him, and though he sought its removal, God simply replied, "My grace is sufficient for thee" (2 Cor. 12: 9).

2. The Refiner's Fire.—"Think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you," etc. There is sin without and sin within that must be driven out, and it requires the fire of the Great Refiner to do the gracious work for the everlasting good of our souls (1 Peter 4: 12-19).

II. The Necessity and Blessings of Temptation.

1. Our Human Shortcomings Need Discipline Continually.—Our limitations necessitate trials and temptations, for only a perfect creature could be exempt. Heroic treatment, even, is needed, at times, to secure salvation from sin. Our tendency to wordlyism and Pharisaic self-sufficiency merits a just rebuke and decisive discipline. The riches of this world and the pleasures of this life are so enticing that only the sternest measures can wean us of them, and lead us to better things (Heb. 12: 6-10).

2. A Threefold Blessing.—(1) Each trial is exactly suited to our capacity. There can nothing befall us beyond our power to resist. (2) The victory is certain if we are faithful, and, trusting in God, carry the war into the enemy's territory. The war may be long, but the end is sure, and the victory sweet. (3) The reward is adequate. No one endures the cross without gaining the crown. No one toils in the Master's vineyard without his wages. Our faithfulness always wins Divine approval (Heb. 12: 11).

HOME AND FAMILY

Sympathy.

When the clouds begin to lower
That's a splendid time to smile;
But your smile will lose its power
If you're smiling all the while.
Now and then a sober season,
Now and then a jolly laugh
We like best, and there's a reason,
A good, wholesome half and half.

When the other one has trouble,
We should feel that trouble, too,
For, were we with joy to bubble
'Mid his grief, 'twould hardly do.
Let us own that keen discerning
That can see and bear a part;
For the whole wide world is yearning
For a sympathetic heart.

To Our Young Sisters About Marriage.

BY JAS. A. SELL.

A WOMAN'S love—

"Like ivy when it grows 'tis seen,
To wear an everlasting green,
Like ivy, too, 'tis found to cling,
Too often round a worthless thing."

Young sisters, you may be contemplating matrimony and be very willing to have a little advice so as to make a proper decision. I will venture to tell you a few things that I never heard preached from the pulpit, or never read in a religious paper. It would seem, from the importance of the subject, and the happiness or misery that grows out of it, that more instruction should be given.

Be sure that the man you select for your life-companion is kind and affectionate. He should love his home, his parents and brothers and sisters. You do not want to be joined to a man who is cold and indifferent, or a simpleton, or one who knows it all. Those who belong to this class will ever remain just what they are, and will continually rob your life of its sweetness.

If you love your home, and books, and flowers, be certain that your partner is in sympathy with you. The joy in these things is having some one to share your joy. Reject a man who does not possess true manhood. He should be temperate, truthful, honest, have a pure character, and a noble purpose in life. Avoid an infidel, or one who does not respect the Christian religion, or you will, through his influence, be led to scoff at what should be your sweetest joy.

You should not only select a religious man, but also one of your own faith. You will thus avoid jars and discord and promote love and peace. Your Savior should be more to you than all the world beside. Marriage makes a turning point in life. Your aims, purposes and pleasures will be in a different channel from what they are now. New experiences will come into your life, and as you meet the uncertainties, sorrows and bereavements of this world, Christianity, with its service and comforts, will become the most precious thing to you. Think what it will mean, when you are tempted and harassed with conflicting cares, and your heart yearns for the assembly of Christians, the songs of the sanctuary, the humble, pleading prayer from a heart like your own, craving pity and forgiveness, and hungering for the Bread of Life, as it is broken by the living ministry, but, through the indifference of your companion, you can not go. Attending Divine service does not enter into his plans.

Marriage is a Divine institution, and its highest aim and purest joys are so interlaced with religion that its real pleasure is only realized when husband and wife are both Christians. Samson, rather than select a wife from his own people, made choice of one not in sympathy with his religion, because "she pleased him well." When he needed her sympathy and help, she betrayed him, and thus started him on the downward course, and the life that was so brilliant and promising in the start ended in failure. Physically he was strong, but he became weak morally, because of a misfit in his marriage.

Solomon, in the beginning of his career, made a wise choice and pleased the Lord, who not only gave him what he desired but added also riches and honor. In his love affairs he was not so wise. He made choice of ungodly wives and they turned his heart away from his God.

Young sisters, if you turn away from the church for the sake of a worldly young man, you are making a bad bargain, and it may cost you more than you can afford to part with. If any young man thinks less of you on account of your church or your plainness of dress, that is warning enough for you. As you value your happiness, let him go. Never, never try to draw the attention or win the affections of a young man by ornamentations of dress. Feathers, flounces, frills and ribbons of showy colors attract and charm the silly. It is a sign of being silly and light-minded to resort to such things and they are a fraud of the worst kind. Many a young woman has invited and brought about her own ruin with the gewgaws of fashion. Bring to the front the "ornament of a meek and quiet spirit," and a pure and spotless life, and then you have a right to demand of a young man what you offer to him. Be sober-minded, thoughtful, pious and diligent in every good work, such as charity, temperance, Sunday-school work and missions.

Let the first article of your creed be that you will marry a good Christian man of boundless ambition, of good health and of good education, from a good family or none. You should never agree to share the misery with an invalid, or a pauper, or a drunkard, or an ignoramus, or a pout, or a jealous person.

"Be purity of life the test,
Leave to the heart, to heaven the rest."

Hollidaysburg, Pa.

He That Ruleth His Spirit.

BY BERTHA M. NEHER.

THE sound of angry voices came in at the open window where Mrs. Bell sat sewing. Near her sat her aunt, who was spending a few weeks in her home.

"There, the boys are quarreling again!" said Mrs. Bell, with both apology and shame in her voice. "I don't know what to do with them. They used to play together so nicely, but of late they quarrel so I can hardly trust them out of my sight. I've talked and talked, but nothing I can say seems to do any good." She paused and her aunt seemed about to speak but hesitated, and soon Mrs. Bell went on, "Neither of them seems to have the least bit of self-control. Every ugly thought that comes into their minds they speak right out." As her aunt still made no reply, she said, "Can you tell me what the trouble is, Aunt Mary?"

The older woman looked at her niece, saw that she really was in earnest, seeking help, so she said, very gently, "I think, Eva, that I can tell you where part of the trouble lies, if you will not be offended."

"Indeed, I will not!" responded Mrs. Bell, with feeling, "I do want to know what I can do to help my boys overcome this bad fault of theirs."

"Then I will tell you what I think," said Aunt Mary, "I am sure you have been trying to teach your boys to be manly and gentle, but I think they have been following your example rather than your precept." A dull red mounted slowly into Mrs. Bell's face. She opened her lips to speak, but her aunt went on, even more gently, "For some reason you seem to have lost your grip on your own feelings. Little things annoy you and you speak sharply to the boys, sometimes, when a gentle word would accomplish much more. My dear, you can not teach them self-control till you first learn it yourself." Mrs. Bell broke into a passion of tears as she listened, knowing that her aunt spoke truly.

Alas, how many burdened mothers there are that need to learn the same lesson. We can not teach what we do not know ourselves; we can not control others until we learn to control ourselves.

That child is richly dowered who starts out in life, having learned the priceless lesson of self-control. But there are few, indeed, who really do have full power over their own spirits. Solomon spoke wisely when he said, "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city."

Many start out in life handicapped from earliest childhood with a high temper, inherited from generations of high-tempered ancestors. Though their parents may recognize their fault, and want them to learn to overcome it, too often they themselves have failed to learn the lesson and they do not know how to teach it to their children. This is one of the sins of fathers that is often visited on the children, "even to the third and fourth generation." If parents themselves have failed to learn self-control, their teaching should begin in their own hearts. For, no matter what parents may say, their children will be most impressed by what they do. They will learn more from example than from precept.

Do we want our daughters to learn to be gentle, courteous, kind and pleasant? They will not learn it from a harsh-toned, high-tempered, scolding mother. Do we want our sons to be chivalrous, gentle, manly and kind? They will not learn it from an overbearing, tyrannical, rough-speaking father.

Christians, as fathers and mothers, often have hard lessons to learn before they can bring up their children "in the way they should go." Perhaps none is harder than that of always controlling themselves. Alone we can not possess this power, but it is possible, always, through the power of the Holy Spirit who will never fail us if we seek his help in our times of need. And we should not be discouraged if our success comes slowly for—

"Heaven is not reached by a single bound,
But we build the ladder by which we rise
From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies,
And we mount to its summit round by round."

SISTERS' AID SOCIETIES

ZION, N. DAK.—Our Aid Society met Dec. 22 and reorganized for the coming year. Officers chosen were: Sister Anna Burkhart, president; the writer, vice-president; Sister Ida Miller, secretary; Sister Sarah Overcomer, treasurer. We held eleven meetings during the year, with an average attendance of ten. We received $141.58, paid out for clothing and other expenses, $29.90; leaving a balance on hand of $111.68. We sent two sacks of clothing to the South Ia. Indian Mission in Missouri.—Mrs. Eva R. Smeltzer, Cando, N. Dak., Feb. 14.

FLORA, IND.—During the year 1910 our Sisters' Aid Society held forty-three meetings, with an average attendance of nine. Our time was devoted mostly of making quilts, knotting comforts and making garments. We knotted seven comforts and quilted nine quilts. Money received during the year by collections amounted to $43.49; received by donations, $7.21; making a total of $50.70. We paid out $47.41, leaving a balance of $3.57. We sent one box of clothing to the Orphans' Home in Mexico, Ind., one to the Chicago Mission, and one box of bedding to North Manchester College. Officers for the coming year are as follows: Sister Sarah Young, president; Sister Ella Musselman, vice-president; Sister Clara Eikenberry, secretary-treasurer; the writer, assistant.—Mrs. Flora Brim, Flora, Ind., Feb. 22.

NAPERVILLE, ILL.—The following is a report of our society for the year beginning Feb. 17, 1910, and ending Feb. 17, 1911. The old officers met at the home of Sister Anna Shiffler, and reorganized for the ensuing year. The writer was elected president; Sister Emma Shiffler, vice-president; Sister Elsie Barkdoll, secretary-treasurer. During the year our quarterly meetings were held with an average attendance of five. We had a balance of $1.86 in the treasury for Feb. 17, 1910. From then to Feb. 17, 1911, our offerings amounted to $16.73; expenses, $17.25; balance in the treasury, $1.34. On Nov. 15, 1910, we donated to the Kansas City Mission in Missouri one sack of clothing, containing seventy-two pieces, and some bed comforts; to the Chicago Mission, one sack of clothing containing fifty-three pieces, and three bed comforts. May the Lord richly bless those who donated so freely. We have had a cheerful spirit, and are encouraged to do more and better work than we did in the past. We have had much interest in the meetings, and a spirit of helping the needy, that whatsoever our hands find to do we may do it with our might.—Agnes Steck, R. D. 4, Naperville, Ill., Feb. 27.

KINGSLEY, IOWA.—During the year beginning Feb. 24, 1910, and ending Feb. 16, 1911, we held twenty-two meetings with an average attendance of twelve. We met every two weeks, and at the close of our meetings we read a chapter and closed with prayer. We adopted a new plan last year and it worked well. At each of our homes the sisters took the lead in reading a chapter and leading in prayer. Our birthday offering was 25 cents. We have fifty pairs of stockings for the little folks. This makes a good many warm feet and glad hearts. We have adopted some more new plans. We have twenty members enrolled and each one pays a membership fee of $1.20 per year, in two payments. Every all day on which they get together tea costs extra. When we can, we do a day's work we meet at nine o'clock and work till four o'clock. Our work consists of making garments; such as outfits, dresses, boys' waists, boys' pants, girls' fleece-lined union suits and aprons, etc. We also quilt and tie. We tacked twenty-four comforters, donated eleven comforters, and sold the others at $3 each. We sent three barrels of clothing last year. One we sent to Winona. The barrel contained seventy-eight garments, valued at $34.55. We sent two barrels to Minneapolis, containing 251 garments, valued at $110.40. The number of garments in three barrels was 329, value of goods in three barrels, $144.95. We have donated boxes to Missions. Money earned amounted to $40.15; money donated, $6; money spent, $18.79; cash on hand, $11.06. Our birthday offering amounted to $3.47. We bought fifty pair of stockings with that money. We have another barrel of goods nearly ready to send. We reelected Sister Jennie Sheeler president; Sister Helen Vanadell, secretary. Sometimes we feel discouraged, but we hope and pray that we may have more faith in such a good work as our aid societies are doing. I sincerely believe that we will have a blessing. We should remember our neighbors with the poor. We know our work has been good, but let us hope for greater results for the coming year.—Jennie Sheeler, Kingsley, Iowa, Feb. 24.

☞ All business and communications intended for the paper should be addressed to the BRETHREN PUBLISHING HOUSE, ELGIN, ILL., and not to any individual connected with it.

BRO. J. J. SCHOGUM, of Fairfield, this State, a member of the Mission Board of Southern Illinois, spent a few days in Elgin.

WE understand that Bro. Franklin Myers, of Lanark, Ill., who has been very sick for several months, is slowly recovering.

BRO. J. F. APPLEMAN and wife, of Plymouth, Ind., spent most of last week in Elgin, and attended our series of meetings.

ON page 157, this issue, the Secretary of the Educational Board has an announcement that concerns all the Brethren schools.

FIVE came out on the Lord's side and received baptism during a series of meetings held at Boone Creek, Tenn., by Bro. Jesse Clark.

EIGHTEEN persons were recently added to the Missisinewa church, Ind., as the fruits of some evangelistic work done by Bro. H. L. Fadely.

IN this issue, on page 155, will be found the report of the Committee on Rebaptism. The reports from a few other committees will appear soon.

DURING the late protracted meeting at First Grand Valley, Colo., conducted by Bro. A. C. Root, there were five added to the church, four baptized and one reclaimed.

BRO. VIRGIL C. FINNELL is now located at 1643 Lyon Street, Des Moines, Iowa, where he should hereafter be addressed. His location is less than one block from the church.

WRITING from Anderson, Ind., our correspondent says that Bro. Noah Fisher has been sick for nearly three months, and earnestly craves the prayers of the Brotherhood for his recovery.

BRO. A. C. BRUBAKER, of 2002 Broadway, Kansas City, Kans., says that he is now in a position to devote his time to evangelistic work. Those wishing to confer with him can address him as above.

BRO. WILLIAM LAMPIN devoted four weeks to revival work in Los Angeles, Cal., and as the fruits of the efforts put forth eleven were added to the church. One was also restored to fellowship.

BRO. W. R. MILLER, and those traveling with him, have planned to sail from Southampton, England, next Wednesday and reach New York March 22. They probably left Alexandria, Egypt, Feb. 22.

BRO. DAVID W. WEAVER delivered eleven doctrinal discourses at Davidsburg, Pa., an isolated point, and eleven persons called for Christian baptism and were added to the little band of believers at that place.

BRO. H. M. ROTHROCK and wife, of Centralia, Wash., but now of Bethany Bible School, spent last Lord's Day in Elgin, and before returning to Chicago, called at the MESSENGER sanctum. After April they will take up work in some part of the West.

As the fruits of a series of meetings at Decatur, Ill., conducted by Bro. Geo. R. Eller, of Kansas, eight applied for membership. It is said that the New Testament doctrine was plainly and forcibly set before the people of Decatur.

BRO. J. W. SWITZER and family, after residing at Mount Morris, a few years, have returned to their former home, at Roanoke, Woodford Co., Ill. The congregation to which he returns will be glad for Bro. Switzer's assistance in the ministry.

THERE is quite a tendency, on the part of some of our writers on temperance, to run into politics and partyism. The MESSENGER wishes to steer clear of all political issues. Temperance is a moral question and should be discussed as such in our columns.

DURING the latter part of January and the early part of February it is said to have rained in Palestine for twenty-three days, and that during the time twelve inches of water fell. Had this water been carefully stored in reservoirs and pools, it would have been sufficient to irrigate every acre of the fertile land in the country.

WE have a copy of the Brethren Annual, a year book for 1911, published by the Progressive publishing house at Ashland, Ohio. The publication contains considerable information regarding the Progressive church. We notice a total of 292 names in the ministerial list. This is eleven more than reported the year previous.

BRO. WM. M. HOWE, Secretary of the General Temperance Committee, will be pleased to receive sample copies of all the letters sent out to local committees, or to the elders of the churches, by the District Temperance Committees. This General Committee urges, indeed, that sample copies be sent to Bro. Howe, whenever letters are sent out.

IT is very unfortunate when correspondents, sending church news, fail to give their address. They will wonder why their reports are not published, while we have no way of reaching them with the necessary explanation. The only thing we can do is to wait until they write and ask us to give our reason for refusing to publish their church news.

THOSE having old files of the Brethren publications, with which they would be willing to part, are requested to communicate with the Berean Bible School, Los Angeles, Cal. We would further say, that possibly all of our school managers would be pleased to confer with parties who can furnish complete files of our various publications from 1851 to the present date.

SOME of our thoughtful correspondents help the MESSENGER to considerable news by sending us short, pointed and newsy editorial items, prepared as they would like them published. We may not always print these items just as written, but they help us to the news all the same. Any brief mention, in keeping with the character of the matter that appears on this page, will be appreciated.

FOR the first time, in the history of the GOSPEL MESSENGER, the paper was read in the land of Moab, during the captivity of the W. R. Miller party. Bro. Miller writes us that he did not take time to even open a package containing several copies of the MESSENGER that reached him on the morning he left Jerusalem, so he slipped the package into his saddle bags and found the paper excellent reading while in the Bedouin camps. So far as we know this is the first time the MESSENGER ever made a trip around the Dead Sea.

OUR readers are always interested in news from the Bible Lands, and that is why we may occasionally say something about the weather, as well as about other things. In February the railroad between Beirout and Damascus was blocked with snow nearly twenty days, and about the middle of the month the streets of Jerusalem were piled high with drifted snow. Several houses collapsed and some children were killed. The railroad running from Jaffa to Jerusalem was also blockaded for a short time. We should judge that this was unusual weather for Palestine.

WHAT we said two weeks ago about the necessity of committees, to whom queries were referred by the late Annual Meeting, having their reports published not later than April 15, is called in question. In support of what we said we refer to Art. 5, 1903. There it is stated that such reports "shall be published in the GOSPEL MESSENGER not later than April 15." This, of course, has no reference to the queries passed by the District Meetings. These may be published at any time before the Annual Meeting.

The Christian Advocate tells of an active M. E. minister, eighty-seven years old, who has been preaching sixty-seven years. During all these years he has never missed a Conference roll call. His mind is clear, and he takes great interest in what is going on in the religious body of which he is a member. And to make it still more encouraging, his coworker in the ministry treats him with all becoming courtesy. He is not pushed to one side and made to feel humiliated simply because he happens to have an unusual number of years placed to his credit. He is made, in the midst of his people, to feel that old age is honorable.

Too late to mention in last issue, we received the interesting, artistically-arranged and neatly-printed Dedication Souvenir of the new church at Covington, Ohio, in which are announced the dedication services for Sunday, March 5, and the services for each evening of this week. Bro. H. C. Early is announced for the dedication address on Sunday morning, for an address in the evening, and a third address on Monday evening. Bro. T. S. Moherman delivers two evening addresses, and the others for the week are announced for Bro. Geo. W. Flory, the pastor. The souvenir contains some interesting history, as well as some interesting illustrations.

A CORRESPONDENT in the Southwest does not seem to understand that there is a difference between the oath in a civil court and the affirmation. The former is swearing, but this can not be said of the latter. In the New Testament swearing is forbidden. We are told to "swear not at all," but that our yea should be yea, and our nay should be nay. This simply means that we should tell the truth without swearing to it. The affirmation grants us this privilege. We affirm that we will tell the truth, but we do not make oath to that effect. One can take this affirmation without violating the Scriptures, and for that reason it is recommended to the members of the Brethren church.

BRO. VIRGIL C. FINNELL and wife stopped at Elgin on their way to DesMoines, Iowa, where they go to take charge of the pastoral work in that city. Bro. Finnell had many things of interest to say about his recent trip among the churches in the East. His talks about the Publishing House and the work we are doing were listened to with a good deal of interest, and in some instances with considerable enthusiasm. In most congregations, however, he found members who did not even know that the church owned a publishing house, and his talk was news to them. But this lack of information, upon the part of some of our people, is not by any means peculiar to the East. Brethren and sisters of this class may be found in many sections of the Brotherhood.

THE Mormons certainly understand the policy of putting the best foot foremost when introducing their religion into new places. Recently they organized a small congregation in Jerusalem, and when setting forth their principles in a weekly paper, published in the city, said not one word about the Mormon Bible, or any other writing for which they claim Divine inspiration, though they hint at the possibility of such revelation by saying: "We believe that the canon of the Scriptures is not full, but that God, by his Holy Spirit, will continue to reveal his Word to man until the end of time." Regarding polygamy, the author of the declaration of principles mentioned says: "We believe that the doctrines of the plurality and a community of wives are heresies, and are opposed to the laws of God." We are sure that these people are publishing nothing of the kind in this country, where their history is best known.

Statistics and the Triple Action in Baptism.

THERE are several ways in which one may study church statistics to most excellent advantage. One religious body may be compared with another. The net increase affords food for thought, and especially is it interesting to note the churches that are credited with the most rapid growth. But in this article we are to study the different Christian bodies from an unusual viewpoint. We are to notice how they stand in this country, numerically, respecting the number of actions required in what they recognize as baptism. It is well to know that some of them practice affusion, while others practice immersion. Then some of those that hold to affusion apply the water three times, while others apply it but once. There is also a difference among those that immerse, some employing the triple action, while others immerse once only.

Going over the late statistics, we observe that of the 35,332,776 members of the various religious bodies, 530,791 either do not profess the Christian faith, or do not believe in water baptism. Among these are the Jews, Friends, Buddhists, Christian Scientists, etc. This leaves 34,801,985 to reckon with regarding baptism. Of these we note that 16,022,173 hold to the triple action, whether they pour or sprinkle the water, or practice immersion only. Among the number we mention the Brethren, the various bodies, the Catholics, Lutherans, Episcopalians, etc. This leaves 18,779,812 in favor of the single action, or 2,757,639 more than will be found on the side of the triple action.

But this is for the United States only. The moment we begin to consider religious statistics in Canada, where the prevailing religion is Episcopalian and Catholic, we find the majority decidedly in favor of the threefold action. This is also true of Mexico and other parts of the Western Continent. In Europe and Eastern Asia those that hold to the trine action in baptism outnumber those holding to the single action more than ten to one. This, however, is common information, but the fact, as stated above,—that those practicing the triple action in the United States, fall only a few million short of those who hold to the single action,—may be new to most of the MESSENGER readers. We know it will be to those who have not heretofore been led to give the matter special consideration.

Good on Total Comparison.

THE Mack Memorial issue of the GOSPEL MESSENGER which, by the way, is a most excellent issue, gives, editorially, the numerical statistics of all the churches of the United States, as just published by Dr. H. K. Carroll. The figures given furnish ground for some interesting deductions. Total number, 35,332,776. The Roman Catholics are credited with 12,321,746; the Methodists, 6,596,168; the Baptists, 5,774,046; the Lutherans, 2,000,000; and the remaining 8,640,816 go to make up the smaller churches. It is to be understood, of course, that all churches that practice immersion as baptism, whether it be single or trine, are counted as Baptists in the report. It is understood also that statistics are only approximately correct. They are submitted as such. With this understanding, the figures, herewith submitted, are accepted as being as nearly correct as it is possible to make them under present methods of obtaining them.

The increase for the year, as given, is 628,955, which is something less than that of the previous year. This is the net gain; it is not the total number added to the churches during the year; it is the total number, less the number of deaths, backsliders and expulsions. The church, as a whole, numbered 628,955 more at the close of this year than at the close of last year. Some of the churches do not keep records of their losses, and data are not at hand, therefore, to give the number. Is it safe to count the total increase in membership by half the number of additions, allowing the other half to cover the losses by death, backsliding and expulsion? In a general way, the losses are probably more than 50 per cent of the gains; but in the Church of the Brethren the losses, I should think, are hardly so great, because sensational methods are not employed in bringing people into the church. Any way, it appears safe to count her net increase by one-half the number of additions. On this basis let us figure.

The net increase of all the churches of the States, as a whole, for last year, is less than 2 per cent. It is approximately 1¾ per cent. A gain of two per cent would be 694,076, instead of 638,955, the gain reported. Or, in other words, it is a gain of eighteen to the thousand. On this basis, to illustrate, two churches, having 500 members, each, at the beginning of the year, would have 509 members, each, at the close of the year.

The latest figures give the number of the Church of the Brethren at about 90,000. Number of additions are reported variously at from 5,000 to 8,000 yearly. Let us take the mean of these two extremes as representing the rate of increase. Of course, this is only approximate, and the figures are too low, rather than too high, because many additions are not reported at all, while a few may be counted more than once. The annual increase, then, is 6,500. Allow one-half for losses, and the net increase is 3,250. The percentage of gain is $3^{11}/_{18}$,—a gain of a fraction over 47 to the thousand.

In the total comparison, the Church of the Brethren is placed at excellent advantage. The rate of increase of the churches, as a whole, is 1¾ per cent; the Brethren's increase is at the rate of $3^{11}/_{18}$. To the church at large there has been a gain of 18 to the thousand; the Brethren's gain has been 47 to the thousand,—her increase more than doubling the rate of increase of the whole.

The number of additions to be counted for losses is not estimated by reports, as you notice. I have ventured to estimate it at one-half, which is problematical. So let us experiment a little with figures. The approximate number of the entire membership of the Church of the Brethren is known, and the number of additions yearly is known also. Let us suppose that her rate of increase is the same as the average of the churches combined, that is 1¾ per cent. In that case, what proportion of her additions would go for losses? 4,925, or a little over three-fourths. Only 1,575, or a little less than one-fourth, could be counted as the increase of the total membership, which proves itself false on its face. So that, whatever the proportion of additions to be counted for losses, it is certain that the Brethren's rate of increase is greater than the average rate of all the churches as a whole, and that in this comparison she appears to good advantage. At the lowest reasonable estimate, she doubles the average rate.

If these facts had been brought out earlier, some of the Brethren who have labored painfully hard, and written exhaustively of late, to apologize for the church's want of growth, in comparison with some of the leading denominations, might have been saved their heroic efforts, for the fact is, she is more than an average grower in "this land of the sky."

But is not the growth of the whole shamefully small? Who feels like apologizing? Rather, do we not feel like covering ourselves in sackcloth and ashes, and crying mightily to God for power? Just think of a gain of one member to fifty-five a year! Isn't it enough to bring the blush of shame? Or, if you please, think of a gain of one member to twenty-one, as the gain of the Brethren figures! Indeed, it would appear that no further apologies should be offered, saying that the Church of the Brethren can not be expected to grow at a rapid rate, because it is a church of protest, etc., etc. Are all the churches of our country churches of protest? And is that the reason that gains are so small? Is not the reason to be found, rather, in a want of consecration and intelligent zeal on the part of believers? It's easy for us to excuse ourselves on the ground that the church protests against evil, even popular evils. But does God excuse us as we excuse ourselves? True, Jesus set up a church of protest. What kind of a church would it take not to be a church of protest? And Jesus expects his church of protest to grow; and we need not attempt to cover up want of faithfulness with the fact that the church protests against evil. Take protesting against evil away, and there is no need of a church; we can all go in the "big church" where evil is condoned.

The increase in the population of the States during the last ten years has been at the rate of about 24 per cent. I do not have the figures before me. I am counting the population of 1890 at 75,000,000, and the population of 1900 at 93,000,000, which is approximate, and which gives an increase of 18,000,000. On this basis the gain is 24 per cent. Any way, it is clear that the churches, in their gains, have not kept pace with the gains in population. They not only fall below, but away below. It's startling. It ought to alarm us and wake us out of our sleep. At the present rate, what will be the result of a few decades in the future? A little over one-third of the entire population maintain church relations at present, and the other two-thirds are gaining at a rapid rate. At the present rate, before the close of this century the church influence in the nation will hardly be perceptible. The nation gaining at the rate of 24 per cent, and the churches at the rate of 1¾ per cent. Think of it. And this is not the story of a man under a juniper tree, either.

Glimpses of Travel.

IN our last we spoke of the aged people who make their home in the South during part of the winter months. We also spoke somewhat of the class to which they seem to belong, morally and financially. We now wish to speak of their religious status. Here we find, as everywhere else, a wide range of Christian beliefs.

In this city we have found, so far, two Baptist, two Methodist (north and south), Congregational, Lutheran, Christian, Episcopal, Catholic and Christian Science churches, so that the tourists, who crowd in here during the winter months, are well supplied with places where they can worship with their own people, except those of our own church, of whom, so far as I have yet learned, there are ten or twelve.

Church lines here are not drawn very closely, as a large percentage of the incoming church people are inclined to go the "rounds," and thus distribute their nickles among the different denominations, avoiding somewhat those that have houses incompleted or have a heavy debt hanging over them, which seems to be the condition of the majority of them. It is supposed, by the people here, that tourists, as a class, are well-to-do financially, and that, by helping their more needy brethren here, to get rid of their church indebtedness, is a very good opportunity of getting rid of their surplus cash, as well as being a means of grace, and of laying up treasures in heaven. From appearances, they are right about it, as we have noticed that there are several church buildings here that are only partly completed, because of a lack of means, and others are in need of means to meet the indebtedness already made. The houses are not lavishly constructed, and the furnishings are simple and modest. Both the local and the tourist worshipers are devoted, social and simple in their habits, and modest in their apparel and general appearance.

The ministers make themselves known and agreeable. They are active and zealous in their ministrations, courteous to each other, but outspoken in their ideas concerning their beliefs and duties. Their specific doctrines are handled ungloved. In the Baptist church we heard a strong sermon by Dr. Duke, of Tampa, in which he made some very pertinent remarks on faith as an essential to Christian baptism. He made it very plain that baptism without faith is no baptism at all.

In the Christian church we heard a sermon by Dr. Snively, a western evangelist who had been holding a series of meetings in the Christian church here. He introduced their doctrine through queries given by those who wished to ask them. Among them was this one: "Is immersion the only true mode of baptism?" This he answered wisely and discreetly, as far as he went. He began by defining the word "baptism," as is our custom to do, declaring that, as originally used, the word never had and never could have any other meaning than immersion.

Following this he quoted from the early "Church Fathers," stating that they all agreed that immersion was the legitimate mode of baptism, and closed by giving the experience of one of the Presbyterian missions among the Greeks. This missionary wrote to the head man of their Mission Board for advice as to how he was to baptize his converts. He said: "These people have all their papers and books in the Greek language. They read it, they talk it, and they understand it. They say that the word baptizo means trine immersion, and they will not hear to anything else. What shall I do about it?"

The president of the missionary board answered him by saying: "They are right as to the meaning of the word; baptize them by immersion, as they understand it."

This was certainly a strong argument in favor of immersion, but too much for the practice of the Christian church, as immediately after the sermon we saw a baptism by the elder in charge. He took the applicant into the pool or baptistry, and, while standing, he said: "My dear brother, for the remission of thy sins, I baptize thee in the name of the Father (and did it not), and of the Son" (and did it not), and then baptized once backward,—in the name of the Holy Ghost. Such a procedure would seem hardly right to the Greeks, or the Church Fathers, whom the evangelist quoted to prove that immersion is the true mode of Christian baptism, and so it seems to us as a church. It does seem a pity that these otherwise earnest, aggressive and zealous people can not see it as the commission teaches, as it was understood by those who best understood the language in which the Gospels were written, and as it was taught and practiced by the early Church Fathers and by the Greek church, all down through the ages.

The religious and moral condition of the city is praiseworthy. There are no bar rooms, no saloons, no drunkenness, no quarreling (in public), and no swearing. There is no unbecoming conduct to be seen on her streets, or within her borders. The chief occupation of the people seems to be to rest, lounge, sleep, eat, fish,—and go to church on Sundays. Some go out on excursions on the Lord's Day, but it is advised against by the good church people.

During the tourist season,—which means from December to April,—the hotels and boarding houses,—and there is a large supply of them,—are well filled, and give good board and well-furnished rooms at reasonable prices. Many of the houses are arranged for light housekeeping, so that, when a number come together, they can do their own cooking and housekeeping, and thus save considerable grumbling about their board, as is always the case at public boarding houses. It is very much easier to please ourselves than to be pleased by others. Even fairly good Christians are not always willing to eat what is set before them without asking questions for conscience's sake.

Our eating place affords an excellent opportunity for studying human character. We have ministers and their wives, doctors and their wives, professors and their wives, widowers, widows, maids and bachelors from the North, West, East and South, and their table talks are interesting and instructive. In our next, and probably the last, on the South, we expect to say something more about the land and the land agents.

H. B. B.

The Prayer Veil Again.

We have several letters about our recent editorial regarding the prayer veil. One sister thinks that the devout woman should have her head veiled all the while, for she does not know what may happen, and she ought to be in a position to pray at any moment. She does not seem to understand that this process of reasoning would require the man, especially while exposed to danger, to keep his head constantly uncovered, so he will be prepared to offer a prayer whenever circumstances demand it. When it is once considered that Paul, in 1 Cor. 11:1-15, refers to special seasons of prayer, it will not be difficult to understand the real purpose of the prayer veil. It does not necessarily apply to emergency cases. One sister wishes to know whether she should have her head covered while prayer is offered at meal time. She readily understands that the man should have his head uncovered on such occasions, and if she would apply the same principle to the woman, there would be no occasion for sending the question to us. Replying briefly, we may say, that since the offering of thanks at meal time is a case of special devotion, we should advise sisters, on such occasions, to comply with Paul's instructions, and have their heads veiled. To say the very least of it, this would be the safe thing to do.

Speculative Questions.

We observe that in the Bible class, in some of our Sunday-schools, there is a disposition, especially upon the part of some of the older members, to discuss speculative questions that are of no practical value. When the Holy Spirit moved men to write the different books, making up the Sacred Record, he never intended that any part of the Record should give occasion for speculative theories. But it would seem that some people take more delight in speculative matters than they do in the practical. There is no end to their theories. They can talk for hours about them, and when they are through, no one is made the better or the wiser for having listened to them. Now and then the whole time allotted to a Sunday-school lesson is consumed, debating one of these questions, while the real practical and helpful points of the lesson are neglected. It may be interesting enough to listen to a class of this sort, but there is little about it to help one. Then it will be observed that men who are chiefly interested in speculative questions are not, as a rule, practical men. They may talk religion, but they are not good church workers.

Holding Official Positions.

In answer to a correspondent, seeking information regarding members holding official positions under the Government, we state, that it has long been the rule among the Brethren for members to hold no office requiring the violation of our nonswearing and nonresistant principles. This means the administering of the oath, as well as taking the oath. It also means the making and enforcing of law relating to military affairs, as well as taking part in the performing of military duties. Our time-honored and consistent practice, in these particulars, is based upon the Written Word. In fact, the strict letter of the New Testament teaches that Christians should not swear, and that they should take no part in war. To every Bible student it must be evident that if it is a violation of the Gospel to swear, it is also a violation of the Gospel to demand that others shall swear. It is also evident that if the New Testament forbids Christians taking part in war, it also forbids them to enforce law that will compel men to take up arms. The only consistent course is for our people to refuse to serve in any official position that calls for the ignoring of any of our well-founded Gospel principles.

The Messenger in Florida.

The Messenger is gaining an encouraging circulation in Florida, indicating that a number of our people are securing a foothold in the State. They are, however, scattered and will be found in a dozen different localities, each of which may yet become a center around which others will rally and help to establish congregations. At one time there was a promising outlook for the Brethren in the Land of Florida, but there came reverses, and most of the members left for other parts. Now they are returning, and as they settle, here and there, they call for preachers to come and help plant the standard of primitive Christianity. Returning prosperity may yet make it possible for us to build up a number of churches in this genial clime. Those of us who have spent years in the Sunny South, and became accustomed to the conditions and the ways of the people, know what it is to worship God amid genial surroundings, in a land of almost perpetual summer.

Christians Outside of the Churches.

One of our readers wishes to know what should be done with a minister who, in his public discourses, teaches that there are good Christians even outside of the churches. We should think that a preacher of this sort would be just the man to send around to keep people out of the church. If he has the ability to prove that men and women, outside of the church, who refuse to confess Christ and obey his commandments, can live the Christian life and be saved, he will come wonderfully near proving that the church established by Jesus Christ, and confirmed by the Holy Spirit, has little excuse for existence. Let him convince the people of this country that he is right, and he will come amazingly near closing all churches and Sunday-schools in the land. Some churches, that number their converts by the million, may have use for this kind of a preacher, but the Brethren do not. We read nothing in the New Testament about ministers of the Gospel teaching that men and women can be saved outside of the church. With them it was accepting Christ and obeying his commandments, or being lost. They held out no inducement to those who refused to confess Jesus and to be numbered with the believers. After saying this much, we need not say what should be done with that kind of a preacher. Any congregation should understand her duty.

More About Mack.

There are several calls for a pamphlet containing the articles recently published in the Messenger about Alexander Mack, along with further information regarding his life and labors. In due time we think our people will be favored with the information they are seeking regarding this remarkable reformer. While a full and complete history of Elder Mack may never be given, still there are enough data in existence, concerning him and his labors, to enable the careful historian to prepare a very satisfactory biographical sketch of the man. It would be well if all our people could have the pleasure of reading such a work. What was said in the Messenger about him, the doctrine he taught, and the church he helped to organize, has given thousands of our persons a taste for more of that kind of information. There may be others who would like to tell what they know about Alexander Mack and his labors. If so, may we not have the pleasure of hearing from them?

About New Sections.

To save expense in answering letters of inquiry, a number of those residing in newly-settled localities are requesting us to publish certain information regarding the climate, price of lands, products, etc., etc., in their particular sections. To comply with such requests would tend to secularize the Messenger to an unreasonable extent. We suggest a better way. Let those writing any of our members for information, respecting the country where they have chosen to cast their lot, enclose stamps enough to pay for the time required to give them the facts they are seeking. Especially should this be done where it is known that the new settler is not engaged in handling real estate. If he is making that a part of his business, he gets his regular commission and can afford to give time to the work, and furnish his own postage. But let not what we are here saying prevent correspondents from supplying us with the church news from their respective localities.

How She Taught Them.

Concerning a certain sister who recently passed to her reward, a cultured lady (not a member of the Brethren church) writes: "You can never have a more faithful friend to your paper, your creed and your church. She was an exemplary Christian and taught the whole town to respect your belief." As a representative of the Brethren church she was a living epistle known to all the people, and honored by both men and women. A woman of this type is a power for good in any community, and reminds us of a remark that is credited to an early heathen who at one time said: "What wonderful people these Christian women are!" Give us a few sisters of this type in every community and in every town and city, and we could easily build up ten churches where we now have one, and would not even need to depend upon the most learned of preachers to do it.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

GENERAL MISSION BOARD OF THE CHURCH OF THE BRETHREN.

Address,
General Mission Board, Elgin, Ill.

FULTON AVENUE CHURCH, BALTIMORE, MD.

Bro. W. T. Miller closed a two weeks' series of meetings in this church tonight, with one applicant for baptism. Last night Bro. Finnell, of Elgin, Ill., gave us a very interesting and instructive address on our publishing interests, which awakened new life within us. At the close of his address the church unanimously appointed Bro. D. C. Angle, of 629 North Mount Street, as agent for our Publishing House. Why did not some one tell us before of our duty toward our, Publishing House and the privileges connected therewith? We trust that the renewed energy and interest in our Publishing House will more than make it worth while that Bro. Finnell visited us. Our work in general moves along with very fair prospects for 1911. "Our Saturday Night" is great. Full of simple but most pungent paragraphs,—pearls of great truth.

S. E. Geiser.

1607 Edmondson Avenue, Baltimore, Md., Feb. 26.

MARKLE, INDIANA.

Jan. 15 Bro. D. J. Wampler, of Idaho, gave us the privilege of his presence. He preached both morning and evening, which renewed old associations within himself, and those with whom he once labored. Our Christian Workers' Meeting is growing in interest. The blackboard is used in preparing the program, by employing the topics in the Messenger. At each meeting different speakers are given a subject to talk on, and we are having good results. Some short talks have been very spiritual. Feeling our weakness in the sight of God, we aim to speak as the Spirit of God directs,—not just to be heard or seen of men. We can all be workers together with God. Both the aged and the young should feel their duty towards the work of the Lord. The pupils of the Sunday-school primary classes, who invested ten cents each for the Brethren Sunday-school Extension of Chicago, have given in their reports. The total amount raised was $18.05. PASADENA, CALIFORNIA.

Our regular church council occurred last evening. Bro. L. D. Bosserman and wife were received into the congregation by letter. We are glad to have them return to us, since the extent of our work demanded more ministerial help. Bro. Howard Puterbaugh was elected church trustee, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Eld. Joseph Trostle. Bro. L. D. Bosserman and Sister Mary Nill were elected delegates to District Meeting. One query was sent to District Meeting. It was decided to paint both the Hudson Avenue church and the Fullerton Avenue chapel. Sister Ella Schrock, having married one of our deacons, Bro. Irvin Schrock, was installed into her husband's office. Our love feast was appointed for Sunday evening, March 12. Bro. Fred Chemberlen gave us a special Christian Workers temperance address, last Sunday evening, on the subject, "The Great Unfinished Task." Following this, his father, Bro. Geo. Chemberlen, gave us a sermon on the "Imperishable Creed."

A FRUITFUL FIELD FOR THE MESSENGER.

I see and hear many testimonies as to the value of the Messenger as a missionary. It is hard to get enough missionaries to go around to supply all the calls, but we can have plenty of Messengers. For fifty cents the Messenger agrees to visit any home you choose to name, each week for a year. Will any one do it for less?

Now, if you are not doing any mission work, this fact may not appeal to you, but it does to me. Here, in the city, we meet so many people in our mission work that we can not follow up these cases as we should like. We become interested in them, and they in the Gospel we preach, but they move to another part of the city, out of our reach, or else, even when they are near, we are too busy to visit them. Does it not occur to you to make a good start toward bringing a man to Christ and then to lose him because we can't follow him up? Right here is a good place to use the Messenger. I know of nothing else so good to do for those whom we can not reach otherwise as to send them the Messenger.

This matter of following up our work has been discussed a good deal by the students at the Bible School who do mission work at the County Hospital. There we meet some splendid people, who need the Gospel, and seem to be hungry for it. They enjoy our visits and wish to know more of us. We give them old Messengers and they like them, but we see them only once a week in the hospital, and when they leave, they generally go clear out of our reach. In our workers' meetings we have discussed this problem and have decided that the Messenger is the best solution of the problem, and we expect to send the Messenger to those who, we think, will read it.

But there is one real difficulty that limits our work along that line. It costs fifty cents a year to send the paper. We are students, most of us poor, and struggling to get through school and into the Lord's work, so we don't have many half dollars to use in sending Messengers. We have heard of a fund for that purpose in time past, but now learn that it has been exhausted. But I don't believe that this will be so for very long. I believe that generous hearts and hands will open to this call, and send the Messenger forth on its great mission of evangelization.

I really think that right here in Chicago is a great field for the Messenger. I can not speak so freely for the other mission workers, but I am sure they will, but I am quite sure that the rescue mission workers, home Bible class teachers, and others, can use them to good advantage. Who will replenish the Messenger's mission fund?

EL CENTRO CHURCH, CAL.

Not long since it was reported that the new organization at Holtville, Cal., would assume the old name of "Imperial Valley" church, thus leaving the mother church at El Centro to choose a new name.

At our call meeting, Feb. 8, a unanimous vote was cast in favor of the name "El Centro" church. This specifies our location also, El Centro being the county-seat of Imperial County. Bro. W. M. Platt was chosen delegate to District Meeting; Sister Nellie Hall, alternate.

Arrangements are made for a series of meetings, to be held as soon as an evangelist can be secured, after which we expect to hold our spring love feast. The exact date will be announced later. Sunday, Feb. 19, was with us the District Sunday-school Secretary, who was with us conducting both the morning and evening exercises. He gave us valuable thoughts and suggestions along Sunday-school lines and Christian Endeavor work; also delivering an address on the subject, "Our Work on the Nation."

We would greatly appreciate more calls from ministering brethren who are visiting California from the East and other points. We feel that the Lord is blessing the efforts put forth in this valley, and we see so much still remains to be done. May we give him all the praise!

THE REBAPTISM QUESTION.

From the Danville church, by the consent of the District Meeting of Northeastern Ohio, to the General Conference of the Church of the Brethren of 1910: Will this Conference grant that all persons who have been baptized by trine immersion, according to Matt. 28: 19, and for the remission of sins according to Acts 2: 38, and in no absolute way who believes such baptism scriptural, may be received into the "Church of the Brethren" by the right hand of fellowship "Church of the Brethren" by the right hand of fellowship and kindred charity, after the usual instructions are given and assented to?

Answer: Referred to a committee of three, with instructions to investigate the whole subject of rebaptism and report to some future meeting.

Committee: J. C. Bright, Jesse C. Ziegler, John Heckman.

Committee's Report.

We decide that members of other churches, who have been baptized by trine immersion according to Matt. 28: 19, who are in harmony with us as to the nature and design of baptism, whose motive is a closer fellowship with Christ, may be received into the Church of the Brethren without rebaptism; provided, first, that the former baptism shall have been performed by one whose regular form of baptism is trine immersion; second, that they fully assent to instructions usually given to applicants, according to Minutes of Annual Meeting, Art. 7, 1886, page 19 of "Classified Minutes;" third, that they shall be willing to receive the laying on of hands accompanied with prayer (if it has been neglected) and be received into the church by the right hand of fellowship and the salutation of the holy kiss.

All former decisions in conflict with this decision are hereby repealed.

Committee: John Calvin Bright, Jesse Ziegler, John Heckman.

TAKE UP THY CROSS.

It seems that one of the main principles in Christianity is cross-bearing. Luke 14: 27 reads, "And whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple." Jesus bore his cross to Calvary for us, that we, through his death, might have a right to the tree of life.

"Must Jesus bear the cross alone,
And all the world go free?
No, there's a cross for every one,
And there's a cross for me."

Surely, if Jesus Christ, who was without sin or any obligation to sinful man, was willing to suffer the ignominious death of the cross for poor, weak creatures as we are, we ought not expect to be carried to the skies on flowery beds of ease, since we are so unworthy. Jesus bore his cross alone but now he offers to help us to bear ours. He says, "Take up thy cross and come after me."

That word "come" means so much. It is a gracious invitation that we should not refuse. He does not say, "Take up thy cross and fight the battles of life," but, "Come after me." If he wants us to come after him, has he not trod the weary road alone, and does he not know the trials and disappointments we shall meet? But has he not promised to be with us and help us at all times? His grace is sufficient for all times. If we fail to feel his comforting power, it is not because he has failed us, but because we are not in a proper relation to him to receive the blessing. The trouble lies with us, always; God's promises are sure.

When the rich young ruler came to him and asked what he should do to inherit eternal life, Jesus asked him about the commandments. The ruler said he had kept all these from his youth up. Jesus loved the ruler felt quite good, seeing he had done these things, but Jesus had not touched the vital point,—that which was dear to the young man's heart. Jesus then said, "Yet lackest thou one thing: sell that thou hast and distribute unto the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven, and come follow me."

This caused the young man to be sorrowful. He could not bear the cross. It was his treasure; he could not part with it. Where his treasure was, his heart was also. So it is with us. The young ruler left the Master and did not seek the sure treasures of heaven, but returned to the uncertain riches which satisfy not. To forsake his riches was his cross because he loved riches more than Christ. Jesus must be first and all in all.

We must forsake father, mother, houses and lands, if need be, for the cause of Christ. Without a doubt he who has created us and redeemed us and given us all that we have and are, has a right to claim our highest affections. It seems strange that we should hold anything that is in this uncertain world, dearer than the love and service of the Master, who will not forsake us nor leave us, but many of us do. There is nothing certain in this world but death. Let us take up our cross for a few short years. Then we may wear the crown throughout eternity.

We need not bear the cross alone. He who bore the rugged cross for us is willing and able to help us bear ours now, though but light compared to Calvary's cross. If we bear our cross, we are his disciples, and therefore missionaries; for who could know and feel the love of Christ and not live a different life from the sinner, and not try by word and daily living, to lead others to the blessed Master? I truly believe that our daily life and conduct makes more impression on others than do our words, for "actions speak louder than words."

How important it is, then, for us to walk uprightly as in the day! Our conduct may influence the destiny of human souls who are watching us to see if there really is anything in Christianity. May God help us to take up our cross!

FAITHFUL CHRISTIAN WORKERS.

The church of Christ has always had need of diligent Christian workers in Christ's kingdom on earth. Not only are earnest workers needed to proclaim the truth of the Gospel, in order to induce people to accept it, but the church should also be willing and ready to render financial aid to any worthy ones of her members who are physically distressed, whenever such an opportunity for help presents itself. While this Christian obligation should be fully exercised, it is especially necessary for the church to bestow her love and care upon her members just after they have embraced the faith of Jesus.

In the early Christian era the disciples had the peculiar custom of having all things in common. Not one of them said that aught of the things which he possessed were his own, but those who were possessors of houses and lands sold them and brought the price of the things that were sold to the apostles' feet for distribution according as any one had need. While many of the early Christians gave their possessions, and others lost their possessions, for the sake of the cause of Christ, yet with it all they did not lose their faith in the method of living, however, did not continue very long until there was found dissatisfaction on the part of some of them.

In Acts 6: 1 we are told that there arose a murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in their daily ministrations. At that time there were several distinct classes of Jews in the church at Jerusalem. The Greek-speaking Jews, born in foreign countries, but now members of the church and residents of Jerusalem, found fault with the other members of the church, the native-born Jews of Palestine.

This difficulty naturally led the church to establish a new method of church work, in order to maintain and carry out the true principles of Christian fellowship. Seven brethren were chosen from among their number to attend to this business. And while each of these seven men possessed distinctive qualities of holiness and strength of character, I shall make mention of only one of them.

We have a noteworthy example of a faithful Christian worker in the character of Philip, the evangelist, one of the seven whom the multitude of the disciples, at the special request of the twelve, had seen fit, by the laying on of hands, to call to an important and honorable office in the church. This man, like the rest of the seven, was well known to the church for his honesty and wisdom, and he was filled with the Holy Ghost. In such a loyal man the members of the church could confidently place their trust, for he would be able to use good judgment in exercising the responsible work laid upon him. He proved faithful to the trust. When he had occasion to travel from place to place, he diligently preached the faith of Jesus, and baptized many who believed. His influence extended even unto Egypt.

Philip had a faithful family. He had four daughters, who were virgins and engaged in prophesying. We do not have any definite knowledge as to what the nature of their prophesying was, but from the circumstance of the prediction of Agabus, concerning the future of Paul, we think it is probable that the prophesying of Philip's daughters was more especially the foretelling of future events, rather than the proclaiming and explaining of Scripture, though their prophesying may have included both. The circumstances always determine the particular meaning of the word "prophesy," where it is used in the New Testament.

We are inclined to believe that Philip's daughters were engaged in a good and noble work, and did not find much time for idle conversation, so prevalent among all classes of people today. They spoke to the edification of their hearers. They proclaimed truths that were helpful, and thus they were a blessing to all with whom they came in daily contact.

This is a noteworthy example of a faithful Christian family. The holy lives of its members have been so fully recorded in the Sacred Record, that the Christian reader's home may well pattern after the blessed example, so far as loyalty is concerned. The spiritual lesson we should learn from this loyal family, as well as from all others who, when scattered abroad, were preaching the Word, is that they took delight in being about their Father's work. They went with pure motives, to the best of their ability. They were not ashamed of their religion, and exemplified it at home as well as in public.

We should reverently apply this lesson to our own lives. Let us not be ashamed of our religion! If it is a religion worth having, let us live it wherever we go. If we are ashamed to take our religion with us, it is either not worth having, or we ourselves are on the wrong side of Christ.

We should do all Christian work cheerfully. The Lord delights in a free-will service. No compulsory service is acceptable with him. Our personal relationship to Jesus should be very close, and the result of such a relationship will naturally bring joy and happiness in the service of Christ.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

Lordsburg.—Revival meetings are in progress here. The attendance is good, notwithstanding the inclement weather. Bro. Lampin is doing some excellent preaching, and the meetings are growing in interest. Some have had grown cold, careless and discouraged in the Christian life, who have been led to see the error of their religious duties. Sinners are being convicted, and some are now attending the meetings in good choice. A number have accepted the offered terms of salvation, and are now enjoying the gospel privileges. The messages are very spiritual.—D. A. Norcross, Lordsburg, Cal., Feb. 19.

Santa Ana.—Our series of meetings, conducted by our elder, Bro. S. G. Lehmer, began Feb. 1, closing on Sunday evening. Two made the good confession. One is an aged brother, and the other is a young sister. Others are counting the cost. Bro. Lehmer labored very earnestly while with us. He made a pastoral visit to all the members here. We all feel much encouraged in the Master's cause.—Mrs. Ida Hutchison, 1344 East First Street, Santa Ana, Cal., Feb. 27.

South Long Beach.—Feb. 19 we closed a four weeks' revival meeting, conducted by Bro. Wm. Lampin, of Pole, Ill. Regardless of the inclement weather, the meetings were in the neighborhood, the attendance and interest were very good. Bro. Lampin certainly labored hard, and preached the Word with power. We can truly say that the church here has been revived, and many were aroused to a sense of duty. Eleven were received into the church by baptism. All the members of the Sunday-school, and five represent four new homes in the church. We have much encouragement in the future, members of these families may be reached through the dear ones who have so recently taken the stand for Christ. Many in the neighborhood are seriously counting the cost, and we hope, through persistent prayer and a sowing of seed, to be able to win them to the kingdom. While our hearts are made to rejoice over the new-born babes added to the church, we can not refrain from speaking of the ones who, a few years ago, tasted of God's blessings and strayed from the fold. Our prayer for these wanderers is, that they have no peace of mind until he returns to the One from whom all blessings flow.—Clara Cutter, 539½ South Pacific Street, Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 24.

IDAHO.

Clear Water.—We held a special council Feb. 4. Seven letters of membership were granted. Bro. H. C. Longanecker, of Tekoa, Wash., was chosen elder for this church. Bro. Wm. G. C. Carl, of Portland, Oregon. The writer was chosen church clerk; Sister Nettie Patterson, treasurer. We also decided to solicit funds for a series of meetings. Bro. George W. Buntain has since left us since Feb. 1, preaching every evening. The meetings will continue through this week.—Bertha Eisenhire, Lenore, Idaho, Feb. 14.

Nampa.—Our church met in council Feb. 3. Our elder, Bro. C. C. Neher, being absent, Bro. J. R. Wellman presided. Several letters of membership were granted.—Mrs. Ethel Swope, 208 Sixteenth Avenue South, Nampa, Idaho, Feb. 12.

Nezperce.—Bro. H. C. Longanecker has come from Tekoa, Wash., visited our church on the 21st. He preached two old-time sermons, and gave us good fatherly advice. He is also our elder. The Christian Workers' Meeting, on the 20th, raised $24.61 for the Chinese sufferers, which will be forwarded immediately.—William H. Lichty, Nezperce, Idaho, Feb. 27.

ILLINOIS.

Yellow Creek church met in quarterly council Feb. 28. Our elder, Bro. J. H. Keltner, presiding. We had a good meeting, we hope, profitable meeting. Bro. H. H. Keltner is delegate to Annual Meeting. We expect to hold our four days May 13 and 14.—Mary A. Kuhleman, Pearl City, Ill., March 2.

INDIANA.

Beech Grove.—Last Sunday was surely a time of rejoicing for the church, when one man and brother, for whom we had been praying, came out and was baptized. In the evening another brother was restored to fellowship. We are having weekly prayer meetings in our homes. We feel that others are near the kingdom.—Sister Nettie Black, R. D. 9, March 2.

Bethel.—We met in council at the Chapel house Feb. 25. This was our first meeting since the division of our congregation, which took place Jan. 28. The writer was chosen elder for the coming year. Bro. Elder Miller was present. Considerable work was pleasantly disposed of. Officers were elected as follows: Mary Manly Deeter, elder; Etta Levi Neher, clerk; Bro. Melvin Neff, treasurer; Sister Etta Neff, church correspondent. Bro. William Noss is our regular Messenger. Bro. Noss made free-will pledge with money raised as our finance plan. A paper was read in the interest of Church Missionary Work. Sister Bessie Noss was appointed to receive all donations for the College.—Etta Neff, R. D. 3, Milford, Ind., March 4.

Goshen (West Side).—Our church met in council March 4. Our elder, Bro. J. H. Longenecker, presiding. Two letters were chosen and four were granted. Bro. L. P. Kurtz is our delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. Wm. Hess, alternate. A temperance committee of three brethren was appointed, brethren R. P. Fraser, M. A. Cripe and Isaac Grady. Our love feast was appointed for May 13 at 2 P. M. Our regular quarterly meeting for October May 27, instead of June 3, on account of the Annual Conference. With the new church and newly-purchased house we have a neat, comfortable house in which to worship.—Mrs. Ida Brumbaugh, Goshen, R. D. 8, March 4.

Huntington.—Our church met in council Feb. 25. Our elder, Bro. J. G. Rowe, being absent, Bro. Q. L. Hutton was chosen as our delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. Q. L. Brower, alternate. Our birthday offering, for the entire year, amounted to $18.15. Bro. Rowe turned it in to our Mission Board.—Sister Leo H. Miller, R. D. 9, Huntington, Ind., March 3.

Lindenwald.—Our church met in council March 4. Our elder, Bro. Henry Wike, could not be with us, so Bro. J. W. Harris took charge of the meeting. Bro. Harris was chosen elder. Our love feast will be held May 7, at 10 A. M.—Adella Endsley, Lindenwald, R. D. 3, March 6.

Lower Fall Creek.—We met in council Feb. 25. Our elder, Bro. Frederick Fike, presiding. We had a letter from Sister Bro. Carl Rarick, of Indianapolis, to hold a series of meetings for us, beginning March 24. On account of smallpox being in the neighborhood, we will not have our love feast until the second Sunday of January, but we hope that conditions will be favorable.—Sister Wreatha Krall, R. D. 9, Fairview, Ind., Feb. 26.

Mexico Grove.—Our church convened in council Feb. 25. Eld. Chas. Neff presided. Considerable business came before the meeting. Our elder, Bro. Jacob Neff, and son were present. Bro. Calvin Cripe is our delegate for the next Annual Meeting; Bro. James Peters, alternate. The church contemplates holding a series of meetings in the near future.—Sister Ida Mitchell, New Paris, Ind., Feb. 28.

Missionary Church.—Sunday night Bro. H. L. Fadely, of Middletown, Ind., closed a three weeks' series of meetings at our Union Church. The interest and attendance were very good, and more especially considering the fact that two other protracted meetings had been conducted in the city during the past, and three miles south of this place. Bro. Fadely delivered seventeen interesting sermons. Eighteen were baptized, ranging in age from seven to up to sixty-seven years old.—John P. Shoemaker, Shideler, Ind., Feb. 28.

Nettle Creek.—The church of Northwestern Ohio will be held in the Silver Creek church, near Pioneer, Williams Co., Ohio, April 20 and 21. The ministerial, and the Annual Meeting will be held the day preceding. The Brethren of Silver Creek are making the railroad arrangements.—Edward Kleckner, North Manchester, Ind., Feb. 27.

Pleasant Hill.—Our church met in council Feb. 25. Our elder, Bro. Geo. E. Swihart, presided. Bro. Swihart is our elder for another year. Bro. O. V. Dilling was chosen to represent us at Annual Meeting; Bro. Jesse Hoff, alternate. We selected a minister to hold a series of meetings for us during the latter part of March. Bro. Jesse Hoff, R. D. 3, has charge. Bible lessons here sometime next fall. The church has decided to buy the new hymn books in the spring. The church remained with us over Sunday, and preached three edifying sermons.—Lydia Swihart, R. D. 5, Wabash, Ind., March 4.

Sugar Creek.—Our church met in council at the East house with our elder, Bro. H. J. Neff, presiding. Three letters were granted. Our love feast will be held May 6, at 2 P. M. The members decided to repair our churchhouse the current year. Bro. Jesse Hoff is our delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. Swihart, alternate. We elected our Sunday-school officers for the year. Bro. Jesse Hoff, superintendent; Sister Ida Mitchell, secretary.—Blanche Arnett, South Whitley, Ind., Feb. 25.

Swan Creek.—The work at this place is moving along nicely. Our Sunday-school is increasing all the time. Since our last report two (a husband and wife) have been received by baptism. Two were received by letter. Bro. Jesse Hoff was chosen elder by Bro. D. W. Bowman, of Anderson, last Sunday. The regular quarterly meeting will be held with this church, March 18, at11 A. M.—Summitville, Ind., Feb. 26.

Walnut.—Our church council March 2, our elder, Bro. F. S. Brubaker, presiding. Brethren M. M. Miller, John Strausbaugh and Bro. Jesse Hoff were appointed as a Missionary Committee to assist with the business. Bro. Bro. Jesse Hoff is our elder for another year. Three letters were received. Bro. John Pranse is our delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. Brubaker, alternate. Our love feast will be after harvest. Our Sunday-school elected officers as follows: Our Sunday-school is getting along nicely, with Bro. Charlie Weimer as our superintendent.—Anna Crumrine, R. D. 5, Wabash, Ind., March 3.

IOWA

Des Moines Valley.—Our church met in council March 2, at 1 P. M. Our elder, Bro. J. Q. Coughnour, presided. Considerable business was disposed of. Our meeting was dismissed of in the usual way. We decided to hold our love feast May 27, at 4 P. M. Bro. Q. L. Brower, of Huntington, Indiana, will commence Oct. 7, to be continued two or three weeks.—G. M. West, Ankeny, Iowa, March 6.

Prescott.—Bro. Henry Brower, our District Sunday-school Secretary, came to us in the interest of the Sunday-school work. We decided to hold a Sunday-school Rally, April 2, which was appreciated by all.—Edna Wray, Prescott, Iowa, Feb. 17.

KANSAS

Dorrance.—Our church convened in council Feb. 28, with Bro. D. A. Crist, of Quinter, Kans., present. Three were received by letter. Bro. D. A. Crist is our delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. D. A. Heckman, alternate. Our love feast will be held April 1st, beginning at 10 A. M. Bro. Crist was with us a few days, and preached three edifying sermons. He is also our elder. The Christian Workers' Meeting, on the 20th, raised $24.61 for the Chinese sufferers, which will be forwarded immediately.—William H. Lichty, Nezperce, Idaho, Feb. 27.

Pleasant View.—The members of our church assembled in council March 4, to consider the erection of a suitable house in Hutchinson, Kans. Almost immediately after the meeting was called to order a motion was made to the effect that the Pleasant View church) put forth our greatest effort to build the above-named churchhouse, which was carried unanimously. Next, the different solicitors and committees were elected. A subscription was raised at this same meeting, which amounted to a little over $1,100. This, we think, shows a good interest in the work in Hutchinson. Eld. A. F. Miller and the writer are the solicitors, who will start immediately in this work to raise money in cash or pledges to the amount of $1,200, which is the amount we have to start with. Hutchinson, But it is our intention to raise as much more as possible. Brethren, pray for us during this period. We are sure, in the course of a few months, the dear brethren in Hutchinson, may have a place to worship that they can call their own.—Wilmer Keedy, Darlow, Kans., March 4.

Victor.—Eld. R. E. Kesler, of River Bend, Colo., preached seven sermons for us, Feb. 19 to 26, inclusive. On account of sickness the meetings were not so well attended. However, good was done, and the meetings were quite interested. Bro. Kesler also gave us several soul-inspiring sermons at the close of the series were much appreciated. A few days later he began a series of meetings in the M. E. church, and a good, edifying period. We are sorry that first meetings the Brethren have held at this place. We trust that much good has been won into honest hearts, which will be manifested in the future. The meetings were well attended and good interest was manifested. Bro. Kesler presented the Bible truths, practically, helping the people to search the Scriptures to see if these things were so. —A. C. Bauman, Victor, Kans., March 4.

Wade Branch.—We met in council Feb. 11, with Eld. D. A. Crist presiding. Bro. Crist presented membership with——, a minister in the second degree and his wife. Eld. D. A. Crist was re-elected elder for the coming year. Bro. Crist (Sunday-school) officers for the next quarter are: Bro. Samuel Beaghley, superintendent; Sister Lucy Beaghley, secretary. We will have our love feast May 6, at 2 P. M.—Mrs. Samuel Beaghley, R. D. 2, Pools, Kans., Feb. 21.

Walo.—Bro. Kesler, of River Bend, Colo., has been laboring earnestly here. He came Feb 7, and remained till the 26th. During that time he preached seven sermons. Walo is about twelve miles from the Victor church, and as this is the second time he preached at this place we were satisfied with the Brethren, but had never heard our doctrine preached. He preached doctrinal sermons. Bro. Kesler had read and then commented upon 178 scriptural sentences, besides referring to perhaps fifty other passages in the discourses. The meetings were interesting and well attended, and the people seemed interested in the way the Brethren preach and practice baptism. We are thankful for the Gospel here, and we earnestly pray that the seed that has been sown may bear fruit to the glory of God.—Elva A. Bradshaw, Walo, Kans., March 1.

MARYLAND.

Fairview.—Peach Blossom congregation met at the Fairview house in regular quarterly council March 2. Three letters of membership were granted. Bro. P. H. Rittenhouse was elected delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. J. H. Ritchie, alternate. On account of removal, Sister Florence Walbridge resigned as church correspondent. Sister Elizabeth Bean was elected in her place.—C. Ellen Hutchison, Cordova, Md., March 6.

Notice.—The District Meeting of Eastern Maryland will be held in the Middletown church, Middletown congregation, Tuesday, April 18. The elders and delegates will meet the day before at 2 P. M. for organization.—A. P. Snader, New Windsor, Md., Feb. 28.

MICHIGAN.

Woodland church met in council Feb. 25. Our elder, Bro. J. M. Sadie, presiding. The letter was read, and we will have our love feast May 13, commencing at 6:30 P. M. Eld. M. Smith was chosen to represent us at Annual Meeting, with Bro. Philip Cool, alternate. The writer was chosen church correspondent for the next year.—J. J. England, Woodland, Mich., March 4.

MINNESOTA.

Worthington.—We are rejoicing the close of an interesting Bible term, taught by Bro. W. H. Lichty. The attendance has been good. This is the third Bible term taught by Bro. Lichty in this place, and we hope he can come to labor with us. Sister Sadie Miller also began work here Feb. 20. Her Bible work and sermons are highly appreciated by all, and lectured one hour each evening. The second week one hour and a half was found to suit the audience best. Sister Miller's lectures were very interesting, as well as instructive, and were enjoyed by all.—Mrs. Ida Swanson, Worthington, Minnesota Schechter, R. D. 5, Worthington, Minn., March 2.

MISSOURI.

Carthage.—We had a fine lesson today by our newly-elected minister, Bro. Edwin Eller, on the subject, "Are Ye Doing Thou Lackest." He took, for an example, Belshazzar, who was weighed in the balances and found wanting. He also pictured with the Word of God in one balance, and the people in the other, with the Lord with the balances, and asking to our faith all the Christian virtues; till we come up to the full measure of the stature of a man and woman in Jesus Christ. Our brother manifests promising prospects for future usefulness in the ministry. For this we thank God and praise his name.—Mrs. Ida Hutchison, 1344 East First Street, Santa Ana, Cal., Feb. 27.

Mineral Creek.—We met in regular monthly council Feb. 25, our elder, Bro. Jacob Hoover, presiding. The day's business was disposed of in love and union. Two letters were granted. Bro. Hoover was also appointed superintendent of Christian Workers' Meeting. We decided to have our series of meetings some time in April, conducted by Bro. Hoover, beginning Sept. 3. Bro. D. L. Mohler reports that Bro. A. Hutchison commenced a series in our midst in the near future. We look forward to great pleasure in these meetings.—Zilpha Campbell, Lenton, Mo., March 1.

South Side.—We are enjoying regular services, though there has been considerable sickness all winter. We have been enjoying regular preaching for the first of the year twenty-eight have been baptized, which adds much strength to the congregation. We are now holding a small Sunday-school in Hyde Park on Sunday afternoon. So many people are all out of work, and so many are worrying only part of the time that it puts people into very mentual circumstances. We are at a loss how to relieve the situation. The church here is very much in need of a minister, if we could do it successfully.—E. N. Huffman, 502 Kentucky Street, St. Joseph, Mo., March 2.

NEBRASKA.

Omaha.—Bro. Perry VanDyke, of Holmesville, Nebr., came to us on the second Sunday in Feb., and held the Bible term in which were much appreciated. Last night Sister Shepherd was baptized, and she is the first convert in Omaha.—Kansas, but had been away for thirty years without seeing any members. Seeing my bonnet, she found out about the mission last summer, and last night she was received into full fellowship. We now have preaching services in South Omaha every two weeks, on Wednesday evenings.—Gabriel Lake Street, Omaha, Nebr., March 2.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Brunmetts Creek.—Bro. William Reed, of Melvin Hill, N. C., and Eld. H. M. Griffeth, of Brummett, N. C., began a series of meetings at this place Jan. 30, which continued until Jan.

29. Twelve were baptized and two were reclaimed. One is yet to be baptized. The attendance was very good, and we are sure that lasting impressions were made. The interest is greatly revived. We have a good Sunday-school and good prayer meetings at this place. The young people seem to be very much interested in both.—M. R. Brubaker, Brief, for Feb. 22.

OHIO.

Beech Grove.—Our church met in Council Feb. 25. In the absence of our elder, Bro. S. W. Bonser, Bro. Daniel Hollinger had charge of the meeting. Six letters of membership were granted. Bro. Andrew Fahy was elected as our delegate to Annual Meeting, and Bro. Brubaker Solomon and Bro. Elvin Hoyer are our delegates to District Meeting. Other church officers were also elected. We decided to hold our meeting on May 20, beginning at 10 A. M. Bro. David Hollinger came to us on Friday evening and gave us three interesting talks on the Bible Lands. Bro. Nathan Groff was with us on Sunday evening and gave us a talk.—E. S. Hollinger, R. D. 1, Hollansburg, Ohio, Feb. 27.

Donnels Creek.—Feb. 5 Bro. Jacob Coppock, of Tippecanoe City, Ohio, began a series of meetings at this country house, which closed Feb. 26. He preached in all twenty-four sermons. Attendance and interest were not extra, but the church feel spiritually strengthened. Bro. Coppock visited in the homes of members. He also visited one family who invited us to send the meetings.—Elsie Wingert, R. D. 1, Box 173, Springfield, Ohio, Feb. 28.—

Riverside.—We met in council Feb. 23. Eld. Samuel Horning presided. Two letters of membership were granted, being that of a deceased wife. Bro. Chester Bro. Enoch Ruffner as district Meeting, requesting that a temperance committee be appointed for Southern Ohio. Eld. J. C. Bright is our delegate to Annual Meeting. He and Bro. Marion Bright will represent us at District Meeting. Our Love-feast will be held May 13, at 4 P. M.—Clara Erbaugh, New Lebanon, Ohio, March 1.

Loramie.—Our church met in council Feb. 18, with Brethren S. Z. Smith and U. R. McCorkle present. Bro. Smith presided, in the absence of our elder, Bro. Jacob Hoover, who is poorly and was chosen. Bro. U. R. McCorkle and Sister Clara Souders were chosen as delegates to District Meeting. Our Sunday-school is moving along very nicely this year, and there is an increased interest in the work. Our prayer meetings are well attended.—Allen Heiman, Dawson, Ohio, Feb. 28.

Upper Stillwater.—On Jan. 21 we began a series at this place. Bro. Reuben Shroyer, of New Berlin, Ohio, had been secured to conduct the meetings, but circumstances prevented his being with us at the beginning. On Jan. 22 Bro. Shroyer, one of our home ministers, conducted the services until Bro. Shroyer came. He came Jan. 27 and remained with us until Feb. 12. As the immediate results of the efforts made, three accepted Christ and were baptized. We feel encouraged. The sessions was not as large as it should have been, the church feels built up spiritually for Bro. Bro. Shroyer was a revelation in sermons upon the faith and principles, as set forth in the Bible, and practiced by the church. The morning were encouraging to members, and the weak were strengthened in these principles. Many others were made to see their condition, yet were not willing to yield. We are still praying that they may come before these impressions leave them.—Mary Hoover, R. D. 3, Bradford, Ohio, Feb. 28.

Upper Twin.—Our series of meetings at the Wheatville house, conducted by Bro. Jesse Garrett, of Tombstone church, closed March 1. He labored earnestly and prayerfully, giving us twenty-two rich, spiritual sermons. We all feel much strengthened and encouraged.—Delia D. Schilling, R. D. 10, Eaton, Ohio, March 2.

OKLAHOMA

North Star (Oklahoma).—Our church met in council Feb. 25. Our elder not being present, Bro. S. F. Niswander presided. Our Sunday-school membership were reported. Decided to hold our love feast April 15. The writer was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting. Bro. J. D. Bashor, of Timber River, with us, and preached for us twice on Sunday.—S. F. Niswander, Caldwell, Kans., Feb. 28.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Chiques.—Feb. 25 we held our council meeting. Seventeen church letters were granted. Bro. S. S. Eshelman was advanced to the second degree in the ministry. Brethren Eshelman, S. Z. Zug and S. Z. Witmer were present to assist in the work. Brethren S. S. Eshelman and H. F. Brubaker were elected to Annual Meeting. They are also our delegates to District Meeting. The decisions reported in the District Love-feast will be held June 13 and 14, beginning at 1: 30 P. M.—Henry S. Zug, Chiques, Pa., Feb. 27.

Danville.—About one year ago the earnest people of Davidsburg and vicinity collected and built a commodious union church. It was dedicated to the Lord and the open door to all denominations who contributed for its erection. Bro. J. A. Hall conducted the service of the dedication, and Brethren Bitzberger, Pa., to conduct a series of meetings. Bro. Weaver was the right man for the place. He preached eleven doctrinal sermons to splendid audiences and many other church members and those not Christians. No offense was taken until the end and the prayer was for conversion, even then only a few objected. Bro. Weaver baptized nine souls on Sunday, Feb. 19, in the Big Canowago Creek. A large concourse of people were present. Others are near the kingdom. The Davidsburg people do in fact love the Big Canowago congregation. Some evenings we had Bible study before the regular services. The subject of Tombstone was led in this by Bro. Weaver gave out references and had different ones in the audience read them when called upon. He would then comment on them, which made it very interesting and explicit.—G. W. Harlacher, Dover, Pa., Feb. 28.

Ephrata.—Our Bible Term was a great success. Sister Hattie Stauffer, of Bethany Bible School, came here Jan. 30 and remained with us until Feb. 11. She gave us a doctrinal and Bible lesson every evening except Sunday evening. She described their wonderful and thrilling experience in the land of Noah. On Sunday evening there were present the two hundred people. The attendance and attention were good at all the meetings, which proves the interest that the church members and others took in this Bible Term.—Levi Keller, Ephrata, Pa., Feb. 28.

Notice.—The B. & O. R. R. Co. has made ample arrangements for the Brethren and Sisters and Disciples of Pennsylvania to be held in the Quemahoning congregation, near Jerome, four miles from Hollsopple, April 18 and 19, as follows: Passenger coach to leave Hollsopple on the morning of April 18, after the arrival of the trains from Rockwood and Somerset, due at Hollsopple at 8: 43 A. M.; also to leave for Jerome after the afternoon trains arrive, and on Wednesday, April 19th, after the arrival of the forenoon trains. Returning from Jerome, Wednesday evening, April 19th, connection will be made at Hollsopple with train for Johnstown and Rockwood, due at 4: 54 and 6: 32 P. M. On Thursday, the 20th, connection will be made with train due at Hollsopple at 6: 11 and 8: 41 A. M. Tickets can be secured at the rate of two cents per mile where there are ten or more traveling together on one ticket. The fare from Hollsopple to Jerome is twenty-seven cents for the round trip, good for thirty days.—Silas Hoover, R. D. 2, Somerset, Pa., Feb. 27.

Philadelphia (First Church of the Brethren).—On Sunday evening our pastor, Bro. D. W. Kurtz, gave us a very helpful sermon on "The Power of Love," in our church on Germantown Street above Broad Street. At the close of the service four dear souls made the good confession and were buried with Christ in baptism. More are near the kingdom, and we expect to have baptism soon again.—Mrs. Sallie B. Schnell, 1906 North Park Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., March 2.

West Greentree.—Feb. 4 we began a series of meetings in Florin, and continued nine days. The home ministers did most of the preaching. On the 13 we began a series of meetings in Mount Joy, and continued until Feb. 23. Bro. Elias Leever, of Lancaster, had the meetings in charge. During these meetings there were no visible results, but we hope and pray for more and better days. We are still looking unto him void.—S. R. McDannel, Elizabethtown, Pa., Feb. 27.

Woodbury.—Our church met in council Feb. 18. Eld. J. R. Stayer presided. Brethren J. E. Hyers and D. B. Sell were with us. Our love feast was appointed for May 14, at 6 P. M. We decided to have preparatory services on the usual appointments at 10: 30 A. M. Bro. J. R. Stayer was elected presiding elder for a term of two years. Brethren Sell and Hyers also represent the church at District Meeting. The church also decided to call for the District Meeting of 1912.—J. C. Stayer, Woodbury, Pa.

TENNESSEE.

Boones Creek.—Bro. Jesse Clark began a series of meetings here Feb. 6, and continued until Feb. 22, preaching thirty soul-stirring sermons. The church was greatly revived and the members were encouraged and strengthened spiritually. Five came to us from the Lord's side and confessed. Bro. S. J. Bowman preached on the following Sunday.—Angie Clark, R. D. 6, Johnson City, Tenn., Feb. 27.

Bristol.—Our church met in council in regular preaching on the fourth Sunday of each month, at 11 A. M. and 2 P. M., for the transaction of this business. Bro. Noah Mow was our first public service for the year in a school building, which was well filled with attentive listeners. There seem to be a deep feeling of love among the outsiders here for our people. The influence of the Bible is being felt in this community. The church here owes much to the faithful effort of Bro. J. C. Jones, who has recently moved to Marion, Va. We crave the prayers of brethren and sisters for the success and power of the work in this city.—Samuel H. Garst, Blountville, Tenn., Feb. 27.

Limestone.—Our church met in council Feb. 25. Our home brethren, S. H. Garst and J. C. Jones, had charge of the business came before the meeting. We arranged to reorganize our Sunday-school for the next quarter. Bro. D. F. Bowman was with us on Saturday and Sunday, and preached an interesting sermon.—Anna Arnold, Limestone, Tenn., March 2.

VIRGINIA.

Notice.—Our Sunday-school Meeting will be held at Middle River March 31 and April 1. Those coming on the D. & O. Railroad will be met in Mount Sidney March 30, by Brethren Jno. J. L. Whitmer, of Mount Sidney, Va., in time for an early March 30 on the S. & W. Railroad, by Bro. W. H. Wheeler, of Grottoes, Va., but get off at Harriston, Va.—J. F. Miller, Grottoes, Va., Feb. 27.

WASHINGTON.

North Yakima.—Our Bible Institute, conducted by Bro. Ellis H. Studebaker, closed Wednesday night, March 1. Bro. Studebaker labored with us for nearly two weeks, teaching the lessons from the Bible Institute correspondence course, going into God's Word, and we feel that our brother's work has not been in vain. We have a Sunday-school of about 75 efficient workers, both in the Sunday-school and church work, for the harvest is white and the laborers are few. Our Sunday-school is one of the means that we are looking forward to the time when we may have the graded lessons, especially for the primary department.—Mrs. Ella Miller, Wapato, Wash., Feb. 29.

Wenatchee.—We closed our series of meetings, on the evening of Feb. 26, with two additions. One was reclaimed. Bro. Elkenberry labored earnestly while with us, and we truly hope that much good seed was sown in the evening services here in a few days for Weston, Oregon, to engage in a meeting there.—Alice Fike, R. D. 3, Wenatchee, Wash., Feb. 28.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Shrewsbury.—Eld. J. W. Rogers met with us on the evening of Feb. 11, and preached a refreshing sermon for us. On Sunday morning, after services, Sister Perry, who has been afflicted for some time, was anointed. In the evening seven of us walked to a mountain, about a mile distant, to see a dear sister, ninety years old. Matt. 24 was read, and we had prayer and singing. We attended no meeting. We were glad to see so many interested in hearing the Word of God. There will be preaching at Shrewsbury, beginning March 17 at the Lord permit.—Ella Miller, Shrewsbury, W. Va., Feb. 20.

CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

CONTEMPLATED VISITS TO SCHOOLS BY EDUCATIONAL BOARD.

The members of the Educational Board, who have been selected to visit the various schools, have arranged the following itinerary:

Eastern Group.

Arrive at Daleville, Wednesday afternoon, March 22, remain there until noon, March 23. Arrive at Bridgewater same evening and remain until Saturday morning, March 25. Arrive at Union Bridge same evening and remain over Sunday. Leave there on Tuesday morning, March 28, and arrive at Huntingdon same night. Remain there until Friday morning, March 31 and then go on home.

Western Group.

Arrive at North Manchester on Tuesday, April 4; remain there until the morning of April 6. Arrive at Mt. Morris same evening; remain there until the morning of the 8th. Arrive at McPherson same evening; or, at least, spend April 10 and 11 there. We will aim to spend a portion of April 12, 13 and 14 at Bethany, and return home the last of the week.

These dates are given subject to train connections and it will be observed that sufficient time is given between distant points to meet all the day appointments at least.

Should there be any change in above schedule, notice will be promptly given ahead of us. It is imperative that a conference be had with Trustees, Faculty and Board of Management sometime during our stay. Such meetings can be arranged by the various schools to meet their convenience.

Such reports as are required by Annual Conference should be prepared and handed to us at the meeting of Executive Board. Lordsburg is otherwise provided for this year.

A. G. Crosswhite,
Secretary Board of Education.

Flora, Ind., March 1.

TO THE CHURCHES IN THE FIRST DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA, GREETING.

The call for workers in our field is constantly increasing. New fields are opening up for the gospel message of salvation. We desire that every church in the District, and every member, contribute to this all-important work. Our means at hand are exhausted. We are entirely dependent upon you for means to carry on the work.

The District Conference has asked that each congregation take up a collection each year, prior to the District Meeting, for missionary work in the District. In response to this request, will you not send a contribution from your congregation to the annual collection at the missionary meeting, to be held at our coming Conference?

We also request that all reports of work done, and offerings made for the past year, be sent to the Secretary of the Board not later than April 1.

By order of the District Mission Board,

D. N. Eller,

Daleville, Va., March 4.

FROM KANSAS CITY, MO.

In the large cities there is a great demand for clothing. Many worthy people are not currently enough to buy sufficient food for their families. Such families need assistance in the way of clothing and bedding.

Many people, in this land of ours, for various reasons, discard clothing before it is worn out. Now if some poor people here had this clothing to wear about their work, they would certainly be thankful. Here, in Kansas City, Mo., as well as in all cities, there are so many thus circumstanced. We meet with them almost every day. We want t.. help them.

The kind people have responded liberally to our calls, and we have received new and second-hand goods from several States; but we are in need of more. We can use almost any kind of clothing, and a lot of blankets, very much worn. A lady who has a large family and is working in a dairy, was very thankful for them. She said she could wear them quite a while, and that would help her much. We have received quite a number of boys' vests. Some would say they are no good. We also received a number of ladies' jackets with big sleeves. Out of style? Sure; but our Mission Band meets every Thursday and we work these up into pants for the little boys, and some of them we work into dresses. By making comforts at a small expense we can furnish many families with bedding to keep them warm.

Now we come to the Aid Societies again, asking your assistance. Ransack your closets and wardrobes. Send us anything that has wearing value, and we are sure the Lord will bless you if it is done in his name. Of course, we like new goods as well as any one, but all will be thankfully received and used in our mission work here. Send all things to G. W. Lentz, Centropolis, Mo., and be sure to send all mail and bill of lading to the writer as below.

Mrs. Mollie Lentz.

CONFESSING CHRIST.—Rom. 10: 9, 10.

It is impossible for an observing, spiritually-minded man or woman to resist the conviction, emphasized every day, that this is a timely word. In its fullest meaning it has a wide application. It is not difficult to avow some kind of faith in Jesus Christ, but it is quite another thing sincerely to confess him. The former class is large, the latter class is more limited.

The sincerity and worth of one's faith must be determined by the act and character of the confession. A faith that is without heart-felt sentiment in behalf of Jesus Christ, is not obscurely but plainly put before us. Sincere faith in Jesus as Lord,—the One set apart, the Mediator through whose blood we have redemption and the forgiveness of sin, the risen and enthroned One, the faith that includes all this—implies confession. To decline confessing Christ in such a case, is to deny faith. This means destruction to that soul.

A sincere faith and confession are indissolubly joined. One who says he believes in Christ and then goes his own way and does his own will, neglects appointed ordinances and leaves an impression that is hurtful rather than helpful to Christ's holy cause, is denying him as certainly as did Peter when he played the apostate in the hour of his master's agony. Such a denial means a separation between Christ and the believer; yea, it places a gulf between them that will keep them eternally apart.

Many confess Christ as their Redeemer, Savior and Loving Friend, but in their daily life they show such an opposite spirit to their faith and confession that the close observer will see the insincerity of their confession. To confess Christ is not simply to get your name on the church record, but it means to take up Christ as your Savior, and live that life that is permeated with the spirit of God. It means to tend church and take an active part in all the services. It means to visit the sick, to comfort the broken-hearted, and to make such sacrifices as will prove to the world that you are a pilgrim and a stranger here below, but a fellow-citizen of Christ's kingdom. To confess Christ and neglect to "eat his flesh and drink his blood," is mockery in its darkest shade.

There are members who came into the church through confession and baptism, years ago, and never took the Lord's supper and communion. They are spiritually dead. "Awake thou that sleepest, arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light." Oh, may the spiritual light shine into their hearts that they may see the dawn of the new day of righteousness in their lives, and become active members in Christ's church! Oh, may each member more fully shine out the Christ, whom they confess before men, more fully in their everyday life! Then the world could see our Saviour so vividly in the daily lives of his followers as to draw them to confess him and live for him forever.

PART OF OUR WORK.

A great and responsible part of our work today is to separate the good from the bad. We must contrast the two plainly before the minds of others, in order to teach and elevate the pupil, whether he be minister, teacher, parent, or guardian.

Just how we get rid of some things not wholesome, is often a question, and sometimes one's experience often serves another to good advantage.

Some seven years ago our mail carrier said, "I am going to send you a paper for a while. It is good for you; you need not worry about the pay. It will come a few months then stop."

It was then just a few months before election. Well, after a year or so I tried to stop the paper and sent several letters to that effect. It was a paper for our big city papers, and they paid no attention to my requests. After a while I appealed to our postmaster to stop it. Several unsuccessful attempts were made.

About that time I moved some six hundred miles away. The paper, however, promptly found my address and made its regular weekly visits, and finally sent several requests, asking me to renew my subscription.

By this time I thought of paying for a year's subscription, as I had had it so long free. I sent a request that if they would cut out their whisky advertising I would continue with them. This was enough, and I have never seen another paper. A like request as effectively stopped a big St. Louis paper, when they were urging a renewal. Cannot we, as Christians and temperance workers, do a good work by refusing to take even newspapers of a low standard? How does it look to see the Sunday-school lesson explained in one column, while on the opposite, but by the side of it, in glowing language, with big jugs and bottles, advertise some sort of liquor? It almost makes one sick to see the awful evil resulting from such stuff, and yet the money of many Christians is responsible.

Many times when in need of a little recreation or exercise, go to the theatre or moving picture show. Others pass the time with a novel or a story paper. Rev. 22: 15 says, "Without are dogs, sorcerers, whoremongers, murderers, idolaters and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie." Now, if we love to read lies, we no doubt furnish part of the money to produce this unwholesome reading matter. Why, oh, why is our business as Christian professors of so little importance, that we can dismiss it at almost any time for such things?

Fredonia, Kans.

TO THE CHURCHES OF MIDDLE INDIANA.

By request of its Mission Board our District, at their last meeting held at North Manchester, Ind., October 1910, raised our District mission dues to eighty cents per member. After considering carefully the pressing needs of the work on hand, the Board placed the quota as low as the demand would allow. Since that time other calls that we feel must not go unheeded, are being urged upon us. Therefore, in order that our work may not be retarded, a prompt compliance with the decision of last District Meeting is absolutely necessary. If any of the churches feel to raise an amount to fit particular needs, one congregation has already agreed to do, we assure you it will be used only as necessity demands.

We were pleased to report, to our last District Meeting, forty-eight accessions at the several mission points during the year, but since that time seventy-one precious souls have accepted the offered terms of salvation.

We feel sure that our dear brethren and sisters, who have contributed so nobly to this cause in the past, will be ready and willing to supply the present need. Each of us may do a little in this grand work, "but God giveth the increase," and to his name be all the glory.

DEATH OF SISTER OLLER.

Sister Elizabeth Bonebrake Oller, widow of Eld. Jacob F. Oller, of Waynesboro, Pa., departed this life Feb. 19, 1911. Her age was eighty years, two months and nineteen days.

Sister Oller was born on a farm near Waynesboro, where she lived until her marriage in 1848. To this union there were born eleven children, five of whom survive. She was always very energetic. Even in her advanced years she did her own housekeeping. Seven years ago, when her eyesight failed, she moved to the home of her daughter, Sister Sudie Rohrer.

About fifty-eight years ago she accepted Jesus as her Savior and united with the Church of the Brethren When she and Bro. Oller moved to Waynesboro, in 1867, there were but eight members of the church living in town. Now the number has increased to about three hundred. This growth and development has been due largely to the work of those who have left us and are now resting "from their labor." Sister Oller's share in this work is not unimportant. She was much interested in the salvation of others and ever ready to talk to those who were personally engaged in the work. That her husband could be of more use in the Lord's vineyard she willingly assumed the larger responsibilities laid upon her, in the home, because of his absence.

She accompanied Bro. Oller to a great many Annual Meetings, where she met and became intimately acquainted with many of the members of the Brotherhood. Not only there but also in her home was her influence largely felt. Her home was a shelter to many besides those of their own household. Sister Oller shared the joy of her husband in entertaining and helping others, especially those younger than themselves. There are many who attribute their success in life to the helpful words and encouragement which they received in this home.

In her giving she was liberal and unostentatious. Especially did she remember the orphan and widow.

Six years ago she lost her eyesight, but did not lose her cheerfulness. Indeed, her life seemed to brighten with years. Those who visited her were inspired by the personal contact, to more joyful living.

She was ready for her departure and longed for the summons to go. A few months ago she said, "I will not be long. It can not come too soon, but I am willing to wait until the Lord tells me to come."

In the midst of her suffering, during the last week, she quoted this stanza several times:

"What's all this world can boast, or can it take
Its it death? Is it death?
That soon will quench, will quench this mortal flame?
Is it death? Is it death?
If this be death, I soon shall be
From every pain and sorrow free;
I shall the King of Glory see!
All is well, all is well."

Services were held in the church in Waynesboro, conducted by Eld. J. T. Myers, of Philadelphia, who used as his text Philip. 1: 21. Sudie M. Wingert.

Waynesboro, Pa., Feb. 26.

DEATH OF ELDER S. A. WALKER.

Eld. Stephen A. Walker, of Tiffin, Ohio, was born March 25, 1825, in Franklin County, Pa., died Feb. 8, 1911, aged eighty-five years, ten months and fourteen days. He was the son of John and Eliza (Skinner) Walker. At the age of seven years he moved with his parents to Ashland County, Ohio, where he acquired an education, and taught in the school for some time in that vicinity. In September, 1848, he moved to Seneca County, Ohio, where he began teaching in the school district. Here he lived for over fifty years.

June 21, 1849, he was married to Elizabeth Fisher. To them were born seven sons and two daughters. His wife died July 28, 1874. He was then married to Sarah L. Bosman, of Tiffin, Ohio, March 23, 1875. To this union was born one daughter.

He became a member of the Church of the Brethren in June, 1859, was elected to the ministry in 1868, and was ordained to the eldership in 1878. He was a good talker, a good reasoner, and a strong advocate of the doctrine of the church of his choice. He was actively engaged in church work up to within a year or two of his death. His field of labor was principally in the bounds of the Seneca church, of which he had charge for a number of years. Upon several occasions he represented his District on the Standing Committee. He was largely instrumental in helping to establish the Mission at Fostoria, Ohio.

Practically all his life was spent on a farm near Bloomville, Ohio, where, in 1907, because of his failing health he left the farm, and with his wife and youngest daughter moved to Tiffin, Ohio. He attended the Conference at Winona Lake, Ind., in 1910. The trip seemed too much for him, and from then on his health rapidly declined, until, on the morning of Jan. 25, 1911, while seated at the breakfast table, he was stricken with paralysis, after which he only partially recovered. After lingering for fifteen days, his spirit took its flight to the spirit world on the evening of Feb. 8.

Thus ends the life of a devoted husband, a kind and loving father and a valiant soldier of the cross. Besides his wife, seven sons and two daughters are left to mourn his departure. The oldest daughter preceded him when she was quite young.

Services were held at his late home in Tiffin, Ohio, on Saturday, Feb. 11, conducted by Eld. L. H. Dickey, of Fostoria, Ohio. Interment in the Woodlawn cemetery, near Bloomville, Ohio. Lydia Dickey.

Fostoria, Ohio.

FALLEN ASLEEP

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

Bachman, Sister Fanny H., died Feb. 17, 1911, at Lititz, Pa., in the bounds of the West Conestoga congregation, aged 76 years. She was a faithful sister in the church, a kind neighbor and a loving mother. She will be missed by her family. She leaves her husband, three sons and two daughters.—Services in the Lititz churchhouse by Bro. L. W. Taylor, and J. A. Heitler and interment in Church of the Brethren cem.—Levi. Cim. 4: 6-8.—H. R. Nies, Lititz, Pa.

Bailey, Priscilla, born Oct. 26, 1844, died Feb. 21, 1911, aged 66 years, 3 months and 26 days. He leaves an invalid wife. A neighbor was visiting him and had left for home just a few minutes before he took his last breath. Interred near Spencer, Ohio. Interment in the Black River cemetery. Services by Eld. Samuel Lake 13: 44-58.—S. H. Hixson, Lodi, Ohio.

Baker, Sister Catharine, daughter of Bro. William and Martha Garner, born in Lancaster County, Pa., Oct. 6, 1834, died at her son Samuel's, in the bounds of the Black Swamp congregation, Wood Co., Ohio, Feb. 9, 1911, aged 76 years, 4 months and 4 days. Death was due to a complication of diseases, combined with old age. She was joined in marriage to Samuel Baker Feb. 21, 1858. To this union were born four sons and four daughters. Her husband, three daughters, and one son preceded her to the spirit world. She leaves three sons, one daughter and one brother. She united with the Church of the Brethren and was baptized in 1859. She lived a consistent Christian life for over three-quarters. Services by Bro. J. C. Wilmore. Text, Rev. 14. Interment in the Walbridge cemetery.—Elva E. Garner, R. D. 1, Walbridge, Ohio.

Baxter, Isaac, born Sept. 7, 1835, died Feb. 17, 1911, aged 75 years, 5 months and 16 days. Death resulted from acute indigestion, after an illness of about three weeks. He leaves a wife, two sons and two daughters. Services in the church of the Brethren at Mountville, by Bro. J. W. Myer and the writer. Interment in the same cemetery.—Mrs. S. Oder, 243 Charlotte St., Lancaster, Pa.

Bechtel, Susanna, born March 28, 1839, died Jan. 18, 1911, in the bounds of the West Nimishillen church, Ohio, aged 71 years, 9 months and 22 years. She was married to Jacob Bechtel. Two children survive them. About forty years ago he moved on the farm where he died. Services by the writer, assisted by Eld. E. S. Young.—Simon Spreng, Nimishillen, Ohio.

Carter, Sister Isabella, nee Garrison, born in Schuyler County, Ill., Jan. 8, 1845, died at her home in Woodland township, Cal., Feb. 24, 1911, aged 66 years, 1 month and 16 days. The cause of her death was pneumonia. In 1904 she was married to Henry Carter. To them were born one son and three daughters, who, with the husband, survive. Services conducted by Bro. Cyrus Bucher. Interment in the cemetery near Woodland.—Mrs. Lizzie Hutchison, Woodland, Cal.

Cavin, Joshua Harding, of Beatrice, Nebr., born in Kentucky, Aug. 16, 1837, died Feb. 7, 1911. He was married to Sarah Jonus in 1858. This union was blessed with three sons and five daughters. His wife died in 1872. Two sons also died in infancy. He was married again to Sister Elizabeth Gray, who was baptized last fall in her eighty-third year. Services in the Beatrice church by Bro. John Hutchins and the writer.—J. E. Young, Beatrice, Nebr.

Cress, Ida Geo. F., born July 2, 1875, died Feb. 21, 1911, aged 35 years, 7 months and 19 days. He leaves a wife and five children. Bro. George was a young, industrious man. He was employed in the Pennsylvania railroad shops at Harrisburg, and while operating a circular saw he met with a sad accident, which resulted in his death about one-half hour later. He left his home at Dillsburg, Pa., in the morning, in his usual health, and in the evening he was brought home in his casket. He lived in the bounds of the Lower Canowago congregation for about eight years. The members of the congregation tender their deepest sympathies to the sister and her little children in their sad bereavement. Interment in the Lutheran cemetery at Dillsburg.—Eld. H. C. Cook, near Dillsburg. The writer.—O. W. Cook, Dillsburg, Pa.

Detrick, Mattie, daughter of John and Mattie Drenning, died of a complication of diseases at the home of her parents, in the Mexico congregation, Ind., Feb. 17, 1911, aged 14 years, 10 months and 18 days. Mattie was a bright, promising young lady, and was a devout Christian. At the age of nine years she was united with the Church of the Brethren. She was regular in attendance at the services. During the last year she professed anew and was baptized at the Sunday-school. She is survived by her parents and three sisters. She preceded her to the spirit world by about two years. Dec. 6. Services in the Everett church by Brethren J. S. Hamberger and William Steel.—H. W. Simmons, Everett, Pa.

Edwards, Sister Emma, born March 24, 1863, died in the bounds of the Middle Creek congregation, Mercer County, O., Ohio. Feb. 18, 1911, aged 47 years, 10 months and 24 days. She united with the Church of the Brethren at the age of seventeen and remained faithful to the end. Her sufferings were at times very distressing and quite prolonged, which she bore with remarkable patience. She leaves a husband, two sons and two daughters. Services by the writer. Text, John 14: 1, 2.—Edward Loomis, New Philadelphia, Ohio.

Freiner, Sister Mary, nee Stonebarner, born in Hocking County, Ohio, Feb. 17, 1841, died in Kosciusko County, Ind., Feb. 17, 1911, aged 70 years. Sept. 23, 1861, she was united in marriage to Jacob Freiner. To them, in 1864 sto., were born eleven in Indiana, settling in Wabash County. Later they moved to Kosciusko County, where she resided until her death. Two daughters preceded her to this union. The youngest one preceded her mother to the spirit world. At the age of eighteen years she united with the Church of the Brethren, renalning a true and faithful member until death. Her kind heart and Christian spirit won for her many friends. To those closely associated with her she has indeed shown her sterling character and beautiful life that will live on in their hearts as a blessed benediction. Services by the writer. Text, Rev. 14: 13.—Manly Dester, Milford, Ind., Rt. 10.

Jesse Lynk, husband died about twenty years ago. She leaves three sons, two brothers and one sister. About two years ago she had a son who was drowned in a small lake near her home. Sister Lynk was assisted a few years ago in the care of her boys by the Brethren. Interment in the High Bridge cemetery.—A. F. Pursley, Box 49, Buchanan, Va.

Markley, Friend Josaa B., born in Columbiana County, Ohio, Jan. 22, 1823, died in Medina, Ohio, Feb. 21, 1911, aged 88 years and 29 days. He leaves a wife and children. Services and interment in the Mennonite cemetery near Wadsworth, Ohio. Services by the writer, assisted by Rev. Yoder, pastor of the Baptist church in Medina. Text, Job 16: 22.—S. M. Friend, Lodi, Ohio.

May, Bro. Henry, died of a complication of diseases, at the home of his brother, S. C. May, at Kinderhook, Lancaster Co., Pa., Feb. 21, 1911, aged 71 years, 2 months and 21 days. He suffer-er for many years, but we trust he is at rest. Services at the parlors of H. C. Rote, in this city by the writer. Interment in the Weaver's Old Hill cemetery.—H. B. Yoder, Lancaster, Pa.

Miller, Sister Sarah A., nee Tanger, born in Lancaster County, Pa., March 17, 1838, died in Bellefontaine, Ohio, Feb. 23, 1911, aged 72 years, 10 months and 25 days. She came to Ohio with her parents at the age of nine years, where she has since resided. Most of this time was spent in Logan County. In 1854 she was united in marriage to Jacob Miller, who died Jan. 14, 1897. One son and two daughters were born to this union. One daughter died in infancy. One son and one daughter survive her. In 1856 Sister Miller united with the Church of the Brethren. She was an excellent church worker, and no one was more interested in the welfare of the church alone from her home to the church, a distance of nine miles, where she taught a Sunday-school class. In later years she moved to Bellefontaine, and was one of the charter members of the city church. Her suffering, for the past three months, from facial cancer, was intense, yet not a word of complaint escaped her lips. Sister Miller was truly a mother to the younger members of the church, and her fifty-four years of experience in the Master's service ably fitted her to advise and strengthen. Services at the home on Columbus Avenue, by Eld. B. F. Snyder and Bro. E. P. Yoder. Text, 1 Sam. 14: 14. Interment in Lewistown.—Mary L. Cook, 203 Water Street, Bellefontaine, Ohio.

Minnich, Bro. Jacob D., died Feb. 8, 1911, at Lititz, Pa., in the bounds of the Conestoga congregation, aged 77 years, 5 months and 10 days. Services in the Lititz church by Bro. H. K. Ober, assisted by Brethren David Sander and J. W. G. Hershey.—H. E. Nies, Lititz, Pa.

Ohmart, Bro. Joseph, born in Clay County, Ohio, Feb. 20, 1840, died at his home in North Manchester, Ind., Feb. 13, 1911, aged 70 years, 11 months and 20 days. When he was about four years of age his parents moved to Indiana, where he spent the remainder of his life. Oct. 19, 1862, he was married to Nancy Jane Dickson. To this union were born two sons who, with his wife, survive him. In 1870 he united with the Church of the Brethren, in which he was a member at the church and served in the deacon's office twenty-four years. Services in the West house by Eld. A. L. Wright, assisted by Eld. P. B. Fitzwater. Interment in West house cemetery. —Alice Mummert, North Manchester, Ind.

Pyle, Miss Gladys Elvina, born April 2, 1892, died Nov. 22, 1910, aged 18 years, 7 months and 20 days. Her mother, stepfather, two brothers and one sister survive. Text, Rev. 14: 13. —Edward Loomis, New Philadelphia, Ohio.

Reed, Bro. Jacob Dickson, born March 23, 1824, in Floyd County, Va., died Dec. 25, 1910, aged 86 years, 9 months and 5 days. He was united in marriage in 1854 to Mary Otey. To this union were born eleven children. Two sons and seven children preceded him in death some years ago. He leaves five sons and two daughters to mourn with the Church of the Brethren twenty-seven years ago, and remained a Christian until the end.—Maggie Reed, R. R. 1, Box 35, Bowers, W. Va.

Rexrod, Sister Sorah, born in Pendleton County, W. Va., Dec. 3, 1825, died in the bounds of the Crummett Run congregation, Highland Co., Va., Feb. 18, 1911, aged 85 years, 2 months and 13 days. She was married to Bro. Joseph Rexrod, who preceded her fourteen years ago. She was a member of twelve children, in which she lived a consistent Christian life until death. She was highly respected by the same neighborhood, and was highly respected by all who knew her. Services by the writer. Text, Rev. 14: 13.—Mary Rexrod, after which the remains were interred in the Bethel cemetery.—Josephine Hevener, Doe Hill, Va.

Rogers, William W., died at his late home in Garden Grove, Iowa, Dec. 31, 1911, aged 74 years and 1 month. He was a member of the Christian church for more than forty years. Services in the M. E. church at this place by the writer. Interment in the cemetery at this place.—Frederick Brown, of this place.—M. Kob, Garden Grove, Iowa.

Smith, Adam, died at his home in Lonaconn, Pa., Feb. 17, 1911, of diabetes, aged 73 years, 4 months and 17 days. He leaves a wife and seven children to mourn their loss. He was a Midway church by Rev. J. F. Smith, of the U. B. church, and the writer. Text, Psa. 90: 12 and 2 Cor. 5: 20. Interment in the Mohn cemetery.—H. E. Nies, Lititz, Pa., R. 2, Manheim, Pa.

Sprague, Mrs. Libbie. At her home in Bremond, Tex., at 11 o'clock, Monday night, Jan. 16, 1911, the immortal spirit of Mrs. Libbie Sprague took its flight from the body it had made with hands. She was the daughter of Eld. Elihu and Eliza Moore, and was born at Groen, Iowa, Feb. 21, 1875, being 35 years, 10 months and 26 days old at the time of her death. When she was twelve years old she joined the Brethren church, and was a faithful member until the Lord called her home. She was married to W. T. Sprague in 1892, and they lived in Iowa until 1900. They then moved to Manvel, Clifton, Brownwood, Houston and Bremond, and at each of these places there are many of friends and acquaintances to mourn the loss of a friend so true. On the morning of Jan. 18, Sprague was taken violently ill with pneumonia. For eight days she bravely and heroically grappled with the disease, but the dark messenger overcame and won the day. While living like unto her Master, she went about doing good. With sweet resignation she willingly left her pretty home, dearest husband, little children—two sons and three little daughters. A little baby girl, with angel eyes and beckoning hands, has gone before to meet her mother. Four sisters who live in Cement, Okla., and a brother at Manvel, Tex., are left to mourn the loss of a sister. Services at Manvel, Tex., in the family burial place. Services by Bro. J. M. Neff, a faithful friend and councellor.—Mrs. W. H. Briggs, Bremond, Tex.

Surbey, Bro. Charles, born Jan. 22, 1834, died Feb. 21, 1911, in the bounds of the West Manchester congregation, aged 77 years and 29 days. He was married Aug. 17, 1862, to Anna Myers, who survives him. To this union were born 12 children, 10 of whom were born six children. Two children and two brothers preceded him in death. He was a member of the Church of the Brethren. Services in the West house by the writer, assisted by Bro. R. R. Shroyer.—Samuel Sprankel, Manchester, Ohio.

Ulrich, father, born in Stark County, Ohio, Jan. 21, 1845, died Feb. 21, 1911, aged 66 years and 1 month. The cause of her death was a growth in the stomach. A husband, three sons, two daughters, two brothers and one sister survive her and peaceful life. Funeral services in the Pleasant Grove church by Eld. W. A. Myers, assisted by Bro. Jesse Peters, from Job 14: 14.—Elizabeth Clark, R. D. 4, Lawrence, Kans.

Wahl, Bro. Henry, born in Germany, July 31, 1838, died at his home near Ferson, Iowa, Feb. 21, 1911, aged 72 years, 6 months and 21 days. He came to this country when he was a young man. He was married in Illinois and resided until he was a young man. He came to Lee County, Ill., in 1867, and to Ferson, Iowa, in 1878, where he lived a faithful life devoted to the deacon's office. In 1892 they moved to Woodbury County, Iowa, where he lived until his marriage to Sister Dinah Fike in 1861. To this union were born eight children, seven of whom are living, besides the wife and husband. Three sons and one daughter survive him; also one brother and one sister. Bro. Wahl had been in poor health for a few years, but was bedfast only a few days prior to his death. He realized that his time was short and called for the elders of the church and expressed a hope of eternal life. Bro. Wahl was a member of the Brethren church for thirty-five years.—Lydia Fox, Kingsley, Iowa.

Waybright, Bro. Joseph, born near Union, Ohio, Oct. 2, 1825, died at his home in Bellefontaine, Ohio, Feb. 17, 1911, aged 85 years, 4 months and 12 days. He was united in marriage to Elizabeth Wampler March 22, 1846, who died Nov. 20, 1859. His youngest son preceded him Dec. 28, 1901. Services at the Trotwood Brethren church by Eld. John Smith, assisted by Eld. D. M. Garver. Text, Rev. 21: 7.—Norman A. Conover, R. D. 1, Trotwood, Ohio.

Wanlss, Edith Leona, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Wheelan, born Aug. 1, 1910, died Feb. 1, 1911, aged 6 months. Little Edith was a sweet child and the joy of the parents only a little while. She was a bright little star while she was here. Services by Bro. C. J. Chumney. Text, 2 Sam. 12: 23. Interment in the Furry cemetery.—Bessie F. Chumney, Shelby, Mich.

AND
OUR SATURDAY NIGHT

For $1.85 we will send you the Messenger for one year and a copy of Our Saturday Night. This is only 35c for the book which contains 192 pages.

The Gospel Messenger

is a religious paper of superior merit. Our Saturday Night is a book that will interest and help you. The Messenger, being the official organ of the Church of the Brethren, is of special value to members of the church, though many not identified with the Brotherhood read it with interest and appreciation. The things of most vital interest to the church are communicated through the columns of this paper only. Its work is being appreciated more and more, as the increase of the list of subscribers indicates. The Messenger is indispensable as a religious educator and spiritual counselor. One brief study of its pages will convince you.

is a collection of the best fruit of a master mind. Following are a few phrases from those who have read the books: "Interesting and instructive." "Good for various moods." "Good reading and will do good." "Good from beginning to end." "I am charmed with it." "Replete with warnings, citations, examples and good counsel. What more need be said? You must read it to learn its real merits." Is now. It is going rapidly.

But Do Not Forget

it is not for sale. A subscription to the Gospel Messenger is the only means of obtaining this charming little volume.

The Messenger one year, $1.50; the book, 35 cents; both, $1.85.

NOTES NOT CLASSIFIED

Mount Hope.—Our series of meetings in Chewelah, conducted by Bro. J. U. G. Stiverson, closed Feb. 26, having begun Feb. 7. Four were baptized and three received by letter. We feel that much good has been done at this place. We only wish that it were possible to have services each Sunday. Through these meetings many became enlightened and see the reasonableness of the doctrine as taught and practiced by the Brethren. We shall continue to have Sunday-school at our home each Sunday at 3 P. M. Pray for the work and workers here. —Pearl Hixson, Chewelah, Wash., March 2.

Decatur.—Eld. Geo. R. Eller, of Grainfield, Kans., has just closed an interesting series of meetings here. He preached twenty-six sermons. Eight made the good confession. Six have been baptized. The faith and practice of the Brethren, as set forth in the Gospels, was ably defended. May the Lord's name be praised for the inspiration given and the spiritual uplift for Zion's cause.—S. W. Garber, 1556 N. Broadway, Decatur, Ill., March 6.

Clear.—Our spring love feast will be held May 13. Examination services at 3:30 P. M.; the love feast proper at 5 P. M. Eld. J. M. Mohler will begin a series of meetings March 29, to continue until the love feast.—E. F. Claar, Klahr, Pa., Feb. 27.

MIDDLE RIVER, VA.

Our church met in council Feb. 25, with Eld. D. C. Flory presiding. Considerable business was transacted. We received two by letter, and dismissed six by letter. The following brethren are our temperance committee: Eld. B. B. Garber, Geo. A. Early and Ira L. Garber are our educational committee. Bro. M. L. Garber and Sister Sallie Stoner are our superintendents for the Pleasant Hill Sunday-school; Brethren B. J. Garber and James Norford, superintendents of the River View Sunday-school; Brethren D. S. Garber and Ira L. Garber, superintendent at the Wayside Sunday-school. We decided to increase our library by each member contributing one penny a week. The Aid Society made a good report of the work done last year. The Home Mission Band made a good report of the money received last year. The love feast for the Middle River church will be held May 13. Our delegates for Annual Meeting are Brethren D. C. Flory and B. B. Garber; for District Meeting, Brethren Isaac Spitzer and M. L. Garber.

ORDER SUPPLIES NOW!

The time is at hand for you to place your order for Sunday-school supplies for the second quarter; if you have not already done so.

We especially urge that you order supplies early this next quarter as our fiscal year closes March 31st and with the extra work of taking inventory, closing the old books, and starting new ones it makes us very busy. If you get your orders in now we can get them filled before the rush. This will be much appreciated by us and will insure your getting your supplies on time.

We are glad to note that our Sunday-school workers are awake to the best interests of their respective schools, and are ready and willing to use their best efforts in carrying forward this great work. A few schools have been closed during the winter months, but we are sure all will want to start out with interest on the first Sunday of the new quarter, which is April 2nd. Do not wait until then to arouse interest. Get your school organized now; see that supplies are ordered so that you will have them on hand for the first Sunday or better still the Sunday before and then distributed.

Don't overlook "Teachers' Monthly" for the teachers. They must have this help if they intend to do their best work.

A large number of schools have installed the Twentieth Century Record System. It increases attendance, collections, punctuality and Bible reading. Schools that are not using it should investigate its merits and install it. Why not have it for the first Sunday?

Don't forget Cradle Roll and Home Department supplies. Remember we carry a complete line.

The Sunday-school Calendar should be given to each member of the Home Department, price only 10 cents. Order them.

If you do not have a copy of our 1911 catalogue send for it. We will be pleased to mail it to any address free. You need it, for it contains description and prices of so many articles that will help you in your work.

If your school has not used any or all of our Sunday-school publications within the past two years, write for our special introductory offer.

Supplies are ready to be sent out now, so please DO NOT FORGET to send in your order early. This blank is printed here for your convenience if you have not received one by mail.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER

"SET FOR THE DEFENSE OF THE GOSPEL."—Phil. 1: 17.

Vol. 50. (Old Series Vol. 60.) Elgin, Ill., March 18, 1911. No. 11.

AROUND THE WORLD

Opportunity and Responsibility.

Working all day long in the office of a noted business concern in a large city is a stenographer who has correctly gauged her opportunity as well as her responsibility. Some years ago she began to save her small earnings and to send them out to the foreign mission field, until today, through God's blessing on her gift, more than a thousand souls in India can rejoice in a knowledge of the truth. Most of us who, by acts of self-denial, no more difficult than the one just quoted, might do an equal if not a greater amount of good in the great cause of missions, fail because of our indifference and utter lack of consecration. We need a new vision of the world's vast needs and our responsibility in the proclamation of the Great Message.

Bad Environment Makes Criminals.

Recent investigations have shown conclusively that most men are not natural-born criminals but are made such by bad environment at an early stage of life. It is the hope of the modern educator to train every boy so thoroughly in some form of industry that he will always find it easier and more pleasurable to earn an honest living than to cheat his fellow-man or prey upon society for a livelihood. The signal success that has characterized specific efforts along this line, leads us to suggest that the church has yet to learn the importance of a similar, well-organized effort to save the children of the membership from the allurements and temptations of the age in order to prepare them for future usefulness in the church. This is a question that vitally affects the future prosperity of the church,—one that is ignored at our peril.

Unoccupied Fields.

While rejoicing in gospel progress throughout the world, it is well to remember that, as yet, we have made but a fair beginning. There is the heart of Asia,—an area as large as the United States,—without a single missionary of the cross. In southeastern Asia there is another area, with twenty million people, and only a few gospel heralds. One section of inland Africa, with an aggregate population of seventy million people, has not a single Christian worker. The fact that the people in Korea, Manchuria, and many other sections have joyfully received the Gospel, shows what could be done for hundreds of millions in all parts of the heathen world if they had but the opportunity. Looking at this matter in the light of the cross, we may well pray for a greater consecration of men and means in the all-important work.

Jews as Farmers.

Ordinarily we think of the Jew as a trader rather than as an agriculturist, but it has recently been conclusively shown that he can be taught agriculture, even though he has, for centuries, been separated from the soil. This is apparent from the fact that a convention of Jewish farmers recently met in New York, and that two agricultural schools, maintained by Jews, are full to overflowing. Wealthy Jews have taken great interest in the agricultural training of the children of their poorer members. They argue,—and rightly, too,—that the healthful life of a farmer is more congenial and beneficial to their people than the sweat-shops of the city. The agricultural schools and colonies, so successfully conducted by the Jews of Palestine, afford a fine example of what may be done along the line of training the rising generation in the most primitive and health-giving calling of man.

The Race Problem.

During a recent address at Atlanta, Ga., Col. Roosevelt reminded his audience of colored people that the secret of future success must be sought in greater efficiency,—that illiteracy and incompetency are barriers to that degree of usefulness which will better their condition and make them acceptable citizens. "It is the common school, not the university," he said, "which is the foundation of American citizenship. The educated negro, trained in the practical, everyday duties of life, is the best possible antiseptic against lawlessness." Undoubtedly Col. Roosevelt has touched upon a vital point in the solution of the much-discussed race problem. The colored man is with us, and with us to stay. It remains for him to do his part faithfully and well, while the white race of Christian America accords to him the "charity which thinketh no evil," and labors for his moral and spiritual development.

The Verdict of the People.

The recent action of the forty-six Senators, in retaining Mr. Lorimer as a member of the Senate, in spite of admitted corruption in connection with his election, is causing a general indignation in all parts of the country. It seems that the people at large have weighed the evidence in the case and have arrived at a verdict in conformity with the facts. That there is such a large and overwhelming sentiment in favor of integrity and righteousness, is a fact most encouraging. It is an evidence that our Government, "by the people and for the people," has within it the elements of moral integrity that bespeak future success and continued prosperity. "When the righteous are in authority, the people rejoice."

An Order for 100,000 More Bibles.

Not content with their recent distribution of Bibles in the hotels of Chicago and other cities, the "Gideon" Association of Traveling Men has recently given the largest order for Bibles ever bargained for in this country at one time. The 100,000 Bibles will be systematically distributed in large and small towns throughout the country. Never was there a better outlook for a thorough and effective distribution of the Blessed Book, and never was there a better prospect of most satisfactory results from the reading of the Word, which, we are told, "is the power of God unto salvation." Infidels may sneer at this and other efforts. The fact remains that the Bible will more than ever continue to be the blessed refuge of storm-tossed and weary voyagers on life's troubled sea.

Renewed War Activities.

Advocates of peace principles find no encouragement in the British naval estimates for this year, which propose to spend $75,000,000 for additional dreadnoughts, cruisers, etc. It is claimed that in a possible war no Germany every British port might be blockaded and the food supply cut off, if a navy of superior strength were not in readiness to avert such a crisis. Great Britain's present tonnage of war vessels is 436,000; Germany has 297,000, France, 173,000; the United States, 136,000. There seems to be no prospect of abatement in the wild frenzy for naval supremacy unless Germany should voluntarily agree to a discontinuance of further naval construction, which does not seem likely at present. The "olive branch of peace," therefore, does not appear to be held out by any of the great powers, so far as disarmament is concerned. Greatly perplexed, the lover of peace is made to exclaim, "How long, O Lord, how long?"

The Menace of the Plague.

While plague victims in China are dying by multiplied hundreds each day, there is now grave danger lest the disease spread to European countries also. So far nearly 100,000 persons have died in Manchuria alone, and the disease is now rapidly passing south of the Great Wall. One prolific source of possible infection is found in the fact that the hair of plague victims is being extensively bought by foreign dealers, to supply the great and unprecedented demand for false hair by the women of western nations. When "Dame Fashion" decrees a certain style of dressing the hair, her devotees at once comply with the capricious edict, though it means the wearing of hair from a plague-stricken Chinese. Truly, "Fashion" makes people do some very strange things,—too revolting, at times, to think of,—as shown in the practice above referred to. And yet thousands of women of intelligence and a fair degree of common sense willingly submit to the grievous tyranny.

The Ottoman Empire.

Naturally much attention is being aroused by recent developments in the Turkish Empire. Undoubtedly there has been great improvement, in various ways, since the retirement of Abdul Hamid, but the Young Turk element, now in control, is unable to carry out, in full, the admirable reform program, as decided upon at the beginning of their career. Sincere as the authorities at Constantinople may be, it does not seem possible, as yet, to infuse humanitarian and impartial principles of administration into the officials of the various provinces,—especially those remote from the capital. The hope for better conditions in Turkey must eventually be found in the Christian missionary,—so we are told by those familiar with the situation. All that has been done, thus far, in the real uplift of Turkey, is due to missionary schools and influences. All that remains to be accomplished in the future must be achieved by the same vitalizing agency of gospel power,—the source of all real life and success.

How Some People Were Made to Think.

The explosion of a powder mill and magazine at Pleasant Prairie, Wis., on the evening of March 9 was distinctly felt from Clinton, Iowa, on the west, to Cleveland, Ohio, on the east. While but few persons were killed, many were injured, and there was a large property loss. When the unusual phenomenon was first noticed by the people within the zone of its oscillations, the general impression was that an earthquake was disturbing the tranquillity of terra firma. At many places, it is said, the effect upon the people was most remarkable. People who never before had been religiously inclined, suddenly took a more serious view of the life beyond. Face to face with danger,—as they believed themselves to be,—they were anxious to make their peace with God. Strange, indeed, that an occurrence of this kind should be needed to impress upon some people the need of preparation for the day when, "in flaming fire," the Lord will take "vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ."

"Secrecy" in Italy.

The legitimate result of secret orders, when, under the cover of darkness, they become violators of law, may be seen in the "Camorra," Italy's notorious secret society. For some time the Government has been endeavoring to bring the lawless band to justice, because of the many murders and excesses of various kinds, charged to them. March 11 a most notable trial of thirty-six members of the Neapolitan Camorra was begun at Viterbo, and bids fair to be a long-continued and bitter struggle. The order is widely spread and deeply entrenched, and many persons of rank and influence belong to its membership, though their identity with the organization is concealed from the authorities. The Camorra being the best organized and most desperate secret society of modern times, its arraignment before a court of justice is being watched by the entire world. Whatever the verdict of the court may be, we should remember that the entire workings of secret orders were condemned long centuries ago by him who said, "In secret I have said nothing."

"By Their Fruits."

One of the popular magazines has been exposing,—under the title of "The Viper on the Hearth,"—the inner workings of Mormonism. The writer has gone among them and studied the people as they are,—what they think and say when by themselves, and what he says is well worth studying. Mormons, he assures us, still cling to and practice polygamy, hidden though it be. Grasping after political and financial power, they already dominate six or seven States, and are acquiring immense holdings in banks, railroads and other commercial interests. Their "Ambassador to the United States Senate," as they call him, Reed Smoot, has openly espoused the interests of corporations and trusts, to the utter neglect of the general welfare of the people. No secret is made by Mormon leaders of the fact that at some time in the future they hope to control the entire United States. While, perhaps, there may be no immediate danger of such an exigency, it might be well to warn against the pernicious plotting of the so-called "Latter Day Saints." Their history and insidious practices are sufficient to condemn the church in the minds of all right-thinking people.

Excavations at Ephesus.

The Ephesus of the past has recently been brought to the light of the present by the excavations of Austrian explorers. Besides more fully uncovering the site of the Temple of Diana, they have fully opened and largely restored the noted theater which had seats for 30,000 persons. The story, at the time of Paul, was perhaps the chief Roman city of Asia. It had a population of a million or more, and was famous because of its learning, art, and beautiful buildings. Its Temple of Diana,—spoken of in Acts, in connection with Demetrius and his fellow-craftsmen,—was one of the seven wonders of the world. It covered more than two acres, and its mighty roof was upheld by 127 marble columns, each as high as a six-story house. Now the magnificent structure is but a heap of ruins, its site, however, being well identified. The theater has been so far restored by the Austrians that once more the visitor may sit on the marble benches and look at the stage on which the varied scenes were enacted for the delectation of pleasure-loving Ephesians. Paul's allusion in 1 Cor. 15: 32, "I fought with beasts at Ephesus," has been thought by some to refer to a contest in this very theater, he being an unwilling participant in the struggle.

ESSAYS

Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth

Through the Needle's Eye.

Tall was my camel and laden high,
And small the gate as a needle's eye.

The city within was very fair,
And I and my camel would enter there.

"You must lower your load," the porter cried,
"You must throw away that bundle of pride."

"Now," said the porter, "to make it less, Discard that bundle of selfishness."

I obeyed, though with much ado,
Yet still nor camel nor I got through.

"Ah," said the porter, "your load must hold
Some little packages of trust-in-gold."

The merest handful was all I had,
Yet "Throw it away," the porter bade.

Then lo, a marvel! the camel tall
Shrank to the size of the portal small.

And all my riches, a vast estate,
Easily passed through the narrow gate!

What Does the Bible Say About Financial Help for the Minister?

BY J. E. MILLER.

SOMETIMES it becomes a serious question as to what to do about helping the preacher. We all have our theories, but our own theories should not have too much weight unless they are supported by the Scriptures. The Scriptures shall stand. "My words shall not pass away" (Matt 24:35). By them we shall be judged. "He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day" (John 12:48). What then do the Scriptures teach about rendering financial aid to the minister?

Turning to Luke 10 we learn what provisions were made for the seventy. They were not to take certain articles along. They were to receive at least what they ate and drank. Yes, more, for he speaks also of hire. The word translated "hire," "misthos," is the regular word for wages paid for labor. The verses dealing with the financial question of the seventy are the following: "Carry neither purse nor scrip, nor shoes; and salute no man by the way. And in the same house remain, eating and drinking such things as they give: for the labourer is worthy of his hire. Go not from house to house. And into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you, eat such things as are set before you."

In Matt. 10 we have the sending out of the twelve. Here we are told what they should not take along and also that they were worthy of their "meat." But here, as with the seventy, it is expressly stated that it is for those who work. Verses 9 and 10 are to the point: "Provide neither gold, nor silver, nor brass in your purses, nor scrip for your journey, neither two coats, neither shoes, nor yet staves: for the workman is worthy of his meat."

Jesus represents himself as the good Shepherd. In contrast with him he pictures the hireling. Hirelings are always detestable fellows. Whether in the ministry, in the kitchen, on the farm, in the schoolroom,—anywhere and everywhere,—the hireling, the man who does things only for money and who works only to the extent that he is paid, is a despicable creature. Note the difference between the true and the false shepherd, the hireling! John 10:11-13, "I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep. But he that is an hireling, and not the shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and fleeth; and the wolf catcheth them, and scattereth the sheep. The hireling fleeth, because he is an hireling, and careth not for the sheep."

From 1 Tim. 3:3 we learn that elders are not to be "greedy of filthy lucre." They are to take the oversight of churches "not for filthy lucre" (1 Peter 5:2). This seems to suggest that there would be a chance to make some money out of the eldership. Does it then follow that the churches would be expected to pay the elder for the work he would do among them? Read the context and you will note that they are to be workers among the flock. Spiritual feeding is to be their work.

Paul was a tentmaker by trade. He was raised a Jew. Every loyal Jew taught his son a trade, so that he might always be able to make an honest living. From Acts 18:3, 4 we learn that on one occasion he labored at his trade during the week and preached in the synagogue on the Sabbath days. It was fortunate for Paul that he could support himself on this occasion. It gave him an independence he could not have had otherwise.

At this point it will be well to notice also that while among the Thessalonians he made his own living. He was more anxious to save souls than he was to draw a salary, or to receive a support. Let me read to you what he says in 1 Thess. 2:6-9, "Nor of men sought we glory, neither of you, nor yet of others, when we might have been burdensome, as the apostles of Christ. But we were gentle among you, even as a nurse cherisheth her children. So being affectionately desirous of you, we were willing to have imparted unto you, not the gospel of God only, but also our own souls, because ye were dear unto us. For ye remember, brethren, our labour and travail: for labouring night and day, because we would not be chargeable unto any of you, we preached unto you the gospel of God."

Here he worked but he seems to hint that it might have been otherwise. At Corinth, also, he labored without receiving anything from those brethren. And while he was so laboring, the brethren from other churches were ministering to his wants. Were those Macedonian brethren supporting him as a foreign missionary? Read his own version of the matter in 2 Cor. 11:7-9: "Have I committed an offense in abasing myself that ye might be exalted, because I have preached to you the gospel of God freely? I robbed other churches, taking wages of them, to do you service. And when I was present with you, and wanted, I was chargeable to no man: for that which was lacking to me the brethren which came from Macedonia supplied: and in all things I have kept myself from being burdensome unto you, and so will I keep myself."

Thus is rather a bold assertion when he says he "robbed" other churches and took "wages" of them. And yet I hardly think he means to present himself as a "robber," taking what was not lawful for him to take.

Again, from 1 Cor. 9, we learn that Paul would not take money from those brethren. In the same chapter he discusses the question at some length. I quote some of the verses that deal pointedly with the question under discussion: "Have we not power to eat and to drink? Or I only and Barnabas, have not we power to forbear working? Who goeth a warfare any time at his own charges? Who planteth a vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? or who feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the milk of the flock? For it is written in the law of Moses, Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn. Doth God take care for oxen? If we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things? Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel. But I have used none of these things: neither have I written these things, that it should be so done unto me: for it were better for me do die, than that any man should make my glorying void."

From these scriptures I make the following deductions:

1. We have prossibly been making too much distinction between "pay" and "support" with reference to the ministry.

2. The Scriptures teach me that it is positively wrong to do church work or to preach for money, merely for money. From other scriptures I learn that it is wrong for me to do anything for money alone.

3. Ministers are to be remunerated for their time and work when they are ministering in spiritual things.

4. It may be expedient for the minister to not lay claim to his right for financial assistance.

5. It is unscriptural to ask the minister to give his time and talent to the work of the ministry, and then allow him to go without the ordinary comforts and conveniences which the laymembers enjoy.

6. As a church we are not always doing our scriptural duty towards our ministers with reference to financial support.

7. As ministers we have not been teaching the Scriptures fully along this line of financial support.

Getting Results.

BY JAMES M. NEFF.

I FIND I am called upon to face a new trial. Having settled down in the woods on a new and almost entirely unimproved place, I have land to clear and plow and plant, fences to build, buildings to erect, trees and vines to set out, wood to chop and haul to market, hay and grain and provisions to buy, and bring from market,—almost everything to do. To have all these things to do and to be in a climate that furnishes little excuse for putting such things off, and then to have strength only to do so little, anxiously to wish to see the work move rapidly, and see it go so slowly—this is my trial.

Now some of you, perhaps, laugh and say that is too little to talk about. But did you ever pass through the home-making experience? And do you remember with what deep satisfaction you saw things take shape according to your previously-cherished plans? And at such a time did sickness or accident ever come and reduce you to where you could only sit by and look at the work you would have been so glad to do? Or did dwindling funds make it necessary for you to discharge the hands from the work you otherwise would have hired done? If so, you can enter into sympathy with me. Of course I can explain to my neighbors why I get so little done, and I am free from compunctions of conscience for not having done more; but, after all, when the end of the day or the end of the week comes around, my most gratifying reflection comes not from these excuses I have, for not having done more, but from what little I have done.

But of course all this recapitulation of personal experiences would not be worth the space it occupies in these columns, perhaps, were it not for the point it illustrates. It reminds me of some things I have frequently seen in church work and the spiritual life. Somehow it is hard to get away from the feeling that he who does things, he who actually gets results, is the successful man.

A brother goes into a community and labors in the good cause for a period of time, and at the end there is little or nothing to be seen, as to results accomplished. He will console himself by summing up the mitigating circumstances,—bad weather or sickness in the community at the time, the influence of the lodges or other worldly attractions. And, of course, if he has done his best, his conscience will be easy, though he can not be said to feel highly gratified and few, if any, will speak of his effort as a brilliant success. He goes into another community and large crowds attend his preaching and many souls are saved. Now there could not be enough excuses or apologies piled up, in the first case, to bring to him the feeling of satisfaction that he now experiences, and everybody pronounces his effort a success.

Likewise in the private Christian life, he who seems to be most useful is he who does things, rather than he who must spend so much time in explaining why he didn't do them.

I am not sure that we always get it right in our minds as to how anxious the Lord is that we get results in our efforts to serve him. I suppose there are circumstances where he will accept the will for the deed, but be it remembered that there are a great many things he has told us to do (not to want to do), and I suppose, if necessary, he will aid us in shaping circumstances so we can do them rather than have us leave them undone.

In the experiences above recited it may appear that I have almost found an exception to the old adage, "Where there is a will there is a way." We may sometimes have to modify it somewhat, but let us not abandon the trite old saying altogether. We might say, "Where there is a will to do a great deal, there will be found a way to do at least a little," or, "Where there is a will to do a piece of work today, let us hope to find a way to do it, if not today, sometime later."

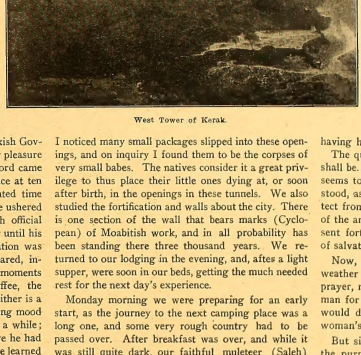
Siege and Looting of El-Kerak.—No. 3.

I NOW come to that portion of illustrations in these articles in which I fear I shall in nowise adequately portray, to the mind of the reader, anything like our real-and remarkable experience in the unique city of El-Kerak,—one of no ordinary Bible significance; also full of interest in profane history. The reader, no doubt, has already formed some idea of this wonderful, gateless, natural and artificially-fortified capital of Moab. "Kir-har-a-seth" is the Bible name found in 2 Kings 3:25. In addition to the strong walls of the city, there were three towers, the great castle on the south, occupied now as a Turkish garrison, the north-east tower and the west tower. It is believed by many that the latter is where the King of Moab offered his son as a sacrifice to his God, when the armies of Israel were pressing him so hard (2 Kings 3:27). The cut is a very excellent picture of this tower, as it stands to day. Kerak is probably where David took his father and mother during the perilous times when Saul was trying to kill his successor and son-in-law. From this place, likely, came Ruth, the Moabitess, the subject of that beautiful little Bible story.



We occupied, as our stopping-place, some vacant mission rooms on the north side of the city,—the same rooms in which Mr. Forder did mission work among the Arabs for many years; the years when friends were made among the Arabs, friends who meant so much to us during this rebellion.

Sunday morning, Dec. 4, dawned clear, bright and beautiful, with the least possible suggestion of the awful scenes, that would begin and be enacted before another sun should appear above the same old mountain tops.

On arriving in the city we notified the Turkish Governor, that we were there, and it would be our pleasure to call upon him at his convenience. Soon word came from him that he would receive us at his office at ten o'clock on Sunday morning. At the appointed time Mr. Forder, Bro. Wieand and the writer were ushered into the presence of a middle-aged Turkish official who, rising from his chair, remained standing until his guests were seated. Almost before conversation was begun, he pressed a button, a servant appeared, instructions were given in Arabic, and in a few moments the servant reappeared, bearing Turkish coffee, the most delicious I ever tasted. The Governor either is a very talkative man, or at least, was in a talking mood that morning, for he entertained us for quite a while; telling us of his experience at Baghdad, where he had been for five years in official capacity. When he learned that I had visited Baghdad, it only increased his communicativeness, and he again summoning the servant, tea was served us, which, I am informed, is in Turkish circles a double honor. The Governor informed us that he had been in Kerak but five months, was very tired of the place, and had asked the authorities at Constantinople to remove him to some other point. Finally the object of our call was reached. We asked for a Turkish escort, a soldier or soldiers to accompany us south from Kerak to Petra, and the request was no sooner made than it was granted. The Commander of military affairs was summoned, and before we left the Governor, the order was given that we should have what was necessary in soldiers, and whatever else we needed, that he could command. We left him with the very pleasant impression of having been in the presence of a perfect gentleman.

We had not been away from his office long until a soldier approached us on the street, reporting for duty in our service. This was dispatching business with a rapidity hard to surpass in any official circle. As we passed to and fro in the streets, attending to some matters necessary for an early start Monday morning, we met many Arabs. Not a few of the Sheikhs of the various tribes were also on the streets. There are some sixteen tribes in this district, numbering about one hundred and fifty thousand souls, each tribe being divided into many clans, and each clan having its head, or chief man.

We returned to our rooms in time for a real missionary meeting, Mr. Forder giving one of his characteristic, earnest, mission sermons, after which a collection was proposed. There were eleven present, of whom some not contributed, yet the collection amounted to seventy-two and a half francs ($18). Soon after this service dinner was announced. Chicken and noodles were served, and what do you think of that in far-away Kerak? The afternoon was spent in going through, and around the city, and through the several tunnels still used for entrances. These tunnels are cut through the solid rock,—not in a straight line, but zigzag, so it would be more difficult for an army to enter against an opposing force. The entrances and interior of the tunnels, except for one entrance, were left very rough, and full of large and small crevices.

West Tower of Kerak.

I noticed many small packages slipped into these openings, and on inquiry I found them to be the corpses of very small babes. The natives consider it a great privilege to thus place their little ones dying at, or soon after birth, in the openings in these tunnels. We also studied the fortification and walls about the city. There is one section of the wall that bears marks (Cyclopean) of Moabitish work, and in all probability has been standing there three thousand years. We returned to our lodging in the evening, and, after a light supper, were soon in our beds, getting the much needed rest for the next day's experience.

Monday morning we were preparing for an early start, as the journey to the next camping place was a long one, and some very rough country had to be passed over. After breakfast was over, and while it was still quite dark, our faithful muleteer (Saleh) rushed in, calling, "Abu-Jiryus" (Mr. Forder), meaning "Father of George," and very excitedly said that the "Arabs had broken out against the Government, were already looting the stores, and killing the shopkeepers," as the merchants are called. It was most difficult for us to realize what was happening. However, it was not long before the significance of the rebellion was forced upon us. As soon as daylight was fully come, the roar of musketry and an occasional boom from a cannon told us plainly that a battle was on. The fighting, during the early part of the day, was mostly around the Government buildings, the castle on the south side, and near the shops and hospital.

At an early hour, after the fighting began, the roadways out of the city were literally lined with women, children and old men. With their cows and donkeys, and what few household effects they could carry, they were making their escape from the city.

Our quarters being on the north side of the town, we were as far as possible from the conflict, yet the shells and bullets sounded out their peculiar "ping," as they passed over our heads, and we spent some time watching the bursting of the shells near the fleeing people on the mountain sides, still higher than we were. Only too soon the fighting came too near to suit any of our party. By nine o'clock the hospital, which was not over three or four hundred yards distant from us was captured by the Arabs. The soldiers guarding it were killed, and the inmates, all soldiers, had their throats cut. The building was then looted of every portable article.

The second officer, in command of the garrison, had his home just at the end of the building we occupied. With him there were ten soldiers when he was cut off from the castle by the victorious Arabs. We went out into a vacant lot, near by our compound, which had a wall around it, with some of these ten soldiers, watching them fire on the Arabs approaching the city. They were then coming in from every direction,—that is the armed men from the various camps. It is rather remarkable how quickly one becomes accustomed to danger. As we stood with our heads above the wall,—an excellent mark for those down in the valley,—we thought but little about our dangerous position. On one occasion we observed a puff of smoke from some rocks below us, and immediately the ping of the bullet sung over our heads. Some one called out, "High ball." However, we soon thought it the part of good judgment to go within the walls of our compound. Barricading the doors with large stones, we remained there during the balance of the day, while the mad screams of the fighting, looting Arabs, came closer and closer, until the day wore away, and darkness closed in on the first day of the siege of El-Kerak, Dec. 5, 1910.

The Prayer Covering.

BY ALFRED KREPS.

As we read 1 Cor. 11:1-15, the fact is plainly set forth that man shall not pray or prophesy having his head covered, and that woman shall not pray or prophesy having her head uncovered.

The question, then, arises as to what the coverings shall be. The Revised Version says "veiled," which seems to make the meaning somewhat easier understood, as it is not to be a weather covering to protect from heat or cold, but it is to be a sign because of the angels. "Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?"

Now, since the prayer covering is a sign, the weather covering does not qualify a woman for prayer, neither does the weather covering disqualify man for prayer, for if the weather covering of man would disqualify him for prayer, then, surely, the woman's weather covering would qualify her.

But since the weather covering is not put on for the purpose of prayer, and since God weighs our actions and appearance by the thought and intent of the heart, the only covering that can qualify or disqualify is a covering put on for that purpose. When woman puts a prayer covering on her head, it is a sign to the angels that she has complied with the order of God's law, and is in a position to approach God on an equality with man, for in Christ Jesus there is neither male nor female. The woman, by being veiled for prayer, shows that she has become subject to God's law. When people become subject to the law of God they have power with God, therefore we see that the prayer covering is both a sign of subjection and also a sign of power. In the creation God made woman a helpmeet for man, and she shared the blessings of God equal with man, but, because of the transgression, God said to woman, that in sorrow she would bring forth children, and her husband should rule over her. Do we not find this literally true in heathen nations today? Is it not also true that in Christian nations we find women wearing a prayer covering, which shows that she has accepted Christ and is therefore placed back to where God placed her as helpmeet for man, sharing the blessings of God equal with man? Does it not seem strange that women neglect to wear the sign upon their heads, since subjection to God's law has raised her from the position that heathen women occupy to that of women in Christian nations? Women that live in Christian nations, though they have not accepted Christ, are enjoying the liberty they are, because of their sisters who have become subject to the law of God.

Since such blessings are obtained in this world, and greater blessings await in the world beyond, for those who accept Christ, why not accept him and comply with his law?

Ministerial Distribution.

BY B. E. KESLER.

THAT improvement can be made upon present conditions, and that improvement upon present conditions needs to be made, must be apparent to every casual observer who has made a study of ministerial distribution. In many rural districts churches and missions are greatly in need of ministers, while in other instances there is a surplus of ministerial force, and we naturally wonder why this condition exists. As a means to aid us in working out the cause of this condition, it may be well to consider

The Signs of the Times.

Here is a church or a mission that needs a resident minister. Just over the way is a church with more ministers than she can well find room for. The church or mission is dying out, and these surplus ministers are "rusting out." Both are bad conditions. But why don't these ministers "move out"? "No man hath hired us."

Here are young men who have been called to the ministry, and perhaps been aided materially in procuring a knowledge of the Bible in some one of our institutions of learning. But when this is done they settle down where they are not needed, and when interrogated, "Why do you not preach at home, or get out where you are needed?" they reply, "No man hath hired us."

Here is a country church that has outgrown (?) her faithful ministers, who have stood by her, valiantly struggling against the odds of life, due to loss of time in their gratuitous services during all these years. What next? A committee must be appointed to arrange to secure a pastor. These faithful ministers stand by and look on calmly and submissively, until the new pastor arrives. Now what? These faithful ministers move out, one by one. This is one means of ministerial distribution. But why do they move out? Is there no work for them after the new (hired) pastor arrives? "No man hath hired us."

Here is a city mission or church, in need of a suitable (?) minister. Perhaps one or more ministers are there, who bravely fought unaided against adverse circumstances. By their persistent effort and untiring zeal they have made the mission or church a possibility and a reality. But now the mission or church has outgrown (?) these earnest men. What now? A pitiful call comes up to the Mission Board to supply the place with a pastor. The call is answered; the pastor is supplied. Then what? One by one these pioneers forsake the field and turn it over to their suitable (?) successor. Ministerial distribution sets up at that point, and the new pastor finds himself deserted by his less (?) deserving brethren who have betaken themselves to parts unknown. And why? Because "no man hath hired them."

What is the outcome of all this? Just as soon as the said mission or church gets "self-supporting,"—able to hire a pastor,—it will relieve the Mission Board. No longer feeling the need of any one to dictate as to the kind of a pastor they need, they will proceed to "heap to themselves teachers." And now what? When means are called for, to open up other missions, they say, "We have all we can do to hire our pastor. We don't feel like doing anything this year." And what of all this? A salaried ministry or no ministry.

A church needs a pastor. A call is made. The men called proceed at once to place themselves upon the stump, subject to the highest and best bidder. And why not? If one starts out to work for wages, why not get all he can for his work? Oh, but preachers should not act that way! True, they should not. Then let's not allow them to be tempted, for it takes quite a large share of modesty to accept $600 as a reasonable support when $800 is offered at some other point.

Shall We Apply the Brakes?

When I was a boy I used to accompany my father on his trips to market over the hills of Old Virginia. One important part of my work was to carry the "scotch-block" up the hill and "scotch" the wheel when the horses stopped to "blow," and then give the wheel a lift when the order "Get up," was given. When at last the hilltop was reached, and the descent began, it became necessary to apply the "brakes," and, of the two offices assigned, the last seemed the more necessary, for there seemed to be more danger in running headlong downhill, than there was in the slow and weary uphill plodding.

Now, our fathers made the uphill pull of a free ministry slowly but surely. They built slowly, it is true, but how well, only eternity will reveal. The ascent has been completed, the summit has been reached, and the descent, down the declivity towards a salaried ministry, is being made with a mad rush that seems to be sweeping everything before it. Churches are hiring pastors, Mission Boards are hiring pastors and calling for more to hire, and so it goes, and the end is not yet.

Now, in suggesting a remedy I want first to second Bro. John R. Snyder's plan, suggested in a recent number of the MESSENGER, and also present our Available Resources.

We have at present about 3,000 ministers and about 800 congregations, as shown by available records. Deducting 20 per cent for the superannuated and inexperienced part of the ministers, we still have about 2,400, or three ministers to each congregation. Now, shall we arrange to give these 2,400 ministers work on the free plan? Or shall we reduce the number of active workers by hiring one-third of these,—one to each church? Can we afford to do this? Or shall we, by installing a salaried ministry, reduce this one-third of our active ministers still more, as is shown to be the inevitable result by the salaried plan, as evidenced by other churches that have it? (See Bro. Snyder's article.)

The Financial Problem.

A case may be cited in which it cost $200 more to run one city mission, last year, than it did to do all the mission work done in fourteen other rural congregations in the District. Three times as much was required to run two city missions as to run all the mission work done in the fourteen rural congregations. About four and one-half times as much was required to run three city missions as all the mission work done in the fourteen rural churches. This same District has forty-two ministers. Deducting 20 per cent as above, we have two ministers to each congregation supposed to be active men. Now, shall we drift into the salaried ministry and hire one-half of these to pastor the churches, and turn the other half loose? Can we afford to do this? Can we avoid it with the salaried ministry plan?

Furthermore, to pastor these churches on the salaried ministry plan, would cost the District about $10,000, as against $1,000 on the free plan, allowing $50, each, to hold one series of meetings in each church. This being true, we may well consider some more economic plan for the Distribution of Our Ministry.

Here is a District that raises, say, $3,000 a year, for mission work. Supposing there are twenty churches in the District. Set aside $1,000 to hold series of meetings, one in each church, leaving a balance of $2,000. To illustrate we will say there are two churches in the District without pastors. The Mission Board says to some worthy minister, "Here, we have $1,000 to help to locate a minister in ——— church. Will you go? Our plan is to invest this much with you in a home. You locate on the place and as long as you stay there and preach for the church, you have the use of it free. Should you sell the property, return us the principal, $1,000 without interest." Or the agreement might be to turn over the $1,000 to the minister in, say, five years. Then do likewise with the other $1,000. The next year locate two more ministers in churches or mission points, and see what would be done in ten years.

Now, is not the plan feasible? Would it not be an economical plan? Would it conflict with any gospel principle? Would it not be wisdom to give it a trial?

Christian Unity:—What Is It?

BY D. A. NORCROSS.

1. Christian unity on Christian principles means, moulding all in the same spiritual mould, filling all with the same Holy Spirit, arming all with the same gospel armor, and making all of one faith, one heart, one mind and one soul in the service of God.

2. Can God's people be united? They can, or Paul was mistaken, for we are admonished by him "That we all speak the same thing; and that there be no divisions among us; that we be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment" (1 Cor. 1: 10). This teaches oneness of mind and oneness of judgment.

"And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul" (Acts 4: 32). This teaches oneness of heart and oneness of soul.

"That ye be likeminded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind" (Philpp. 2: 1). This teaches agreement, oneness of love, oneness of mind. This kind of a oneness will bring peace, and all difficulties will be swept away by love, joy, work, and sweet fellowship, and will enable us to "be followers of God as dear children; and walk in love, as Christ hath also loved us" (Eph. 5: 1, 2).

Paul likens the church to the body of Christ. "Now, ye are the body of Christ and members in particular" (1 Cor. 12: 27), and being members of Christ's body, we become members one of another (Rom. 12: 5). And because of our duty, as members one of another, we should have the same care one for another (1 Cor. 12: 25). The church being one as the body of Christ, the apostle's admonition comes to us, beseeching us "that we walk worthy of the vocation wherewith we are called, with all lowliness and meekness, with longsuffering, forbearing one another in love; endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace."

Beloved, let us heed the admonition, for it was given for our present and eternal good, for the more spiritual Christians are, the more loving and forbearing and self-renouncing you find them. Great is the force and power of unity, peace, and concord. One member serves to strengthen and establish another. Many sticks, bound together in one bundle, are not easily broken, but sever them,—pull them asunder,—and they are broken with little strength.

The union for which the Lord Jesus prayed, was not a unity of mere professors of religion, but a union of his true disciples,—a spiritual union in the Lord, springing from oneness with Christ. Any other union is of little value. The union of faith and love and oneness of mind and heart is the only union which Christ sought to establish, or which is attainable in this life.

Since in union there is force, strength, power, and blessedness, no wonder that David, the sweet singer of Israel said, "Behold, how good and pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

The Shortcomings of the Sunday-School.

BY PAUL MOHLER.

In Three Parts.—Part Two.

IN a former article, I discussed the failure of the Sunday-school to produce certain desirable results. I did not do this for the purpose of crippling the influence of the Sunday-school, for while the Sunday-school has not done these things, neither has any other organization done them for the whole church, and if they are to be done at all, I think they will be done by the Sunday-school. It has done great good and will do much more. If it is not what it should be, let us look for the CAUSES.

1. I believe the primary reason for lack of results is a lack of definite aim. What is the aim of the Sunday-school? To bring souls to Christ? To give Bible instruction? To mould character? Very good things to do, but not very definite. There are so many different ideas of what it means to "bring souls to Christ." We have had no series of lessons arranged especially to bring the children through a definite faith, repentance, and baptism into a saved condition. Is it surprising that so many fail to come?

Again, to furnish Bible instruction is a very general aim, and is not really an end in itself. Even if it were the final aim of the Sunday-school, the only practical method of doing it is to teach to pupils of each stage of development those scripture lessons that they can understand at that stage, then pass on to other lessons as they develop. Evidently the choice of lessons, in the past, has not been for the purpose of furnishing thorough Bible instruction, suitable to pupils of each succeeding stage of development. Is it surprising, then, that it has not been well done?

To mould character is also a very general purpose. To succeed in that, we must decide what kind of character we want to see in our children, then choose for them that course of lessons that will develop just that kind of character. If we find the product of the Sunday-school lacking in certain elemental Christian characteristics, such as faith in God, love, humility, zeal for the church, etc., may we not find one cause in the lack of definite aim in the choice of lessons? And so, going over the list of things left undone, as given in the former article, may we not say that they have not been done because they have not been planned for?

2. The uniform system. This has stood in the way of definite work with any class of pupils. If all classes are to have the same lesson, each class cannot have the best lesson for its own particular need. Of course a good teacher can teach faith, repentance and baptism into a great many passages of scripture, but if she wants the best results, she had better choose a lesson that has it in already. The class of children needing knowledge of the facts of sacred history, as a foundation for their faith in God and his Divine Providence, should certainly have that. An older class, having learned these fundamental facts, should have the lessons leading them to definite acceptance of Christ. Young Christians should have lessons to develop them in spiritual power, Christ-like character, and Christian service. Older Christians should proceed further and deeper into the treasury of truth, developing into men and women of power with God and man. Can you find a series of lessons that will do all of these things at once? That is what a uniform series of lessons must do if it is to supply our needs. It seems clear to me that the uniformity of our lessons is a great hindrance to securing definite results from the Sunday-school.

Before leaving this topic, I want to call your attention to the way the uniform system is working. Some years ago, a series of lessons was given in early Old Testament history; then we were all carried over into the New Testament for awhile. This year we are to study some more Old Testament lessons. It would be unfair to take pupils back over the earlier lessons again; so we must begin with the "Divided Kingdom" this time. I shall not discuss the propriety of beginning the work of any class at such a place, but I do want to ask you why beginners, of whom there are many thousands, that have not had the earlier lessons in Sunday-school, should be started in on the divided kingdom. Can you make it intelligible to them? If you can, you are an expert teacher, of whom we do not have very many in the Sunday-school. I want my children to approach the study of the kingdom through the patriarchs, beginning as far back as Abraham. Then I want them to go on with Old Testament history until they have mastered its important facts. When Bible history is "covered" in sections, with years between the sections, and when it is studied in such hasty, hop-skip-and-jump fashion, is it any wonder that the Bible knowledge of most Sunday-school scholars is a hopeless jumble?

And now, if our men's Bible classes must follow along and study these same lessons, which they have had several times before, when will they ever get into the Epistles, Psalms, and other books, into which the uniform system does not dare to take them for fear of swamping the little folks? Is it any wonder that our older brethren and sisters really know so little about the great doctrines and principles of Christianity?

3. Lack of real interest. Not enough members of the church are giving time, thought and energy to the Sunday-school to get the most good out of the lessons we do have. When our brethren go into the Sunday-school as energetically as they do into farming and merchandising, the Sunday-school will begin to show important results. But more of that in the next article, which deals with remedies.

Rebaptism.

BY I. J. ROSENBERGER.

THERE are, at times, those who come to us for membership, who, having been baptized, desire to be received into the church without rebaptism. The query is: Should such be rebaptized?

PROPOSITION.—Persons coming to us for membership, having been baptized, should be rebaptized. My reasons, briefly, are these:

I. The characteristic union and oneness in Christ's teaching, and in the apostolic church necessitate the rebaptism of such. Christ says: "Upon this rock I will build my church." The epistles recognize but one body (one church). Its union is such that its inmates are said to be "framed together," "builded together," "dwell together," "walk together," "sit together," etc. Christ's prayer for his disciples and their followers was: "That they all may be one as we are one." There is not a vestige of division in such a body; for "they are perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment." I aver that this prayer will be perpetually answered.

This is the church in its primitive, normal state. Such a body will be Christ's bride; for it is to be "without spot or wrinkle." This is the ideal church that must be kept in mind,—the goal to which we seek to attain.

It is apparent that this normal condition of the church would exclude any and all occasions for this query. This query is a product of the church in its abnormal state,—in its carnal and divided condition. With which will you deal: the cause or the effect? It is painful to notice how easily and early this abnormal condition developed. The Corinthian Epistles hold up a dismal picture of the church in its abnormal state. Paul told the Ephesian elders: "Of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them."

It is a little remarkable that Paul should meet so early, in that abnormal church at Ephesus, twelve cases covered by our query. He seems to have disposed of these cases without hesitation. He retaught and rebaptized them. I invite the reader, I invite the church, to let Paul's example in Acts 19 forever settle this rebaptismal question. A Divine Hand led Paul to rebaptize them. Whose hand leads Brethren to do contrariwise today? Paul said of the Corinthian church: "That I may present you a chaste virgin in Christ." He rebaptized,—held up the normal condition of the church. My Brethren, who oppose rebaptism, hold up the abnormal condition of the church. I warn you that your efforts will endanger yourselves, and the work of your hands; for this abnormal condition is not of the Lord's planting, hence will be "rooted up."

II. Receiving persons into the church, without rebaptism,—having been baptized,—places them out of harmony with a number of scriptural teachings.

1. Baptism places the penitent into the church, the mystic body of Christ. Paul says: "Baptized into one body." Suppose A comes to the church for membership, and says he was baptized fifteen years ago, but he is now dissatisfied with his church relationship. The church receives him by the hand of fellowship without rebaptizing him. Now, A can not say: We are "all baptized into one body." The twelve, whom Paul rebaptized, could recite this text of themselves, therefore A's church relationship is out of harmony with this text.

2. Again, "By one Spirit are we all baptized into one body." The Spirit leads. If A's baptism was valid, he was led by the Spirit. Would the same Spirit lead A, after a lapse of fifteen years, into another church, and without baptism? Will this good Spirit lead us into one church today and into another one tomorrow? We will let the reader answer. Those twelve whom Paul rebaptized, stand in harmony with his text, but A is out of harmony with it.

Again, A is received upon his statement that his baptism was all right. If so, he was in Christ. Is he now in Christ, being received simply by the hand of fellowship? If this is all true, then Christ is divided, —exists in two bodies,—and Paul misled us on this great question; and I'm at sea,—on the broad sea of time without rudder or compass.

Again, has not A broken his baptismal vow in the change he has made? What of this?

III. Christ commissioned,—sent those of his own body to carry on his work. So did the apostles. Those who receive persons without rebaptism, have those doing church work (baptizing) outside of their own body. The right to baptize is a gift of the church; but we are asked to delegate that gift to persons to whom the church gave no such right.

Suppose A was baptized by B, whom the church expelled twenty-five years ago. In his expulsion he was deposed from the ministry; but the advocates of this query ask us to recognize B's work in the ministry, though deposed! In the event that this query is granted, the church, in deposing a minister should add: "But we will accept those whom you baptize, who desire to go with us." His office, in a measure, is retained. Now, in all candor, a man that is good enough, and holy enough, to baptize for us, ought to be good enough to sit at one end of our table and wash feet. "Oh, consistency, thou art a jewel."

IV. Our birth,—genealogy,—needs guarding. John says: "Which were born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." Here is one legitimate and three illegitimate births. These won't do. The priests that Ezra and Nehemiah took back with them to Jerusalem, who could not show lawful lineage, or genealogy, were said to be defiled, and were deposed from the priesthood. The twelve, in Acts 19, lacked in their spiritual genealogy; hence, they needed rebaptism. So does A now.

V. "No man putteth a new piece of cloth to an old garment." That is what A seeks to do. He wants some omitted part, or parts, supplied. He wants his old religion, or system, patched. True, we often patch our garments to advantage, but the foregoing text forbids such patching for the Lord. With him "old things have passed away, and all things are become new." We are forbidden to parcel out our Master's goods. We are to deal in full patterns, only, in the Lord's goods, like some dry-goods men. To receive A without rebaptism, is putting a new piece of cloth to an old garment!

WINONA ADDRESSES.

When ordering the excellent Winona Temperance Addresses (price 20c to ministers 10c) we urge that a number be ordered at one time. Let some one order for all the ministers in his congregation. A member of a District Temperance Committee ordered forty-nine copies—one for each minister in his District. Let others do no less and these few hundred books will soon be on duty, doing a good work for temperance, for the church and for the Lord. Some one in every congregation should order ten or more of these books and give them away; or, what may be better,—sell them. In either case we will send ten or more copies at ten cents each. Send all orders to the writer as below.—W. M. Howe, 1012 Bedford St., Johnstown, Pa.

THE ROUND TABLE

Conquerors.

BY J. D. HAUGHTELIN.

CONQUERORS implies a victorious conquest—not necessarily physical. The man who subdues a hasty temper and an evil appetite or a sinful desire, is as much a conqueror as he who takes a city.

Paul, after enumerating "tribulation, distress, persecution, famine, nakedness, peril and sword," says: "In all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us" (Rom. 8:37). In this declaration of the apostle we have the additional thought, "More than conquerors," signifying complete victory. This can be accomplished only "through him that loved us." In another epistle he says: "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me" (Philpp. 4:13).

Paul further declares, in the strongest language, that nothing "shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Rom. 8:39).

Stephen, sometimes called the first Christian martyr, was a conqueror in the fullest sense. His death did more to promote and spread the Gospel than a long, active life under ordinary circumstances could possibly have done: for, "they that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the Word" (Acts 8:4). Stephen's dying prayer, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge," was an evidence that he was "more than conqueror."

Brethren, in these perilous times when the nations of earth are vying with each other in the extent of their preparations for war,—to conquer,—let us ever keep in mind that "though we walk in the flesh, we do not war after the flesh; for the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God" (2 Cor. 10:3, 4). The only way for us to conquer is "through him that loved us." "Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil" (Eph. 6:11).

Worth Much Study and Great Performance.

BY M. M. ESHELMAN.

IN my judgment Bro. Wayland's "New Testament Principles and Methods," in No. 8, is the best exposition upon that subject that has appeared in the MESSENGER for many a day; and I write, asking every member to reread the article, and then most diligently to try to follow the leadings therein for more holiness as a people. Bro. Wayland has exposed the situation and every one ought to be swift to correct the failings among us, and thus help to make kingdom conditions for the Master's use. What does it profit to say and not do? Rather, does this way not expose us to condemnation? If we have the whole Gospel, and doubtless we have, then let us obey the whole of it.

Having it and doing it are two very distinct matters. It is one thing to have the "whole Gospel," and quite another thing to have the "whole Gospel" have us as a body. Really, have we been turned aside from those principles and methods by not warning more through pulpit, press and Conference, against the dangers of "love of money," bad use of wealth, and greediness of gain? Our lack in this matter may account for many of our lacks in properly distributing the blessings of giving. Reform in our methods on the money question is the only way out of the tangles which are shown us in Bro. Wayland's article. Please read it, dear member, and let it get a fast hold!

A Serious (?) Loss.

BY A. G. CROSSWHITE.

BETTER-HEARTED people never lived than our neighbors across the Great-Smoky Mountains in North Carolina. Our Tennessee ministers often went over there to preach for them, and they showed their appreciation in a substantial way, by furnishing them big crowds, words of encouragement and a handshake that was eclipsed only by beaming countenances, that indexed soul-culture seldom found, nowadays, in religious circles.

On one occasion father was filling the appointment in the log schoolhouse, and had reached the climax in his discourse, when he noticed that one of their old ministers was unusually interested.

He saw his lips move, but if he spoke aloud he had failed to catch the words. This continued for some moments, and then he arose about half way up, and beckoned to him to stop.

Father ceased speaking and looked him square in the face for an answer to his sudden interruption. The old brother seemed delighted to help father out of trouble. Everything was as quiet as the grave, as the piping voice of the elder broke the death-like stillness, "Jesse," said he, "you are about to lose a pin." The congregation as well as the elder seemed relieved as father pushed the pin back into the lapel of his coat, and continued his discourse.

It was just at the close of the war, when everything was high-priced, and the loss of a bright, new, brass pin meant more to those honest-hearted mountaineers than than a whole bunch of "notes" would be to me or my congregation in this age of the world.

Brushing Aside the Rubbish.

BY JAS. A. SELL.

IT was once said of a certain lawyer that he possessed the rare ability, when coming before a jury, of brushing aside the rubbish that had accumulated during the progress of the trial. He would strike the vital points and make them clear and plain. By rubbish we suppose was meant irrelevant matter, and such other things as were introduced merely to confuse. To sweep this away, and to clear up the case, is something to be admired, and shows one to be a good advocate.

In some respects the same conditions confront the preacher when he comes before a congregation. He may consume valuable time in preliminaries, apologies, and relating what "gave rise to his text." His ability is shown in what he does not say as well as in what he does say. A brother at a Ministerial Meeting was assigned a subject and given twenty minutes to discuss it. He was called down before he was through with his introduction. And, strangely enough, his introduction had little, if any, relation to his subject.

In listening to the average person relating something, or in giving a description of one thing or another, what an amount of words and irrelevant things, that are really but rubbish, could be left out, and how the story would be improved! The same is true of writers.

While we all do not have this gift or attainment of "brushing aside the rubbish," we certainly can strive after it, and thus live up more fully to the injunction, "Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt."

Never Gets Tired.

BY WEALTHY A. BURKHOLDER.

A LITTLE girl of seven years said to her aunt: "Jesus never gets tired of forgiving us, does he?" "No, darling, he does not; but how did you know that?" "I didn't know it, Aunt Mary, but then it seems to me, since Jesus is so very good, it must be so." Truly, we have a Jesus who never forgets to forgive, and never gets tired doing so. What a lesson the idea of the little girl teaches us older people,—that Jesus is so very good that it must be so! No wonder he enjoins upon his followers the rule to "forgive seventy times seven." He wants us all to have forgiving dispositions—ready and very willing to forgive all the time. "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath," is a command too often disobeyed, and not by the little children either. If we could be more like children, how much more the cause of Christ would prosper!

WHOSOEVER speaketh of another's failure with pleasure shall hear of his own with shame.

Roasting.

BY GEO. F. CHEMBERLEN.

"THE slothful man roasteth not that which he taketh in hunting," says the Preacher. He is here defining the cause of poor preaching.

My brethren, offer what excuses we may, work up whatever gilded palliations we think beautifying and suitable to the occasion, present the reasons most satisfactory to us as to why our sermons fail, but, after all, turning to this terse message, we find that Heaven says,—and Heaven knows,—that the most prevalent and prevailing cause for poor pulpit work, today as well as in every other period, is downright laziness. There is enough by us, secured in the chase, to make a real feast, but, sirs, we will not bring together combustibles, build a fire and sit down by it, and put our meat on the spit, and hold it over the fire and turn it until done through and through. Some of us haven't pulpit energy enough to keep an eight-day clock going and striking true to the dial.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

Do You Let God Plan Your Life?

Prov. 3: 1-10.

For Sunday Evening, March 26, 1911.

I. God's Plans Are Fixed.—(1) "The counsel of the Lord standeth forever" (Psa. 33: 11). What he has determined shall and will be done. (2) "Who shall disannul it" (Isa. 14: 27)? As God has purposed so shall it stand. (3) "If it be of God" (Acts 5: 39) you can not overthrow it. (4) "Who worketh . . . after the counsel of his own will" (Eph. 1: 11),—his fixed and unalterable will. "I have spoken it . . . neither will I turn back from it" (Jer. 4: 28).

II. Following God's Plans.—(1) "I delight to do thy will" (Psa. 40: 8). It was after God's planning that the Word received a body in which to do the will of God. (2) "Thy will be done" (Matt. 6: 10), because it is good, wise and holy. To have it done among men diffuses goodness, wisdom and holiness. (3) "Thy will be done" (Matt. 26: 42). I am content to suffer to accomplish thy great design. (4) "I seek not mine own will" (John 5: 30). Here is the perfect pattern for all.

III. Crossing God's Plan.—(1) "Hast thou eaten" (Gen. 3: 11)? Shame and fear seized them. These came into the world with sin and still attend it. (2) "His wife looked back" (Gen. 19: 26). She crossed God's plan, and how sad the results (Luke 17: 32). (3) "Pervert the right ways of the Lord" (Acts 13: 10, 11),—the straight ways. The ways of Elymas were crooked, perverse. "Ways of the Lord"—doctrines taught by the Lord. Note the sad results.

NOTE.—Each life is planned (Eph. 2: 10). Do we submit (Jer. 10: 23; Jas. 4: 7)?

PRAYER MEETING

The Test of Faith.

Gen. 22: 1-14.

For Week Beginning March 26, 1911.

1. The Sacrifice of Faith.—"His only son" (verse 2). For Abraham this meant practically all. So ALL must be given up to God (Matt. 19: 21; Rom. 12: 1, 2; 15: 3).

2. The Obedience of Faith.—"He rose up early" (verse 3). By faith he obeyed (Heb. 11: 17). Love lends wings to the child of God when faith fills the heart. Abraham reasoned not; he simply obeyed (John 2: 5).

3. The Expectation of Faith.—"I and the lad will come again" (verse 5). Abraham was fully convinced that God could raise him up again (Heb. 11: 19). God's promise,—firm as the rock-ribbed hills,—can not fail (Gen. 21: 12).

4. The Work of Faith.—He laid the burden (the wood) on the "offering," his own dear son (verse 6). A sad and painful duty for Abraham. So Christ, the great Burden Bearer, "bore our sins in his own body on the tree" (1 Peter 2: 24).

5. The Assurance of Faith.—"God will provide" (verse 8). On the path of obedience many a question will arise (verse 7) which only faith can answer (Acts 27: 25).

6. The Persistence of Faith.—"He bound Isaac, and took the knife" (verse 9). Abraham, in full reliance upon God's wisdom and power, flinches not in the hour of trial. The faith that fails in the hour of trial and affliction is no faith (Mark 4: 40).

7. The Victory of Faith.—"Now I know," says God. The great test has been safely passed, and the lad is saved. God himself provides an offering (verse 13) and faith is abundantly rewarded (Rom. 9: 33; Mark 11: 22-24; 1 John 5: 4).

HOME AND FAMILY

When the Children Go to Bed.

When the children go to bed at night, it somehow seems to me
As if heav'n came down to bless me with its tender ministry.
The little ones are weary, and their eyelids fain would close,
Like the petals pink and perfect of some rare and fragrant rose.
Clad in garments white and spotless, down they fall by mother's knee,
Making thus a scene so holy only angel eyes should see.
There is something in the vision of each bended little head
That fills my soul with rapture when the children go to bed.

When the children go to bed at night, the air within the room
Seems redolent of the perfume of rich fields of clover bloom,
And it seems no stretch of fancy to say my inner eyes
Can see about me growing the sweet flowers of Paradise.
And as I bend to kiss their lips, as pure as morning dew,
I feel a joy within my soul that thrills me through and through;
And more and more it comes to me that I am being led By the prayers the children offer as each night they go
bed.

When the children go to bed at night, at once across the years
My thoughts fly back to childhood, and my eyes are dim with tears;
I recall when I was stainless as my little ones are now,
For sin had never left a single imprint on my brow.
And I'm longing, ever longing to be as good once more
As in the golden morning of the fragrant years of yore.
So day by day I'm praising him whose home is overhead
For what my children teach me as each night they go to bed."

Loneliness.

BY ELIZABETH D. ROSENBERGER.

"He sitteth alone and keepeth silence" (Lam. 3: 28).

IN "The Marble Faun" we have a vivid description of loneliness as Hilda experienced it. She was living in Rome, a motherless girl, in need of sympathy and friendship. Hawthorne says, "Had there been but a single friend,—any calm, wise mind, any sympathizing intelligence; or if not these, any dull, half-listening ear into which she might have flung the dreadful secret, as into an echoless cavern,—what a relief would have ensued! But this awful loneliness!"

Hilda was alone and her loneliness was a shadow in the sunshine of festal days; a chill dungeon which kept her in the depths of its gray twilight, from which she struggled in vain to escape. She knew the exile's pain. She saw the white meetinghouse of New England, and her mother's very door. Even the fragrance of the old-fashioned flowers came back to her and she yearned inexpressibly to go home and rest. The streets and palaces, churches and sepulchers of imperial Rome were inexpressibly dreary. "How she pined under this crumbly magnificence as if it were piled all upon her human heart." And there are human hearts, the world over, who have realized in all its painful phases the misery of loneliness. In strange lands they have yearned for familiar scenes and faces, and the days which never brought any strange event.

Sometimes we, who live quietly and happily, surrounded by friends and all that God has given us, forget to be grateful for the daily round of experiences and joys which we share with our friends. And sometimes we even yearn for a change, for new faces and new places. We are tired of the same people, the same things to do, the same little round of occurrences. We want to get away from it all. The pioneer of old plunged into the wilderness and cut down trees and built his cabin, where there was no one to dispute his claim. The days and nights, in which the howl of a wolf or coyote were the only sounds breaking the stillness of the forest, the years when only a few strange faces were seen, left unwritten records of loneliness. We shall never know how some women on the frontier, living alone, endured their lonely days. In imagination they lived over again their experiences in the old home back east. And then the suspense of not knowing whether the mother, who had been ill, was getting stronger; the regret for things said and done, which troubled mother, and the hoping that some day, when they went back east, mother might be waiting to welcome them. When trouble came to those brave pioneers, they met it alone. Often there was not one to share their loss or grief or bereavement. In solitude they lived and toiled. Incidentally, they blazed trails that other feet might follow. Their homes made possible other homes yet to be built, but that did not lessen their loneliness.

Some people are lonely although they are surrounded by many who are interested in their welfare. We hear such people talk of the coldness of the world. They find no love anywhere, no gratitude, no appreciation, no sympathy, no tenderness. And others, living on the same street, find love and beauty and brightness under the same conditions. The same skies are leaden to one, while, to another, they glow with a clear, translucent blue. The same fields are brown and desolate to some eyes, while others see the beauty of budding life and almost hear the pulse of growing things beneath the soil. All this we account for the fact that one will find the people at church kindly, sympathetic and interested in new members, strangers are welcomed and induced to come again, while another, going to the same church, finds coldness, selfishness, and resolves never to go back. Each person's own heart casts its own hue and tinge upon all other lives. The difference is this,—the one was ready to greet all who came, while the other was prepared to find uncongenial people and surroundings. One person remains lonely in a Sunday-school class where congenial friends are doing all they can to make him feel at home, while another will meet every one half way and soon finds troops of friends.

The easiest way to find friends in a church is to be on the look-out for some one more lonely than yourself, and try to make him appreciate the value of church fellowship. By virtue of your sympathy,—your power to enter into his wants and needs,—you are less alone, and life takes on a new meaning for him. Again and again the love of friends must fill the hungry heart.

When the Christians from Rome came a distance of forty-three and thirty-three miles to meet Paul, he thanked God and took courage. Those were the brethren whom he had longed to see, and now they assure him that they have longed to see him and he is encouraged and eager to begin his labor of love among them. How Paul speaks of his loneliness! As a prisoner of Jesus Christ he thought of the saints at Thessalonica, at Corinth, and Jerusalem, and the thought of not meeting them in this world had a sting of bitterness, so he wrote to them long letters which help and comfort us today. How he must have felt the loss of Onesimus who had been a close friend! Read the letter he wrote to Philemon at Colosse, asking pardon for the bearer, the slave Onesimus, who had stolen and run away from his master, and been converted under Paul's preaching. Onesimus had been close beside him for some time, but now Paul sends him back to his master, thus leaving one less friend for the lonely apostle. "Demas hath forsaken us," writes Paul on another occasion. Paul must have felt the desertion of friends, and his last days in Rome were lonely and sad.

"O who will walk a mile with me
Along life's weary way?
A friend whose heart has eyes to see
The stars shine out o'er the darkening lea,
And the quiet rest at the end o' the day.—
A friend to cheer and aid and stay
The brave, sweet words that cheer the way
Where he walks a mile with me."

Neighbors can walk the mile easily and so lighten many loads and brighten many hours. Sad, indeed, it is when women neglect to avail themselves of their privileges, and live alone when all around them are people who need friends. We have read somewhere of a young couple who moved into a small town. They were strangers and the gossips supposed that they were just married. They lived in a poor little cottage in the outskirts of the town and the women who lived nearest, decided not to call until they knew more about them. The two spaded up the yard and planted morning-glories and nasturtiums, and soon the place blossomed into new life. The neighbors noticed the pretty front yard and the clean walks. They said the place had never looked so well; they really must call. The young people went to church, but they always sat back, close to the door, and so no one spoke to them. Then, one day, the doctor stopped there, and the nearest neighbor decided to go over tomorrow and see who was sick. She called the next day and found her way into the little sitting-room. There sat the young husband, his head in his hands, sobbing beside the bed. The young wife had just breathed her last. When the neighbor offered her services, the man exclaimed, "Oh, if you had only come before! She was so lonely. She longed so for a woman's hand and a woman's voice." And that very day he left the town. He could not bear the place where his wife had been left to suffer from loneliness while he was at work; she had been denied the kindness and sympathy so sadly needed. For a long time the sight of the closed house brought remorse to the women of that neighborhood.

SISTERS' AID SOCIETIES

PENN RUN, PA.—Our Sisters' Mission Society met Jan. 26 and reorganized. Our officers are Sister Tena Fyock, president; Sister Jane Fyock, assistant president; Sister Jennie Bingham, secretary-treasurer. We have an enrollment of twenty-four members. Our work consists of sewing,—making comforters, quilting and tacking carpet rags. Our collections are used in aiding the Sunday-school and missionary also to relieve the needy. We have $37.82 in the treasury.—Jennie Bingham, Secretary, Penn Run, Pa., Feb. 28.

DENVER, COLO.—Our Sisters' Aid Society was reorganized Nov. 28. Sister Crider was chosen president; Sister Miller, vice-president; Sister Cline, treasurer; Sister Cline, secretary. Sixteen members are held during the year, with an average attendance of six. We made prayer veils, quilts, clothing and also sewed for poor families. Donations and money received for work done during the year amounted to $47.50. Amount paid out, $18.82; amount on hand at the beginning of the year $11, $17.68. Our regular meetings are held every two weeks, and usually in the basement of the church. We feel there is a great opening for this work in the city, and we hope to do more for the poor in the future.—Vesta V. Cline, Secretary, 41 South Bluff Street, E. Denver, Colo., Feb. 24.

BUCK CREEK, IND.—Our Aid Society was organized Sept. 10, 1910, with Sister Phoebe Teeter as president; Sister Emma Oxley, vice-president; Sister M. A. Brown, treasurer; the writer, secretary. We have furnished lunch for two sales, and held regular Aid meetings, sewing whenever we met, to get a day's work. At these meetings we quilted nine quilts, knotted four comforts and made forty-one garments. The average attendance is twelve. We received from the lunches served, and for sewing, $14.60. We sent $18 to North Manchester College; also one box of bedding. We paid $18.18 on furniture for the church, and donated $2.50 to send Mr. Messenger to the poor, presented $6 to Sister Elory, and have a balance of $26.82 in the treasury.—Kate Rogers, R. D. 1, Bluffton, Ind., Feb. 27.

NEW CARLISLE, OHIO.—Our Sisters' Aid Society closed another year's work, and held twenty-six meetings, with an average attendance of nine. June 30, 1910, we sent one box of clothing to Lanark, Illinois, containing forty-four articles. Dec. 15 we sent one box of clothing to Chillicothe, Ohio, containing forty-seven articles, and one corset; total four. Four times we met to sew for the needy ones at home. We donated to the needy at home one little boy's suit, one silk bonnet, two comforts, coverings, sewing and quilting. We also donated to the circle eighteen yards of goods, nine dozen buttons, five rolls of cotton and five yards of lace. We believe this to be a good work, so we reorganized and hope to do better work in the future. Our president is Sister Rachel Studebaugh; Sister Ethel Baker, superintendent; Sister Carry Taylor, secretary; Sister Cora Swartz, treasurer.—Harriet Studebaugh, New Carlisle, Ohio, March 6.

MT. MORRIS, ILL.—During the year ending March 1, 1911, we met twenty times, with an average attendance of seven. Our collection and receipts amounted to $47.65; expenses, $46.47; leaving a balance of $31.47. April 21, 1910, we gave $5 for benevolent purposes at home; Dec. 16, $10 to the Kansas City Mission, and we have sent on boxes amounting to $21.05. We have also one comfort ready for sale. Our membership numbers $15 or $16. Our work consists principally of making and fixing over old clothing, and we sent many several boxes of clothing. We sent six sacks of clothing and one comfort to Kansas City Mission; one sack to Wichita; two to the Denver Mission, and one to St. Louis Mission. We are getting ready to make more sacks of clothing for the needy. The officers now in charge are: Sister M. Keller, president; Sister Ella Ogden, superintendent; Sister Lizzie Hylton, secretary-treasurer.—Anna Bowser Hylton, Larned, Kans., Feb. 27.

STOCKPORT, IND.—During the year 1910 the Sisters' Aid Society of the Middlebury church of the Brethren met in forty meetings, having a total attendance of 239, wit, an average attendance of six. The interest is good, though we are few in numbers. We hope and pray that more may become interested in the future, that we may do more and better work. We had in the treasury $18.76 on hand January 1 of the year; received during the year, $28.31. We gave $12 to our poor fund, $5 to the Kansas City Mission, $5 to Annual Conference offering. Balance in treasury, $15.76, together with $18, given by the Ladies' Aid Society, leave $28.76 on hand. Our work consisted of making comforts, quilting quilts, making gingham aprons, braiding rugs, etc. The officers for 1911 are: Sister Melissa Young, president; Sister Ella McKinley, vice-president; the writer, secretary-treasurer; Sister Minnie Lecrafter, assistant secretary-treasurer.—Lena Moomaw, Stockport, Ind., March 3.

FRUITA, COLO.—Our officers for the Sisters' Aid Society are Sister Ruth, president; Sister Minnie Bollinger, vice-president; the writer, secretary-treasurer; Sister Elizabeth Studebaugh, assistant. Since March 1, 1910, to March 1, 1911, we held twenty-two meetings, with an average number present of 12½; average attendance, nine. Our work consists mostly of sewing, piecing and tacking comforters, quilting, making rag carpet coverings, aprons, and various kinds of sewing. We received $35 for selling lunch; for birthday offerings and collection from the members of the Aid Society and work, $51.25. We donated $25 on the church debt; to the Grand Junction Mission, $10; gave to the pastoral fund, $25; paid for church lamps, $11.75; donated groceries to a widowed sister and the Messenger to a brother. In the spring of 1910 we had incidental expenses, $11.17; total expenses, $82.17; received during the year, $86.31; amount on hand, $8.98. Our regular time for meeting is every two weeks. When we have some special work to do we often meet every week.—Helena A. Waltz, Fruita, Colo., March 1.

☞ All business and communications intended for the paper should be addressed to the BRETHREN PUBLISHING HOUSE, ELGIN, ILL., and not to any individual connected with it.

At Clovis, N. Mex., four were recently baptized and two restored to fellowship.

Bro. David Neher, of Missouri, has located in the Sugar Ridge church, Mich.

Bro. G. M. Throne, of Kansas, changes his address from Princeton, to Ottawa, R. D. 5.

Bro. T. S. Moherman, we understand, has been elected president of Daleville College, Va.

During the late series of meetings in Stray Creek Valley, Ohio, nine applied for membership.

Bro. C. B. Smith, of Nebraska, is in the midst of a series of meetings in the city of Minneapolis, Minn.

Bro. Eli Roose, of Buchanan, Mich., has removed to Nappanee, Ind., and should be addressed accordingly.

The Spring Creek congregation, Pa., composed of 422 members, has decided to build a meetinghouse in Bachmansville.

Seven persons recently made application for membership in the West Greentree church, Pa., and are to be baptized soon.

On page 173 will be found a notice from the Committee of Arrangements regarding lodging at the St. Joseph Annual Meeting.

Bro. D. D. Culler and wife, of Mount Morris College, spent last Lord's Day in Elgin, and were with us at three of our services.

Bro. I. W. Brubaker, of Monroe, Iowa, has located in the Grundy County congregation, and will assist in the work of the ministry.

If you have discouraging news you need not send it to be published in the Messenger. It is the good news that we want for our readers.

The church at Elizabethtown, Pa., closed a revival meeting, conducted by Bro. H. K. Ober, with fifteen accessions by confession and baptism.

The Brethren in Middle Maryland will convene in District Meeting at the Pleasant Ridge church, Licking Creek congregation, April 19 and 20.

Bro. E. L. Clower, of Gatewood, W. Va., has been chosen pastor of the Crab Orchard congregation. Bro. James Rogers will serve the church as elder in charge.

Our correspondent, writing from the Dry Creek church, Va., says that eleven persons were recently received into the fold at that place by confession and baptism.

Writing from Oyonnax, France, March 2, where we have a small body of members, Bro. W. R. Miller says that the outlook for our work in that part of Europe is decidedly hopeful, and that the General Mission Board will do well to encourage the work in every way possible.

Five were recently added to the Imperial Valley church, Cal., as the visible results of a series of meetings, conducted by Bro. G. G. Lehmer, of Los Angeles.

Bro. C. M. Driver, elder of the Crab Orchard church, W. Va., changes his location to Waynesboro, same State, R. D. 4, and should be addressed accordingly.

Bro. Frank Kreider did some splendid evangelistic work in the Yellow Creek congregation, Ind. As the fruits of the efforts put forth, nineteen have been added to the church.

Bro. William Lampin will probably close his revival in Lordsburg, Cal., this week. So far as reported, eighteen have confessed Christ and will be added to the church.

Bro. Ezra Flory closed his well-attended meetings at Lanark this State, with five uniting with the church. The sermons delivered at these meetings are said to have been interesting and uplifting.

Under date of March 8, Sister Elizabeth Howe Brubaker writes us from Huntingdon, Pa., saying that she is at the bedside of her dear mother, who is quite ill, and may not remain in this world much longer.

Bro. J. D. Clark held a series of meetings at the Piney Flat church, Tenn., and had the pleasure of seeing five buried with Christ in baptism. One was restored to fellowship and one is yet to be baptized.

As the immediate result of a three weeks' series of meetings, by Bro. Charles Flory, in the Eversole congregation, Ohio, nine were made willing to confess Christ in the act of Christian baptism. One was reclaimed.

The Educational, Sunday-school, Missionary and District Meetings of the First District of Virginia will be held in the Antioch church, Franklin County, April 12, 13 and 14. The elders are requested to meet April 12 at 2:30.

A very successful revival in Kansas City, Kans., closed March 6, with nineteen putting on Christ in baptism, and two awaiting the rite. Most of the preaching in these meetings was done by Bro. I. H. Crist, the pastor.

Bro. Roy Dilling, one of the young ministers of North Manchester, Ind., but for the present in Bethany Bible School, Chicago, gave the Messenger sanctum a pleasant call. This was his first visit to the Brethren Publishing House.

The permanent organization at Decatur, Ill., was effected last December, and the congregation is known as the First Church of the Brethren of Decatur. During the late series of meetings six persons were received by baptism and two await the rite.

The District Meeting of 1911, for Southern Ohio, will be held at West Alexandria, in the Sugar Hill congregation, May 2, beginning at 8 A. M. The elders are to meet May 1, at 10 A. M., and the Educational Meeting will be held at 7:30 P. M. of the same day.

Bro. John E. Metzger, our Field Secretary, who is now at work among the churches in Northern Indiana, writes us that he recently visited one congregation of fifty-two families, and that the Messenger is read in all the families but two. We venture the assertion that this is a live, working congregation.

In this issue, page 165, will be found an article on rebaptism by Bro. I. J. Rosenberger, that was written before the committee having the matter in hand published its report. The subject is now an open question, and is likely to be quite fully discussed at the coming Conference, and, possibly to some extent, in the Messenger.

With a view of collecting important data regarding church finances, church membership and church activities, Bro. J. B. Brumbaugh, of Huntingdon, Pa., is sending, to all the elders in charge of churches in Middle Pennsylvania, a well-prepared blank for them to fill out. We like the plan of the blank, and would recommend it to other Districts.

There is to be some change in the faculty of North Manchester College. Bro. Otho Winger, the author of that splendid book, the "Life of Eld. R. H. Miller," has been chosen president, and will enter upon his duties at the close of the present school year.

On page 29, Brethren Almanac for this year, under head of "Membership and Churches," Arkansas is credited with 113 churches. This is a typographical error, and just how the figure one happened to slip in before 13, and make the number read 113, instead of 13, is one of the mysteries of a printing office.

In answer to a correspondent in North Dakota we will state that the report about Dr. Talmage baptizing a man in the River Jordan, by trine immersion, is correct. A full account of the baptism was published in the Christian Herald of March 10, 1890, of which paper Mr. Talmage was at the time editor. The report was written by the late Dr. Klopsich, proprietor of the Christian Herald, who accompanied Mr. Talmage on his trip through the Bible Lands. Trine immersion in the River Jordan is, however, a very common occurrence. Our own people have done some baptizing in the stream. Probably hardly a year goes by that does not witness a thousand instances of triple immersion at the ford where Jesus is said to have been baptized by John the Baptist. To this ford come the Greek pilgrims yearly, from Russia and other places, and plunge themselves under the water three times.

Our elders and preachers everywhere will do well to call the attention of Sunday-schools to the supplies we are publishing. These supplies are adapted to the needs of the Brethren schools, and should be used in all of them. Our people make a mistake when they introduce undenominational literature into any of our schools. So far as the results are concerned they might just as well have their pulpits filled by ministers of other religious bodies. These ministers might not say anything either for or against our faith and practice, but their influence would be against us all the same. And so it will be with the Sunday-schools that persist in using what is known as undenominational helps. It simply means that we are paving the way for other persuasions to come in and reap the fruits of our labors. Look over the list of helps published last week, and then recommend them to other schools as well as to our own.

On the next page, this issue, Bro. H. C. Early, our Corresponding Editor, of Penn Laird, Va., and Chairman of the General Educational Board, has an article that should be carefully read and considered by all of our school men, and others interested in the moral and religious influences of our schools. What Bro. Early is suggesting may solve the problem, while, in the estimation of some, it may not. The article relates to an unsolved problem that has not yet received the attention that it deserves. Possibly there may be others with experience in our educational work, who have given the matter a good deal of thought, and are in a position to throw some light on the subject. If there are, we shall be glad to hear from a few of them. We are not asking anybody to criticise what Bro. Early has written, but we are asking some of our good thinkers and practical writers to help solve the problem that he is considering.

Bro. Chas. D. Bonsack has been with us two weeks in a splendid series of meetings,—one of the best ever held in Elgin. He closed last Sunday evening, with a full house and a good interest. While there were no accessions, still we feel that these meetings were a real spiritual uplift for all of our people. Our brother understands his Bible and knows how to bring its teachings within the comprehension of his hearers, and we are sure that his efforts were greatly appreciated both in the church and out of it. We were glad for the good sermons, for the many practical lessons, for the inspiration of the services, and for his many visits in our homes. Our members needed these services. They were in need of the spiritual food dealt out, and they were greatly in need of the encouragement they received. It is the duty of those called to the work by the Holy Ghost to feed the flock of God, and we can say that we were all well fed.

SHOULD some of the queries intended for the Annual Meeting fail to find their way into the Conference Booklet, the mistake will have to be charged up to the District Meeting clerks, who fail to send us the Minutes of their respective meetings, with the papers intended for the Annual Conference, plainly marked. It is no small task carefully to examine the proceedings of forty or more District Meetings, for the purpose of finding all the business intended for the General Conference. We thought we had found all the Annual Meeting queries, published since the last Conference, but have just been informed that we missed one that passed a District Meeting seven months ago. Possibly there may be others. At any rate, it is the duty of the clerks of each District to see that we get marked copies of the Minutes of their respective meetings.

To avoid confusion and some misunderstanding, it will be well for the Treasurer of each State District to ascertain how much is due the Annual Meeting Treasurer from his District, and if the money has to be raised among the churches, he should proceed to raise it at once, by having each congregation send him two cents for every member within their bounds. When he has collected the full amount, he can send it to Bro. C. M. Wenger, Annual Meeting Treasurer, South Bend, Ind. In some Districts, where all the money for District expenses is raised by taxation, the District Treasurer will simply remit the amount due from his District, and that will be the end of it. Some of the District Treasurers will, by letter, notify the elder of each congregation how much is due from his church, and in so doing the matter is sure to receive prompt attention. The better way is for the Treasurer of each District to ascertain the number of members in his District, then send Bro. Wenger two cents for each member. Should there be 2,500 members, it simply means that $50 should be sent. Districts having 4,000 members should remit $80. The District Treasurer is the man to move out in the work and see to it that the money is collected and forwarded.

The Golden Wedding and the Cost of It.

LAST week's daily papers contain a record of the golden wedding, celebrated by Mr. and Mrs. Adolphus Busch, the multi-millionaire brewer, at their winter palace which, with its sunken gardens and palatial buildings, is one of the show places of Pasadena, Cal. Four generations of the Busch family are said to have been present at the celebration that will be remembered as the most elaborate ever seen.

The culmination of the festivities was in crowning Mrs. Busch with a circlet of solid gold, studded with dazzling diamonds of the first water and with brilliant pearls. The crown was made by jewelers in Frankfort, Germany, and is said to have cost two hundred thousand dollars. Mr. Busch was seated on a throne—he is king of brewers—prepared for the occasion, and then, with trembling hand, he placed the bejeweled diadem on the head of his aged wife. After the crowning an elaborate banquet was enjoyed. The meal was eaten from a golden dinner service that cost a half million dollars. There were a dozen gold dinner plates, costing twenty-five thousand dollars, a single flower basket for which fifteen thousand dollars was paid, and a solid gold vase, valued at twenty thousand dollars. President Taft sent a rare coinage of our twenty-dollar gold piece. Ex-President Roosevelt and Emperor William of Germany each sent a golden loving cup. These are a few of the more expensive items of the cost of the Golden Wedding.

But what did the celebration cost? The gold and the jewels and the banquet and all the accessories may be estimated at a millon dollars. But this represents a mere tithe, a mere pittance of the real cost. The rich brewer made his millions in the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks. To get at the real cost, the wretched, wrecked lives, the broken-hearted wives, the neglected children and the desolate homes must be counted. The cost to the State, of all the evils growing out of strong drink, the penitentiaries, the jails, the almshouses and the police force must be set down to the cost price of the fete. The bejeweled crown, the golden service, vases and loving cups are but a cipher in the cost. Fill up every golden cup, plate, platter, bowl and tureen with the tears of neglected, deserted wives, and you will have the measure of but a tithe of the tears shed on account of the brewer's strong drink. And then the lost souls, each one worth more than a world. What did the golden wedding cost? Who but God himself can tell, and he will tell in his own time and way. He who notes the fall of the sparrow and who has said in his inspired Word, "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that puttest thy bottle to him, and makest him drunken," will make out the balance sheet and declare the cost. Death and the judgment will be great eveners. D. L. M.

Pastoral Care in Brethren Schools.

FROM sixty to eighty per cent of the students in the Brethren schools and colleges are from Brethren families, except the two extreme western schools,—McPherson and Lordsburg. In these, I should judge, the proportion is not quite so high, for the reason that they do not have the same strong church constituency in the territory which their students come that the other schools enjoy. A good number of these students are members of the church; besides, students from other families who are members of the church. They are all to be cared for pastorally; and, besides this, the spiritual interests of the unconverted must be looked after also. The interests at stake are great for the present, and greater still for the future; and it should be made the special duty of some one to care for them.

The students are in the critical period of life. They are not men and women; they are boys and girls, just boys and girls; they are not matured in mind, not established in principle, not fixed in character; they are in the formative stage of life, laying the foundation of their future. It is the time, most of all, when boys and girls take to foolish notions. It is hard to convince them that they do not understand things as well, or better, than their parents and teachers. It is the time when they imbibe the spirit of rebellion against government. All government, as it relates to them, is, in their judgment, unduly exacting. It is the time when they go adrift. If they can be cared for during this period, and set on their feet, a girl, say, at about twenty and a boy a few years older, they are in a fair way to maintain their integrity. These facts make pastoral care of the young people, both in and out of the church, of the greatest moment. Many, many, have gone to ruin for want of helpful care.

But how shall it be done? Under our present rule of church government, all members living within the territory of an organized church are required to place their membership with that church, except in special cases where it may be done differently by the mutual consent of the congregations concerned. And the rule, as a general rule, is a good one. All our schools and colleges are located within organized churches; and all student members are urged to bring letters and place their membership with these churches during the school year. Then the pastoral care of the schools rests with these churches by rule.

Now here is the problem: The elders of these churches may not be inclined to take up the duties of a pastor to the students, or they may lack in adaptation, or both conditions may exist. That these conditions do exist in some of the schools there can be no doubt; while in others the elders are most faithful and discreet. Then, what is to be done? That is the question.

In some of the school congregations, the church and the school are two separate institutions. There seems an insurmountable wall between them. It is unfortunate. This is one of the great difficulties, if not the greatest, in the way of success both to the church and school. It is also the greatest hindrance to successful pastoral work in the schools under the present plan. In the congregations where the church and school are in union, and labor together in common, the pastoral care is much better. But this condition does not, of itself, solve the question, and bring the best possible results.

The real remedy, as I see it, is in the closest possible union of the church and school, and then the selection of the man best fitted for the work, according to Paul's instruction, to take the oversight, whether he be in or out of the school. And these conditions are coming. They are not far off. It will not be long until the church will regard the school as her strongest ally, and will use it as such. Then men's qualifications for special work will be considered.

But under the present, urgent need, can we afford to wait, even if it is not far off? Hardly. Too much is at stake; too many young people are being lost to the church for want of proper care. I was wondering if our present plan of pastoral work could be regarded as flexible enough to make the president of the college, where he is not the elder of the church in which his college is located, the pastor of the students. Or, if not the president, make the best fitted man in the college responsible for this work. There are many reasons in favor of it, and probably some against it.

This rule might be made to apply to all the schools; or it might apply only in cases where the present plan does not bring satisfactory results. It is one of the questions troubling the Educational Board, and I am raising it for consideration. I will not discuss it further at present. A few good articles in the MESSENGER on the subject would, no doubt, throw light on it.

Glimpses of Travel.

(Concluded.)

As we promised to say something about the land down here, and the agents who are trying to sell it to our Northern people, we will fulfill our promise. We feel that it is needful we should do so, for the good of those who are looking this way as a desirable place to live, and to make it their future home. What we shall have to say will have reference especially to the State of Florida. We have given considerable attention to conditions here, both by observation and careful inquiry of those who have learned by personal experience, and who know what they say.

There are a great many good things that may be said of Florida,—of its people, its towns and cities, of its climate and of its productions,—and, we may add, of some of its lands,—but all of these things have been said, again and again, by land agents and those who are buying large tracts of its virgin soil for the express purpose of forming colonies of northern and western people. These are induced to come down here to buy five and ten-acre tracts at fabulous prices (considering the real value), plant orange and grape fruit groves, do trucking, enjoy the paradisaical climate, have a good time, and get rich, while sweetly resting under the shade trees and seeing things grow into dollars and cents. Yes, these are beautiful pictures to northern people, who see them only on paper, and in flashy advertisements. But who are they that are living in pastures green and walking by the "still waters"? Who are they that are rolling in luxury, riding in automobiles and enjoying the fatness of the land? As a rule it is those who do the selling, and not the buying.

We were told, the other day, about a man who had bought one of the five-acre tracts, not far from this city, from an agent, without seeing it. He concluded he would come down and see it. He took the train, went out to the new town, and started for his farm. After wandering around for an hour or more through the scrubby pines, with an undergrowth of palmetto bushes deeply rooted in white sand, he met a man with a string of fish, to whom he said: "Where did you get the fish?" "I got these on your land." "You did? Well, you give me the fish and you may have the farm."

The most of the land here may be divided into three grades,—the flats along the rivers, the muck lands, which have been swamps and small lakes drained, and the upland, or pine barrens. The first grade is rich, black soil, from two to ten feet deep and is very productive. But even this soil, apparently so rich in plant food, must be fertilized in order to grow good crops of vegetables, oranges, grape fruit, etc. The second grade being drained swamps and lakes, the soil is a dark sandy loam, formed by hundreds of years of growth and decay of grasses. This is not so deep in some cases,—not more than from four to twelve inches,—while in small spots it may be two and three feet or more. This soil is fertile, and by adding a liberal amount of good grades of fertilizers, may continue to grow good crops of vegetables; also make good orange and grape fruit groves, if not underlaid with "hard pan," which is the case in many places.

The third grade is sand,—sand, white and pure,—so pure in the bulk of it that to wash it would scarcely cloud the water. It is not muddy, because there is not enough soil matter in it to make respectable mud. In places, when digging down from two to four feet, you find a hard stratum of soil, composed of shells and red clay, but so solid that no roots can penetrate it unless it is first broken up. This land is sparsely wooded by pine, which is kept small and scrubby because of lack of tree food and because of being tapped to death to get turpentine, which industry, we are told, is the great curse of this Southland. This land is also covered by the palmetto brush, which, because of its very large roots, makes the clearing of the land quite expensive. It is hard to get the land in a farmable condition. To hire the clearing done costs from $25 to $40 per acre. On this land oranges and grape fruit can be raised if enough fertilizer is used, but the cost of this makes the orchards unprofitable, and many orchards are literally starving to death. As a still further discouragement, of late years, the scale louse and the white fly have come, and are so largely destroying the trees that many of the orchards are left unfertilized, unsprayed, untilled, and are dying of neglect.

And now, what is the sum of the whole matter? It looks to us about this way: The first and second grade lands, as named, have been bought and are being utilized by those who have come down here and have learned, by observation and experience, what the real values of the lands are. If you wish to buy such land you must pay a good round sum for it. In many cases the prices asked are exorbitant,—far above their real value. This ought to be expected because it is the natural thing to do, in this rushing world, to get rich easily and quickly.

Well, what have you to say about the third grade? This is bought up by the land agents, laid out in town sites with suburban five and ten-acre farms, to be planted in orange and grape fruit groves, truck gardens, on which "is to be" raised enough to give the farmer a sumptuous living for himself and family and sell enough oranges, grape fruit and garden "stuff" to make a yearly profit of $1,000 to $2,000. This can be deposited in the new city bank, or utilized in purchasing an automobile and such other luxuries as may strike the fancy of the fortunate buyers.

But who are to be the buyers? The eager colonists up North and West who want to come down south to get rich quick and enjoy the wonderfully salubrious climate of this Southland. Well, the climate is all right. Indeed, it is the most valuable commodity down here. There are many good people down here too. We have also ostrich farms down here where the eggs are laid in the sand, to be hatched out by the warm sun. But let me warn you that the land agents are not laying golden eggs in the sand, to be hatched out by our northern brethren by simply coming down and sitting on them. No, indeed, the golden eggs laid in Florida sand take a heap of sitting to hatch them. H. B. B.

Church Extravagance.

In these days of extravagance it is astonishing how much money it is costing to run some of the fashionable city churches. We have on our desk the budget of a western church for 1911, and observe that there is a call for nearly $15,000 for the one congregation. The music alone costs $3,000, or nearly $60 each Sunday. The salary for the two pastors, secretary, deaconess and sexton amounts to over $9,000. Then there are additional heavy expenses, to say nothing of nearly a dozen other demands on the congregation for funds to carry on benevolent work. To all such calls people respond liberally, but many of them have been led to feel that the call for money, by some of the churches, has been carried to extremes. To them it looks like running religion in the interest of the money that it can produce. Say what we may, in the interest of liberality, the tendency of church extravagance and too many calls for funds tends to dampen the spiritual ardor of not a few earnest people. The better way would be to cultivate more simplicity, study church economy, get the members interested in a few important works of charity, along with mission work, and not take up with everything that comes along. Christians should be taught to give liberally, but it ought not to be made annoying and repulsive to them.

A Variety of Views.

Of late we have been publishing a number of articles on the minister and his work, and quite a variety of views have been presented. It is thought by some that the variety has been too great to be edifying. While this may possibly be true, in some particulars, still the exchange of views has been at least educational. We still have other articles awaiting their turn, and possibly there may be more to follow. Matter of this sort puts our people to thinking, and in the end they are likely to reach a safe and sound conclusion. But there is this about the situation: It is always advisable to listen to the practical man. Men without experience may have some very good theories, but until a theory has been tested we can know little or nothing concerning its real value. The preacher who has spent years in the mission field, and has made a success of his work, ought to be able to give more practical advice about mission work than the man who has had no experience whatever in missionary efforts. This theory is also true as it applies to building up and maintaining churches in cities. The views of the preacher, who has devoted years to successful efforts in cities, should be entitled to some consideration. It is all right for different correspondents to present their theories, so long as the subject is being considered, but we are very much inclined to study, with more than usual care, the views of the man who has for years been engaged in the kind of work he writes about.

Church Architecture.

We are requested to state why the Brethren in cities build their churches like the meetinghouses erected by other denominations. We are not certain that our people always pattern after other churches in this particular. They rather seek conveniences, comforts and architectural proprieties. There was a time when most of the commodious houses of worship somewhat resembled each other. This was also true of dwelling-houses. Modern improvements and conveniences made many changes necessary. Few of our well-to-do members, even of the plainest type, build houses after the plans of fifty years ago. They prefer the modern house. It is more convenient, and then it is much more comfortable. We are changing meetinghouse plans for the same reason. We need buildings adapted to the various church and Sunday-school needs, and so we build according to our needs and means. With most building committees it is not a question as to what this, that and the other denomination has done. They plan to suit the purpose for which the building is erected, and it makes little difference with them whether the house they erect resembles some other church or not. In a few instances churches have probably gone to the extreme, in the expenditure of money. They have done too much for display. Such an improper use of the Lord's money is not to be commended. We are a plain people, and our meetinghouses should be kept in line with our profession. And while this is true, that does not mean that, in planning our churches, we should wholly ignore reasonable taste and propriety in church architecture. It is but natural that our church buildings should keep pace with the residences of the members, and as the latter improve so we may expect the other. But this does not justify a departure from gospel simplicity in either our residences or meetinghouses.

Bring Up the Regiment.

During the battle of Gettysburg the standard bearer of one of the regiments stood his ground with the stars and stripes, while his regiment slowly retired under the heavy fire of the Confederates. "Bring the colors back to the regiment!" cried out the colonel. "Bring the regiment up to the colors!" responded the brave flag bearer. The brave man lost his life, but what he said will live for centuries in history. Jesus is the standard bearer for his churches, and as the churches retire before the enemy, there is a call for the emblem of our religion to be brought back to our position in life. But Jesus would have us bring the church up to the banner of the Lord. With him there is no retreating; nor will he, at any time, sanction the order for a retreat of his followers. He gave orders that those who would inherit eternal life should follow him,—should come up to where the standard bearer has taken his position, and there meet the enemy. It is not the disposition of the popular churches to take their stand where Jesus stood. The opposition is too strong, so they retire, as they think, to a less exposed position, and call for the flag to be brought back to them. But the cry of the Master, as well as that of all faithful ministers of the Gospel, is to bring the churches up to Jesus, bring them up to the Gospel, bring them up to the truths taught in the Word of God. Do this, and we will not only have Jesus on our side, but the victory will be ours. Bring the churches up to Jesus! Let this be our constant cry, and to this end may we put forth all our efforts.

Not a Real Estate Journal.

Some correspondents write as though they looked upon the Messenger as a "semi-real-estate" journal, having for one of its purposes the advertising of cheap lands, with a view of locating churches. In a measure our people believe in mission work by immigration, but those interested in the sale of lands are not usually the ones to urge such projects through our columns. We much prefer the church news from the points where churches are being established, and let cheap lands, and fine financial openings for Brethren come in incidentally. We are not saying anything against companies who are endeavoring to locate members on their lands. It is an honorable business if carried on in an honorable way, but the Messenger must not be used for the purpose of helping their business interests. We are looking after the church side, and anything we can say to help along with the church and her work we shall do, but when locating members in new sections, we should not be asked to help in effecting land sales. We shall be content to help to convert sinners, build up churches and feed the flocks of God that are looking to the Messenger for spiritual nourishment.

The Lord's Prayer.

In answer to those calling for information regarding the use of the Lord's Prayer in our services, we present the following: In 1901, Art. 10, the Annual Meeting was asked to recommend a uniform way of conducting our meetings, and this answer was given: "We do not think it expedient to fix any definite rule as to the manner of conducting our religious services, but urge the elders and ministers not to neglect the reading of the Scriptures in the churches, and advise that the hymn and song books published by the Brethren be used wherever it is practicable, and that the use of the Lord's Prayer be maintained, but not to that extent that it must be used every time prayer is offered." The recommendation regarding the use of the Lord's Prayer is a sensible one. It leaves something to the discretion of the individuals, as well as to the congregations, but not to the extent of neglecting the prayer.

Financial Associations.

We are asked for advice regarding the propriety of members becoming connected with certain farmers' and fruit growers' associations. We do not happen to be sufficiently informed regarding the requirements of these associations to give the advice that is sought. But we counsel our members to shun all associations and societies that are oathbound. While it may be proper for farmers or fruit growers to form such associations as may prove helpful to them in their work, there is no need of making them oathbound. When members need special advice regarding these mutual associations, we suggest that they consult the pastors and elders of their own State Districts. These brethren likely understand the real situation far better than those who know nothing about the workings of the associations in question.

WINONA MISSION.

Bro. G. W. Hilton, our missionary from China, has just closed a course of six lectures on China, at this place. Two of these were stereopticon lectures, the pictures of which he took while on the field. In one lecture he exhibited the dress and relics, and the others were sermon lectures. These lectures were not only intensely interesting, but were convicting and converting. The little mission here has certainly realized a great uplift from Bro. Hilton's labors.

Though our membership is very small, yet at each meeting the church was filled with very earnest listeners. At one service some were compelled to stand. An offering of $44 was given for the work in China.

Truly, there is a rich harvest of souls for the Brethren church in China, if we take the opportunity. China loves American missionaries, and when given a chance will interpret the Bible to mean just what the Brethren church stands for. Bro. Hilton is very unassuming. He does not make himself prominent, but emphasizes the message he is bringing from his chosen field.

FROM PAYETTE VALLEY, IDAHO.

Our church met in council Feb. 23. Our elder, L. H. Eby, presided. Bro. George Eldredge and wife, who spend the past year in Kansas, have returned; also Bro. D. J. Wampler, who spent the winter among friends in Ohio.

The church here is launching out in home extension work, and a worker will be employed in the congregation during the present year. The solicitors reported over $500 pledged for the support of said worker.

The Fruitland Sunday-school was reorganized for six months, by electing Bro. E. B. Sargent as superintendent, and Bro. Troy Schubert as secretary-treasurer. Bro. A. B. Eldredge was chosen president of the Christian Workers' Meeting; Sister Alma Shamberger, secretary-treasurer.

Feb. 5 Bro. A. L. Gorham began a series of meetings in the Payette house and labored very earnestly till the 23d. On account of a deep-seated cold he was obliged to quit. Eld. Eby continued the meetings until last evening. Twenty-five sermons were preached in all. March 12 a series of meetings will begin in the Fruitland house, if the Lord will. The meetings are to be conducted by Elders L. H. Eby and J. E. Shamberger. S. J. Kenepp.

PING TING CHOU, CHINA.

Today, Jan. 30, is the Chinese New Year, with all its religious rites and ceremonies. For the last two weeks everybody has been very busy, closing up the year's work. Houses were swept and whitewashed, sewing was finished, baking and cooking were in evidence everywhere, while all shops collected all debts possible, and closed their books for the year. The streets were constantly packed with people. Thousands of paper household gods were for sale,—half a cent apiece. Yesterday, red strips, on long strips of paper, were mounted on every shop post and door, giving the business street quite a New Year appearance. All the dwellinghouse gates and courts are decorated in the same way. The mottoes all have good meanings, and remind one of God's command to the Israelites.

Today all shops are closed, the streets are almost deserted, and the temples are decorated with new paper. Each god is clothed in a new robe,—sometimes made of silk,—and is supplied with much false money. Early this morning I packed up the steps today, I picked up some of the false money that had been dropped there to bribe the devils, so that they would not enter the house.

Several days ago all of the paper household gods ascended to heaven in smoke, to report the year's deeds. Last night they all returned and their pictures are pasted up in different parts of the home. One guards the front gate, one is posted over the stove in the kitchen, while the gods of wealth and wine occupy other parts of the house.

In the evening the table is set before the ancestral tablets, and spread with all the choicest dishes of meat, vegetables, and cakes. Incense is also burned. All this is done to honor the spirits of their ancestors. The table continues spread all the next day, and the food is finally eaten by the family.

Their New Year's eve is somewhat like our watch meetings, only it lasts longer. All stay awake till three or four o'clock in the morning, when a signal is given, and they begin to honor their household gods. Incense and paper money are burned to them, also a display of fireworks. The noise of the rockets, etc., have continued all day and will continue for several days. It is all done to the honor of the gods, with no merrymaking whatever. It is all attended to most seriously. The continual sound of these fireworks, with everything else so silent, really seems very weird. It is enough to bring a sense of awe over the whole city, even without the other ceremonies. They say that all these gods were once men who did noble deeds and are now mediators in heaven for them.

At these times the people seem to be very religious. But it is only a religion of fear, and lasts but on religious days. How we do long that they may know the True God! They do all they know and worship God in the only way they know how, and they do it with all their might. If only their zeal could be turned to serve Jesus Christ, like Paul did, what a blessing it would be! The thousands of unsaved, just at our door, in this city, besides the many thousand near by, almost overwhelms us with the sense of their need. We can only pray God to have mercy on them and give us the power to sow the seed aright, and trust God to give the increase. Who is coming to help us scatter the precious seed? Emma Horning.

Ping Ting Chou, Shansi, China.

FROM KANSAS CITY, KANS.

Our work on the Missouri side, with Bro. Geo. Lentz as elder and pastor, is growing in spirit and union, as well as in attendance. Two have been added to our number recently, for which we feel to praise the Lord. This will add strength to the Sunday-school work and be the means of bringing others to Christ.

On the west side, Kansas City, Kans., Eld. I. H. Crist is in charge. He has done a great work in the Armourdale Mission. Since Feb. 1 about twenty have been added to the church. Nearly all of them are heads of families, and, so far as we are able to judge, will live honorable Christian lives. We were with them last Lord's Day evening, Wednesday evening, and preached on Friday evening. Our text was I Cor. 15: 57; subject, "Victory." One dear brother came out on the Lord's side, and others are almost persuaded to become Christians. We expect others to unite with us before the close of the meetings, which are being conducted by Bro. Crist.

FROM WINCHESTER, IDAHO.

Bro. H. C. Longanecker and wife, from Tekoa, Wash., came to us Feb. 4 and conducted a two weeks' series of meetings. We were glad to have Bro. Longanecker with us, as he was chosen elder of the Nezperce church some time ago. While he was here, we were organized into a local congregation. We have thirteen members in and near New Winchester. The boundary lines are as follows: On the north, the Clearwater church; on the west, the State line; on the east, the first township line west, Boise meridian; on the south the line is not decided yet. If there are any members living in this church, whose names are not on the roll of the church book, please notify the writer.

The church officers for the new congregation are as follows: Bro. Longanecker, elder for one year; John Shuss, Jr., clerk; Bro. Harry Kale, treasurer; the writer, corresponding secretary and Messenger agent; Brethren John Willey, John Shuss, Jr., and Harry Kale, trustees. Bro. John Willey was elected to the deacon's office. He and his wife were duly installed. We have one deacon and one minister in the second degree.

We hold services in our new church. We hope to dedicate it next summer. We have it rented to the school district, to be used for educational work. The people built two churches and two schoolhouses. The Presbyterian church and the Brethren church are now rented to accommodate the school children. The district has started to build a seven-room school building, which will be finished some time next summer. If any members of the Brethren are passing through Northern Idaho, we would be pleased to have them stop off and see our new country and its business enterprises. Amanda E. Flory.

INDIA NOTES.

Recently the writer and family made a very pleasant visit to Vyara. I think it probable that most of us visit too seldom. And the older and more experienced missionaries become, the less visiting they seem to do. "We don't have time," they think. Well do I recall how much the people in our neighborhood visited one another in my boyhood days. But as I grew to manhood, the thought of our growing selfish and self-centered, over and again, forced itself upon me, for our folks visited less and less. Perhaps,—and I am glad to note it in passing,—it is not that we are growing less hospitable, but more devotional, for we do attend God's house in worship far oftener than in the days of my youth. And do we not need this time in the fellowship of our God? Yes, let us take time to be holy.

Four years ago Brother and Sister Ross were comparatively new in their India work. At that time they lived in a hired house, badly situated, as for health, and had but two workers, and they were thought to be of doubtful character. The field was new and untried, and as the work was persecuted, they often found much to discourage him. In fact, he thought seriously of abandoning the field. But the Lord was in the work, and kept our brother and sister where he first placed them, and today we are seeing how all things have worked together for good.

It took a long time to get land, and as long to get permission to build. But once all things were ready, Bro. Ross hastily erected a small bungalow, and in a surprisingly short time,—to the Hindus at least,—the poor land about his house was made to grow green and bloom like Eden. Soon, too, the Government authorities, hitherto so slack in appreciation, began to show increasing interest in and respect for the missionary.

Nor was Brother Ross idle during these days of stress and poor accommodations, for she, from the first, has found much opportunity to serve the people in giving out medicines. However, until about two years ago, Vyara appeared an unpromising field.

In casting about, wondering what to do next, Bro. Ross and his workers decided on trying to open up work in two places quite distant from the bungalow, each worker being made responsible for his own side of the work. At this time began, with some little rivalry, a friendly rivalry between these men,—a rivalry and responsibility that has brought out the best in each. Today Bro. Ross is glad for the opportunity of spending his time following up the work of these two men, together with the several assistants of each, and in forwarding the work they inaugurated. The Lord is opening doors, and these two young men are entering in, and, unlike hirelings, but like true servants of the Master are, midst fevers and wild animals, that daunt the ordinary hearts, vigorously prosecuting God's work. It is encouraging to see what a difference the Spirit has wrought in the hearts of these boys during the last two years. While to date baptisms are few, the outlook is fine. Brother and Sister Ross are, and have been, right in very hopeful for the work. They are very thankful for the leading and blessing of the Lord, thus far.

Sunday evening, Jan. 29, about twenty of us met at Vyara in a love feast. To about half the number it was quite a new experience, but it was pleasing to see the spirit with which they entered into the service. These young Christians fresh from the jungle, showed that they want to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven. We washed that feet of our home members, for their own encouragement, might have seen and enjoyed the service with us. Oh, people of God, if you are willing to be patient with the India Mission a few more years, you will hear of the answer to your prayers. Let us take up courage, for "There be some" of us "which shall in no wise taste of death, till they see the Son of man coming in his kingdom."

See the blind Hindus in the following story: At Kedgam, near Pyoor, a young, spiritual Brahman, about thirty years old, Narayan by name, who is thought to be an incarnation of God, and while he worships God, he himself receives Divine honors,—so people say.

For the last few days the Hindus of all castes and from all quarters have been flocking into Pimpalner to get a sight of the parents of Narayan Deo (God). Hundreds and hundreds of cocoanuts and kegs of sugar have been offered these supposed Divine beings, as each devotee, catching hold of their feet, makes his offering. Hosts and hosts follow these old people, singing their praises as they are driven in a decorated cart hither and thither. While I was standing near, deeply stirred in my heart because our God is not known by them, even I was invited to come and join in the shout, "Victory to Narayan." Has God sent these people a strong delusion that they should believe a lie and be condemned?

And who is Narayan? These two old people are not his real parents, as supposed. For twelve years they were wont to worship God under a certain tree. Finally, as they were praying, God, in the person of Narayan, was born a child and issued from out of the ground under the tree mentioned above. Seeing Narayan had no parents, and it was a famine year in that region, these two, who are now also being worshiped, took the child and brought him to manhood. For this kindness to Narayan, they, too, are thought to be filled with the presence of God, hence need to be worshiped.

How our hearts weep, we can not tell you! How true it is that "The god of this world hath blinded the minds of the unbelieving that the light of the Gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God, should not dawn upon them"! How true, too, the Master's words, "Ye worship that which ye know not"! Ignorant worship! "We worship that which we know." So we are debtors "both to Greeks and to barbarians, both to the wise and to the foolish." Like Paul are we "ready to preach the gospel" the world around. Or are we "ashamed of the gospel"? May we, in all faith, believe it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that will believe! I. S. Long.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country is.

CALIFORNIA.

Butte Valley.—We met in council March 4, with our assistant elder, Bro. H. F. Maust, presiding. Bro. J. H. Stover having resigned the charge of the church, Bro. Ed. H. F. Maust was elected to take charge for the remainder of the year. Christian Worker officers were elected, with Sister Ella Hollinger as president; Sister Mayme Sheller, secretary-treasurer. Five names have been enrolled in this year's teacher-training class.—H. W. Allen, MacDoel, Cal., March 6.

Covina.—We are glad to welcome all to the Ministerial Meeting, March 23, and District Meeting, March 28. Board and lodging will be furnished for all. On Friday evening, March 24, Bro. Wilbur Mercer of Glendora, will preach. Roseburg and Covina will give a special program.—Mrs. D. B. Mc-Vey, Covina, Cal., Feb. 28.

COLORADO.

De Beque.—After our return home, after three months' labor among the churches, the Holy Spirit led us to go to conduct the funeral service of a man named John Larkin. He was the first white settler in this part of the country. J. B. Ivey and that was the first came he had to let his wagon down over the cliffs by a rope, as there were no roads at that time. Not one of those present at the funeral. His ranch was covered with flowers, but we wondered how many cheered him while he was living in his lonely cabin. His age was eighty-one years, three months and twenty-eight days. Now we will speak of our work for the winter. We were at home, and sow all the good seed we can. Our work among the churches was distinct, because we felt the Spirit's help and the good cause were appreciated. We were glad to see some immediate results, and hope that eternity will reveal much more from which much has been sown.—Salem Beery, De Beque, Colo., March 6.

IDAHO.

Nampa.—Our church met in council March 2. Not much business came before the meeting. The spirit of love was manifested. We are preparing our Easter program.—Rose B. Bradley, 208 Sixteenth Avenue, South Nampa, Idaho, March 6.

ILLINOIS.

Astoria church met in regular council in the Astoria house March 7. Our elder, J. W. Harshbarger, presided. Letters received, 3; granted, 4. Sisters Lucy Yount and Lucy Newcomer therefore, assisted in the meeting. Bro. I. R. Young was chosen as elder in charge for three years. Four letters were granted and two were received. Bro. I. R. Young was chosen as our delegate to Annual Meeting. Bro. Aaron Hawbecker and wife were appointed as our ministering solicitors. Bro. Alvin Sword was elected as clerk for three years; the writer, Mennonite correspondent. We decided to hold our next Feast May 27, at 6:30 P. M.—Ross Shidler, R. D. 3, Lanark, Ill., March 16.

Hickory Grove.—We met in council March 3, with a goodly number of members present. Bro. J. H. Moore is to represent us at the Conference. We are arranging for a series of meetings. We will hold the forepart of April. Bro. Jesse W. H. Elsenbise has moved here and will take charge of the work for one year, at least.—Anna Fierheller, R. D. 6, Mount Carroll, Ill., March 6.

Lanark.—We closed a four weeks' series of meetings on Sunday evening, conducted by Bro. Perry Ellis, of Polo, Ill. Five were received into the church by baptism. Bro. Flory's labors with us were much appreciated, as his discourses were inspiring and instructive. The attendance and interest were very good. The Saturday evening Feast was the first in the basement of the church. This also was a very good meeting, as we have had such a meeting since early last spring, before the old church was torn down. The Sunday-school is also growing in interest and attendance. At our last council, Jan. 5, Bro. Harry Gnagey was installed for the second degree of the ministry. Bro. Elmer Zuck was elected as second deacon.—Ida Wilson Boyer, R. D. 3, Lanark, Ill., March 8.

Rock Creek.—Our church met in council March 4. Bro. William Grater presided. Officers for the year were elected. Bro. Jesse Forney, treasurer, was chosen as our delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. John Miller, alternate. Our Sunday-school was reorganized. We decided to have our next Feast June 17 and 18, beginning at 2:30 in the afternoon.—Bertha Grater, Polo, Ill., March 7.

Salem.—Bro. C. S. Garber came to Salem Feb. 11 and began meetings on the 12th, continuing until March 2. While the attendance was not as large as was expected, yet the interest was good. Inclement weather interfered with the attendance. Two were made willing to forsake the world and join with the children of God. The interest was good throughout the meetings.—Jacob Hershberger, Salem, Ill., March 6.

Waddams Grove.—We held our council Feb. 25. Eld. P. H. Keltner presided. Seven letters of membership were granted. Bro. Geo. Masters was elected as our delegate to Annual Meeting. We decided to hold our love feast June 10 and 11, at 1:30 P. M. Brother and Sister Keltner stayed over Sunday, and Bro. Keltner preached for us both morning and evening. The roads were very bad, but we had fair congregations.—Albert Myers, Waddams Grove, Ill., March 7.

INDIANA.

Bachelor Run.—At our council, held in the country church, three letters were granted. Bro. A. G. Crosswhite was elected delegate to the Annual Meeting. At a recent meeting it was decided to advance Bro. Boyd Bechtelheimer to the second degree of the ministry. He moved here from the Upper Deer Creek congregation a few months ago.—Flora, Ind., March 6.

Clear Creek.—Our church met in council March 4. Our elder, Bro. Dorsey Hodgden, presided assisted by Eld. I. B. Trout, who was installed in the ministry about six months, with Bro. J. A. Miller as superintendent; also Christian Workers' officers. Bro. Eli Coldiron was appointed to Bro. J. H. Christner was elected as our delegate to Annual Meeting. Other ministerial correspondents were elected. Sunday-school and ministerial committees were elected for a period of two years. Nine certificates were granted, and one was received by letter. Bro. Christner has had the oversight of this congregation, having had charge for twenty-nine years. He gave several interesting talks, which encouraged us much for the better. The church decided to defer the choosing of an elder until June.—Ida Hollinger, R. No. 2, Nappanee, Ind., March 6.

Maple Grove.—We met in council March 4. Brethren Abram Bowman and L. W. Teeter were with us. Bro. Josiah Brower, with his wife, was installed by Brethren Bowman and Teeter. Our spring love feast will be April 29, at 6 P. M., and our fall love feast will be Sept. 30. Bro. Samuel Gilmer was elected Sunday-school superintendent, with Sister Ortie Rinehart, president of the Christian Workers' Meeting.—Ethel Brower, Etna Green, Ind., March 6.

Mississinewa.—March 4 we met in our members' meeting. With Bro. L. W. Teeter presiding, we had a very interesting letter and three were received. Bro. W. Grant Leckington was elected delegate. Sister Miller was elected Christian Worker to the Annual Meeting. We decided to hold our love feast May 13, at 6 P. M.—John F. Shoemaker, Bilkey, Ind., March 6.

Ridge Schoolhouse.—Immediately after Sunday-school last Sunday, Bro. Jacob Hoffman, of Garland, near Walkerton, Ind., preached for us. He had not been able to be with us for some time on account of illness. We hope to have him with us often, and we will have preaching again in four weeks.—Hattie Carpenter, Walkerton, Ind., March 6.

Roann.—Bro. Geo. D. Zollers, of South Bend, Ind., came to Roann, Ind., Feb. 25, and began a series of meetings which closed Feb. 28. He preached seventeen sermons with much power. None came out on the Lord's side of the question, although many seemed to receive much righteousness. March 4 we met in council, which was conducted by Eld. G. E. Swihart. Much business came before the meeting. Bro. J. L. Mahon was chosen to represent our church at the Annual Meeting.—I. E. Warner, Roann, Ind., March 6.

Somerset.—We met in council March 4 at the Vernon house. Our elder, Bro. Silas Brubaker, presided. Considerable business came before the meeting. Bro. J. L. Mahon, of Van Buren, Ind., was chosen as our delegate to the Annual Meeting. A committee of three was appointed to look after needed repairs. We will not have our first feast sometime after the Annual Meeting. Brethren Weimer and Hoff are appointed to Annual Meeting; Bro. Obed C. Rife, alternate. Bro. Ellis Hoff was elected Sunday-school superintendent, and Bro. Cora Knotts was selected trustee for the church.—Oma Rife, Converse, Ind., March 6.

Upper Deer Creek.—We met in council March 4. Bro. William Trout presided. Bro. Jesse Forney, of Peru, Ind., was with us. Two letters were granted. Bro. L. T. Holsinger is to hold a series of meetings for us in August.—Minnie Mummert, Galveston, Ind., March 6.

Yellow Creek.—Our church met in council Feb. 25. Our elder, Bro. Daniel Hoover, was present. One letter was granted. Eld. Frank Kreider came to us Jan. 29, to hold a series of meetings. He remained and preached to us until Feb. 28. Five, 25 thirteen were buried with Christ in baptism, and March 4 six more were received into the church by baptism and confirmed.—Irvin Miller, R. D. 5, Goshen, Ind., March 4.

Yellow Creek.—Our church met in council March 4, with Eld. E. E. Shively as moderator. A large amount of business came before the meeting. A local temperance committee was appointed. Bro. Jesse Hoff was elected delegate to Annual Meeting; and Bro. Chas. Sellers, Sister Edith Rohrer was elected Christian Worker. Bro. E. E. Shively was appointed to preach at the Annual Meeting. Our love feast will be held May 27. —Rose Shively, Bremen, Ind., March 6.

IOWA.

Coon River.—We are rejoicing with the members at Hagley. Two were received into the church March 4, by Bro. Ira Hoff, to be baptized next Sunday. At the Panora, house the young people are doing especially good work in the singing class, which meets every Friday evening. Recently a Sunday-school organized and all seem to be willing to do their part. It is a great pleasure to the writer to labor with the people here doing so nobly.—J. D. Haughtelin, Panora, Iowa, March 7.

Dallas County.—We met in council March 4, with Bro. C. B. Rowe, presided. Two letters were received. We want to hold our next Feast June 10 and 11, with Bro. Rowe commencing at 2 P. M. Bro. M. W. Elkenberry was chosen as our delegate to Annual Meeting, with Bro. D. W. Wise, alternate.—Mrs. Ella Wise, Dallas Center, Iowa, March 6.

English River.—We met in council Feb. 25. Letters of membership were granted to Bro. Jacob Hoffman and wife. Two were received by letter. Bro. Wallace Blaylock is now with us for the next year. Our spring love feast was appointed for June 10, at 4 P. M. Bro. Henry Brower was chosen as our delegate to Annual Meeting, to meeting with W. D. Grove and A. W. Miller alternates. Bro. Emery Yoder was chosen as our Sunday-school superintendent, and Sister Ollie Coffman, secretary. The work of the church is moving along in an even way. Our Sunday-school is well attended. We have a good choir.—Mrs. Ida Hoffman, Parnell, Iowa, March 6.

Panora.—Bro. Geo. Brubaker and family, of Monroe, Iowa, have now moved among us, for which we feel to rejoice. Bro. Brubaker is with us in the Christian Workers' Meetings have been increasing in interest. At the church in Panora, Bro. Ira Hoff, Bro. J. H. Moore, Bro. Jacob Hoff and Bro. Harvey A. Gnagy, of Garrison, Iowa, have been filling the appointments every two weeks for some time. We have Sunday-school every Sunday.—Hannah C. Mercer, Grundy Center, Iowa, March 6.

KANSAS.

Altoona.—Bro. Chas. Miller, our District evangelist, began a series of meetings with us March 4, which, on account of unfavorable circumstances,—bad weather and bad roads,—but by Sunday night we had quite a good attendance, and some came to the service who had not been to any religious service for years. On account of the continued snow and rain, and some sickness, we had to close the meetings. Our brother preached the Word with power. There was a request, even by outsiders, that he be with us again. We hope to arrange another series of meetings. The attendance at our Sunday-school has averaged 70 for the last month.—Mrs. Ella Wise, R. D. 2, Box 79, Altoona, Kans., March 6.

Appanoose.—We held our council March 4. Eld. C. W. Shoemaker presided. We enjoyed a good, helpful meeting. One letter of membership was granted. Since our last report Bro. F. G. Edwards, of Mont Ida, Kans., conducted a two weeks' series of lessons in which we took no part. He is a good teacher and had an interested class.—Ada E. Beckner, Overbrook, Kans., March 7.

Bethel Mission.—We met in council Feb. 25 at our church-house. In the absence of our elder, Bro. C. S. Ruff presided. Several queries and suggestions were discussed and acted upon by the members. We decided to commence a series of meetings May 7, and have our love feast May 13, at 2 P. M. —Chas. Hauger, Oakley, Kans., Box 4.

Bloom.—We met in council March 4 at the home of our elder, Bro. G. W. Weddle. Two sisters were received by letter, and three by confession and baptism. Our new schoolhouse will be dedicated April 2. Bro. J. E. Crist, of Friend, Kans., will deliver the dedicatory sermon, which will be followed by a series of meetings, and close with a love feast. At the close of our meetings a special call was given and two received by baptism. We invite neighboring churches to be with us at this dedication.—Mrs. Ella Hodgden, Bloom, Ford County, Kans., March 8.

Kansas City.—Last evening we closed a very successful series of meetings at our Sixth Street Mission. Feb. 1 I began preaching, continuing the meetings each evening until March 5. During this time Bro. D. B. Wampler assisted in the sermon, and Bro. A. C. Brubaker preached two sermons. The interest and attendance was good, and we closed with quite a full house. Nineteen were baptized and two more will be baptized in a few days. All are members of Bible classes and three. The preaching was mostly along the line of Bible doctrine, and we trust it will all turn into the hearts of these members of other denominations. We want to thank those who contributed to the support of our ministry. We feel that our money was spent to the glory of God, and the souls saved are stars in the donor's crown.—I. H. Crist, 12 N. Fernside St., Kansas City, Kans., March 6.

Morning Star.—Bro. J. W. Jarboe, of Quinter, was with us on Sunday, Feb. 26, and preached three sermons. While in the church met in council with Bro. Jarboe presiding. Much work to be done here and the workers are few.—Elizabeth Holloperte, Rockton, Pa., March 7.

Tulpehocken.—Jan. 28 Bro. Geo. Weaver, of Ephrata, Pa., held the Sunday-school convention in Myerstown house. For two weeks he preached to large and attentive audiences. Bro. Weaver is a faithful worker, and his efforts are beginning to bear fruit. Thirteen of those previously received by baptism were at our regular service on the 26th.—P. L. Reber, Myerstown, Pa., March 8.

TENNESSEE.

Jonesboro.—We met March 5 for services in Jonesboro, with Eld. Jacob Garber, of Limestone, presiding. Considerable to preach for us. He gave us an interesting discourse. Text, Acts 26: 28. We had a good attendance at the two services every first Sunday of the month, at 10: 45. All are invited.—Tate Mathes, Jonesboro, Tenn., March 7.

Notice to the Tennessee Churches.—Every elder in the District of Tennessee is hereby notified that the Annual Conference has levied an assessment of $1 per member against the In District, in order to pay the expenses of committees sent by Annual Meeting to visit and encourage the District Brotherhood, etc. A failure to pay this amount prevents the District, or delinquent, from having representation on the Home Missionary Committee. The writer takes this method of notifying the elders of the various churches in Tennessee, hoping that those that have not already paid will please send the amount to the writer as below.—C. G. Bowman, District Treasurer, Johnson City, Tenn., March 8.

Piney Flats.—The writer went to this place Feb. 25 and began a series of meetings, continuing until March 5. Four were reclaimed, five were baptized and one awaits the sacred rite. The attendance was good and the interest manifested throughout the meetings. The spiritual condition of the church is better than it has been for years. Bro. Jesse Hylton elected Bro. A. M. Laughrun as pastor for one year.—J. D. Clark, Jonesboro, Tenn., March 8.

CORRESPONDENCE

ANNUAL MEETING OF 1911.

Special Request from the Committee of Arrangements.

We are very anxious to make the approaching Annual Meeting a spiritual feast to all who attend, and a moral uplift to the entire city. Our efforts have been untiring to assure this result by arranging a splendid program. We have every facility by way of audience rooms. In fact, we believe they can not be surpassed. We have a people, characteristic of all good city, who are willing to open their doors to us. They are ready to entertain us in their homes. But for how many shall we secure accommodation? Visiting brethren, who come and look the place over, are sought by reporters, and estimates of audiences are given out. We wish promptly to lodge every applicant. We do not want to list so many rooms that we can not use all of them. A personal house-to-house canvass of the city will be made soon.

Now, will each elder, having the oversight of a congregation, ascertain, as nearly as possible, how many will attend from his place, and advise us not later than April 15th? This will require but a little effort on the part of each, but will help us materially and will be highly appreciated.

J. S. Kline.

IN THE BYWAYS.

Often have I read of the long horseback trips of some of our pioneer brethren, in the early history of our country, in their endeavors to carry the blessed tidings of salvation into the out-of-way places. Often I rather coveted a share in just such experiences, if I could also have a part in the inward, conscious love for lost humanity they must have felt. Absolutely free from any temptation to deference, because of salaried obligations, they went,—free-will and uncramped,—preachers of righteousness. It was no wonder they were men of liberty and power.

Without laying claim to any of the traits which proved such wonderful virtues in our pioneer preachers, the writer, in company with Eld. Nine, of Macdoel, was treated to a little measure of pioneering in the high mountain valleys of Northern California. It was the first trip for the writer, but Bro. Nine and others had been in there before.

We reached Bray, a sawmill station on the S. P. R. R., about 10 A. M., Feb. 11. Before us lay ten miles of road only partly broken. The snow was three feet deep, ten inches of which had fallen the night before.

We bought lunch and started to walk the ten miles. After going three-fourths of a mile, a sleigh and wagon took us on our way about half the journey, one of the parties treating us to a good warm dinner. Having ten two sleds from Long Prairie, the place of meeting, we waited till evening, and were kindly conveyed the rest of the journey, reaching Bro. Clark's about sunset.

The day was full of premonitions of coming trials. We could see just what inspired the first eight lines in Whittier's "Snow Bound."

As we saw the sun "sink from sight before it set," I for one confess that some ominous feelings came over me, not in the bill of fare that my imaginations had accredited to the experiences of the gospel ambassador of a century ago.

After an hour or so in front of the big, open fireplace,—another reminder of bygone days,—and a warm supper, we were off to the schoolhouse where Bro. Nine broke the Bread of Life to fifteen interested listeners.

Sunday morning a severe blizzard was raging. The storm was so severe that all hope of meeting was lost, and we remained indoors during the entire day.

But we had reckoned without our host; for, while the preachers had failed to appear, a part of the congregation had braved the storm and met for Sunday-school.

Here was another thing happening in my pioneering, altogether incongruous to the backwoods preachers of the past age.

Monday night twenty-two were present at church and I have never preached to more interested people. The crowd ranged from twenty to thirty during the meetings.

The week was clear but cold at night. We visited each family in the Valley and we can speak only words of praise for the kind treatment shown us. Surely there are most precious souls here, ripe for salvation. Procrastination,—that great enemy of the call: "Today, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your heart," is found there too.

Some of the doctrine was proclaimed and we were rather urged into taking up the Sabbath question one night. This we rather regretted at first, as it broke into our series of talks, but after investigating the subject, and hearing the other side presented which was done in such a nice, Christian manner, we were real glad of it, and we stand stronger than ever for the Lord's Day, rather than to go back under the old covenant shadow Sabbath.

It was a meeting of seed-sowing, and we confidently hope that some seed fell in good ground.

This makes the second trip for the writer among the Brethren in the out-of-way places since Jan. 1. Many are the hardships to overcome in getting to and from these isolated ones, but considering everything, we hardly know the first letters of the alphabet known and experienced by our early pioneer preachers. And while we rejoice to be used in this gracious work and are glad to suffer for his name, yet we are inclined to think the horse-back preacher of a generation ago enjoyed more of the Spirit than the palace car preacher, riding in richly upholstered cars, enjoys today. J. Harman Stover.

FROM ORDWAY, COLO.

There are only nine members of the Brethren living at this place. We have no organized church. We should like very much if some minister, who thinks of locating in the West, would come to see this country. We feel that there could be some good done if we had some one to help us.

We have a good Sunday-school, with Bro. Coy as our superintendent. We have an attendance of about thirty-five or forty. There is no other denomination holding meetings here at the present time. We hold our Sunday-school and services in the schoolhouse. The Brethren preach for us once a month.

If we had a minister living right here and would have services more regularly we could do some good. If some of you, brethren, where there are so many in one church, would come out West and hunt up some of the isolated members, you might be the means of getting a large church started up. We have people right here who have said to me: "I would be a member of your church if you had an organized church."

Ordway is forty miles east of Pueblo, on the Missouri Pacific R. R. If any members are going West over this road, we would be pleased to have them stop and see our country. We should like to correspond with some minister wanting to go West. Ella Baker.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

Feb. 13 I began a protracted effort in Roann, Ind. The weather was quite unfavorable, and the roads unusually heavy. We trudged along, however, through mud and rain, enjoying some pleasant nights also, until eighteen sermons were preached. The attendance fluctuated, but the interest was generally good. I trust that by the combined efforts of ministry and laity we prepared the way for a reaping time in the future, when sower and reaper may rejoice together.

Roann has a population of about seven hundred. The churchhouse, an oblong design, is situated upon the north bank of the Eel River, just a little too far out, these modern times, for the people within the town limits. Nearly half of the members of the congregation live in the town, and it seems to be the desire of many to have the church edifice located there. Doubtless it would prove an incentive to the progress of the work.

Roann is not the only church of the Brethren that experiences this inconvenience. In these things we should adapt ourselves to the situation and surroundings. Here the once active elder, David Neff, was in charge for many years. He is now eighty-four years of age, and totally blind. Eld. G. E. Swihart is now in charge, assisted in the ministry by Elders J. D. Hile and Edwin Warren, and Brethren Miller and Robert Burger (a member of the Auditing Committee of the Brethren Publishing House).

Eld. G. E. Swihart has other charges, with increased responsibilities, while his home helpers carry on the work during his absence. Eld. Swihart received a call to the Mexico church, Ind., at the close of my evangelistic mission in Roann. By request I accompanied him, and for the first time in my ministerial career came in personal contact with the Mexico church.

Bro. Frank Fisher is the elder in charge of the Mexico church. His associate elder, Bro. Irvin Fisher, seems to be his right-hand man. Bro. Silas Fisher, another worthy helper, lives in the edge of the work at Peru, Ind.

A homelike feeling came over me in the church at Mexico,—this being the location of the Old Folks' and Orphans' Home. Sister Wagner, the matron, escorted us through the various departments, where we greeted the decrepit and infirm, passing down the declivity of old age, as well as the crippled and health-impaired in the tender age of life. Then we went on to the rooms where orphan boys and girls are properly cared for. They sang to us, in touching, pathetic melody, their songs, which plainly show the love and affection that predominate.

What a blessing such institutions are in our beloved Fraternity! They soothe the sorrows, and comfort the lonely hearts of youth and age. Under wise and good management, they are the best of church privileges, all may have the benefit of religious services, and grow in the Christ-life and Brotherhood relationship.

FROM THE BEAVER DAM MISSION, MIDDLE INDIANA.

One year ago we located in this congregation, which was formerly one of the strong congregations of Middle Indiana, but by reverses had been reduced to a few members. Most of them were aged and in limited circumstances, and had no churchhouse. They are now under the care of the District Mission Board.

By their assistance a furnished house was purchased of another denomination and paid for by donations from brethren and sisters of adjoining congregations. By the help of the members living here, and neighboring brethren, repairs were made, and necessary supplies procured.

We started a Sunday-school April 1 and continued three quarters with encouraging results. We have lived here and devoted almost all our time to the work, preaching both publicly and privately. Besides preaching regularly at the church named above, we have preached in other churches; also in residences and schoolhouses.

Bro. J. L. Kline, a minister living here, has been a helpful assistant in the work. Bro. J. W. Fitzwater assisted us in a series of meetings in September. In various ways we have been sowing the seed, but to the natural eye the harvest is not yet in sight. No new members have been taken in during the year. Two have died and some have moved away.

Looking at the past, we might become discouraged, but the apostle says we should forget the discouragements of the past, seize the opportunities of the present, and press on in the future.

We are located in the midst of a beautiful and fruitful farming country, with a congregational territory approximately fifteen miles square. We have good roads, and a fine class of people, socially. But there are hindrances, some of which are wealth and indifference to religion. Many of the farmers here are wealthy and too much cumbered with the cares of this life to give thought to the salvation of the soul. Others have lost confidence in churches. Not only our own, but three others have failed in this vicinity.

During the first year we lived over three miles away from the churchhouse, but we are now located only a half mile away and believe that the change will be for the better. Here we have the promise of Bro. C. S. Garber to conduct a series of meetings about April 1.

The Sunday-school officers are selected and arrangements being made to open the Sunday-school with renewed force April 1. We will then have preaching each Sunday and trust that we may be able to win souls for Christ. We sincerely ask an interest in the prayers of the faithful everywhere. J. G. Stinebaugh.

SOUTHERN IOWA MISSION BOARD.

The Mission Board of Southern Iowa met in their semi-annual meeting, March 4, at the Mission in Ottumwa. Eld. Sink, the president, not being present, Bro. Burgin acted in his place. The Mission in Ottumwa is growing numerically and in influence. A number have recently been baptized and the prospect is most excellent for more soon. All this has been accomplished without any special series of meetings, but by the workers located there alone. As the work enlarges and broadens out, there comes a pressing demand for more workers. Our number and family, located there, are certainly willing workers, and are doing their part well, but there is too much for them to do, hence the Board decided to place a sister in the work there.

The work at Osceola was also given some attention, with a view of sooner or later placing some one there who can devote all of his time to the building up of the cause in that flourishing city. Our people have their own property there, but are without a settled little band of workers, but the resident minister is too far out in the country, to give them the needed attention, hence it is a case of necessity that the Board stimulate and build up the work there.

We have also taken some steps towards establishing a mission in the city of Burlington. We expect carefully to canvass the field, this summer some time, and if found favorable, to present it to our next District Meeting.

There also seems to be a pressure from Council Bluffs, Iowa, to establish a Mission there. This, however, will have to be deferred for the present. All this means more consecration, more workers, and more of our substance, but I am glad to note that the good members in our District, as well as elsewhere, are responding to a fuller sense of their duty along that line. One young brother and one young sister have already offered their services to the Board, to be used as the Lord directs. They have closed their former life plans, and are now making preparation to enter the mission field. Others whom we know are thinking seriously along the same line. Other aged, and younger members as well, whom the Lord has blessed with this world's goods, are thinking of leaving at least a portion to the spread of the Gospel, as we have had several inquiries along that line lately. So we feel much encouraged, just at this time, along mission lines.

May God speed the day that many more may see the pressing needs, and the great importance of the work!

NEW INGLENOOK COOK BOOK

Absolutely FREE with Inglenook Subscriptions

This reproduction of the cover design gives but a faint idea of the book itself. It is a book of 416 pages bound in white oilcloth. Let it suffice to say that it has been in great demand ever since its completion. You can see what others say about it. Readers tell us that the Inglenook is improving with each issue and we are sure our aim is to have it do this. A trial will convince you that it is the ideal weekly magazine for the home. We only have space to give you a few of the many letters of appreciation we have received concerning this New Cook Book. Read them:

Received the Cook Book in good condition. Am more than pleased with it. I like it because of its completeness, arrangement and the simple recipes it contains. I consider the chapter, "For the Sick," alone worth the price of the Inglenook. Shall take pleasure in showing the book to my neighbors and shall solicit their subscriptions.—Elva Whitmer Lake, Wenatchee, Wash.

I am more than pleased with the Inglenook Cook Book and think it is a great improvement over the old one, as the print and paper are much better, and there is a greater variety and better classification of recipes. I find blank pages after each department very useful for making notes, and altogether I think it is the best Cook Book I have ever had access to, and would not be without it for twice its cost. Can heartily recommend it to my Friends. It will certainly be an acceptable and much appreciated gift to any housewife.—Mrs. Jesse D. Mohler, Waynesburg, Mo.

I received the Inglenook Cook Book and am well pleased with it.—A. L. Umbaugh, Ashland, Ohio.

I am well pleased with the Cook Book and think it a fine premium. Think it is much more better in every way than the old one. I liked the old one very much, but now I like the new one so much better. I like the home remedies so much, and I think it all to be a good book. I showed the book to one of my neighbors the other day. She liked the book and said she was going to take the Inglenook and get herself a book. I will show the book to others and tell them about it and do what I can for you in getting subscribers for the Inglenook.—Mrs. Sam Embree, Nashua, Kans.

I think the New Revised Cook Book is just fine.—Carrie Martin, Rankin, Kans.

The Enlarged Inglenook Cook Book is at hand, and it is a BEAUTY. It far surpasses any Cook Book that I have ever used, and I have the "White House Cook Book," that is no peer to this one. Had one of the first Inglenook Cook Books and used it until this one came to hand, then I passed it on to one of the children that are away from home, and it is used yet. My neighbors are all anxious to know where I got the book, but I have always got it for them.—Mrs. U. T. Forney, Ingland, N. Dak.

Please accept my thanks for the Revised Inglenook Cook Book. It is very nice, as well as useful, and I appreciate it very much indeed.—Mrs. Anna Weckman, Horton, Kans.

I received the Cook Book; we are pleased with it. Please accept our thanks for the same. I will send you a few names.—Ed. Talbeim, Pawnee City, Nebr.

I just received your Cook Book. I am more than pleased with it. I think it is one of the grandest books of its kind. Please accept my thanks for it.—Mrs. Reda Forehand, Clayton, Ind.

We have received the Inglenook Cook Book and are much pleased with it. Have shown it to some and was handed a $1.00 bill to send in and have the Inglenook and Cook Book sent to our neighbor.—H. D. Michael, 2432 W. Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

The Cook Book to hand, the family is more than pleased with it. The make-up of the book is fine. The recipes are so simple and easy to comprehend. It is the best book of the kind I ever saw, just the thing for young housekeepers and will be of great benefit to older as well.—Mrs. David Kliendienst, Ashland, Ohio.

I received the New Enlarged Inglenook Cook Book a few days ago. I have made a careful examination of it, a great many of the recipes and pronounce them very good. The blank supplemental pages are a great convenience, and the home remedies a valuable adjunct.—Katie A. Kenepp, Fayette, Idaho.

I received my Inglenook Cook Book and am greatly pleased with it. I think it is well worth the $1.00. The recipes and the book will be of much value to me. I have wanted a good Cook Book for a long time and I think now I have just what I need. I have shown the book to several friends.—Mrs. C. C. Farley, Prince, W. Va.

The Inglenook and Cook Book are a charm in any household.—J. K. Shively, Lordsburg, Cal.

I am pleased to find that the New Inglenook Cook Book has given some space at the beginning of each division to a short discussion of the general principles of cookery. They are in harmony with those taught in the Domestic Science Department of the University of Chicago. I recommend it as a helpful guide to all housekeepers.—Mrs. Mary Flory Miller, University of Chicago.

I received the New Inglenook Cook Book and am more than pleased with it. I have tested quite a number of the recipes and find them splendid. The very appropriate covering of the book, and the blank pages left for adding favorite recipes, I consider especially good features. Indeed it would be difficult to tell what could have been added to make the book any more complete or helpful. Friends and neighbors all admire it and never fail to ask where and how we got it.—Mrs. G. A. Cassel, Ashland, Ohio.

It is with pleasure I write to thank you for the copy of our New Inglenook Cook Book which you so kindly sent me a few days ago. I can very easily recommend it and the magazine to my friends. The size of the book and print are very commendable features. Many cook books are too large and too heavy and the print too fine for the busy housewife to bother with when in a hurry, but not so with this one. I am sure cooking is made easier and food more palatable when the cook has a book of recipes plainly written out (ing before her just waiting for a trial. A glance at the names attached to a recipe inspires confidence and makes one feel with certain woman said in my presence some time, "Why, I wouldn't do without that Cook Book if it cost as much as what I paid for it." Some day I hope to try many of the recipes and am sure the fault of failure will be with me if I fail in having anything but good, and inexpensive, to eat. I shall also find the Cook Book more carefully later on. Hope you may be able to go around a deep thirst in the hearts of the women to such an extent that new editions shall have to be published to supply the demand.—Mrs. D. E. Miller, Mt. Morris, Ill.

I received one of the first Inglenook Cook Books that were put out a number of years ago and have tried a great many of the recipes and found nearly all of them to be good. I like the Cook Book especially because it contains simple recipes, such as used every day, and not the meaner kind that few could are found in so to a plain class of people. I am very favorably impressed with the recipes given in the New Cook Book. I also think the recipes "for the sick" will be a great help in a family. I think the blank pages for inserting other recipes very nice and convenient.—Mrs. J. N. Shank, Reedley, Cal.

We have received the Inglenook Cook Book and find it satisfactory in every respect. Consider it a great improvement over the old one. We find the recipes not only good and wholesome but economical and easily prepared as well. And best of all they are tried recipes. And the blank pages for "others' recipes are so convenient. It is the best Cook Book we have ever used and we would not desire to trade it for twice the cost. We given us so much good recipes in so small a book.—Mrs. A. L. Gerber, Lima, Ohio.

I wish to thank you for the New Revised and Enlarged Inglenook Cook Book. I do not hesitate to say I think it is the best cook book of its kind I know of. We know the recipes are all and tried and cost of preparing will come within the means of economical housewife. I assure you it will meet with the heartiest approval in my neighborhood, and I shall always be glad to show my book to others and direct them how to get it.—Mrs. Cyrus Miller, Lanark, Ill.

I am more than pleased with the Cook Book. I think those home remedies are so good for most of them I have tried have been raising my family. And the cooking recipes are good, too.—Hershel Grass, Sparrsville, Tenn.

I received the New Revised and Enlarged Inglenook Cook Book a few days ago. Was much pleased with it. Think it is a good one.—Miss Julia M. Mathias, Mathias, W. Va.

AROUND THE WORLD

Campaign for Church-Going.

A number of cities,—and especially Winona, Minn.,—have entered upon a systematic campaign to increase church attendance. The territory is districted, and the workers make their rounds on Saturday, urging attendance at church services on the day following. As but a limited number of calls are allotted to each worker, it is readily seen that the territory is easily covered, and what might seem to be a formidable task, is speedily and effectively accomplished. This plan, it appears to us, might easily be adapted to any of our Brethren congregations, and afford an excellent means of employing our young members in the interests of our work. Dividing the territory among these willing workers, there are bound to be as good results as have been experienced by others. Try it!

Carnegie's Gift to Japan.

Count Okuma, founder and patron of Waseda University, Tokyo, Japan, announces the munificent gift of $1,000,000 to that institution by Andrew Carnegie. What gives special importance to the donation is the fact that Count Okuma, as organizer of the Peace Society of Japan, and its active President from the earliest inception, has strongly labored for the promulgation of international peace, and it was in recognition of this laudable endeavor that Mr. Carnegie made his donation. Japan may well be proud of its distinguished peace advocate. May we not hope that his bold words for the right will induce other men of influence to take a like attitude? The world has all too few men who, in the face of the popular clamor for military propaganda, dare to espouse the cause of peace.

Changes in the Earth's Surface.

That in past ages there were great and startling changes in the earth's surface, is a fact that is well attested by the evidences still to be noted. That such changes,—however slowly,—are still taking place, is asserted by scientists. In proof of this fact we are pointed to the rock-ribbed coast of the New England States. There it has become plainly evident that the coast, in places, is slowly sinking. Several noted landmarks have entirely disappeared beneath the waves of the Atlantic. Similar and even more accurate observations have been made in Germany, France, Spain and Switzerland. What we are pleased to call "terra firma" is not as substantial and permanent as we might think. Happy is he who, looking away from the changing scenes of earth, can see, by faith, the more enduring home, eternal in the heavens.

The Origin of Card Playing.

That the evil of card playing is becoming more fully entrenched in all the varied strata of society, is a fact painfully evident to the most superficial observer. What is still worse, even the sanctity of the Sabbath is not always regarded by the infatuated devotees of the game. It is interesting, in this connection, to note that, according to well-established historical evidence, cards were originally invented to entertain Charles VI., of France, who was an idiot, and that he is said to have found much delight in the shuffling of the colored bits of cardboard. While we make due allowance for the king, who, in his barren state of mind, could be satisfied with the senseless diversion providence had for him, what shall we say of the thousands who claim to have the use of their God-given powers, and yet waste precious hours in the unprofitable pastime of card playing?

The Loss of the Young Men.

The "Western Watchman," the leading Roman Catholic church organ of the Southwest, recently admitted that the greatest problem, confronting their church, was that of their young men. It deplores the fact that their young men are often the worst in the land, and in proof of this it cites the police records of the cities with their overwhelmingly preponderant Irish Catholic names. While to them such a confession is as deplorable as it is humiliating, might it not be well to make a practical application of the circumstance to conditions elsewhere, to serve as a much-needed warning? It is true, perhaps, that we are not facing a situation as bad as that of our Catholic friends. The fact remains, however, that hundreds of our young men,—members of our best Brethren families,—are lost to the church. Some remedy for this most lamentable loss should be devised and energetically applied. It is a question of gravest concern.

A Notable Gain for Arbitration.

The powerful plea, recently made by Sir Edward Grey, at London, in support of the arbitration suggestion of President Taft, has found a sympathetic echo in the German Empire. It means much when the views of the British Foreign Secretary, on the subject of decreasing armaments, and a maintenance of amicable relations, are received in such evident good faith by its formidable competitor. Under date of March 17 a further commendable movement is reported as having been started by some of the church workers at London, by which it is planned to enlist the church people of the entire world field in an effort to promulgate international arbitration. This is a work well worth the most earnest endeavors of all.

Luxuries Versus Missions.

Competent authority assures us that there is twice as much money spent each year, in this country, for the one item of chewing gum as for foreign missions. Here are some figures, as to money spent for things that are useless, that should make us think: Chewing gum, $16,000,000; ice cream soda, $100,000,000; candy, $147,000,000. Contrast with this the pittance of $8,000,000, given for the conversion of the heathen, and the picture is not a flattering one for Christian America. This is a matter that may well be made a subject of personal and prayerful consideration. Perhaps all of us are giving to the work of the Lord to some extent, but what is the ratio, as compared with our other expenditures? The question is a solemn one,—one that will confront us with startling emphasis on the great day when all things are revealed.

"Help Everywhere, Help Everybody!"

It must be conceded that Mayor Seidel, of Milwaukee, has some level-headed ideas as to the possible usefulness of public servants. He thinks that the police force of the city, instead of being merely "avengers of evildoers," should, in a much more extended way, be helpful to the entire community. He would have them live up to the motto: "Help everywhere, help everybody." To this end he would have them intimately acquainted with the needs of the district to which they are assigned, and "make it their business to see that all is well." The mayor's concern for the well-being of the people, and for his desire to have his officers be equally watchful, suggests the thought that every member of the church of the Living God should have a still more exalted sense of responsibility for the good of those around him. Christ constantly "went about doing good." Can we, as his followers, afford to do less than to "help everywhere, help everybody"?

Alarming Increase of Crime in France.

French journals are deploring the alarming increase of criminality, both juvenile and adult, which is so painfully conspicuous in Paris and other great cities. It is said that since the Revolution the country has grown richer from year to year, but that, for some reason, there has also been a most lamentable increase in degeneracy. The facts seem to show that the ratio of criminality has increased from 20 in 1899 to 94 during the last few years. While various reasons are given for the moral decay now prevailing, it is undoubtedly true that the low plane of religious life,—and even atheism,—is most undermining the stability of the French nation, have given free rein to licentiousness and crime. For years the people of France have willfully and determinedly decided to be "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God," and the result of their choice is finding expression in a woeful state, so clearly described in Holy Writ as being the fate of "nations that forget God."

Words of Encouragement.

We notice that our esteemed contemporary, the "Northwestern Christian Advocate," comes out in a most commendable defense of peace principles, with special reference to the proposed fortifications of the Panama Canal. We quote a part of the most excellent article: "The diversion of immense funds for the establishment and maintenance of such fortifications is a minor but not a slight consideration. The transcendent issue is that of promoting the sentiment and conditions for world-wide amity and peace to which, under the reasons of state obtaining which have not yet been made public, the fortifying of the canal would be a serious setback." It is gratifying indeed, to note this and other evidences of an increasing sentiment in favor of peace. If there is to be a real change of public opinion in regard to the active promotion of peace and arbitration, it must be brought about by a radical change of the heart, "out of which," we are told, "are the issues of life."

To Solve the Tramp Problem.

Sociologists have vainly endeavored, hitherto, to find a method by which the 38,636 tramps in the United States may be made to serve some useful purpose to the commonwealth, instead of being mere drones in the busy beehive of society. It is estimated that each tramp costs the community about $4.40 a week, and besides being a burden is often a real annoyance to the people in rural districts, and to the criminals. Vagrants, confined in the various penal institutions of the State of New York alone, are kept at an annual outlay of $2,000,000. It is now proposed that New York follow the example of Germany in the establishment of farm colonies, in which, by the sweat of his brow and the strain of his muscles, each of the human drones will be made to pay for his board and lodging. Such a plan, extended to all other States, would undoubtedly bring about a speedy relief from the tramp nuisance. It is the Divinely-ordained edict that each man, in some way, should labor for what he receives. "If any would not work," says the apostle, "neither should he eat."

The Battle Against Vice.

Under the efficient labors of Anthony Comstock an active warfare against obscene literature has been carried on for some years. Up to the close of 1910 the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, acting upon authority of a special Congressional enactment, seized, through Mr. Comstock, 2,844,423 obscene pictures and photographs, 3,527,469 immoral circulars, and thousands upon thousands of objectionable newspapers, letters, etc. Evidence secured by Mr. Comstock brought out the deplorable fact that much of the moral degeneracy, so prevalent among the boys and girls of the city schools, is the result of the vile literature so eagerly perused. With tireless energy Mr. Comstock has waged his battle against the publishers of corrupting literature, but he has been compelled to fight every inch of his way toward progress in purity and moral regeneration. Like every other reprehensible business, by which vast sums of money may be acquired, its promoters seek every means of maintaining their ground. For the sake of "filthy lucre" they willingly destroy the souls of men.

Progress of the Red Men.

While not as numerous as in the days of yore, when they roamed unhindered over the broad prairies and through the dense forests of the country, the Indians who still remain are of late years making remarkable advancement in the various arts of civilization. The untutored savage of a hundred years ago has been transformed most wonderfully. In literary attainments he is showing an aptitude equal to the white race and in agricultural and industrial pursuits he has evinced no mean degree of skill. Recently the Crow Indians engaged contractors to erect and fit up an electric light plant. These people own their well-cultivated farms, have fine horses and wagons, and the most modern farm machinery. Their schools are the very best, and their boys and girls are not a whit behind the most accomplished children of the whites in adjoining settlements. We are wondering why our Church of the Brethren has never attempted systematic mission work among the Indians. All of them are familiar with our language and many of them could be reached at comparatively small expense. As a part of the great world field they are well worth our attention.

What He Thinks of the Sunday-school.

That the editor of the world-famous London "Times" should think it worth while to comment on the possible improvement of the Sunday-school, is an eloquent testimony to its worth. In frank criticism of the British Sunday-schools is, perhaps, equally pertinent to conditions in the United States. He pleads for a systematic organization of schools, and insists that only the best of methods,—time-tested and thorough,—be employed. This leads him to speak of the proper training of teachers. He contends that the same degree of skill that has made the teacher of the day-school a power for good, is equally effective in the Sunday-school. As a further means to Sunday-school success he urges that there be thorough inspection and examination of schools by competent District Sunday-school Secretaries. The editor also maintains that public recognition of a pupil's proficiency and a teacher's evident skill and efficiency would go far to impress the community with the exalted and far-reaching power of the Sunday-school. One thing is sure,—there is no greater or more powerful agency for the elevation of the race than a well-conducted, consecrated Sunday-school, fully alive in the work of the Lord.

ESSAYS

Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth

Everyday Work.

SELECTED BY MARTHA MARTIN.

Great deeds are trumpeted; loud bells are rung,
And men turn round to see
The high peaks echo to the pæans sung
O'er some great victory.
And yet great deeds are few. The mightiest men
Find opportunities but now and then.

Shall one sit idle through long days of peace,
Waiting for walls to scale?
Or lie in port until some "Golden Fleece"
Lures him to face the gale?
There's work enough; why idly, then, delay?
His work counts most who labors every day.

A torrent sweeps adown the mountain brow,
With foam and flash and roar.
Anon its strength is spent, where is it now?
Its one short day is o'er.
But the clear stream that through the meadow flows
All the long summer on its mission goes.

Better the steady flow; the torrent's dash
Soon leaves its rent track dry.
The light we love is not a lightning flash
From out a midnight sky,
But the sweet sunshine, whose unfailing ray,
From its calm throne of blue, lights every day.

The sweetest lives are those to duty wed,
Whose deeds, both great and small,
Are close-knit strands of one unbroken thread,
Where love ennobles all.
The world may sound no trumpets, ring no bells,
The Book of Life the shining record tells.

Changes That Are Taking Place.

BY P. R. KELTNER.

It is interesting, at least to all who have lived a half century of years, to stop and think what changes have come over us, as a church, and the ministry, in its relation to the church, and the character of its preaching. Some of these changes have doubtless been made with great profit to the church, and the results of other changes may not be apparent to us, entirely, until we are ushered into eternity. It would be a blessed thing, could we always retain the good, at any cost, and then be ready always to welcome and receive the changes that are sure to be productive of good. But changes do not come in a day. They are like habits that almost unconsciously grow into our very lives. We scarcely see them until they have been here long enough, to have become almost a part of us. We did not realize the change at the time, but the seed had been sown some time, and, like the roots of some great tree, after a while the soil is removed, and we are astonished.

So many of the changes that take place in us, come in a semi-conscious way. After they are here, full-grown, we wonder that we did not see them coming, and often would gladly be back again, but just how to get back, we know not. It is not best for us to shut ourselves entirely against innovations or changes, for then we would cease to grow. The church, like individuals, ought to be open to the acceptance of better methods. Neither should we be mere receptacles, into which any new fad may be poured at most any time. These conditions are sure to ruin any religious body.

As we meditate along this line, we think of the changes that have come to our church in the past forty or fifty years. Some of them have worked splendidly. They have brought new life and energy to us. We wonder how we did without them. They have not only increased our possibilities for work, but they have been a means of developing spirituality. No Christian or church can afford to be entirely immune to such changes. But there are other changes that have come too; and we can not be so sure of good effects resulting from them. Some of them, we are sure, have been injurious to us, and have robbed us, materially, of our spirituality, placing us where our worldly propensities can be more easily developed. As the wordly nature is developed and the worldly man is fed, it is sure to blunt, chill and stupify the spiritual. One can clearly see, as we meditate along this line, why the New Testament writers had so much to say upon this subject, and why the church of Christ should be kept free from worldly ways and worldly things. It is quite clear that the church is acting the part of wisdom, when she, as a body, decides upon the better methods to keep the church free from the ever rising tide of worldliness, that is intended only, by the Evil One, to grow and develop in us faculties that will rob us of spirituality and true piety.

There is a line of changes that have been marked among us. Some may have been for our good, but others have not been for the church's best interests. I refer to changes in our ministry,—the unique and peculiarly striking place our ministry held, in its relation to the church, and the character of its preaching as well. Our fathers held a dignified and influential relationship to the laity of the church. There were characteristics about them that made the office of the ministry a highly dignified one. They held the profound respect of the church and the world as well. The make-up of their lives and the character of their preaching doubtless brought them this prestige. They were Godly men. A Brethren minister was a synonym of purity and piety.

It is to be presumed that their willingness to make sacrifice and to be used in the cause of its best interests, together with their marked, distinctive plainness in life and dress,—these qualities, with their deep convictions of right and honesty,—secured them their high standing in the church and in the world. It is to be feared that we may have lost some of this prestige which we formerly had. At least there is great need for prayerful watching that we do not let it slip from us. Is there not danger, today, of too much affiliation with the popular forms of religion? By affiliation and association with these liberal ideas, is there not great danger of it stupefying our convictions, gradually bringing about the spirit of compromise, and thus drifting from our moorings?

It is very evident to the observing mind that our brethren gained much by this degree of exclusiveness, and in the strong conviction that the church of the Brethren has a unique and distinctive mission in the world's religions. Any affiliation, on the part of our ministry, with the present day spirit of unification of the different church organizations, is sure to dull our convictions of the church's mission, and bring about the spirit of compromise. We are sure to find ourselves failing to make prominent our peculiar doctrines, and more and more disposed to preach that which does not antagonize the various religious beliefs. The line of least resistance is the spirit of the age. May the good Father help us to steer clear of these dangerous pitfalls!

A few instances of changes that have been made are found in the following: The Brethren do not preach as much on the second coming of Christ. Seldom is the subject treated any more. May we not inquire why? Is the Lord's discourse on the "Wise and Foolish Virgins" applicable to us? He says, "While the bridegroom tarried they all slumbered and slept" (Matt. 25: 5). May there be danger that we are slumbering on this great subject?

The doctrine of the judgment is not made prominent as in former days. The spirit of the times is, not to disturb the people's conscience on a judgment day and the punishment of the sinner. Liberalism is wont to think that a judgment and future punishment are myths, and belong to an age of less enlightenment than ours. The number of professed ministers who have, in the present generation, expressed themselves as not being orthodox on these subjects, is alarming. Can it be that this unscriptural belief and teaching has unconsciously stilled our tongues and pens on this great doctrine? The writer of the Book of Hebrews says that "eternal judgment" is one of the principles of the doctrine of Christ (Heb. 6: 1, 2).

Another marked characteristic of preaching today is the great lack of doctrinal subjects treated, in comparison with former days. Paul says, "The gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation," and James adds, "Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth." The Bible teaches that a whole Gospel, faithfully preached, is the seed, and that, through the Spirit's aid, it becomes the great factor in conversion and salvation.

But we do not emphasize these saving principles, in pulpit and press, as we once did. Should we not, most seriously, inquire why? Can it be that our closer relation to popular Christianity, and the affiliation we are making, in some places, with ministerial bodies, in conferences and meetings, is unconsciously putting a quietus upon our lips and pens? It is evident that some cause is responsible for producing these great changes. Shall we not earnestly pray and seriously consider, that we do not become entangled in this popular, liberal and compromising spirit that is sweeping over the religious world?

"And He Answered Him Never a Word."

Matt. 27: 14.

BY NORA BERKEBILE.

What a lesson of patience our Savior is to us in his trial before Pilate. He was buffeted, spit upon and mocked, yet, through it all, he stood calm and composed, offering no resistance; but even this does not show his great patience and forbearance so much as did his silence when the false accusers stood up and told things that were untrue.

He listened in silence and even when asked to speak and defend himself, the text says, "He answered him never a word."

Is there anything more difficult to bear in patience than this? We may receive bodily injury from our enemies, and if we bear it patiently we are set up as martyrs; but if we are accused of things which are false, and we know that even those whom we love believe the charges and that we are unable to refute them, unless we speak evil of our accusers, it takes no small effort to do as Jesus did,—"answer not a word."

We might explain things fully and bring the sympathy over on our side, but in so doing we would make someone think less of our enemy. It might even be our brother or sister, who has misrepresented us, and to justify ourselves we would have to explain the part he or she had had in the affair, and thus we would injure the reputation of another.

Then, when it comes to the point that either myself or the other one must bear the reproach or censure of even those I love, would not Jesus say, "Bear it yourself and shield your false accuser, so long as no one else but yourself is injured by the accusation"?

Christ might have made clear all false accusations, and explained them satisfactorily to Pilate, but he chose rather to bear it all.

Peter says, "Having a good conscience; that whereas they speak evil of you as evil doers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ." And again, "For it is better, if the will of God be so, that ye suffer for well doing than for evil doing."

If falsely accused and we answer not a word, it is so much better, for then we do no evil and our conscience is clear before God; but if, in defending ourselves, we injure another, we must suffer for evil doing and we are on the same level with our accuser.

Peter further says, "Not rendering evil for evil or railing for railing, but contrariwise blessing; knowing that ye are thereunto called that ye should inherit a blessing."

O so often the tempter will come and say, "Why bear the reproach when you could make it all clear? Why let your friends think less of you because of things which have been said? You can tell a lot more against your accuser; you are foolish. Why weep and be cast down? Go make yourself right before your friends, even at the risk of the others' reputation." Again, with Christ, let us say, "Get thee behind me, Satan," and fall upon our knees and pray for strength never to tell, never to let any one but Jesus know. As soon as we do this, the calm, sweet face of Jesus in the judgment hall comes before us and we see the firm, kind lips answering never a word. We arise from our knees comforted, for he knows all, and we are happy that we can have the privilege of learning a little of what he bore.

The Shortcomings of the Sunday-School.

BY PAUL MOHLER.

In Three Parts.—Part Three.

In former articles, I mentioned some of the shortcomings of the Sunday-school and their causes. It would not have been proper for me to write those articles unless I stood ready to propose practical

REMEDIES.

1. I wonder if any one will think me to be trifling if I say that the first remedy is to awaken a desire for the good things I am asking of the Sunday-school? Indeed, that is what I wish to say, and I am not joking either, for I do think there is a very light demand in the church for anything really strong in Bible study. Most any kind of a Sunday-school lesson " will do " if it doesn't last too long. There is no use talking about our making the Sunday-school produce better results if the church is satisfied with what she has and is looking for nothing better.

In many congregations, I fear that better results from the farms are more in demand than better results from the Sunday-school. But I am also sure of this, that if the importance of these things were properly placed before the members of the church, there would be plenty of interest. Just let a good Bible teacher go into one of our local churches and teach the adult members the whole of one short book of the Bible, giving them the full force of the author's message, and there will be an interest aroused in that kind of study. Let him teach one great topic like the Holy Spirit, and there will be a call for more. Let him stir up the congregation on any line of Christian duty, and they will be open to instruction on other lines. In fact, I know of nothing that will create a stronger demand for better Sunday-school work than a good, live, spiritual Bible Institute.

2. A good system of graded lessons. Nothing short of this will suffice. It is simply impossible for the Sunday-school to supply the imperative demands of each pupil unless it has lessons suited to his age and stage of development. Any one that has studied the development of mind and character knows that at a certain age the child is developing one phase of mind more than any other. Later, other phases are developed. If the Sunday-school is to meet his needs, it must adapt its work to this development. A uniform system can never fit all stages of development, any more than a uniform suit of clothes. The graded system is absolutely the only solution of this problem. But it must be a well-arranged system, or it, too, will fail. It is not my purpose, in this article, to describe the system of graded lessons in preparation for our Sunday-schools, which is, by the way, in very successful operation here with us now, but I do want to say that it provides for both book study and doctrine study for the more advanced Bible classes, as well as suitable courses for primary and intermediate grades, and these lessons are much easier to teach and more practical than any other course I have ever seen. When I say easier to teach, I mean easier to secure practical results by teaching.

Until these lessons can be brought out, I should like to see mature classes take up the study of some of the neglected books, such as the Epistles, Psalms, Job, Proverbs, or other books that have not been touched in the International Lessons. Or else let them take up a topical study. Did you ever study the subject of angels and angel ministry from the Bible references? Did you ever study the Holy Spirit in the same way? If you will take the Bible references, one by one, on each of these or a dozen other interesting and important subjects, and dig out the meaning of each one, then put them all together, you will be doing something worth while and interesting, too. Give the young folks a chance to really study the Old Testament or New Testament history under a good teacher. They will like it.

Or if they are studying English poems in the high school, give them some good Psalms to work out in the same way. They will be surprised at what they get if they are good diggers, and maybe you will too. If you have a class of young philosophers trying to solve all the problems of the universe, take them into Job awhile. Or perhaps they, too, would enjoy doing some topical work. There are plenty of things a class can study beside the chosen lessons, and doing them would not interfere with any other class.

3. All this, you say, calls for trained teachers. Effective work with any system does. We must at least have the best teachers, trained or untrained, that we can get. But, really, the untrained teacher will get along well with a well-chosen series of lessons that " fits " her class, than with the uniform system that fits no class in particular. And if a teacher will choose the department in which she expects to work, she has the chance to specialize for work in that department, as she could not do under the present system. For under a system that brings a certain lesson into the Sunday-school only once in seven years at most, there is little chance to become proficient in teaching that particular lesson. When lessons are liable to be chosen from any part of the Bible, at any time, it is a big task to prepare for successful teaching. But when, as under the graded system, each department has the same lessons to give, year after year, to each succeeding class of pupils, a teacher has a chance to specialize, becoming expert in her own department, with far less effort than it takes to prepare for ordinary work under the present system.

Yes, we must have trained teachers, and we can have them too, when we earnestly try. The church that wants trained teachers can help their condition very materially with very little expense. It would not cost very much to send one of the most promising teachers to one of our Bible schools for a year or two; then let that one train the others in better methods of work. It should be done. At least have a Sunday-school Institute, with a competent teacher, each year.

Now let me repeat what I said at the outset, that I am a supporter of the Sunday-school and that I hope for great things from it. In fact, I hope to see the time when the average local church will be doing better Bible study than did our colleges not many years ago; when it will give its pupils so strong a spiritual development that very few, indeed, of them will drift away to the world and very many, indeed, will give themselves to God as ministers and missionaries and Bible teachers; when there will be such a hungering and thirsting for the real truth of God that the minister will be compelled to preach " the Word " to hold his congregation.

Spiritual Springtime.

BY NANCY D. UNDERHILL.

" Our friends, the blackbirds, have come—
Blest harbingers of spring.
Dear birds, you're welcome home;
We need the cheer you bring.
Dear, noisy, chatt'ring bird,
Whose voice is gladly heard,
In woods and fields thy praises ring."

How should we welcome spring, if we did not realize that winter had been with us? People have been known to die of starvation, because too proud to admit their needy condition. Even so every public institution, and likewise every individual, must make their needs known by open confession, ere they can hope to receive necessary supplies. God can not and will not bless the church which does not recognize its need of him. Have we been having winter-time in our church, brother, sister, friend? How long?

O, the long, cold, hard winter-time! How we long for the warmth and verdure,—the returning life and loveliness of gentle spring-time! Let us, then, get ready for our returning guest! Let the doors of the hearts of men and women be opened, and the window-blinds be pushed back! Let the warm sunshine of love enter therein, melting away the icy coldness of winter's death and decay! Let the cobwebs of doubt and suspicion be swept away! Let the dirt and filth of envy, jealousy and hatred be cleaned from every corner of the soul's house, and let the pure waters of repentance, as melted snow, wash away all past mistakes and other hindering obstacles that clog our system, inviting disease, decay and death,—yea, even the unkind thoughts of neighbor against neighbor, and man against brother man! Let the once slugglish church-member go to his neighbor's house, and say, " We need you! Come to church and help us!" Let the regular attendant upon Divine worship grasp the hand of the timid one who sometimes ventures within the door, and say, " We're glad to see you. Won't you come all the time?"

What success would our merchants have if they seldom saw a customer and scarcely ever spoke to those who came into their houses of business? Just the same kind of success that our churches have when we fail to welcome those who come to our Lord's place of business,—the church. The Word says, " He that despiseth,"—despiseth not man, but God, " who hath given unto us his holy Spirit " (1 Thess 4:8).

Again, " Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me " (Matt. 25:40). If we are longing for a revival of religion in our midst, we must cleanse our hearts and minds of all unkind thoughts, ere the dear Holy Spirit will deign to enter, to bless his church and his people with renewed life, power and happiness.

Going Up to Jerusalem.

BY W. R. MILLER.

Siege and Looting of Kerak.—No. 4.

Before the day of Dec 5 closed I am sure that every one of us fully realized, that we were under circumstances strenuous and dangerous in the extreme, the solution of which only our Heavenly Father could bring about. So we went to him, united as one soul and one heart, for Divine Guidance and Protection.

The colonel's quarters, adjacent to our house, were an objective point for the Arabs, and during the afternoon they continued to gradually close in on this house. The houses of Kerak have flat roofs, and many of them are nearly level with the streets, so one sometimes may not know, whether he is walking over the top of a house, or on the street. This made it very easy for the Arabs to approach the officer's house after darkness had settled over the city.

Our supper was eaten in silence, and with the light of but a single tallow candle, for it was thought best to have as little light as possible to avoid attracting the attention of the Arabs on the house-tops, as it was not long until we were aware that our every movement was under observation. Each of the rooms we had use of opened into a small court. And from this court there was a double door opening into the street,—the doors referred to before as having been barricaded with heavy stones. There was also a very large room, opening off this court, which had been used as a school room in the mission work. During the day all our horses and mules with the luggage or camp equipment were placed in this large room for safety. Beneath the floor of this room there were a number of cisterns, averaging fifteen feet in depth. Inasmuch as the rainy season, however, had not as yet set in, there were but a few inches of water in them. I am here calling attention to these cisterns, because of an incident occurring later, endangering all our lives, and giving every one of us no little concern and anxiety. Except for the report of an occasional gun shot, perfect quiet and stillness settled over the city, after the shades of evening enshrouded it. To the most of us it seemed oppressively quiet, for the entire day was rent with the mad yelling, screaming and din of the fighting, looting Arabs.

During the afternoon the Turkish officer showed no little anxiety, having sent four of his guard to the Castle for ammunition and reënforcements. Only one returned with cartridges, thus leaving him with a very small guard. He came to our door and asked for a horse; stating that if we would let him have an animal, he would ride to the Castle. We declined his request, but later he called again, asking for one of our ladies' suits; desiring to thus disguise himself and make his escape to the Castle,—presumably for his own safety. When he sent for help we also informed him that we wanted protection, for we had already, early in the day before, put ourselves under Turkish protection.

Tired from the day's anxiety, waiting and watching, we retired at an early hour, not knowing what the night would bring forth, or what our doom would be ere the dawning of another day. An Arab woman with her three little children had sought refuge in our compound; a Christian man also desired to sleep in one of the rooms with us. The greater number of the little party had slept some, when at ten o'clock Mr. Forder called, "Wake up and pray; the Arabs have come." Thanks be to God, we had not waited until this late hour to pray, for almost incessantly our petitions were ascending to the Throne of Mercy for help, and as every one of our party were praying men and women, it was no new experience for them to pray, and to pray earnestly. However, as it was the proper thing to do, we again engaged in prayer. Our guide was called for by the Arabs, by the son of a Sheikh. This Sheikh, Mr. Forder had visited some fifteen years before, after he had been in a battle with some other tribe, resulting in a split head from a sword. As there were no surgeons there, they came for the missionary, who had to make a long journey to the injured man. He did what he could for the wounded Sheikh and left him. Later he recovered and, peculiarly enough, during our walk about the streets on Sunday, we met this same man, who, uncovering his head, showed me a tremendous cicatrix, saying, "That is where Abu Jerius helped me fifteen years ago." Indeed, the Arabs had come, for almost immediately their mad yells reached our ears from the officer's house, so near at hand, intensified a hundredfold by the nearness, and by the success they had already had, as, at an early hour of the day, they were in control of the city, with the exception of the castle, where the six hundred Turkish soldiers were stationed.

Exactly the same methods of warfare exist among the Arabs today, that we read of in Gen. 14:11, "And they took all the goods of Sodom and Gomorrah, and all their victuals, and went their way." Looting is a prime factor in their wars and, perhaps, if it were not for the gain in this way, there would not be nearly as much strife among them as there is.

There seems to be a strange fatality hanging over the heads of the Arabs. According to the Bible, they are the posterity of a "wild man" (Gen. 16:12), "And he will be a wild man; his hand shall be against every man, and every man's hand against him; and he shall dwell in the presence of all his brethren." Here they are today, thirty-eight hundred years after these strange words were spoken by the angel of the Lord, and it is true that they have never been numbered. Whilst it said there are about eleven million Ishmaelites, or Arabs,—their more common name,—the number is entirely conjectural.

The smashing of windows, the crashing in of doors, mixed with the wild screams of the looters, continued to reach our ears. Our guide was already with the Arabs. Was our fate soon to be that of the officer and his few brave, guarding soldiers? Who could tell? There seemed to be but one thing to do, simply to stand still and see the salvation of the Lord. We knew full well that he and he only could save.

About this time Mr. Forder appeared in the door of our sleeping apartments with a wild-eyed Arab, the son of the Sheikh, above referred to, who called to us in Arabic, and this is the interpretation of the thing: "Be not afraid; there shall not a hair of your heads be harmed, for we are friends of Abu Jerius; lie down and go to sleep." And almost before we knew what had happened, he was off and to his looting. It took them but a very short time to strip the house of its belongings, and the noise of the looting grew less and less, until the same stillness, that prevailed in the early part of the evening, once again ruled.

Jerusalem, Syria, Jan. 15.

Electing a Minister.

BY QUINCY LECKRONE.

THE Scriptures being almost silent upon the subject of selecting and setting apart suitable men for the office of the ministry, it devolves upon the church to devise methods which, in its judgment, will secure the best results.

The methods, heretofore employed, have most admirably served the purpose of the church in the past, and many men were set apart for this holy calling who, having a true spirit of loyalty and sacrifice, have brought the ministry of the church to its present condition of efficiency, yet it must be admitted that everywhere there is a cry for more efficient ministers. When we consider that more than one out of every fifty of the membership of the church is now in the ministry, and yet there is a great demand for more efficient ministers, it leads us to one of several conclusions, viz., (1) the ministry is not properly distributed; (2) it is not as active as it should be; (3) it is not as capable as it ought to be.

Perhaps to each of these three conditions may be charged a part of the present inefficiency, for a lack of proper distribution tends toward inactivity, which, likewise, retards development. Whatever may be the cause, it is apparent that a remedy should be sought out and applied with as little delay as possible.

Under prevailing conditions of temporal support to the ministry, we can not expect a more proper distribution of the present ministerial forces.

The present ministerial force of the church can not be looked upon as much more than a home guard, caring for the local interests of the congregation, and, by reason of their environments, will doubtlessly continue much the same.

The hope of a better condition lies, then, in the new selections and additions that are made to the force. But here, again, if the same method of electing is employed, as has been in the past, the same results may be expected, and no practical gain will be realized.

We are living in an intellectual age, far superior in the common distribution of learning. In all walks of life both young and old have acquired a mental training and a social culture that demands from the pulpit a higher degree of efficiency. Would it not be wise, therefore, to take these facts into consideration when selecting men for the ministry? We need not give up the present plan of electing ministers. Let the local church, as heretofore, make the selection or rather the recommendation, basing their action upon the Christian character, piety, and past conduct, of the one selected. Then, if the one selected desires to take up the work, let him go before a board appointed by his State District to look into his qualifications and training for the work.

If he is not qualified, let the Board assist him in whatever way be needed, directing him in his preparation until such time as they can recommend him for installation.

If the one selected by the church is not qualified for the work, and shows no disposition to qualify himself, under the direction of the board, it is evident that to install him would add but little if any efficiency to the present status of the ministry, while, on the other hand, during his period of preparation, under the direction of the board, there would be ample opportunity to develop in him the true spirit of the ministry.

It is not enough that a man be willing or desires to occupy the office of the ministry. He must also be qualified. What government would put a man at the head of its armies simply because of his loyalty or devotion to the cause? What business firm would elect, as its leader, a man with no training for the work?

In addition to a true Christian character, devotion and loyalty to the cause, the minister of God, who is to lead the armies of the Lord, must be qualified in every essential that the age demands.

Feet-washing—Common or Religious.

BY JAS. A. SELL.

THERE are two kinds of feet-washing mentioned in the Old Testament,—a common and a religious. The common was practiced as a thing of comfort and health by each one washing his own feet. The custom is doubtless as old as the human race, and doubtless had its origin in Eden. Later on it seems to have been an expression of hospitality for a host to furnish water to the guests for this purpose.

When Abraham entertained the messengers in his tent, on the Plains of Mamre, when they brought to him the tidings of the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, he said: "Let a little water, I pray you, be fetched, and wash your feet, and rest yourselves under the tree."

When the men came to Lot, as he sat in the gate of the doomed city in the twilight hour, and delivered their angel message of warning to flee for safety, he said, "Turn in, I pray you, into your servant's house and tarry all night and wash your feet."

Joseph, after a long separation from his home, kindred and country met his brothers in Egypt. He had experienced the horrors of a dismal pit in the wilderness and those of a dungeon in a foreign land. At last he had been brought, however, to distinction and honor, and it was under these peculiar and interesting circumstances that he met his unfeeling brothers who, through hatred, had sold him as a slave. He received and entertained them kindly, and after having been brought into Joseph's house, "they washed their feet."

When Abraham sent his trusted servant on the important and interesting mission of securing a wife for his only son, the son of promise, Eliezer found the prospective bride, in the person of Rebekah, at the well. When he accompanied her to her home, her father kindly received and entertained him and his attendants. He "gave him water to wash his feet and the men's feet that were with him."

All the above washings may be classed as common. They can not be called religious because no command was given as binding authority nor was there a reason given, urging obedience. The thing done was a voluntary act. No law would have been violated in its neglect. It was an act of hospitality and meant only comfort to the guest,—nothing more. To neglect it would have been a breach of hospitality, but not a sin. It was just a common washing.

The Lord, in giving his law to Moses for the order and system of his service in the Tabernacle, introduced a feet-washing that is entirely different from the ones we have been considering. The direction was to erect a brazen laver near the altar, and fill it with water, "for Aaron and his sons shall wash their hands and their feet thereat. When they go into the tabernacle of the congregation they shall wash with water, that they die not, or when they come near to the altar, to minister, to burn offering made by fire unto the Lord; so they shall wash their hands and their feet, that they die not."

This was more than a common washing, because it was founded and enforced by a command, and the nonobservance was attended by a penalty,—the severe penalty of death. It was a ceremonial washing, connected with religious service, and was therefore a religious washing. It differed in every essential detail from the common washings. It was made binding by a commandment.

Our Savior, according to John 13, washed his disciples' feet and spake about it in a way to arouse our interest. "He riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments; and took a towel and girded himself. After that he poureth water into a basin, and began to wash his disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded. Then cometh he to Simon Peter, and Peter saith unto him, Lord, dost thou wash my feet? Jesus answered and said unto him, What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter. Peter saith unto him, Thou shalt never wash my feet. Jesus answered him, If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me. Simon Peter saith unto him, Lord, not my feet only, but also my hands and my head. Jesus saith unto him. He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit: and ye are clean, but not all. For he knew who should betray him; therefore said he, Ye are not all clean. So after he had washed their feet, and had taken his garments, and was set down again, he said unto them, Know ye what I have done to you? Ye call me Master and Lord; and ye say well, for so I am. If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to wash one another's feet. For I have given you an example that ye should do as I have done to you. Verily, verily, I say unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord, neither he that is sent greater than he that sent him. If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."

This washing is either a common or a religious one. It differs from the common washings cited from the Old Testament. There each one washed his own feet; here the Savior washed the feet of his disciples. This is difference enough to excite our interest and make us inquire. His remarks invite our attention. Peter, when approached with the basin and towel, objected, but was promptly told that he could have no part with his Master if he refused. This is a serious test and causes us to think that the washing was more than a common one.

Peter was further told that "what I do thou knowest not now but thou shalt know hereafter." It is reasonable to presume that if it was only a common washing, Peter would have understood it. It is equally fair to think that he would not fully comprehend a religious ordinance that was so abruptly introduced. It was new and odd, and its significance was not clear to him. He was told, however, that he would "know hereafter."

Experience has also something to do with religion. Practical religion is an experimental knowledge of the truth. Christ's reply: "Not my feet only but also my hands and my head," brought forth the object of this washing, or, rather, the effect it was intended to have upon the believers. The reply was, "He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean." The object was cleansing, but not of the feet. It was that of the heart. "Ye are clean, but not all, for he knew who should betray him; therefore said he, Ye are not all clean." The plain meaning of this is that it was the heart of Judas that was not clean.

Now, as a common washing could not affect the heart, the conclusion is inevitable that this washing was not a common one. To assume that this was only a common washing forces us to the conclusion that water will not wash a bad man's feet clean, for the Savior plainly alluded to Judas when he said, "Ye are not all clean." It is not hard to understand why a religious rite will not benefit a bad man, but it is contrary to all that is reasonable or sensible, to say that a common washing will not make his feet clean. This washing must therefore be a religious one.

After the Savior washed and wiped his disciples' feet, he proceeded to explain the significance of what he did. Said he, "I am your Lord and Master." I have given you an example that you ought to follow. You should do to one another as I have done to you. It would seem from this that he was incorporating feet-washing into his system of ordinances as a religious ceremony. Whether he commanded its observance or not, depends upon the meaning contained in the words "ought" and "should." "Ye also ought to wash one another's feet." "I have given you an example that ye should do as I have done to you." Good linguists tell us that "ought" is derived from the verb "to owe." This gives us the idea of debt and the force of moral obligation. "Ought denotes an obligation of duty, and should an obligation of propriety." "We should be neat in our persons; we should avoid giving offense." "We ought to speak the truth; we ought to obey the laws."

The word "ought" is frequently used in the Scriptures and its use in reference to other things may help to determine if it is sufficiently strong to be considered a command. "Men ought always to pray." "Men ought to love their wives." "We ought to lay down our lives for the brethren." Now what is true in one case is true in all. If we are commanded, or are in duty bound to pray, or love our wives, or lay down our life for our brethren, we are bound to wash one another's feet. The same word enjoins the obligation. All stand or fall together. If the one is a matter of no importance, so are the others.

The word "should" can be tested in the same way. One among the strongest texts, bearing upon the support of the ministry is, "God has ordained that they who preach the Gospel should live of the Gospel."

It is generally, if not universally, admitted that this text makes it obligatory upon the church to support the ministry. Whatever it teaches, in reference to the ministry, it teaches the same thing in reference to feet-washing. If one is a command, so is the other. If the one is a duty, the other is none the less so.

The Savior's washing can not be classed with the common. Surely, he would not use such strong language in connection with his example, and bar any one from having part with him, and offer a blessing of happiness to the obedient, if it was only a matter of hospitality.

Why Indeed?

BY LINDA B. HUBER.

READING the article in the MESSENGER, a few weeks ago, entitled, "Why?" by Sister Sanger, brought to my mind an incident that occurred last summer in a depot of one of our large eastern cities.

A small party of our people were waiting for a train, when a very fashionably dressed lady came to one of us and asked us to keep her trunk until she went to the Bureau of Information. When she returned she asked what religious organization we represented. She said she admired the simplicity of dress and the becoming bonnet. She was very much interested in our faith, and expressed a desire to learn more of our doctrines.

Another incident occurred in a similar way. While waiting for a train in the depot at Harrisburg, a lady came in, seemingly very nervous. Seeing one of our sisters, she went to her, asking her to take care of her satchel until her return. She returned in a short time, saying she could not make connections that night and was an entire stranger in the city. The sister had a short time at her disposal, so she took the lady to the Y. W. C. A., and helped her with her luggage. The lady was very grateful and seemed to trust our sister.

Sisters, why is it that just such incidents occur time after time? Do worldly people expect anything of us, and do they trust us? I thank God from the bottom of my heart that we can be "living epistles, known and read of all men."

I have heard members of the Brethren church say they did not like to go to such and such a place because of our manner of dress. God forbid that we should ever be ashamed of Jesus. It should be an honor to us to be known as servants of our Heavenly King. Well-thinking people respect our people, and the world expects us to live up to what we profess. May God help us boldly to stand for him at all times and places.

REPORT OF THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

Query 1.

We, the Elgin congregation, ask the District Meeting of Northern Illinois and Wisconsin to petition Annual Meeting of 1908 to appoint a committee of three, to draft and offer for adoption a plan by which a Field Secretary may be supported who can give his entire time to the supervision of the Sunday-school work of the Brotherhood.

Answer by Annual Meeting of 1908.—Request granted and funds are to be provided by Annual Meeting, so the Committee can meet.

Committee: I. B. Trout, D. N. Eller, Lafayette Steele.

Decision of 1910 Conference.

Answer: In view of the nature and importance of our Sunday-school work be it resolved that the question be recommitted to a committee of five with instructions to present to the next Annual Meeting a plan for the enlargement and development of the Sunday-school work of the church.

Committee: I. B. Trout, Chas. D. Bonsack, D. H. Zigler, H. K. Ober, Lafayette Steele.

Query 2.

Because of the great importance of our Sunday-school work, and in order to enable our Sunday-school workers better to serve the churches, we, the member of the Linville Creek church, petition Annual Meeting through District Meeting, to appoint a committee of three consecrated brethren, in full sympathy with the distinctive doctrines and practices of our beloved Fraternity and in accord with our Sunday-school work, whose duty shall be,

(1) To formulate and publish a Teacher-training Course (including doctrine), especially adapted to the need of our people and corresponding in grade with the standard (first and second) of the church.

(2) To devise a plan by which the said Training Course may be procured by our Sunday-school workers at a nominal cost.

(3) To arrange a system of uniform grading and suitable credits for those who pursue the given course.

Answer: Referred to the Committee selected to develop the Sunday-school work.

Report of Committee.

To the Annual Conference of 1911, Greeting:—

We, your committee, recommend that the Annual Conference appoint a board of five brethren, to be known as the Sunday-school Board of the Church of the Brethren, who shall be appointed and carry on their work according to the following plan:—

ARTICLE I.—Membership.

Only brethren who are experienced and successful Sunday-school workers and who are faithful to the Gospel, as defined by the Annual Conference, shall be eligible for appointment on this Board.

ARTICLE II.—Term of Office.

The term of office shall be five years, except those first appointed, one of whom shall serve five years, one four years, one three years, one two years, and one, one year.

ARTICLE III.—Organization.

The Board shall elect one of their number Chairman, one Vice-chairman, and one Treasurer. The Sunday-school Editor, by virtue of his office, shall be Secretary of the Board.

ARTICLE IV.—Meetings.

The Board shall meet at least once each year for the transaction of such business as may be necessary for the development and enlargement of the Sunday-school work of the church.

ARTICLE V.—Duties.

Section 1.—They shall observe the needs of the church and the world, and provide plans for the faithful study of God's Word and the propagation of its doctrines and truth through the Sunday-school work of the church.

Section 2.—They shall coöperate with the Sunday-school Editor of the Church of the Brethren in improving our Sunday-school literature, and may recommend to the Annual Conference, through the Standing Committee, such things as they believe will enlarge and develop the Sunday-school work in the church.

Section 3.—They shall arrange for publication, through the Brethren Publishing House, a Teacher-training Course, including doctrine especially adapted to the needs of our church, and corresponding in grade with the International First and Second Standard Courses; and from time to time issue such other pamphlets and books as may be necessary for the development of the Sunday-school work of the church.

Section 4.—They shall encourage and help the District Sunday-school Secretaries to active service in their respective Districts, and, if necessary, send special workers when and where needed.

Section 5.—They shall have charge of all Sunday-school work and interests at the Annual Conference, as heretofore conducted, and provide for such other meetings and measures as may be necessary to promote the interests of the Sunday-school work.

Section 6.—They shall secure, through the District Secretaries, and otherwise, complete statistics of our Sunday-schools, and preserve them in their office.

Section 7.—They shall coöperate with the schools and colleges of the church in training our young people for active service in the Sunday-school.

Section 8.—They shall secure funds for the furtherance of their work through Sunday-school offerings and such other sources as are in harmony with the usages of the church.

Section 9.—They shall make an Annual Report to the Conference, of the Sunday-school statistics of the church, of moneys received and expended, and such progress of the work as may be of general interest.

The passage of this report by the Annual Conference will discontinue the Sunday-school Advisory Committee, transfer their work into the hands of the above-named Board, as herein provided, and repeal any former decision which may conflict with this report.

"HOW MANY APOSTLES?"

The choosing of Matthias as one of the twelve, to succeed Judas, was legal, for the Holy Spirit said; "Let another take his office" (Psa. 109: 8). The church had met in public worship and it was in unity (Acts 1: 14). The apostles instructed the church in regard to the qualifications one must have to fill the office (Acts 1: 21, 22). The church (not the eleven) selected two having the qualifications named (verse 23).

They prayed earnestly for the Lord to show which of the two he had chosen (verse 24). The Lord had promised he would grant their request (John 14: 14). "They gave forth their lots" (Acts 1: 26). "The lot is cast into the lap, and the whole disposing thereof is of the Lord" (Prov. 16: 33). So the Lord chose Matthias, for he was numbered with the eleven (Acts 1: 26; 2: 14). He was given another tongue (Acts 2: 3, 4). He was one of the twelve (Acts 6: 2). Paul was not converted at this time. "Tarry ye in Jerusalem" did not mean, Wait until the day of Pentecost for the Holy Spirit to order the vacancy filled. Centuries before he had given the order and it was recorded in the Scriptures. The work of the Holy Spirit on the Day of Pentecost was not to organize, but to enable an organization to teach its doctrines in all the different tongues (Acts 2: 8-11).

Acknowledging the choosing of Matthias to be legal, argues against the perpetuating of "the twelve," for since that generation passed away, no one has the qualifications required of Matthias; namely: He was baptized of John, left him, and accompanied or followed Jesus with the other apostles until his ascension, and witness of his resurrection (Acts 1: 21, 22). Spiritual gifts, apostles, prophets, etc., were only given for a limited time, till the church was prepared to carry on the work of the ministry, and had grown from its infancy to a "full-grown man"—body (Eph. 4: 8-13). Judas fell by transgression (died). He did not fill his office as a witness, etc., hence the Holy Spirit ordered a successor appointed.

Jesus told of Peter's death, which did not take place until after he had borne a glorious testimony—doing the work for which he was ordained, so neither Jesus nor the Holy Spirit ordered his successor appointed (John 21: 18, 19). A. Chambers.

Christian Workers' Topic

Christ Our Friend.

John 15: 9-16.

For Sunday Evening, April 2, 1911.

I. Friendship (Prov. 17: 17; 18: 24; 27: 10, 17; John 15: 13).—(1) Which one of the above texts appeals most strongly to you? Repeat it and tell why it appeals to you. (2) Give a definition of "companionship" and "friendship." (3) Illustrate by some instances.

II. Christ's Friendship (John 11: 5, 36; 13: 23; 15: 15). (1) Is Christ's friendship for you a reality or a mere word? (2) May we use it in many ways? Name some ways. (3) How did Christ treat his friends? His enemies? Give examples.

III. God's Friendship (Ex. 33: 11; Num. 12: 8; Deut. 34: 10; James 2: 23).—(1) Which one of the above texts impresses you most forcibly? Why? (2) What is meant by "face to face" (Deut. 34: 10)? (3) Who was it that called Abraham "the Friend of God" (James 2: 23)?

IV. Friendship Implies: (1) Trust (John 14: 1, 2). (2) Fellowship (Amos 3: 3; Gen. 5: 22).

V. Some Examples of Friendship (1 Sam. 18: 1; 20: 41; 2 Sam. 1: 26; 2 Cor. 2: 13; Philpp. 2: 25). Speak of the friendship of David and Jonathan. A blind man was asked what he thought the sun was like. "Like friendship," he replied. The sun is the only giver to which everybody's friendship is also like. The sun's friendship is like a sunless world—dead. True friendship imparts good, like the sun.

HOME AND FAMILY

Have We Forgotten?

SELECTED BY KATIE FLORY.

The King went forth a kingdom to obtain
With promise to his own to come again;
The long, long years have passed, the years of pain,
And yet he cometh not—
Have we forgot?

He bade us keep our hearts forever pure,
And, following him, to suffer and endure,
That we to him might weary souls allure
And he might tarry not—
Have we forgot?

He asked us for himself to wait and long,
To turn our faces from the worldly throng
Upward to him, to whom our lives belong.
And yet he hasteneth not—
Have we forgot?

And thus the days pass by; we joy and sing,
We take his gifts—yet little to him bring,
And speak no word of bringing back the King;
And so he cometh not—
We have forgot!

Peculiar People.

BY GEO. F. CHEMBERLEN.

SPEAKING of peculiar people, we have them at Covina. Let me tell you about one of the most singular of the "singularest."

Never mind the name. I only promised to talk about the person,—not give all the secrets. If you ever come here, though, you'll be sure to meet her. A stranger is just as interesting to her as a fortune teller is to a well-preserved spinster.

Years ago she gave herself to the man of her heart's choice, and they lived quite happily together. The later years of their struggles were rewarded with no mean measure of material marrow, so they had plenty. And they were young yet, too,—just at the glorious zenith of life. But it was a lonely and bad life to live,—only for self.

The chief charm of the home was wanting, for the beautiful basket the angels bear,—so much like the sweet, dainty May Day gifts, left on our steps by our friends,—was never brought to their Christian home. The years went by empty.

But to them living wasn't life without responsibility. They had tried all the routine of church and Sunday-school work, but, somehow, it "didn't just touch the right spot." So they hied themselves away to the "Children's Home Society," and surprised their friends by presenting a fine, wee boy. Then, very soon, two promising girls, in the morning of life, were added to the family. All unknown to any one a full-grown two year old boy came into the same home at a single bound.

My, fathers, don't you think that would be interesting? Just like falling stars! Scarcely know when, nor from whence! But all this coming did not bring full happiness, for the lady told me how bad she felt because she could not get a nice fourteen-year-old promise of manhood, who went to live elsewhere. "Why, just think," said she, "that was four years ago and he would now be in college." Such a grand picture of usefulness in the world she had in mind for that young life.

Well, a few weeks past a good grandmother,—a Lutheran lady,—was called away, leaving two little girls alone in this big ward of the Master. Where could they go? Why, they just glided into the place made for them by the side of the comely and growing ones, making the nicely-balanced home of six, and all for the Kingdom's future.

Well now, isn't that singular? That's what I call being "peculiar" people. Yes, if humanity had been coming along like that for the last thousand years, we would all look different now.

Why, just think, brethren, with two of these famous Covina orange groves and no children at all, you could have most anything you wanted,—seaside, or go to the mountains in summer, joy ride in a big red automobile the year round, attend all the Annual Conferences, visit everybody and be on the wing so much they couldn't visit you and simply have no end to a good time. But this "peculiar" people elected otherwise.

I will just add that I may not be exactly "orthodox," but from what little acquaintance I have with the Master of men I think he would walk around a long line of full-dressed doctors of divinity (or doctor of divinities) and church prominents, just to get to shake the hand of a lady disciple like the one referred to.

Baby Gone.

BY AUGUST BECK.

OUR in Englewood live two of my friends, a man and his wife. When newly married a happier, healthier couple was hard to find. Some years after the wedding I knocked at their door. I was greeted by that same woman, and yet, not the same. I hardly knew her. Furrows of sorrow had lined her brow, the face looked wan, even the neck resembled that of an old person, and the eyes spoke of past anguish of the soul.

After being seated, she abruptly said, "I suppose you have heard it?" "Heard what?" I asked. "That our little son died." Then she told me of his sickness and how he left them when but fourteen months old. She took me into the front room where his life-size picture hung. "Now, I can look at it, but it was a long time before I could," she said with trembling lips. I understood her. It was through the death of this little one that her heart had sought its Redeemer. God's hand had reached her, his voice had spoken in the way he knew best, and now, at last, she could say, "The Lord giveth. The Lord taketh. Blessed be the name of the Lord."

In the evening, when her husband saw me to the cars, he pointed to the sidewalk, saying: "Here the little one has walked many a time, and every time he came to a place where the boards were missing, he would get down on his knees and carefully crawl across; then he would straighten up again, and toddle along. On the day of the funeral, when all was over," continued he, "I went into my wife's room. She had gathered all the baby clothes in a heap on the bed, and there she lay over them; it was all she had left. But her soul followed the little one to its new and brighter home, so a communication of spirits commenced, which led her to him, who had the loved one in his keeping, and not until she had given herself to him was she able to look at that picture."

Friends, do you know what that woman will do? Every year until her dying day, she will lock herself in that room, and take out those baby clothes bit by bit. With shaking hands will she smooth the strings of the faded bonnet. Tenderly will she brush the dust off the tiny shoes, and with tear-dimmed eyes will she remember how glad baby was for his new dress, but brought it all a great joy will stir within her, for she knows "she shall see baby again."

SISTERS' AID SOCIETIES

MURDOCK, KANS.—Our Sisters' Aid Society met Jan. 4 and reorganized, with Sister B. A. Dolp as president; Sister Sarah Moorhouse, vice-president; the writer, secretary-treasurer. We met fifteen times, with an average attendance of six. Our work consisted of quilting, making comforts and clothing. We had a balance on hand, Jan. 1, 1910, of $1.59; collected from fees and work done, $8.35; paid for material for mission work, $7.72; balance on hand, Jan. 1, 1911, $2.13. We sent off clothing to the value of $16.69; total amount for the year, $25.04. We donated work to several needy families. —Anna Fitzgerald, Murdock, Kans., March 7.

GRATIS, OHIO.—Since Nov. 2, 1909, until Jan. 1, 1911, our Sisters' Aid Society has held ten meetings, with an average attendance of seven members. We held one all-day meeting. We try to meet once a month, and sometimes oftener. Our members live quite scattered, and in bad weather we can not meet regularly. During this time we made fifty-four articles, consisting of dresses, aprons, bonnets, prayer coverings, sheets, pillow slips, towels and straw ticks. We also made one comfort, pieced one quilt and did some quilting. Our donations to the Society consisted of clothing, comfort linings and $1.87 in money. Some of our work was donated to the poor at home. Some clothing was sent to the poor children in East Dayton, Ohio. At the above-named date we had $6.70 in the treasury; paid for sewing material, $4.52; received by donations and for work done, $8.52; leaving a balance at the present time of $10.10. Sister Clara Brubaker is our president; Sister Melva Miller, vice-president; the writer, secretary-treasurer.—Sue Kinsey, R. D. 4, West Alexandria, Ohio, March 9.

SHANES, PA.—Jan. 5 our Sisters' Sewing Circle was reorganized, at the home of Sister Susan Wallech. Sister Frances Lotter was elected as our president; Sister Florence Johnson, vice-president; Sister Mary Johnson, secretary; Sister Grace Laughlin, corresponding secretary; Sister Clara Steerman, treasurer; Sisters Florence Johnson and Grace Laughlin, purchasing committee. During the year we held eleven meetings, with seventeen members enrolled and an average attendance of seven. During the year the following articles were made: Eight sunbonnets, eleven coverings and five aprons. We donated six of the coverings, gave a pair of trousers to a brother, and gave to a sister $1. We painted the yard fence of the churchhouse, and paid $1 for the whitewashing of a sister's fence. We sent a box of clothing to a little crippled boy in Martinsburg, Pa.; made seventeen articles of clothing for a sister, and donated a dress and some other things to a poor sister and her little boy. We have an enrollment of twelve honorary members, who pay fifty cents a year. We support an orphan, which costs $20 a year. Our collection for the year was $26.05; articles sold amounted to $3.44; making a total of $31.49. Expenses for the year, $26.54, leaving a balance of $4.95 in the treasury. We have some second-hand clothing on hand, and are also piecing a comfort.—Mary F. Johnson, Secretary, R. D. 4, Greencastle, Pa.

PRAYER MEETING

Christ's Great Commission.

Mark 16: 15-17.

For Week Beginning April 2, 1911.

1. We Are God's Messengers to a Lost World.—With the insistent duties of the office, the shop, the farm, the mill, upon us, there is danger that we grow indifferent, and in our lives and service deny the Lord. Yet we are disciples still,—very "still" at times,—and it is but as we are usable material for the Master, if we put ourselves into his hands. We need the anointing that comes by personal contact with Jesus. The touch of the Redeemer's hand and the look of love in the face of Jesus Christ are all-sufficient to nerve the weakest disciple to greatest achievements (Philpp. 4: 13).

2. A Great Responsibility.—Any man whom Jesus anoints with power is able to tell the old story of Jesus and his love to those whom he meets from day to day. If this world is ever to be brought to Christ, the combined effort of ministry and laity is needed. If, somehow, the great, unused mass of church membership could be mustered into service, and be impressed with the great responsibility devolving upon them, there would ensue a mighty awakening, the like of which has not been realized since Pentecostal days (Acts 2: 37-41).

3. The Signs to Follow.—Christ's promise includes the casting out of demons and speaking with new tongues. It is being verified today that demons are cast out of men, —the evil spirit within, the vileness that mars men's lives. Then, too, they speak with new tongues because their lips no longer profane the name of Jesus, but speak forth "the words of truth and soberness." They are new men in Christ Jesus. The gospel worker today needs a "new tongue,"—a knowledge of the various languages of the aliens that crowd our shores,—that he may speak to "every man in his own language." We need both anointed lips and the gift of tongues for our world-wide evangelism (Isa. 6: 6-8).

☞All business and communications intended for the paper should be addressed to the BRETHREN PUBLISHING HOUSE, ELGIN, ILL. and not to any individual connected with it.

THE GENERAL MISSION BOARD meets in Elgin April 6.

BRO. ABRAM H. ROYER, of Pennsylvania, changes his address from Bareville to Ephrata.

BRO. D. S. FILBRUN, of Dayton, Ohio, changes his address from 2112 West Second Street, to R. D. No. 14.

OUR correspondent reports six recent applications for membership in the First Brethren church, Philadelphia.

BRO. W. R. MILLER, and those that are with him, are expected to reach New York the middle of this week.

OUR Sunday-school workers will be interested in the report of the Sunday-school Committee, found on page 181, this issue.

EIGHTEEN have been baptized at Covington, Ohio, since the dedication of the new church, and seven more await baptism.

THE Brethren in the Second District of Virginia are to convene in District Meeting in the Lebanon church April 27 and 28.

As the fruits of the splendid revival, held at Lordsburg, Cal., by Bro. William Lampin, twenty-five were added to the church.

THE new church at Wichita, Kans., is nearing completion and will be dedicated April 9, Bro. J. J. Yoder preaching the dedicatory sermon.

WE take pleasure in calling attention to a special offer regarding the use of the Sunday-school supplies that we are making. See page 191.

FOR the want of room, elsewhere in this issue, we are placing the Financial Report which, by the way, is a long one, on the Round Table page.

THE District Meeting of Eastern Pennsylvania; to be held in the White Oak congregation, is announced for May 3 and 4. The elders are to meet May 3, at 9 A. M.

THOSE who write Sister Grace E. Gnagey, of the Minneapolis Mission, Minn., should address her at 1210 Twenty-fifth Avenue N., instead of 1210 Twenty-fifth Avenue E.

SINCE the first Sunday in March a revival, conducted by the home ministers, has been in progress in the Payette Valley church, Idaho, and eight persons have applied for membership.

BRO. HENRY ETTER, of Fairview, Mo., died March 8, and was laid to rest at Nevada. He served the church in the ministry a number of years, and is said to have been an exemplary Christian man.

BRETHREN E. F. and J. S. Sherfy, and their wives, called at the MESSENGER sanctum on Monday. They have been spending the winter at Bethany Bible School, but will soon return to their respective fields of labor in Kansas.

DURING a ten days' meeting at Fruita, Colo., conducted by Bro. A. C. Root, of Denver, three were baptized and two restored to fellowship. Bro. Root was ably assisted by his wife. So writes Bro. S. Z. Sharp.

AT the close of a series of meetings in the Rouserville church, three miles east of Waynesboro, Pa., March 5, ten put on Christ in the rite of baptism. Later five more were added to the number, and two others await the initiatory rite.

THE church at Chico, Cal., has been completed and will be dedicated April 2. Bro. W. F. England, of Lordsburg, Cal., is expected to deliver the address for the occasion and then hold a series of meetings that may continue two or more weeks.

BRO. JACOB HOLDERMAN, of Reedley, Cal., a devout minister of the Gospel, passed to his reward March 8, at the age of seventy-four years. He served in the ministry about twenty years, and worked principally in Oklahoma, Kansas, Alabama, Oregon and California.

BRO. PHILIP LANDIS, of Mountain View, Cal., writes us that, should he and his wife live until April 16, they will be able to celebrate their fiftieth marriage anniversary. Thirty-seven years of this time have been spent in the church, and they are still enjoying their spiritual life, as well as their marriage relations.

ELBERT HOLLAND, of Kimberlin Heights, Tenn., has published a four-page tract, entitled "Self-condemned in Two Counts," that is worth reading. He takes secret societies to task in an unusual manner, and he makes a strong point against the order by showing that it is held up as a substitute for Christianity, while no valid substitute of the kind can possibly exist.

BRO. J. M. CROUSE, of Brandon, Colo., who is running a hotel and keeps the MESSENGER, along with other papers, on the table in his office, says that we ought to hear the compliments passed on our church paper by his boarders. One man read the paper all the spare time he had, and when he was ready to leave, to go out to his claim, asked for a copy to take with him. We are always quite willing to have the MESSENGER take its chances alongside of other papers.

ONE time, when holding a revival, Sam Jones said to his congregation: "When you send up your committees to conference to interview the Bishop about your next pastor, what do you ask for? 'Bishop, we want a preacher, popular with the young people;' or, 'We want a preacher popular with other denominations;' or, 'Send us a preacher who is popular with sinners?' I never yet heard of a committee that said: 'Bishop, send us a man who is popular with God Almighty.'"

NOT many men are permitted to live to a good old age and then to have the distinction of dying in the room in which they were born. But this is what may be said of Bro. Daniel M. Baker, one of the elders of the Antietam congregation, Pa., who passed from earthly scenes March 4. He was widely and favorably known as a devoted Christian minister, and watched over the Lord's flock as one who had been called to the work by the Holy Ghost. For some years he had the oversight of the Antietam congregation, and was greatly loved and highly respected by his people.

ONE of our brethren, who is deeply interested in the church and her work says that he should like to see in the MESSENGER some good articles on Sunday baseball. He is confident that the Sunday baseball game is doing more to keep the boys and young men away from church and Sunday-school than any other one thing. In this he is probably right. He is also right in thinking that something might be said in the MESSENGER along this line that would prove helpful; but there is another way of combating the evil, and that is to treat the subject in our pulpits. With a view of developing right sentiment, popular evils should be considered in our columns, but we must not expect the MESSENGER to solve all of our hard problems. The pulpit has something to do. This is true of the church, as well as the Sunday-school.

THIS year the Standing Committee meets June 1, while some of the District Meetings are announced for dates as late as May 3 and 4. Since the Conference Booklet, containing all the business for the Annual Meeting, should be printed and mailed early enough to reach the members of the Committee one week before they leave home for the Conference, it will be seen that some very quick work will be required upon the part of the clerks of these late meetings, as well as upon our part. They should write us not later than the day following the close of their meeting, sending us the names of the members of the Standing Committee and the business they may have for the Conference.

THE editor of the Christian Union, Des Moines, Iowa, endeavors to show that the Disciple church is undenominational, for the reason that it has an undenominational name, an undenominational creed,—Jesus the Christ,—and an undenominational form of baptism —immersion. But it so happens that this form of baptism is backward single immersion, which is far from being general, or undenominational. Among the millions that have been immersed, the world over, less than ten per cent of the number have been baptized by single immersion. The other ninety per cent have been baptized by trine immersion; so it is the triple, and not the single immersion, that is the undenominational form of baptism.

NEXT Sunday is the day set apart by the Episcopal church to celebrate the tercentenary of King James' translation of the Bible. This great work was completed in the latter part of 1610, and published March 26, 1611, just three hundred years ago. Fifty-four scholars were employed in the translation, the work having begun in 1604. Seven of the translators passed away before the work was completed. When the version was published, there was a great demand for it, and the demand kept up for nearly three hundred years. Until quite recently it was the only Bible used by the English-speaking races, and the amount of volumes that have been sold, has been simply enormous. While King James' Authorized Version has a strong hold on the people, both in England and in the United States, it is likely to be superseded by the Revised Versions. In this country, however, the American Revised is taking the lead.

THERE is in New York, on Fifth Avenue, a rich church that admires fine thinking and polished English. A high-salaried minister from England was secured, but he finds that his beautiful English and soft manners amount to nothing in a church where the pews are filled by the millionaires; so he leaves, and another noted preacher from beyond the seas is to take his place to see what he can do. One of the Chicago papers suggests that these Fifth Avenue people are not to be moved by polished sermons. They need something about as plain as Beecher one time gave his congregation, when he brought a slave into the pulpit, and had them to raise money enough to purchase her freedom and give her a home. They need sermons about as clear-cut as the one Paul preached on Mars' Hill, or the Sermon on the Mount. So long, however, as rich people are willing to pay for their soothing sermons, we presume they will get about what they want.

A GREAT evangelist recently said, "If men and women are living up to their ideals of honesty and right, I would admire them, and if I knew that their ideals were wrong, I would not endeavor to lead them into the right." This is strange doctrine to be preached by a man who claims to be called of God. According to this theory we would not expect him to attempt to lead an honest Jew to accept Christ as his Savior. He would not ask a Mohammedan to lay aside the Koran and accept the New Testament as his rule of faith and practice. He would not even send missionaries to heathen lands to turn the people away from the idols that they honestly worship. But this is just the kind of seed that is being sown by some men whose names are heralded abroad in the land. If the theory be a correct one, we might as well keep all the foreign missionaries at home, save our money, and let the unenlightened people of other lands worship as they feel disposed.

It is said that in the United States last year, according to the revenue report, there were manufactured 54,402,230,113 cigarets, or enough to belt the globe twenty-two times. Counting ten minutes to a smoke, it would take 2,600,000 men, smoking ten hours a day, one cigaret after another, two years to consume the annual output. The country spent $900,000,000 for tobacco and $800,000,000 for amusements. We are wondering how much of this $900,000,000 was passed over the counter by our people.

Railroad Arrangements for Annual Meeting.

THE following letter received from Mr. Eben E. MacLeod, Western Passenger Association, is self-explanatory:

Chicago, March 14, 1911.

D. L. Miller,
Chairman Committee on Transportation,
Church of the Brethren.

Dear Sir:

Referring to your application for reduced fares, account above-named occasion:

This question was given careful consideration at a recent meeting of this Association, and beg to advise that the lines interested have individually announced open rate of TWO CENTS PER MILE IN EACH DIRECTION for your Conference, from points in the Western Passenger Association territory to St. Joseph, Mo., and return; dates of sale, May 30 to June 5, inclusive; final return limit June 30, 1911; open form of ticket to be used. From territory from which fares apply both via Chicago and St. Louis, tickets may be routed one way via Chicago and in the reverse via St. Louis, in connection with authorized routes west thereof; tickets reading both ways via Chicago, or both ways via St. Louis, must read over the same routes west of those gateways in each direction.

Eben E. MacLeod.

The other Associations will report in the near future, and as soon as reports are received they will be published.

The Most Lovely Grandmother.

IN the Home and Family Department, this week, will be found a most interesting picture of Mrs. Serena A. Minard, a Quaker lady of St. Thomas, Ontario, Canada. It is reproduced from the January issue of the New Idea Woman's Magazine. Last year the editor of that interesting journal offered a prize for the picture of "The Loveliest Grandmother" in the country, and he was simply surprised at the number of nice photographs that came to his desk. He says it seemed to him that nearly everybody in the country had a sweet old grandmother. The pictures were turned over to a committee of seven persons, who finally selected the one which we are publishing, and decided that it should be awarded the first prize. A number of others were printed in the journal, but none of them measures up to this one.

The selection is most fitting. It shows not only a fine face, but the general appearance indicates that the woman, in her becoming Quaker bonnet, stands for something. It is a picture that would attract attention anywhere, and such a woman would find a welcome in any civil society. No one would, for a moment, question her religious convictions, or entertain a doubt regarding her high moral standing. And while the picture is a lovely one, it might easily be duplicated a hundred times in the Brethren church. There are young sisters, wives, mothers and grandmothers, all over the Brotherhood, who have faces just as attractive, and whose attire is just as commendable. We thank God that we have been permitted to live and work in a generation, noted for this high type of womanhood. Then we thank heaven for the privilege of attending more than thirty Annual Meetings where sisters of this spiritual type might have been numbered by the hundreds.

Elders and the Anointing Service.

WE receive not a few inquiries regarding the anointing service, and are asked to answer certain questions through the MESSENGER. One correspondent, who seems deeply interested, wishes to know whether it is always proper for an elder to select a minister in the second degree to assist him in the anointing service, when there are other elders, even the elder in charge, in the same congregation. The practice of our people, in regard to permitting the sick to select those whom they wish to perform for them the anointing service, makes the question a very delicate one.

In James 5:14 we read: "Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church." The original says, "The elders of the congregation," meaning the presiding officers, the elders or the bishops. The presiding officers were sometimes called elders, and sometimes bishops, the terms being used interchangeably. There was always a plurality of these officers for each congregation, and they were expected to work together in looking after the interest of the flock, with the older or more experienced one as leader. But among them there was no particular preëminence—one above the other.

It was doubtless James' intention that the sick of any congregation should call for the elders of that congregation to perform the anointing service. In any work of the kind the elders were to assist each other. It would be no more than reasonable to suppose that visiting elders of piety and prominence from other congregations, or cities, should sometimes be invited to assist in the service. The instruction of James presumes that the members of any church, or congregation, should have all necessary confidence in those chosen by the Holy Ghost as the overseers of the flock, and could, therefore, call on them in perfect faith. This would be the ideal condition of any congregation and its elders. But, unfortunately, such is not always the case, and this has, in a measure, led to some deviation from the apostolic idea.

In view of what we are stating, we suggest that it would be advisable for the elders of any congregation always to assist each other in the anointing service. The feeling between them ought to be such as to enable them to work together in perfect harmony. In the absence of a second elder, it should be considered proper for an elder, or the pastor of a congregation, to call on a minister in the second or first degree, or a deacon, if necessary, to assist him. But it is unfortunate for the congregation, as well as for the elders themselves, when those in charge of the Master's flock can not work together in the manner contemplated by the apostles, when they organized churches and placed them in charge of men to watch over their souls for good. The disposition of some elders, to act wholly independent of the others, of the same congregation, is not only unfortunate, but it is to be deplored.

Is an Itinerant Ministry Desirable?

In Two Parts.—Part One.

THE Gospel clearly provides that local churches shall have pastors, but it outlines no system which determines the tenure of the pastorate. We do have examples of Jesus and the apostles determine the limit. Their work was to introduce the Christian religion, and establish the church. They went from place to place, preaching the Word and confirming believers; they did not settle down to local pastorates. In fact, the church had not then reached the stage of local organization as it has now, and territorial lines as they are used today. It was viewed more as a whole, and Jesus was Shepherd to the whole church, followed by the apostles.

Nor does the example of Paul settle the question, who, of the apostles, stands in a class somewhat by himself. His work took the office of the pastor, to some extent; not wholly, not mainly. He was pastor at Corinth eighteen months, and at Ephesus three years. But at both places he labored, no doubt, more as an evangelist than as a pastor. However, his work partook of the nature of both the evangelist and pastor, the former claiming the larger part; and to the church at large he served as an overseer, or general bishop; for he declared that upon him daily "was the care of all the churches." But he was not a local pastor, or bishop, as we are concerned with the subject today.

The system to govern the tenure of the pastorate, therefore, must be worked out in the light of the purpose of the ministry, reason and experience. Some churches have a system that a pastor can not remain in charge of a congregation longer than from one to four years, except that, under extraordinary conditions, the term may be lengthened a few years. This system has many points of advantage, and it has also some very objectionable features. Some of the advantages are that it places the pastor completely in the position of a servant, which is his proper position; it makes regular changes; the wisdom of the conference decides where the pastor is best suited to work; it protects the pastor, probably, as far as it is possible to do, from the temptation to seek the charges paying the biggest salaries; it protects the congregation also from the temptation to attract the big preachers with big salaries, and thus seduce men with money under prostitution; and it brings the whole pastor question under a complete system, which is most desirable.

Some of its disadvantages are that the congregation has no voice in the selection of its pastor, which violates an inherent right. It sometimes happens that the pastor is assigned where he is not wanted,—to say nothing of his disinclination to be placed on a charge under such conditions, and it is hardly possible that he can do his best in such a case. It sometimes removes the pastor when he should, by all means, remain, but he must go because his term of years is up, with probably a few added.

In other churches the whole question is left with the local church and the pastor. The church calls one to be its pastor, states terms of support, etc., and the one called decides upon acceptance. Or maybe the pastor and the church will negotiate matters of support, etc., until the conditions are adjusted to the satisfaction of the two parties to the contract. Then the pastor accepts, and enters upon the work without time limit. Ordinarily he is expected to remain as long as both parties are satisfied.

This plan also has advantages and disadvantages. It overcomes some of the disadvantages of the other system; while it loses some of its advantages. It is certainly desirable, to say the least, that both the pastor and the congregation should have some voice in these matters. Then, too, there is no rule to violate as to term of service. As long as the work goes and the pastor is growing into influence and power in the community, the way is open for him to remain, and he ought to remain.

But under this plan changes are often not made when they ought to be made. Often they are not made when the congregations would be glad to make them. And there is the whole support question left with the congregation and the pastor, which method has its serious objections. It leads the pastor to stipulate his price as if he were contracting to work on the farm or in a shop, counting out so many sermons against so many dollars and cents, bringing the ministry down squarely on the basis of merchandise, which is in violation of all apostolic teaching and precedent. The church is bound, by apostolic teaching and precedent, to support her ministers; but the minister is not given the right to barter sermons for money. It also leads pastors to forsake the weaker churches for the stronger ones, when the salary is better; and it leads the strong churches to take advantage of the weakness of human nature, and also the weak churches, to lure their pastors away with a nice salary. The whole support question should be carefully guarded; and it should not be determined, primarily, by the beneficiary.

There are still other churches that do not consider the rotation of their ministers at all. They are mostly those who elect their ministers of their own number, and expect them to serve without support. They are chosen, for the most part, with a view to local needs; they are expected to serve for life, whether they are effective or not, whether they take to the work with interest or not, or whether their labors are appreciated or not. No thought of changing is entertained, either on the part of the minister or the congregation.

Florida As a Mission Field.

As is well known, we, as a church, have not yet been able to do much work in the Southern States. During the years when slavery was an institution in the South, recognized by the Government, our doctrine on that subject was against us and proved to be a considerable barrier against establishing our church in that territory. After the war was over, the bitterness and prejudice, left in the minds of the people, was so great and deep-seated as to make it an undesirable field for successful missionary work, and as a result not much well-organized effort was made to plant churches in the more Southern States.

But as this feeling has now largely passed away, these disadvantages and obstacles do not now obtain. Therefore there must be other hindrances in the way, or else we, as a people, are not doing our duty in trying to save the world for Christ.

Either it is not a promising field in which to save souls, or there are other fields, in our estimation, that promise a richer harvest. The souls are here, and a very large percentage of them are from the West and North, and seemingly just as ready to accept the Gospel as are those of other States and countries. In this small city of St. Petersburg all the Protestant churches are represented and have places for worship, except our own, the Mennonites, the Friends and a few others. What our excuse can be, we are not able to name, and yet we think we know some of the "whys."

For years our members, ministers and all, have been pushing westward at a break-neck speed until we are now crowding them to the Pacific Coast and the northern boundaries, so that there is no more land to take,—for whom? for what? Perhaps if these two questions were truly answered, the excuses would be known; at least, partly so. Is not this true, brethren? What do you think about it? We say: "We are to do as we pray," and we act out our thoughts.

It is said that colonization has been an active element in our missionary work in the States, and that it is a good thing,—and surely it is. But why all this pushing and struggling westward and northward, and none of it southward? It seems to us that the souls down here are quite as valuable as are the other souls that we are trying to save by forming colonies. And what seems a little strange, about this colony scheme for saving souls, is the fact that in some cases there are almost as many preachers as there are members, and in other cases too many, to be advantageously utilized. In some places there is an excess of preachers, while in other places there is a dearth even to starvation.

It seems to us that if men are called by the churches to preach the Gospel and to save souls, that ought to be their work. And to do this they ought to go (better "be sent"), because the apostle says: How can a man "preach,"—"go,"—unless he is "sent"? Paul did not know; and if he did not know, we don't see how we are to know. Do you?

Well, we are trying to lead out along this line far enough to see just why it is that we don't follow the same plan to save souls down South as we do in the West and North.

The other churches send their ministers down here, independent of placing colonies. They locate the ministers in the towns and cities to organize and build up churches, and to save souls. And as a result they have their congregations, and if our people and children come South and find no church of their own, they are swept into the churches that are here. Who is to blame in such cases? It truly is a hard problem to solve, as things now are. Our preachers have been called, but how many are sent? I tell you, brethren, no minister can come down here (or anywhere else), preach the Gospel and build up churches unless he is sent, which means that he must be suitably and respectably supported. This, we believe, is the plain English of the matter, and we might as well face things as they are.

As we now see things, it is our opinion that Florida can not be made a successful field for our people by the "land colonization" scheme as a whole. There may be some specially favored location where a colony might succeed, but there are not enough of them to make the plan a general one. The best opportunities for securing a livelihood and making life a success, are in the towns and cities. And the only way to do successful church work will be to send a minister and church workers into some of the favorably-located towns and cities, support them, build cheap chapels, start Sunday-schools, and thus form church homes for our people who come South to be benefited, and enjoy the very excellent climatic conditions to be found throughout the State. It is our opinion that the better these conditions become known, the larger will be the immigration in this direction, as good health, climatic enjoyments and long life, with the religion of Jesus Christ in the soul, mean more to human kind than gold and silver without the comforts of life, which, through the blessings of God, are intended to be our heritage in this life. In many respects this is a goodly land for such as can believe that "godliness with contentment is great gain."

We see no reason why our people could not live here, be successful in establishing congregations and leading happy and prosperous lives. Many of the people, as said before, are from the North and West, are sociable, moral and religiously inclined. But, as a final advice, don't buy land, lots, houses or anything else down here, "sight unseen." Know what you are doing. "Be sure you are right, and then go ahead."

An Elder From Another District.

It would seem that there is need of some information regarding the advisability as well as the lawfulness of a congregation selecting for overseer an elder residing in another State District. We are requested to say something on the subject, it being a question that has given rise to some embarrassment in a few sections of the Brotherhood. There might possibly be conditions in which a congregation would be justified in going outside of her State District for an elder, but such cases are certainly very rare. To adopt a policy of this kind would not only show a disrespect for the elders of the Home District, but would practically place the church beyond the help and influence of the District elders. Such a church could not have any representation, through her elder, in the elders' meeting. Her elder would not be in a position to recommend for ordination, nor would he be in a position to coöperate with the adjoining elders of the District, of which his church is, or should be, a working part. Should the church be a mission point, she not only places herself beyond the reach of the District Mission Board, but beyond the reach of the General Board. She can receive help from neither. It is not likely that a prudent elder would care to take the oversight of a church in another District without having a good working understanding with the elders of that District. The complications are such as to make the situation just a little too embarrassing to be enjoyable to most elders. We would certainly advise a church, needing a nonresident housekeeper, to select an elder from her own District. This would be Christian courtesy, at least. Then it would avoid the many complications to which we have only briefly referred.

The Clothing for Mission Points.

A few of our readers are a little sensitive about what Sister Grace E. Gnagey said, a few weeks ago, regarding the class of clothing sometimes sent to mission points. Some were very favorably impressed by the article, while a few were not. Judging from the information that has for years been coming to our desk, from different quarters, it occurred to us that it might be well to have something said on the subject, and for that reason we were glad for the communication. There is no need of any one becoming sensitive over matters of this sort. What was said put a number of good people to thinking, and helped them to information and suggestions that they appreciate, and for which they feel very grateful. Of course, there are a number of missions to which the article does not apply, for the reason that the members of these missions are in a position to care for most anything in the way of clothing that may come to them. We further state that the article is mild, as compared with what sometimes appears in other papers. As an instance we refer to what was published in the December issue of the Ladies' Home Journal. We were urged to have this article appear in the Messenger, but we were probably right in thinking that the medicine was just a little too strong for most of our readers. The article does not seem to harm a million of outsiders, who read that journal, and our people may rest assured that what little was said in our columns, on the subject, is not going to affect our standing in the estimation of the outsiders who read the Messenger. We suggest that the Sisters' Aid Societies continue their good work in supplying mission points with what may be required, resting assured that what Sister Gnagey wrote is not meant for people who have no need of the suggestions offered in her article.

Some New Districts.

We are just in receipt of the Minutes of the District Meeting of Oregon, Washington and Idaho, with the following papers marked for the Annual Meeting:

1. We, the district of Oregon, Washington and Idaho, petition Annual Meeting of 1911 to grant us the privilege of dividing our District into three separate Districts to be known (1) as the District of Oregon; (2) the District of Washington; (3) the District of Idaho and Western Montana. The State lines be used as boundary lines except in the connection of Idaho and Montana.

Number of churches in Oregon,	8
Number of elders in Oregon,	5
Number of members in Oregon,	356
Number of churches in Washington,	13
Number of elders in Washington,	14
Number of members in Washington,	543
Number of churches in Idaho and Montana,	11
Number of elders in Idaho and Montana,	15
Number of members in Idaho and Montana,	565

Comparative Territory.

The area of the present District of Oregon, Washington and Idaho comprises 260,000 square miles.

Equal in area to Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia, the principal territory of the Church of the Brethren.

2. Moved that the Moderator appoint a committee of three, one from each State, to draft the plans for dividing the District, to be presented to Annual Meeting, according to the rules of Annual Meeting.—Passed. (Committee: Eld. C. Barklow, Eld. E. Faw, Eld. J. C. Neher.)

But Few Annual Meeting Queries.

It looks as though we may have but few questions to dispose of at the next Annual Conference. If we take the right view of the situation, this may be only the better for the church, and may enable those in charge of the business to do only the better work. A few papers for consideration need not necessarily mean a short meeting, but they should mean work more than ordinarily thorough. At the Jerusalem Conference there was but one leading question discussed, and yet the meeting was a most interesting, instructive and helpful one. And since it looks as though we are to have fewer papers to consider in our future meetings, than we have been considering in the Conferences of the past, it may be advisable for us to begin planning for some other important work at the Annual Meeting. We may find it wise to devote a half day to the Sunday-school work, another half day to mission work, and another half day to the educational interests. We may want to spend a half day on Bible schools, an equal amount of time on ministerial preparation, and a host of other live questions. There is hardly any limit to the questions that may be taken up, discussed and acted on with profit at the Annual Conference.

Some More Swindling.

We are asked to call attention to the way that some of our people in the West are being swindled by a crippled man, nearly blind, who says that he is authorized to do business for the Brethren Publishing House. He gets a great deal of money, and we are surprised at the way some large congregations are taken in by him. We are asked to expose the man and protect our people. There is no use in us occupying space, attempting to protect our members against swindlers, so long as they will not do a little thinking for themselves. Why is it that members will persist in trusting strangers with their money? Why is it that well-to-do congregations will take up a liberal collection for a man about whom they know nothing? We have a letter showing that a stranger collected $60 at one point, went to a town near by, got drunk, and continued on a spree as long as the money lasted. So far as we are concerned, our patrons can rest assured that the Publishing House never sends out a man to do business who can not show proper credentials. As for needy strangers, the better way is to attend to their immediate wants, and hold them until their record can be investigated. This method will give our people and churches all the protection against swindlers they need.

BRANDON, COLORADO.

We feel greatly encouraged, here at Brandon, from the fact that so many of our kind brethren and sisters are contemplating coming with us, and are under the purpose of getting land and earthly homes, but for the sake of building up a good, strong church here: We have preaching every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock,—half the time by the Presbyterians, and the other half of the time by the Brethren Today the call came to us to have preaching Sunday evening. The majority of the best people, here in town, like to hear our brethren preach. They seem to enjoy good, straight Gospel sermons, filled with the Spirit. We hope soon to be able to have a house of our own to worship in. We use the schoolhouse at present. We have a good (union) Sunday-school here, superintended by the Brethren. Brandon is located on the main line of the Missouri Pacific R. R., from Kansas City to Pueblo, 170 miles east of the latter, in a beautiful, level valley, with deep, rich soil. We have two ministers living here—Bro. Hulse and the writer. Pray for us, in this new field of labor. J. M. Crouse.

BETHANY BIBLE SCHOOL.

A marked growth is seen in all departments of Bethany's practical work. New lines of activity are being developed to meet the greater needs and opportunities.

The Hospital workers are planning to keep permanently in touch the patients after they go from the Hospital. Thus one who has manifested some interest in the better life, is not only followed up by the personal efforts of the workers, but the Gospel Messenger is sent to him as a regular visitor, carrying its beacon light of truth.

Feb. 26 a special love feast was held for the benefit of our Chinese brethren. Bro. E. B. Hoff officiated, being assisted by Brethren Moy Way and Moy Wing as interpreters. Eight Chinese brethren, with thirty-eight American brethren and sisters,—most of whom are workers in the Chinese Sunday-school,—participated. The services were witnessed by a number of the Chinese pupils who are not Christians. This feast was a source of rich blessing to all present.

A Sunday-school for the Jewish people was opened up, recently, in the old Bethany building, 1526 Hastings Street. Forty-two pupils, representing all grades, from the primary to the Bible class, were present the first Sunday, and the number is increasing. The lessons from the Bible are well received. Sister Katherine Newsom is the superintendent.

Two dear souls were received into the fold by baptism, here at Bethany, on the evening of Feb. 22.

WOODBURY, BALTIMORE CITY CHURCH, MD.

Since our last report a new pool has been built. Two sisters have been baptized. We have an increased attendance at Sunday-school, Christian Workers' Meeting and preaching services. Bro. I. N. H. Beahm gave us three of his Bible Land lectures, which were much appreciated. Bro. J. S. Lau has been appointed as agent for the Publishing House. Bro. Virgil C. Finnell was also with us and gave us an interesting talk on "The Past, Present and Future of the Brethren Publishing Interests," and did considerable business for the Publishing House in the Woodbury church. His work was appreciated.

Owing to the sad affliction of my son, Ellis, and other conditions it has become necessary for me to close my pastoral work with the Woodbury church. This I very much regret and only reluctantly I submit to it. The past two and a half years I have labored with, and in the interest of, the faithful little band of the Lord's workers in the great and wicked city of Baltimore, Md. While the skies were not all cloudless, yet our stay with them was pleasant. We were with them only to learn to love them, and I rejoice in believing that the ties of Christian love were mutual.

I believe that the Eastern District of Maryland should increase its interest in the two little churches of Baltimore. Much more work should be done in the city, along pastoral and missionary lines.

At this time I do not know what my future work in the ministry will be. At present I am caring for our afflicted son. I hope, if it is the Lord's will, to do some evangelistic work, as soon as conditions are such that I can. We solicit an interest in the prayers of the faithful. T. S. Fike.

FIRST GRAND VALLEY, COLO.

We have just closed very successful revival meetings, conducted by Bro. A. C. Root, assisted by his wife. They began their work Feb. 5, and closed March 1. Four were baptized and one was reclaimed. The members are much revived and strengthened. Bro. Root is an able and fearless expounder of the truth. Sister Root is an able and faithful helpmate to her husband. She conducted the consecration service, one-half hour before preaching each evening. She was also called to the prayer service held each afternoon, from house to house, in the neighborhood. While we can not report as many brought into the fold as we should like, yet we are quite sure that much good has been accomplished, and the good seed sown may later bring forth fruit unto the Lord. We feel to recommend Brother and Sister Root as faithful servants in the Master's cause. Those who may desire good work done in their churches would do well by employing their services. Now, as the revival meetings are over, it is the members' duty carefully to feed the lambs who have been gathered into the fold, and keep the good Spirit at work during the coming days. We feel to thank God for the good meetings we have had. D. M. Click.

MUSCATINE, IOWA.

March 5 we had the pleasure of entertaining two members of our Mission Board,—Eld. E. F. Caslow, of Yale, Iowa, and Bro. E. C. Trostle, of Panora. Bro. Caslow gave us a good address at 11 A. M. on "Union Workers With God." At 2:15 P. M. we engaged in a missionary program, which we had prepared for the occasion. About two and one-half hours were spent together in this service, after which a collection was taken. At 3 P. M. we met at Bro. Royster's place, South Muscatine, to baptize a man who had been baptized twice by single immersion, and once (last summer) in Chicago by trine immersion. Last spring he was visiting a friend of his, near the Mission, who was a brother. Then he attended our meetings and witnessed baptism by trine immersion preached, which he believed. He soon went to Chicago to work and found a man that would baptize him by trine immersion. Some time ago he came back and found us again. He was then led into the full light of the Gospel, and united with us. After being baptized he praised the Lord for the opportunity of doing his whole duty. Soon afterward he gave us a good talk on the Round Table, "What Can I Do for Missions?" T. A. Robinson.

SPRING CREEK, PA.

Our church met in council today, with Eld. J. H. Longanecker as moderator. The council was largely attended, and we had a very good day. A number of matters of note were considered. Brethren J. H. Longanecker and Allen Bucher were elected as delegates to the Annual Meeting. Brethren J. H. Gingrich and J. B. Aldinger were chosen as delegates to the District Meeting of Eastern Pennsylvania, which will convene in the Big Valley congregation. The writer was appointed Gospel Messenger correspondent. One was reclaimed, and three letters of membership were accepted; also several letters were granted.

Bro. Daniel Kreider, one of our ministers, will leave us for Adams County, Pa. Our dear young minister, Bro. Jacob H. Gingrich, is at Bethany Bible School. Our congregation has now 422 members, with nine ministers, (five being elders), and seven deacons. Our Sunday-school and prayer meetings are interesting.

The sisters will break the bread and pass the cup, hereafter, at our love feasts. We will build a new meetinghouse at Bachmansville. The plan of dividing our large congregation was considered, but it was deferred indefinitely. Brethren Milton Bashore and E. W. Brandt were appointed as missionary solicitors. We decided to hold two love feasts this spring. The one will be held at Spring Creek May 19 and 20 at 3: 30 P. M.; the other, at Annville June 14 and 15 at 3: 30 P. M. Our congregation is in a splendid condition, under the efficient oversight of our dear elder, Bro. J. H. Longanecker. Edgar M. Hoffer.

MY KENTUCKY STORY.

I had read the story of Brethren Hostetler, and others, establishing the truth in Kentucky, in the early part of the former century and during the later years of the preceding century. I also was told of the high esteem in which they were held by their fellow-citizens. I had noted, with interest, the progress made in the last forty years, to establish what was so propitiously begun with the earliest history of the State, but the opportunity for me to lend a helping hand did not come until March 1, 1911. (Confidentially, there may have been opportunities, but none seemed so imperative.)

The Constance Mission is several miles beyond Cincinnati, on the Kentucky side of the beautiful Ohio River. It was established fourteen years ago on this writ: John Moll and wife were living there. She had considerable experience in establishing outposts of mission work for the Baptists in Cincinnati, and he was reclaimed from the enchanting cup by the Salvation Army. He heard of the Brethren, and wrote to the Southern Ohio Mission Board. Then Eld. D. M. Garver went down to Constance and held meetings in their small house. Bro. Moll was baptized, and one year later, his wife. Thus the work at Constance was started. Meetings were held in their house for four years, and then a church, 20 x 30, was built by the Southern Ohio Mission Board.

Eld. Jonas Horning, Chairman of the Mission Board, and Brother and Sister Moll deserve special mention for their labors and sacrifices, that made this development possible. The church was built eleven years ago. Sunday-school is held every Lord's Day, and preaching services every Lord's Day evening by Bro. John Moll, who has been in the ministry for several years. Once a month a helper goes down from the Valley and they have several meetings. About thirty persons have been baptized. Some have moved away and some have gone back. A love feast is held twice a year, and a council meeting whenever necessary.

The Mission is under the control of the Lower Twin church. The Southern Ohio Mission Board helps them some, and several Aid Societies have helped the poor children. The people are mostly poor. Many of them have only small lots. Some are renters, but every family has a canoe, and about all the expense they have, in traveling, is "elbow grease." Brother and Sister Moll are held in high esteem by their neighbors, and it would be a great blessing to all the Kentucky towns if they had Molls as their spiritual helpers.

Observations:

1. Our humble church at Constance is small, compared with the "St. Joseph Mission and Hospital" of the Catholic church across the river, costing more than half a million. Will we ever give as well as the Catholics?

2. Although Moll is often referred to as the land of "Moonshiners," I was humbled to hear that the citizens of Constance have to cross the river to Ohio to get intoxicating beverages!

3. Kentucky is surrounded by States that have large churches and Districts of the Brethren. Why not establish churches in Kentucky? Then, in a few years, the Reading Clerk at our Annual Meetings, while reading out the list of Districts, might call Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia. Behold, the opportunity is at your door! Will you carry the blessings of life to the people of Kentucky and receive the great blessings in store for you? Jno. Calvin Bright.

R. D. 4, Dayton, Ohio, March 10.

FROM JERUSALEM TO INDIA.

Saturday morning, Dec. 31, Bro. A. C. Wieand and wife and the writer bade adieu to our party in Jerusalem, and boarded the morning train for Joppa, from which point we embarked on the "Tirol" at 6:30 P. M. for Port Said, bound for Bombay, India.

At Port Said we had the pleasure of meeting Mr. and Mrs. Locke, of the Sailors' Rest Mission. They have built up, during their twenty-five years' stay in Port Said, a fine "Home for Sailors," and greatly endeared themselves to the hearts of many sailor boys, with whom they come in constant contact.

From Port Said we went by rail to Cairo, where we spent several days. Cairo is an extremely interesting city, but for the most part is wholly given over to pleasure and self-gratification. Nowhere else in the world, from every land, come here to enjoy its delightful climate, and to revel in their riches. Not a few Americans contribute to the immoral use of wealth and prestige, which has and is still working such havoc to missionary enterprise in North Egypt. The most lamentable feature of which you see and hear about everywhere is, that the representatives of the so-called Christian lands are such poor lights to these non-Christian lands. In business circles, in social movements, in educational propaganda they are sometimes not only worthless but, on the contrary, extremely detrimental to missionary work.

On Friday morning, Jan. 6, we went aboard the "Africa," of the Austrian Lloyd Line, and at 11: 30 we were off for Bombay. The Captain was the Sister Carl's was a pleasant one. The next day, at 2 A. M., we reached Suez, where a large amount of sugar was discharged. From Suez to Aden we had a most delightful voyage. It was not too hot nor too cool,—just right. A gentle southeast wind blew almost continually. Our good ship "Africa" plowed her way steadily on, night and day, at an average run of about 300 miles per day.

Wednesday, Jan. 11, we arrived at Aden, where the vessel unloaded another large lot of sugar and tobacco. While ashore here, we got our first real touch of heat. The rays of the sun were almost scorching and in consequence thereof we exchanged our straw hat for a topee, which has been our constant protection ever since.

Tuesday, Jan. 17, at about 10 A. M., we sighted land. We were still some distance from Bombay, but soon after we entered her fine harbor amid the hustle and stir of her enterprising cosmopolitan life.

Bombay is a beautiful city of 1,500,000 people. She is beautiful for situation, together with her fine parks and public buildings. By 12 o'clock we were ashore, and thus, once again, we were made to feel the goodness of God in giving us a safe and prosperous journey to this far-away land. After a half day's rest in Bombay, we took the train for Anklesvar, stopping between trains at Bulsar, to pick up our mail. Here we received the kindly welcome of the boys and girls, as expressed in song and gardens of flowers.

At Anklesvar we found Bro. and Sister Stover busy in their work. Bro. Stover was preparing to go to the Lucknow Conference, and was packing among the Mohammedans. We joined him and went as far as Agra, where we tarried over Sunday, in order to see the Taz Mahal, and see the mission work being done there. Two days later we again joined Bro. Stover at Lucknow and spent three days very profitably at the Conference.

From Lucknow we went to Allahabad to see an exhibition of the industrial work in India, and especially of the Central Provinces. Then we went on to Benares and saw the most famous bathing place of the Hindu, on the banks of their sacred stream, the Ganges. Here one sees the very heart of Hindu worship and its results. Priestcraft, debauchery, vice and misery abound,—so much so that one can only look at it, and hardly realize a silent prayer for the coming of Christ's kingdom on earth.

From Benares we went to Calcutta, visited Serampore, the seat of Carey's early missionary work; also his grave. We also went to see the famous Caligha Ghat, where many animals are sacrificed to the Hindu gods and goddesses.

In company with M. C. Lehman, of the American Mennonite Mission, we went to Jagdeopur, where he and his wife are located. Our Mennonite brethren have a splendid school and orphanage work here, for boys. About 125 are in attendance. They also have Missions at Rudri, Balodgahan and at Sankra. They also have a Leper Home near Dhamtari, where they are now caring for some 130 lepers. These lepers have all become Christians. Their work, as a whole, is of a high standard, and as such is coming into favor with both the Government and the natives.

We are at present stopping with J. N. Kauffman and wife, who are located at Rudri. Here they have a large Girls' School and some industrial work. From here we expect to go to Bombay and then visit our own mission stations. The Lord wills we shall be permitted to visit brethren and sisters at their coming District Meeting. About March 1 we plan to sail for America, via the Pacific, stopping at Colombo, Singapore and a few other points, en route.

It may be of interest to the many friends of Bro. A. C. Wieand to know that he is greatly improved in health, and hopes to be able to resume his school work again at the opening of next year. Delightful weather now prevails in India. The farmers are busy gathering their winter crop. While the missionaries of the cross are bending their energy to gather in the rich spiritual harvest, may we continue to pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth more laborers into his harvest field.

J. P. Souders.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIFORNIA.

Inglewood.—We met in council March 4, in the afternoon instead of at night, as was our former custom. We elected a temporary committee of three brethren; viz., Brethren M. Thomas, Orville Calvert and T. M. Calvert. Brethren Oscar Matthias and Orville C. Calvert were elected to District Meeting; Brethren Wm. J. Thomas and J. G. Calvert, alternates. Brethren Ezra Workers, of Pasadena, and Noah Lee, both Los Angeles, Long Beach and Inglewood held their quarterly union meeting here the last Sunday in February. It was a most inspiring service, and the house was crowded, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather. Our series of meetings, conducted by Brethren Workers and Lee, began, will begin April 2.—Jennie A. Stoner, Inglewood, Cal., March 13.

Los Angeles church met in quarterly council on Friday evening, March 3, 1911. Bro. W. Crist was elected to assist D. M. Lehmer and D. W. Crist were chosen to represent us at District Meeting. It was decided to send a delegate to Annual Meeting, who will be selected later.—Eva M. Frantz, 3309 Manitou Ave., Los Angeles, Cal., March 13.

Santa Ana.—Our church met in council March 11. Our elder, Bro. S. G. Lehmer, presided. We reorganized the Christian Workers' Meeting officers and elected the following: president: Sister Etta Rhodes, secretary, Brethren J. B. Bashor and G. N. Retzand were elected delegates to District Meeting, which meets at Covina, Cal. Bro. Lehmer preached for us on the morning and evening of the 5th. A temperance committee of three was also elected. Bro. R. Moomaw, Sister Etta Rhodes and Sister Lizzie Brunner were elected. Committee,—Lizzie R. Pugh, 606 East First St., Santa Ana, Cal., March 16.

COLORADO.

Denver.—March 12 Bro. A. C. Bosserman gave us an able discourse. In the evening Bro. T. E. George preached to an appreciative audience. Our District Mission Board has been with us, looking over the work. March 19 we met in council. Bro. A. C. Daggett presided. Bro. L. F. Love will represent us at Annual Meeting. Seven letters were received and two were granted. We regret that Bro. A. G. Rust will soon leave us for Palisades, Colo. Our prayers will follow him to his new field of labor. May 28 is the time set for our love feast.—Blanche A. Long, 54 South Penn., Denver, Colo., March 17.

CUBA.

Omaja church met for love feast March 8. A very spiritual feast was enjoyed; twenty-two surrounded the tables. Bro. Ira P. Hoy officiated. Bro. and Sister Bump, of Bump in Texas, were with us. We had hoped to have others, but they deferred coming until another season. The outlook is good for work here, and we should be glad to have other members come in and help build up the cause.—Grant Mahan, Omaja, Cuba, March 13.

ILLINOIS.

Batavia.—Feb. 26 Bro. E. E. Eshelman, of Bethany Bible School, gave us two good sermons. March 5 Bro. S. S. Blough, was absent. In the evening our Christian Workers' Meeting rendered a temperance program, at which time Bro. Johnson, of the same school, gave us a short talk. March 6 Bro. E. E. Eshelman gave us a talk to the Christian Workers' meeting about his work among the boys at Hastings, Nebraska. A very interesting collection was taken, which will be given to him.—Ruth Hawbecker, 239 North Park St., Batavia, Ill., March 13.

Big Creek.—We met in council March 4. Our elder, Bro. D. J. Blickenstaff, presided. Considerable business was disposed of, and a very good Lord's Supper was held with us in the work. Officers for the Sunday-school were elected. The church decided to call Bro. Blickenstaff as our elder, and Bro. Love Ridgely was chosen as our delegate to Annual Conference, with Bro. Jacob Hapner as alternate. Bro. Ridgely's address, Main St., Olney, Ill., March 11.

Decatur.—We met in council March 9. Eld. Geo. Miller was present. Our Sisters' Aid Society was reorganized. Sister Dora Dubble presided. Splendid work for the Lord. We also her was elected leader of the prayer meeting for one month. A temperance committee was elected as follows: Brethren Jacob Barnhart, Lemuel Cripe and Ellis Hoover. Sister Cripe came to this church and preached twenty-four soul-winning sermons. Eight souls were made willing to go on Christ in baptism. Six have been baptized and two are awaiting the rite. The church is now in good working order.—Mrs. Ida Cripe, 1443 W. Decatur St., Decatur, Ill., March 9.

Hutton.—The Mission Board of the Southern District of Illinois will meet at the home of the writer near Virden, Ill., April 4. All members having work for the Board will please report prior to said date. The churches of the District that are delinquent on their apportionments will confer a favor by sending in at once.—W. H. Beal, Sec., Virden, Ill., March 14.

Pine Creek.—We met in council March 16. Our elder, Bro. C. C. Price, presided. We had a very pleasant meeting. Church officers were elected, and a membership was read. Only one was granted. Bro. C. W. Stauffer is our delegate to Annual Meeting.—Sarah Rikli, R. D. 1, Polo, Ill., March 14.

Rock Grove.—We met in council March 4. Eld. J. W. Harlick was moderator. Letters and membership were granted to Bro. Howard Martin and wife, who have taken charge of the "Home." Bro. Henry Crider closed a two weeks' meeting for one year. Our spring love feast will be held May 27, at 2 P. M. Our Sunday-school will meet at 9:30 A. M. and 2 P. M.—Hattie Bull, R. D. 38, Ingalls, Ind., March 16.

Mount.—We met in council March 11, with our elder, Bro. J. S. Kauffman, assisted in the work. Bro. John R. Miller presided. Two letters were granted. An entertainment committee of three, consisting of Bro. Ervin Weaver, Sister Anna Martin and Sister Hattie Carbiener, was appointed. Our love feast will be held May 13. Sister Priddy was appointed delegate to Annual Meeting. A paper was received in the interest of Bethany Bible Teacher Course. Bro. Ervin Weaver was appointed to receive all donations for the college.—Mona Martin, Mount, Ind., March 14.

Buck Creek.—Our church met in council March 11, with our elder, Bro. J. H. Fike in charge. Brethren Priddy were chosen to represent us at Annual Meeting; Bro. Anson Priddy, alternate. A paper was read in the interest of North Manchester College, and a donation was taken up for the college. Our Christian Workers' Meeting was organized, with Sister Etta Brown as president; Sister Hettie Bright, secretary. We have an interesting Bible school, conducted by Bro. Anson Priddy. Our Sunday-school will meet at the usual hour. Correspondent.—Phebe E. Teeter, R. D. 2, Mooreland, Ind., March 14.

Brethren Leckrone and the annual church visit to be paid March 15. Bro. David Wolf was elected as our Sunday-school superintendent for the third term, and Bro. Perry Harshbarger, assistant for our West house.—Mary E. Miller, R. D. 5, Box 20, North Manchester, Ind., March 12.

Garrett.—Bro. Burger was with us three weeks and preached helpful sermons. Our Sunday-school and the Aid Society are very good. Correspondent.—Dwight L. Voorhees, Garrett, Ind., March 13.

Ladoga church met in council March 11, with Eld. E. N. Hoffman in charge. Business was granted. The church decided to have a series of meetings in the part of the house to be conducted by Bro. M. Flory, of Illinois. We expect Bro. Isaac Peters to be with us in a series of meetings. Sister Rose is elected as delegate to Annual Meeting; Eld. Wm. Harshbarger, alternate. Correspondent.—Mrs. Ida Cripe, Ladoga, Ind.

Bro. Wilford Harshbarger, Bro. Clayton Mahorney and Sister Maud Mahorney were elected on the Missionary committee and secretary, respectively; the writer is our church correspondent.—Lucinda Mahorney, R. D. 1, Ladoga, Ind.

New Salem church met in council March 18, with our elder, Bro. Jesse Ikenberry, presiding. A good deal of business was transacted. We decided to hold our communion meeting. Bro. John Stout was chosen as delegate to Annual Meeting, with Bro. Samuel Hoover as alternate.—Ella Stout, R. D. 5, Box 38, Muse, Ind.

Palestine.—Our church met in council March 11. Our elder, Bro. D. M. Byerly, presided. Bro. Hostetler, of the Monticello church, was present and gave us a talk. Bro. Byerly and many things were done and said for the strengthening of our faith and love. Bro. Byerly will commence a series of meetings to begin April 1. We decided to hold our love feast Sept. 16. We furnish one series of meetings. We elected three new trustees for the church, as the former trustees have moved away. Sister Rosa Westerhouse was chosen as our clerk; Sister Anna Westerhouse, the writer, as our correspondent and messenger agent. Bro. Byerly preached for us on Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday night.—Anna Westerhouse, R. D. 1, Palestine, Ind., March 18.

Yorktown.—Our Sunday-school and church services are moving along with interest. Since Bro. Grover Wine, the District Sunday-school secretary, was with us, we have decided to begin the home department work, and have also started a teachers' training class. We also have singing in our Hall each Tuesday evening.—Daisy Petrea, Peru, Ind., March 15.

Pine Creek.—We met in council March 4 at the Blissville house. Our elder, Bro. Daniel Wysong, presided. Eight letters were granted. We decided to hold our love feast Oct. 7, at the Blissville house, commencing at 2 P. M. Bro. Miller remained with us over Sunday and preached for us on Saturday evening, Sunday morning and evening and Monday evening on Sunday evening, at the church house. Sister Bowers, who has been afflicted with rheumatism, is improving slowly.—Correspondent that she be anointed. Eld. Jacob Hildebrand, assisted by Bro. C. J. Wysong, conducted the services.—M. S. Morris, R. D. 3, Walkerton, Ind., March 16.

Silamonte.—Our church met in council March 4, at the Lancaster house. Eld. Henry Wike, our assistant elder, officiated in the absence of our present elder, Bro. Aaron Moss. Two letters of membership were granted. Bro. Lawrence Shults was elected as delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. Henry Wike, alternate. Bro. William Paul was elected superintendent of the Sunday-school at the Lancaster house. Our love feast is appointed for May 13, at the Union Creek house, beginning at 6 P. M.—Millie Wike, R. D. 6, Huntington, Ind., March 13.

Salem church met in council March 4. Our elder, Bro. S. F. Hendricks, presided. One letter of membership was received. We elected Bro. Elmer McElwain, Bro. Orville Bissell, clerk; Bro. Clyde Joseph, treasurer; the writer, Messenger agent and correspondent. Bro. Orville Bissell, Bro. Lewis Fisher, trustee. Bro. Jacob Hapner, is leaving us, as he is moving to Missouri.—Irma Bissell, R. D. 1, Box 16, Urbana, Ind., March 10.

Solomon's Creek.—We met in council March 4. After a very appropriate address by our elder, Bro. James Neff, business opened. We granted three letters and received four. After the report of the annual visit by the delegation, Eld. Admonitions were given. Our love feast will be held June 10. Bro. Amos Cripe is our delegate to Annual Meeting. Ministers present from adjoining congregations were Brethren W. B. Deeter, Lewis Cripe and Otho Wagteller.—Pearl Geyer, Syracuse, Ind., March 16.

Summerfield church convened in council March 11. Our elder, Bro. J. W. Harick, presided. Considerable business came before the meeting. Five letters of membership were granted. Bro. Harick was chosen as our elder for one year. Bro. I. E. Branson assisted in the meeting; also preached for us on Sunday morning. Bro. Wm. Spigelmyer preached in the evening. Bro. David Miller is our delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. Jacob Hoff, alternate. Eld. J. W. Beer is beginning a 6:30 P. M.—Grace Hiatt, Summitville, Ind., March 14.

IOWA.

Indian Creek.—We met in council March 4. Our elder, Bro. John Zuck, presided. Considerable business was disposed of. The church feeling the need of more official help, called two brethren,—Bro. Jacob Hoff and Bro. Curtis Hoff,—to the ministry. These were duly installed into the deacon's office on Sunday. March 5 Bro. Hoff preached, morning and evening, to the morning and at 3:30 P. M. The writer was chosen Messenger agent.—Emma Hoff, Summitville, Ind., March 14.

Prairie City.—Bro. I. W. Brubaker gave us a splendid discourse last Sunday morning, taking his text from 1 Cor. 8:9. Subject, "Is Intemperance Right?" At 2:30 P. M. we had several practical thoughts and beautiful illustrations. Brother and Sister Brubaker will greatly leave many friends at Dunkard Center, Iowa. Our prayer is that God's richest blessings may rest upon them in their labors.—D. L. Wolf and family have also left us. He is a minister in the second degree. He has moved into the bounds of the Panther Creek church. We will miss him and his family. They lived too far from the church to take part in every service, yet Bro. Wolf has been a great help to us. Love to our young people.—Mary J. Hollingham, preached for us. At the close of the service Bro. Lawrence Cobb and Sister Mary Hollingham were married. They and Bro. Charles Colyn are going to Lucas County, near the Garden Grove church, where they will soon establish a home for the sick. We are trying to labor for the honor and glory of our blessed Redeemer.—Mrs. D. A conduct a series of revival services, beginning the same evening, to continue for at least two weeks. Sister Edna Schul is doing very effectual work as city worker. The East Side services are very encouraging. The congregations are increasing and a splendid interest is manifested. Every branch of our church work seems to be in a prosperous condition.—Jacob Funk, Wichita, Kans., March 14.

MARYLAND.

Baltimore (Fulton Avenue).—This church called us to preach three evangelistic sermons Feb. 25 and 26. The interest was intense from the beginning. The attendance increased with the close. At the last service the house was well filled. Meeting with the saints is always mutually enjoyable. Brother Theron Schlosser is superintendent in place, given evidence of the deep impress of her life, in the increased attendance of the Sunday-school, and in the splendid around seems well organized and officered. A busy winter has left many in the various branches of the Sisters' Aid Society. Many needy ones have been gratefully helped through them. Gifts for distribution by them are more than welcomed. Bro. J. S. Geiser is busy in the service.—W. E. Roop, Westminster, Md., March 14.

MICHIGAN.

Black River.—This church met in council March 4. Our elder, Bro. S. M. Smith, presided. One letter was received. We will have our love feast May 13 commencing at 2 P. M. Bro. Smith preached two soul-cheering sermons while with us. On Sunday afternoon one dear sister was called by the elders to anoint her. Since then she is improving rapidly. We have recently organized our Sunday-school, with Sister Emma Black as superintendent; Bro. Raymond Hoover, secretary-treasurer. We also have a preaching service every Sunday—morning and evening—by our home minister, Bro. L. A. Fisher.—Audie Posher, Bangor, Mich., March 11.

Muskegon.—This church, in the city of Muskegon, Ind., gave us three soul-inspiring sermons at the Marshlla house, while he was on a visit to his son and daughter in that city. Meetings, on account of failing health, he has not preached for fourteen months, but is still willing to serve in the Master's cause. Our Sunday-school is very interesting this winter.—Ota E. Moss, R. R. 1, Muskegon, Mich., March 11.

Lake View.—Our church met in council meeting March 4, with Bro. Frank Shoemaker presiding. Two letters of membership were granted. Church officers were elected for one year, with Bro. Geo. E. Deardorff as elder, Bro. L. A. Eby, clerk; the writer, missionary committee, and Sunday-school. Bro. J. C. Warstler, our Sunday-school superintendent, is moving away. Bro. Eby's office has been moved to our meeting house. Bro. I. M. Eikenberry is our delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. Jacob Beery, alternate. We decided to have our love feast May 6.—Ella Keith, Brethren, Mich., March 9.

New Haven.—We met in business session March 11, with Eld. C. L. Wilkins in charge. Officers were elected for one year. Bro. Wilkins, clerk; Bro. Jesse Hoffman, treasurer; Bro. A. Fleghner, reelected as trustee; the writer, correspondent. One was received by letter. We decided that the trustees meet with us the fourth Sabbath afternoon in May, to hold our love feast May 27, beginning at 10:30 A. M. Eld. C. L. Wilkins is our delegate to Annual Meeting; Eld. David Chambers, alternate. Our Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting is doing fine.—Allie L. Emrick, R. D. 2, Middleton, Mich., March 14.

MINNESOTA.

Worthington church met in council March 11, with Bro. J. Schechter, Jr., moderator. Four letters of membership have been received since our last report. Sister Lizzie Hilary was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. J. H. Studebaker, alternate. The Sunday-school at this place is now supporting a native in India. We had preaching by the writer on the Fourth of July. We expect Bro. A. Hutchison, of Kansas, to visit us by one of meetings. Appointed to Annual Meeting.—Minnie Schechter, Worthington, Minn., March 14.

MISSOURI.

Centerview.—Our church met in council March 6. In the absence of Eld. Jesse Bro. J. Holloway was appointed Sunday-school officers for the year were elected. Bro. Frank Repp is our superintendent; Bro. Harvey Flora, secretary-treasurer; Bro. Alvin Gaues, church chorister. We expect to have a series of meetings in April. Our band of workers is not large and we would be thankful to receive help. Come and help us, especially ministers. "Come over into Macedonia and help us."—Elsie Gaues, Centerview, Mo., March 11.

Fair View.—Our church met in council March 11. As our elder was not able to be with us, Bro. B. B. Hetrick presided. We organized a Sunday-school. Bro. Sprague was elected as our superintendent; Sister Linda Metz, Secretary. Our collection amounted to $6.05.—Maggie Hylton, R. D., Box 17, Marionville, Mo., March 13.

Farrenburg.—Eld. H. F. Lilly, of Carlisle, Ark., came to us on March 4, it being his first visit as elder and pastor. He preached to us three soul-inspiring sermons in succession. He takes the place of our beloved brother, C. H. Steerman, who came to us in the fall of 1910, and preached for us regularly. He is the last time he expects to be with us, as he starts today for his former home in Kansas.—Bro. J. S. Harshbarger, R. F. D. 3, Bim, and use him as an instrument in his hands for the upbuilding of the kingdom.—N. W. Shamblin, Farrenburg, Mo., March 14.

Smith Fork church met in council March 4. Elder D. D. Sell presided, in the absence of Bro. Eller. Bro. Sell was elected as delegate to Annual Meeting. A Young People's Meeting was organized. Sister Myrtle Williams elected as its leader, secretary and treasurer. A Sunday-school extension committee was appointed, consisting of Orville Sell, Ora Hoff and Frank Shirk. The report of the committee, in charge of the work on the Harford Mission, was presented. The work was given authority to complete the work, the church furnishing the necessary funds. A plan was presented and adopted for raising church funds, each member paying an assigned quota. Our love feast will be held June 17.—Emma Williams, Pleasant Hill, Mo., March 14.

South St. Joseph Mission.—Bro. C. S. Garber preached for us last Sunday evening to a full house, after which two precious souls came forward and were baptized by Bro. W. A. Deaford on Monday evening. We have a splendid Sunday-school awaiting baptism, but they are hindered because of sickness. Brethren, pray that they may soon recover so they can enter the fold. This week we had the privilege of seeing the place erected for serving lunch on the Annual Meeting grounds. Bro. Garber's next meetings are to be held at Fort Wayne, Ind., beginning the 19th.—E. N. Huffman, 502 Kentucky St., St. Joseph, Mo., March 19.

NEBRASKA.

Alvo.—Our church met in council March 11, with Eld. J. L. Snavely presiding. One letter of membership was received and one was granted. Officers were appointed for Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting. We organized a temperance committee. Glen Rock congregation met in council March 5. Bro. G. W. Ellenberger presided. Eight letters were received. We reorganized our Sunday-school, with Bro. Harry Bridge as superintendent; Sister Effie Bridge, secretary. Eld. Ellenberger, who has moved to Lincoln, Nebr., will still have charge. He is moving to Mound City, Mo., which necessitated the choosing of another elder. Brethren A. G. Reed and J. C. Woodle will preach for us this coming year.—D. Belle Dickerson, R. D. 1, Auburn, Nebr., March 14.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Williston.—Our church met in council March 4. Our elder, Bro. D. F. Landis, presided. Much business came before the meeting. One letter of membership was received and two were granted. We contemplate holding a series of meetings soon after the close of the Sunday-school. Bro. Landis, of Pleasant Hill, Ohio, is to do the preaching. Several committees were appointed, one a temperance committee to work in harmony with the General Temperance Committee of the Brotherhood.—Etta Myer, R. D. 3, Box 191, Williston, N. Dak., March 11.

OHIO.

Covington.—The dedicatory services of this church, beginning March 5, with Eld. H. C. Early's most powerful sermon, are ended. We are glad to report that, after many years of hardships and arduous work, they had succeeded in building a new house, well planned, which was made perfect as to debt, left the old house without regret; they were glad to move into the new house, and to dedicate it entirely free of debt. Our desire to remain in the old church. It had served its day and generation well; he was glad to move into the new church. This regard is appreciated. We received 18 into the membership and seventy-five.—Elizabeth D. Rosenberger, Covington, Ohio, March 14.

Eversole.—This church has just enjoyed another shower of spiritual blessings, beginning March 5, when Eld. Jesse Bro. in our midst Feb. 5, to assist us in a series of meetings, which proved to be a feast of good things. Our prayer in going to follow the Master in the ordinance of Christian baptism, and many accessions. The meetings closed Feb. 27. The Spirit was still working, which was made manifest on the following Sunday, when Bro. Flory was again with us and preached for us. Bro. Flory's sermons were soul-stirring and troubled, and four more were added to the church, making fourteen accessions. Bro. Flory is one of the best heads of families. Many others are near the kingdom, and the church is greatly strengthened.—Elizabeth D. Rosenberger, Covington, Ohio, March 8.

Lima.—March 10 the members of this church met in council. Bro. G. A. Snider was chosen elder for one year. Bro. C. S. Coleman will represent us at District Meeting. Sister Della Lehman was chosen correspondent. A committee was appointed to cooperate with the District Mission Board in locating a home for the minister and wife of our brother.—a father.—has returned to the fold.—Minnie M. Snider, 1712 Elm St., Lima, Ohio, March 14.

Logan.—Our council was held March 4, with Eld. A. B. Hoover presiding. Considerable business came before the meeting, but was pleasantly disposed of. Three were received by letter. Sister Mary Hollenberg, of the Mud River congregation, meeting will be held just prior to Annual Meeting, at which a special collection will be taken and sent to Annual Meeting. Christian Workers' Meeting will be held in April with Bro. Virgin April 2, with Bro. J. I. Kaylor, president, and Bro. Perry Daniels, secretary-treasurer. Bro. J. H. Cline to represent us at Annual Meeting, and Eld. A. B. Horst at District Meeting. Eld. A. B. Hoover was set apart as our local elder for the proposed Orphanage of Northwestern Ohio. A committee of three was elected to pay $40 to the Bellefontaine church. Our love feast was appointed for May 20, at 7 P. M. A committee of three was appointed to purchase bibles for the church. We will pay $40 to the Bellefontaine church this year.—Bertha L. Yoder, R. D. 5, Bellefontaine, Ohio, March 7.

Lower Stillwater.—Our council meeting March 11 at the writer's was decided to divide this congregation, hence a meeting was held on the 12th at the home of Bro. Wm. Minnich, which was present. An organization was then effected. The congregation will be known as the Pleasant Valley church. The writer was chosen as presiding elder. A clerk and trustees were also elected. Bro. Minnich was chosen as the minister for the church, the meetings adjourned.—A. Klepinger, Dayton, Ohio, March 14.

Middle District.—Our church met in council March 9. Our elder, Bro. Jacob Coppock, presided. Bro. William Minnich was elected delegate to Annual Meeting. Our love feast will satisfactorily disposed of. Bro. D. W. Vanlman was reflected as the treasurer. Brethren Jacob Coppock and Vanlman were on the committee to see after the wants of the poor. Brethren C. V. Coppock and Jacob Coppock were elected delegates to District Meeting: Bro. J. P. Miller, delegate to Annual Meeting. After the business was disposed of preaching by Bro. J. P. Miller and C. V. Coppock were advanced to the second degree of the ministry. They, with their wives, were duly installed. We decided to hold our love feast May 13 at 3 P. M.—D. F. Soltenberger, R. D. 3, Tippecanoe City, Ohio, March 13.

Oak Grove.—Our church met in council March 11. Our elder, Bro. L. H. Dickey, presided. His time had expired, but he was chosen by the congregation. Bro. IMPERIAL VALLEY.

We have just closed a very interesting series of meetings at this place. Feb. 19 Bro. G. G. Lehmer, of Los Angeles, Cal., came to us and began a series of sermons. Bro. Lehmer is an able expounder of the Truth. As a result of his earnest labors five came out on the Lord's side and were buried with Christ in baptism. Bro. C. E. Gillett performed the rite. One was restored. We have been greatly strengthened and built up in the most holy faith. Bro. D. W. Crist, also of Los Angeles, Cal., spent a few days with us. He preached four very interesting and instructive sermons, while Bro. Lehmer went to El Centro, Cal. We held our love feast March 4. Owing to sickness, some were not permitted to attend. We now have thirty-nine members here. We met in called council Feb. 27, with our elder, Bro. C. E. Gillett, presiding. Brethren C. E. Gillett and W. F. Gillett were chosen delegates to District Meeting; Bro. J. N. Stalter and Sister Rachel E. Gillett, alternates.

WINONA MISSION, MINN.

It was my happy privilege to arrive at the Winona Mission during the month of January and to be there about six weeks. The outlook of the Mission is very encouraging, and I believe the workers there are feeling much encouraged, although they have not, by far, received as much clothing as was needed. I had the privilege of looking into the Mission room. I thought it looked quite empty. Clothing was scarcest. Last Sunday night, all was soon distributed among the poor families, and did not go very far.

I hope our sisters will not become discouraged in the good work that they are doing, and will try to do more for the poor. In our experience in the work we always felt very grateful for all that we received. I can not call to mind anything that was sent to us during the six years of our experience but what we were very thankful for. Poor people do not expect the best. They are glad for clothing that will keep them warm, and there is much need for such clothing. Sisters, continue on in the good work you are doing! Make and send clothing to the Mission, for without your help the work will not prosper. I do not mean that you should send to the Winona Mission only, but wherever it is needed.

DRY RIVER, VA.

This church has been busily engaged in the Master's work during the past two years. About one year ago a branch Sunday-school was organized and kept up during the entire year. The interest and attendance were exceedingly gratifying to the workers. In response to a call for a series of meetings, the services of Bro. Saylor Greyer, of Buena Vista, were secured. Last Sunday night marked the close of one of the most spiritual and uplifting series of meetings that the writer has ever been privileged to work in. Bro. Greyer preached twenty-four excellent sermons, and his earnest devotion to his work, as well as his kindness and sympathy, won the hearts of the entire community.

Several prayer services were held prior to the meetings, as well as each evening just before the services. These were exceedingly spiritual, and one could not help but feel that the blessing was abundantly. Prayer after prayer was answered, and our hearts overflowed with joy and praise when we met on the bank of the beautiful river and saw eleven souls received into the church by baptism. Of this number six were young men, whose influence for Christ and the church can scarcely be measured in this community. One was reclaimed, and several others are awaiting the sacred rite of baptism.

Bro. Greyer did not fail to declare the whole Gospel, as we have heard repeatedly since he has left; and this, together with his personal work, will tend toward the success of the meetings. Our prayer is that our Heavenly Father will abundantly bless him and his dear wife.

WILLOW CREEK CHURCH, SOUTH DAKOTA.

We are always glad for the coming of spring, with its signs of new life, and the awakening of the old, for it means a renewal of activity in our church work as well.

Living as we do, in a country where homes are scattered, it is not unusual for people to drive six or eight miles to service regularly, in summer time. You will understand why the average attendance for the year naturally drops off, and why, on many stormy Sundays, only a few worshipers meet in his name. However, during the past winter the work has kept up well. We had Sunday-school, preaching services and Christian Workers' Meeting each Sunday with a few exceptions.

Our regular January council was postponed until later, but the work is now well organized for the year, with the exception of our ministerial force. Bro. Geo. Heagley upon whom we have been depending the past year, expects to leave us, and as yet we have been unable to get some one to take his place. We feel that this is an important point and we can not afford to let the work go back. This is the only organized congregation of the Brethren in our State.

We have an interesting Sunday-school, the attendance of which is increasing. Our secretary's report shows a total enrollment of forty-four for 1909; and of seventy-seven for 1910. A cradle roll department has been organized recently.

The missionary spirit is good. Reports show an increase of $86.85 during 1910 over the previous year; making $142.07 for the past year. The young people's Bible class, which supports a native worker in India, is credited with $74.12 of this amount. At Christmas we sent our native worker a large roll of fine Bible pictures. We are awaiting a reply from him, through Bro. Eby. Our Sunday-school sent a large box to the School for the Feebleminded, at Faribault, Minn. Sister Olive Thompson has organized her class of intermediate children, and says they are doing splendidly.

We are looking for help for our revival meetings, to be conducted the latter part of May. We urge that some one be made willing to consecrate his life to this great field. If India or China demands sacrifice, why not sacrifice for the home field? We realize that the climate is not always congenial, but God overrules it and he has made some one strong to perform the work. It may mean a little less to be added to your bank account, or take away that anxiety entirely, but, as Henry VanDyke so beautifully puts it,—it might add considerable to your "treasure that may be sent over."

SHADE CREEK, PA.

Our missionary from India, Bro. J. M. Blough, delivered interesting sermons in the Rummel house,—one on Saturday evening, Feb. 11, and two on Sunday following. During the following week services, each day, of the most inspiring missionary addresses and Bible teaching were given by Brother and Sister Blough. The forenoon sessions consisted of instructions on Old Bible History and the call to the field. At 2:30 on the afternoon this study was continued, and followed by missionary addresses by Brother and Sister Blough. In the evening sessions, during the week, the Book of Ephesians was taken up as the study, and following this were given very interesting and inspiring missionary addresses by Brother and Sister Blough, excepting Friday evening, when Sister Mary Quinter, from India, gave an address. Sister Quinter was present during part of the week and gave a missionary address on Saturday afternoon, and on the same week. Brother and Sister Blough gave excellent missionary addresses in the Scalp Level house on Monday evening, Feb. 20. These meetings were all well attended and much interest was manifested.

Bro. Virgil Brumbaugh, from the Publishing House, paid us a visit and gave an instructive as well as inspiring address on the history of the Publishing House. He also emphasized the support we owe it. J. H. Lehman.

UNION SUNDAY-SCHOOL MEETING.

The Octavia, Lincoln, Alvo and Omaha Sunday-schools and Christian Workers' Meetings have formed a union, to hold joint meetings once a quarter in one of the churches.

Thanksgiving Day the first meeting was held in the Omaha Mission, where the organization was partially completed.

March 5, 1911, the second meeting was held in the Octavia church. The president stated that the object of the meeting was to develop Christian character, to round out Christian life and to save souls. A well-prepared program then followed. Our young people took hold of the work with a zeal that was inspiring.

The permanent organization resulted in the following officers elected: Bro. J. B. Cable, of Lincoln; treasurer, Bro. Harvey Rasp, of Alvo; secretary, Alice Garber, of Omaha. The next meeting will be held at the Alvo church. Alice Garber, Sec.

Finger Posts on Life's Highway

Showing How to Succeed in Life

BY JOHN T. DALE

A new book, full of pointers which point in the right direction. A book for the young, the middle aged and the old.

The purpose of the author, in gathering the material, during many years, was to assist those who are striving to gain character, intellectual power, business success, and merited esteem of their fellowmen. Out of a long and varied experience he has been able to collect into this volume more than one hundred articles on that many different subjects, touching human life from almost every possible angle. It is not a novel nor a story, nor yet a long and dry treatise upon some abstract subject, but a collection of articles on everyday topics, written in language and style easy to be understood, making the points so clear that the way to a successful and happy life is more easily found. The book abounds in words of wisdom, caution and warning.

We have great hopes for the sale of this book, knowing that it will appeal to all classes with equal force, and be the means of accomplishing good wherever it goes. Should any of our readers be interested in taking an agency for it, write us at once. We can offer liberal commission. The book contains 620 pages, bound in cloth. Illustrated. Will be sent to any address, postpaid, for $1.50.

FLASHLIGHTS FROM REAL LIFE

BY JOHN T. DALE.

Those who have read any of the author's other books will want to read this one. The sketches and incidents given are real flashlights thrown upon things which are worth revealing. The author in his preface says: "Some of the sketches are based on facts which have come within the personal knowledge of the author, others are founded on incidents which have come under the observation of others, but they are all typical of the ever-changing experiences and mutations of life, as the grand panorama of existence moves onward."

Following are a few subjects taken from the table of contents:

Advice to Young Men
The Boy Hero
Dangers of City Life
The Father's Example
The Gallilee Girl
The Professor's Advice
Single and Married
The Smoker's Peril
The Young Lawyer's Downfall

The Book contains 205 pages. Bound in cloth.

Price, postpaid, 75c

Minutes of Annual Meeting

This volume contains every known minute of the proceedings of the general conferences held by the Church of the Brethren to the Year of our Lord 1909. Many interesting things relative to the problems of church government and decisions upon matters of solving difficulties in the church are here recorded. These Minutes also reveal to the reader the firm stand the Brethren maintained through the years in reference to their opposition to war, intemperance, secretism, worldliness, etc. They also show the development and growth of sentiment in relation to the educational, missionary, and Sunday-school movement in the Brotherhood, and how these departments of work have grown. Taking it all in all, it is one of the books which has a right to a place in the library of every Brethren home. This is a $2.50 book, but in order to bring it within the reach of all the price is placed at $1.75, which is just the cost of manufacturing and handling.

AROUND THE WORLD

Proper Conduct in Religious Gatherings.

While, in the desire to encourage the speaker, hand-clapping is resorted to by many audiences, even where the gathering is of a religious nature, such as a conference or a convention, the practice,—and properly too,—has never gained ground among the Brethren, and of late it is meeting with deserved condemnation by the various religious journals. If all things are to be "done decently and in order," in the house of the Lord, surely we do well to let the hands rest, and give the speaker, instead, a fervent "Amen." This hearty assent, undoubtedly, will encourage and cheer, without detracting from the spirituality of the meeting.

Less Publicity for Crime.

The American Medical Association recently passed a resolution, requesting that by legal enactment effective restrictions be placed on the press, by which less publicity is given to suicides and other crimes of degenerated and morbid minds. It is the consensus of medical men in Europe, as well as in America, that the notable increase of crime is due in part to the shortcomings of modern education and the want of religious and moral influences in the family life, but all are agreed that the tendency towards crime is largely aggravated by the unwarranted publicity given to crime and criminals. It would appear that, according to these medical experts, obscurity and oblivion are the order in the discouragement and prevention of crime than the sensational prominence too often given it in the popular journals.

More Religion in the Home Life.

It is a most encouraging sign of awakening interest in the religious life of the home, that so many efforts are being made, at present, by press and pulpit, to impress this most important duty of greater consecration upon all families. Most stress is laid upon the family altar, to the neglect of which much of the present-day degeneracy must be ascribed. Then, too, the proper observance of the Sabbath has, in many families, been largely lost sight of, and this accounts for the poorly-attended church services and the prevalent desecration of the day. In both of these points there is room for considerable improvement. Hallowed, sweet and helpful memories will cheer the after-life of the children who are reared in homes in which prayer and obedience daily unite the family at the feet of Jesus, before the throne of God, and whose sacredly-observed Sabbaths are "steps unto heaven."

Is Graft Sapping Religion?

So prevalent have the various forms of dishonesty become that a prominent business man was recently heard to remark: "It is not possible for a conscientious man to stay in the church and at the same time make a success of his business." We are told that modern business methods, in principle, are diametrically opposed to the teachings of the church, and that "a young man, entering a modern business office, finds it extremely difficult to practice his Christian principles amid the environments in which he finds himself." Now, while the experience of some, unfortunately, may be in accordance with the facts stated above, it is also true that the principles of honesty and integrity, as maintained by the church, are perfectly compatible with the pursuit of any lawful business, as has been proved in many instances. "Seest thou a man diligent in business? He shall stand before kings." So spake Solomon, and his assertion has never been disputed.

Pitiful Conditions in China.

Distressing reports of famine suffering in Anwhei and other provinces of China continue to reach the mission boards and relief agencies by almost every mail. One missionary writes: "I never before knew what it meant to hear a company of native Christians say, 'Give us this day our daily bread,' when not one of them had seen bread for days, and has you call pressed corn potato vines bread." Latest reports indicate that more than a million people are absolutely dependent on the charity of their more fortunate fellow-men elsewhere. China herself is doing her best to help these people, but is unable to meet all the calls, so that further relief funds from western nations must speedily be furnished to sustain life until the next crop is gathered. As usual, the United States stands first, so far, in the list of the world's contributors, and thousands of the famine-stricken acknowledge, with tears of joy, their profound gratitude to the liberal donors in the far-away land.

What a Chinese Must Give Up.

For a citizen of the "Celestial Empire" to become a genuine Christian, he must give up far more, perhaps, than one from any other nation. He breaks abruptly and forever with his past. He turns his back on opium, gambling and unchastity,—the three besetting sins of the Empire. Moreover he gives up cheating, lying, backbiting, filthy words, and fighting. He must abstain from litigation, which ruins so many villagers, and renounce the various ingrained practices of heathenism. Cut off from all the influences and associations of his past life, he becomes a castaway among the villagers. He can rejoice, however, in the blessed fact that, if accepted of God, he is an "heir of the promise," a child of the Great King.

Arbitration Sunday.

Promoters of the Universal Peace Movement, referred to in our last, have, through the Federal Council headquarters in New York, decided that Sunday, April 2, be observed by the churches of America as "Arbitration Sunday." Resolutions were passed by the Council, declaring "its conviction that war is evil, and that Christian nations should determine, by obligatory arbitration, their international differences, which can not be settled by diplomacy. For Christian States in the twentieth century to refuse to arbitrate and to insist on war, would be to bring reproach on the Christian name." To all of this our readers will doubtless join us in a hearty "Amen," trusting that much may be gained by the proposed movement.

Common Courtesy.

Amid the various organizations that attempt to increase the sum of human happiness, one of the most recent is the one started in Berlin, Germany, whose object it is to inculcate courtesy and better manners in general. Miss Meyer, the originator, proposes to extend the influence of the movement to other countries also, and before long hopes to reach the United States. It occurs to us that the real Christian, by the very nature of his holy calling, does not need any outside organization in the exercise of real courtesy to those around him. "Be ye all of one mind," says the apostle, "having compassion one of another, love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous." Perhaps most of us, however, do need to be reminded of this timely admonition more frequently, lest we fail to manifest this loving attribute of the soul. It is the glory of the Christian to be affable and kind under most vexing conditions.

Human Lives Cheaper than Safety Appliances.

The fire in a New York factory building which, on the afternoon of March 25, caused the death of nearly 150 employés, is another reminder that the modern business world is often too much intent on the accumulation of vast fortunes, to make adequate provision for the safety of the toilers who are the essential factors of business prosperity. As we read of men, women, and girls, huddled in rooms high in the air, without a possible way of escape, we are made to wonder how long such things must continue before effective measures are taken to protect human lives more successfully. "Am I my brother's keeper?" was asked by one of old, who tried to evade just responsibility. It comes with equal force to the people of the twentieth century,—not only in guarding persons from needless danger, but in the still greater concern for the eternal welfare of perishing souls, for whose salvation, in a very real sense, each one of us is responsible.

Russian Tyranny.

In spite of Governmental assurances that religious freedom is the privilege of all religious denominations within the domains of the Czar, late advices from Tulta, Russia, report that a number of Baptist meeting places were recently ordered to leave that province. The autocratic Governor was unyielding in his demands, though his cruel edict meant financial ruin to the unfortunate people who were compelled to leave their possessions, not being able to sell their houses and farms in the short time allotted them. After having reached a place of refuge, an appeal to the authorities at St. Petersburg brought the welcome news that they might return to their old homes, the Governor having been in the wrong. No sooner had they done so, however, until the enraged Governor lodged an alleged charge of attempted proselytism against the little band, and they are now facing imprisonment and heavy fines. The experiences of these people, compared with the religious liberty that we enjoy, should impress great and abounding thankfulness upon us, and more,—it should lead to a more consecrated life.

Troubled Mexico.

We have refrained, hitherto, from commenting on the details of the uprising in our sister republic to the south. While the interests of American and other foreign investors are safeguarded by the presence of United States troops near the frontier, conditions in Mexico are still quite critical. Popular opposition to the cabinet has caused all its members to resign, and already a new minister of foreign affairs, Francisco Leon de la Barra, has been appointed, and others, equally acceptable to the people in general, are to follow. Whether the new cabinet, together with the firm hand of President Diaz, will be able to restore order in the republic, so long torn by internal dissensions, remains to be seen. The history of Mexico in the past has been a checkered one. It would seem that her people will need some careful training in the essentials of good citizenship, before they are fully prepared successfully to administer the affairs of the country.

Opposition to the Pope's Demands.

Latest reports seem to indicate that the Roman Pontiff does not find altogether smooth sailing in obtaining the required signatures of his priests to the "anti-modernist oath." It is a document of some length, and the person signing it agrees to adhere to all requirements of the church, as insisted upon by the Holy See. He binds himself, by the strictest rules imaginable, to oppose all changes or reforms,—however much he may personally favor them,—and, in short, leaves his own personality and convictions entirely in abeyance. It is not to be wondered at that many men of prominence are refusing to sign the document, and that the opposition now being urged by the professors in the colleges of Würtemberg, Bavaria, and other places is assuming vast proportions. It will doubtless extend to wider circles. The day is past when, by a papal edict, the entire individuality of man can be compelled to limit its metes and bounds to a narrow sphere, beyond which it must not go. God's law insures liberty.

Evangelizing a City.

It may yet become true that the native Christians of Korea will be called upon for methods of effective evangelism. During the recent remarkable evangelistic campaign at Seoul,—a city of two hundred thousand people,—the entire territory was districted, every home canvassed, a personal call made upon all of suitable age, tracts distributed, and invitations to services given, not only once, but persisted in until the people agreed to come. Every theatre, hall and public meeting place in the city was engaged for the entire month. Besides all this, two tents, seating four thousand people each, were put in use. Each of the six daily papers donated a column or more a day to gospel messages. Large posters, emblazoned with the words of John 3: 16, were displayed everywhere. So intense was the consecration of the people that business matters were largely at a standstill. Thousands of people were brought to at least an approximate knowledge of the truth by this most remarkable evangelistic campaign. The earnestness and zeal of these native Christians is worthy of our most sincere emulation, even though we may regret that the people were not taught the whole truth as believed and accepted by us as a church.

Further Developments in the Orient.

Turkey, still struggling with a heavy indebtedness and limited resources, was recently obliged to canvass the European money centers for needed loans. After succeeding in England and France, the required funds, $31,000,000, were finally secured in Germany, but no one need suppose that it was merely a favor to the Ottoman Empire. Already several old battleships have been sold to the Turks by the crafty Germans, and new ones are to be constructed in German shipyards. By far the greatest boon to Germany, however, will accrue through the development of Asia Minor under German auspices. The railroad to Baghdad and the Persian Gulf,—a distance of 1,200 miles, of which 150 miles have been already built, is now to be pushed to early completion. The Turkish Government guarantees annual payments for each mile completed. The opening of this road, together with the recently-secured concessions from Russia, concerning Persia, will open most profitable avenues for German industrial and commercial expansion in the Orient. It must not be forgotten that by all this development of the East there will be "a great and effectual door" opened for missionary progress. Where is the "Paul," who, starting from Asia Minor, will follow in the wake of the onward movement towards the Persian Gulf?

ESSAYS

Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth.

God's Building.

BY J. O. BARNHART.

There's a building God has given us,
To be cared for every day,
And he says, to keep it cleanly,
We must ever watch and pray.

Watch and pray to keep it holy;
Guard the "living temple" well,
For within this habitation,
Christ himself desires to dwell.

Would we make each room inviting,
When he comes our Guest to be,
Every morning at his footstool,
We must humbly bow the knee,

Asking for his help and guidance,
While we strive to do our part,
That from sin's corrupt "old leaven"
He may always purge our hearts.

Then, to keep the cleansed spirit,
From temptation's baneful blight,
At some labor for the Master,
We must toil from morn to night.

Only dark and silent corners
Give to vermin rest and room,
And the seeds of evil also
Flourish best in shade and gloom.

Then, into each little corner,
Let the Holy Spirit shine;
Let the truths of the pure Gospel
Flood the soul with light Divine.

Thus, alone, will these, our temples,
E'er be pure and undefiled,
Till into the courts eternal,
God shall call each faithful child.

The Rebaptism Question.

BY L. W. TEETER.

REASONS why applicants for membership in the Church of the Brethren should be baptized by her authority:

1. Because, when God began his church on earth, under the Gospel of his Son, Jesus Christ, the baptism of those who should compose the body of his church; and the baptism of his Son, who should be the Head of his church, were of such Divine importance, that he sent a special baptist from heaven to do that baptizing (Mark 1:4, 5, 9, John 1:6, 29-34).

2. Because Jesus Christ, to whom his Father had delivered all things (Matt. 11:27), and to whom he had given all authority in heaven and earth (Matt. 28:18), commanded his church to "teach all nations," and "to preach" his "gospel to every creature," and to baptize the believers (Matt. 28:19; Mark 16:15, 16).

3. Because Paul, the Divinely-appointed apostle to the Gentiles, condemned the baptism of the twelve Ephesians, and had them properly baptized (Acts 19:1-7).

4. Because, in the face of God's provision to administer baptism, by his church, it is impossible to prove any outside baptism to be equal to the baptism administered by the church.

5. Because there is, really, no necessity in existence, to accept applicants into churchmembership on any outside baptism they may have.

6. Because it would be very inconsistent to receive a person upon his own testimony and statement, as to his outside baptism into church membership, when one who has been properly baptized by the church, can not even transfer his membership from one congregation to another without an officially-signed certificate, stating that he is a member in full fellowship.

7. Because Eld. Alexander Mack,—if we regard him as good authority,—refused to baptize his seven associates, in their effort to reinaugurate the apostolic church, before he, himself, were first baptized by the church. And the seven he should baptize, agreed with him. (See Introduction to Mack's Writings.)

I might give a number of other reasons, but the foregoing I give chiefly for careful consideration.

Hagerstown, Ind.

REFLECTIONS ON THE FOREGOING REASONS.

1. If we had lived in the time when Jesus was to be baptized, and God had left it to us as to who should baptize him, I suppose that, in our reckless and inconsiderate way of reasoning, we would likely have said that, of course, one of the Jewish high prisets,—Annas or Caiaphas,—should baptize him.

But not so. No high priest, or any other man on earth, was fit, or sufficient, to baptize either Jesus or the people who were to compose the body of his church. Hence God sends a Divinely-commissioned administrator of baptism (John Baptist) to baptize both Jesus and the first members of his church. Surely, "as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are" God's "ways higher than our ways, and his thoughts than our thoughts" (Isa. 55:9).

2. If the Church of the Brethren considers herself in the line of apostolic succession,—not literally, but spiritually (and this in matter of fact, she does), then we must necessarily regard the Great Commission of Christ as being directly spoken to us. In that Commission (Matt. 28:19; Mark 16:15, 16) we are commanded to teach the nations, and preach the Gospel to every creature. Then, if any repent and believe, we are to baptize them. No provision here to receive any into the church on a baptism administered by any other church.

The Church of the Brethren can not afford to allow any thing that might possibly lower the standard of that baptism that was so Divinely appointed by God himself, and so carefully committed to his church by Christ; and by the Holy Spirit to the apostles (Acts 2:4, 38). And since every one that is baptized desires the Divine influence of the Holy Trinity, and since, by valid baptism, that influence is secured, and since the Divine order of baptism is the combined proposition of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, to save the baptized, therefore the church should be exceedingly careful to preserve the Divine order inviolate, in points of its design, form, mode and authority.

3. Paul made short work of the case of the twelve Ephesians. Upon examination he found that they had not received, nor as much as heard, that there was a Holy Ghost; and that they had been baptized unto John's baptism. Then they were baptized legally, by Paul's authority. Evidently these twelve men had been previously baptized by trine action. Here we would likely reason that, since John the Baptist baptized by trine dipping, and since these had been baptized unto John's baptism, therefore they were baptized rightly, and that all they needed was to be taught that there is a Holy Ghost, and that they should believe in the baptism which Jesus Christ taught in his commission. But not so. Paul never did such patchwork.

4. If the church would decide to accept persons with alien baptism, she would obligate herself to consider carefully every application of alien baptism; and in every case she would have to take the statements of the applicant himself as true, whether true or not. In fact, it would license an impostor to intrude himself into church-fellowship without any baptism. And, brethren, if any applicant would bring witnesses to prove his baptism in another denomination, they would most likely be outsiders, which would not help the case.

5. The experience of the church, many years ago, proved that persons who were received on their alien baptism, afterwards became dissatisfied with it, and in the end requested to be baptized by the church. This was unfortunate for both them and the church. We could expect a similar experience again, if we should decide to accept alien baptism.

Again; if alien baptism is good enough to save a soul in the Church of the Brethren, it is also good enough to save a soul where it was first administered. If so, why attempt a transfer of church membership? The Church of the Brethren has accepted fully the New Testament baptism. She has the right to use it only so long as she uses it according to New Testament teaching. In the Great Commission of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, the church is plainly commanded to baptize believers. Hence the church will be taking a very great risk to deviate from that commandment without a plainly-stated exception by the same High Authority that gave the commission.

Getting and Giving the Best.

BY ELIZABETH-HOWE BRUBAKER.

I WAS once riding on a railroad car in company with two friends. It was midnight. Some of the passengers were sleeping, some were restless. Others were wishing they could sleep and rest. Of our trio, one was apparently fast asleep,—a blessing coveted by the other two. As the latter were conversing, one remarked, "Just look at Miss ——, sleeping. She always gets the best out of everything."

This compliment impressed me greatly,—"She always gets the best out of everything." If one always takes the best out of his circumstances and conditions in life, he has a high standard of living. And why not enrich ourselves with the best things? Then, too, we want to give the best things, and we need to have our eyes open to see the thing most needed, and give it from time to time.

No one can give what he does not have. When Peter saw the lame man at the Beautiful Gate, he not only saw the greatest need of that man, but he had on hand the best to give. He supplied the demand and a life was richly blessed. Peter was on his way to the house of worship when this opportunity came to him, and if we would have the best to give, we, too, must frequent the Holy of holies, where we come in touch with the Giver of the best.

A daughter sits alone by the bedside of her aged and sainted mother, whose life is slowly but surely ebbing away. The days were filled with ministries of care and watching. The sleepless nights are long and wearisome to the flesh. What of good can one get from such experience? The answer comes from the omniscient and the omnipresent One, "I am ever at the service of my own, to give the richest and best blessings under all circumstances. During the hours of silent watching let me speak to you through my Word. When you are lonely or perplexed, you speak to me through the ministry of prayer. Through this intercommunion, hour after hour, day after day, night after night, you may and will be fitted for more efficient service for the Master. When mother is laid to rest, you may again enter the activities of life with new vigor and renewed courage."

The manager of a telephone office had several girls in his employ. There was complaint on the part of the public that these girls were not giving satisfactory service. The employer, too, was observant, and was convinced of the apparent neglect. He called the girls into his office and told them the situation, hoping they would resolve to do better. When spoken to, one of the number replied, "I am doing my best." "Then," said the manager, "we have no further use for you," and she was dismissed. She had failed to see that there was a better service to give, and she lost her position.

A girl once entered a children's hospital as nurse. There was much work of an unpleasant character awaiting her. The superintendent, as she talked to the prospective nurse, said, "There is one thing we want you to remember. We expect you to give your best service. There will be times of testing, when unpleasant duties will face you. Never be heard saying, 'I can not do this. I can not do that.' Always accept your work cheerfully, however unpleasant it may be, and give your best." That girl took the advice, and today she holds a desirable position in hospital service.

"To serve him! Do we think it hard
To hear the word of old,
Which tells us of the place on earth
Our Lord would have us hold?

"Be this our one desire, O Lord,
Whate'er our earthly state,
And sweeter may it prove each day,
To serve thee, and to wait!"

Church Dedication, Covington, Ohio.

BY ELIZABETH D. ROSENBERGER.

LAST August, ground was broken for a much needed new church in Covington. In October the cornerstone was laid, and on Sunday, March 5, the dedicatory services were held. It was a day of joy and gladness, because the hopes and dreams of years past were now fulfilled. About five years ago, Eld. P. H. Beery and Bro. E. M. Fox matured plans for a new church at this place, and the people, as in the days of Nehemiah, "had a mind to build," and now we rejoice, with praise and thanksgiving, that we have a suitable house in which to worship God.

The Sunday-school assembled as usual, in the morning. (We shall say more of our attendance and work in our notes.) We have over three hundred enrolled and the enthusiasm and zeal of our workers promises a steady growth in the future.

Dr. M. M. Brubaker led the vast audience of about two thousand people in singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name." Eld. Jacob Coppock read Psalm 27 and offered a beautiful prayer of thanksgiving. Bro. Geo. W. Flory, our pastor, then introduced Eld. H. C. Early, of Penn Laird, Va. Before announcing his text, Eld. Early spoke a few words, commending the congregation here in building a convenient, substantial house, suitable for the worship of God. He took for the scripture lesson Matt. 16: 13-23, his text being the eighteenth verse, "And upon this rock I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." He divided the subject into three parts: (1) The person of the foundation; (2) The person of the builder, (3) The person of the owner. Jesus is the rock upon which the church is founded, and so it must endure.

Some people take gloomy views of church work. When old members pass away they ask, "What of tomorrow?" What of the time when young and inexperienced leaders are in control? Trust in God; the church will stand and the leaders will be his true disciples. As an illustration Bro. Early referred to Eld. James Quinter, who served the Covington church many years. He graphically described the scene of his death. So vivid was the word picture that the vast audience was deeply moved, for Bro. Quinter was highly esteemed and loved in this church. Eld. Early said that people at the Conference said, "Now what?" Here was a leader gone. "Now what?" When Eld. R. H. Miller died, in 1892, again people asked, "What will become of the church?" But God always has some one to carry on his work. We should be glad that young men are pushing forward. Let us assist them in the Lord's work! The outlook for the church is bright. Let us buckle on the full armor and pray for God's grace, while we battle manfully against sin! Men are needed who are fired with a passion to evangelize the world; we need a regenerated membership. We should study the organization needed to carry on the many activities of the church. Spiritual power comes first; then wise leadership. The church belongs to Jesus Christ by right of conquest. Last of all Bro. Early referred to the temple of Solomon and exhorted us to sanctify ourselves and our means, and sacrifice willingly for the church of God.

But a few extracts like these do not begin to give you an idea of this masterly discourse. Bro. Early held his audience and swayed them by his eloquence so that his sermon here will never be forgotten.

Bro. Flory, who has been with us one year, then appealed to his people for funds for the finishing of the church. He referred to the fact that at the first call for funds $10,000 was raised in twenty minutes. And now the building had cost about $28,000. All of this had been arranged for, excepting about $5,000. The response to this appeal was prompt and generous, for our people love their pastor, and are willing to hold up his hands as the servants held up the hands of Moses. In about one-half hour $5,700 was subscribed, and so the church was dedicated to the Lord, the entire amount of money subscribed, and much of it already paid for in cash.

Following the dedicatory offering, Eld. L. A. Bookwalter of Trotwood, Ohio, offered a fervent dedicatory prayer and the vast audience was dismissed. We were glad to see on the platform Brethren L. A. Bookwalter, Jacob Coppock, Geo. Mohler, O. S. Yount, and S. E. Porter.

In the evening another large audience heard Eld. H. C. Early preach from John 20: 25. Subject, "Honest Doubters." Again the people were edified and built up in the faith. On Monday evening, Eld. T. S. Moherman, of Ashland, Ohio, was with us and remained for three evenings. We can not here express our appreciation of his helpful sermons. We know that his reward will come in blessing and greater power for service. Bro. Flory then preached a few evenings, and at his invitation it was manifest that God was with us in this place, for souls came forward to be received into the church, until twenty-five were baptized.

The new church is built of brick and Bedford stone, the line brick being hard gray. The main auditorium is 60x64 feet and 29 feet to dome of ceiling. There is an entrance, exit and vestibule at each of four corners. There is a pastor's study, and cloak rooms adjacent. Joined to this main auditorium by a movable roll partition, 14 feet high and 30 feet wide, is the Sunday-school room, 40x55 feet, with lower and upper galleries, divided by movable partitions into 14 separate Sunday-school rooms, besides front and rear vestibules, large cloak room, ladies' parlor, and library cases. The entire building is lighted with electricity and we expect to hold our love feasts in this church. The basement is beautifully fitted up for the junior Sunday-school.

The building committee, consisting of Brethren S. J. Rudy, E. M. Fox, P. H. Beery, O. L. Hartle and Harry Fox, deserve the highest praise for their wholehearted absorption in their work, and for giving us a church whose interior is convenient and attractive, but not elaborate. We, as members of this church, feel that we may build well of stone, "but with flesh better; a temple made not with hands, but riveted of hearts; and that kind of building, crimson-veined, is indeed eternal."

Annual Meeting of 1911.

BY M. R. MURRAY,
Corresponding Secretary Committee of Arrangements.

ST. JOSEPH'S advantages, as a convention city, are manifold. Her charms as a natural beauty spot are innumerable. Perched upon a majestic row of bluffs, the city reigns supreme over the broad, fertile fields of Kansas, affording the spectator a magnificent view of plains, hills, woodland and waterways. The Missouri River wends its course like a silvery thread past the western boundary of the city. On a clear day a view of from twelve to fifteen miles may be obtained. On the north, east, and south, extends the gorgeous natural scenery native to Missouri,—broad, level fields, verdant hills and the purpling horizon. As to local improvements St. Joseph is surpassed by probably no other city of her size in the Middle West. Parks, drives and beautiful residence districts are numerous, and hotel and transportation facilities are unusually good. While it may not be of vast importance to the visitor, St. Joseph is regarded as one of the most substantial business cities in the West, her position as a jobbing center ranking fourth in the entire United States.

Beautiful Lake Contrary, situated less than two miles from St. Joseph's southern limits, is coveted by many cities, and, indeed, it ought to be. Extending in length five miles from north to south, the lake affords the best obtainable advantages as a place of recreation. There is good electric railway service and our street car service, in general, is among the best anywhere. Lake Contrary is well worth a visit and one will not soon forget a visit to the place.

Krug Park has received the highest commendation from expert landscape architects. Embracing twenty acres of rolling ground, the park is an earthly paradise, rich in generously-designed floral displays, zoölogical gardens and artistic improvements. We anticipate having services at our parks during the convention week, affording outsiders an opportunity to hear the Gospel. The parks will be ours to enjoy and at our disposal during the Conference. In fact the city will be turned over to us, with all its accommodations, for the enjoyment of our people.

There is also a well-cared-for chain of municipal parks about the city, and numerous breathing spots are now in course of development in the residence districts.

The Auditorium, where the main sessions will be held, covers one-half block, with a seating capacity, when entirely arranged for, for about 10,000 to 11,000 people. It is a magnificent edifice, erected by the people recently,—for the people and their highest interests. Other sessions will be held in the Tootle-Shubert and Lyceum buildings, which are within two blocks of the Auditorium and in the business district of the city. The hotels rank among the leading hotels of the country. The Hotel Robidoux, a handsome fireproof structure, lately completed, and the Metropole, St. Charles and the Central will accommodate a large portion of the delegates and visitors. The St. Joseph Commercial Club is sparing no pains in securing the best there is for our people, and the city is large enough to care for all that may come. A special canvass is being made of the best available and modern homes for our visitors. The city will be so supplied with signs that one will have no trouble in getting about our beautiful convention city. St. Joseph prides itself in handling big conventions, and many of them, and we can amply care for the visitors to the coming Conference. We are arranging to make it a great spiritual feast to all who may attend.

Most of the visitors, upon arrival in St. Joseph, will alight at the Union Passenger Station, and will be met by a reception committee and escorted to the Convention headquarters. The railroads, and Commercial Club will maintain information bureaus about the city, for the accommodation of visitors, and the native hospitality of its citizens will be unreservedly lavished upon the delegates and members of the Church of the Brethren.

Reservations will soon open for rooms and accommodations, and as soon as they are arranged, a notice will be given of same.

Going Up to Jerusalem.

Siege and Looting of Kerak.—No. 5.

TO "lie down and go to sleep," under such circumstances, was ordinarily out of the question. However, after some of us had satisfied our curiosity by going out and watching the looters finishing the officer's house, we all sought our beds again and were really asleep, when there came another banging on the door and Abu Jerius was called for. Again he went out to the Arabs,—this time only four in number,—who brandished their knives and guns at him saying, "You are secreting an officer or soldier in this compound." Of course the charge was denied, but again reiterated by the accusers, who said, "One of our men on the housetop saw him enter this door," incidentally showing how closely we were being watched. Mr. Forder again told them there was no one hiding anywhere in the buildings. They said, "Swear by your God." He said, "Not here." They said, "Swear by your religion." He said again, "Not here." They said, "Swear by your prophet, Christ." Again the answer came, "Not here." At this the Sheikh's son, who had once before been to our room,—one of the four now present,—said, "Abu Jerius does not lie; for fifteen years ago he told me he would come to see my wounded father the third day, and he came according to his promise, and through a blinding snowstorm." They then went their way, and we had no further disturbance during the night.

Here I may relate the circumstance which so easily could have resulted in the killing of every one of our party. Early in the evening, when the officer found his hope of assistance entirely cut off, and sometime before the Arabs reached his house, he slipped out, under the cover of darkness. Coming to the back door of the large room in which our animals had been placed, he gained admittance through the muleteers and requested to be let down into one of the cisterns beneath the floor. This was soon accomplished. Of course, Mr. Forder was absolutely innocent of this fact, when he stated, that no one was hiding within the compound. This increased our danger very materially, for had he been found after our affirming that he was not there, nothing could have saved our necks from the furious Arabs.

There were four ladies in our company, and ladies sometimes get the reputation of being a little nervous under dangerous and trying circumstances, but I wish to say, to the credit of the ladies, that there was scarcely any exhibition of fear, nervousness, or excitement, neither was there anything of the kind demonstrated by any member of the party. On the other hand a calm repose, confidence and courage took possession of each heart, that was a surprise to every one of us. It was the very thing we had prayed for, yet we were surprised when it came. Truly, God does know what his children need under every circumstance, and I think not one of us was slow to recognize whence this peace, filling our hearts, emanated.

By morning we were convinced that we need not look to the Turkish Government for protection or assistance, for at an early hour,—even at daylight,—a Christian gentleman, who had helped in the mission work, and who had dined with us on Sunday, came to us, reporting that more than three hundred were killed the day before; that the Government buildings, excepting the Castle, had all been looted, the treasury included. He said that the prison had been opened and the prisoners set free, and that the Governor, our genial friend and entertainer, was a prisoner in his own house, which was near the Castle walls, where the Arabs could not attack him because of the soldiers in the Castle. Yet he could not make his escape to the Castle for fear of the Arab guns. The shops, for the most part, were already looted, and the shopkeepers, with their families, had their throats cut. Every form of excess in looting had been resorted to. It was estimated that not less than ten thousand Arabs had reached the city between Sunday evening and Tuesday morning.

Their plan of attack, as we learned later, was this: In the first place the Turkish Government had made several demands of the Arabs,—First, that they should give up their arms; second, that such of their young men, as were of an age to do service in the army should be enrolled, meaning that when once enrolled, they would be drafted and compelled to enter military service. Now there are two peculiar characteristics in the average Arab. He loves his knife and gun better than his wife, and his son better than himself, so it was a tremendous thing that the Government was asking of them, from the Arab standpoint. Their chief men had some stormy sessions, in council over the matter. Finally the most of them agreed that they would appear to submit to the demands made of them, and this was their plan: The district of these sixteen tribes is a large one, and consequently there were about twelve hundred soldiers in the Kerak garrison, all armed with modern small caliber, long range rifles. The principal sheikhs said to the Turkish authorities: "We will submit to your demands but we must have some of the soldiers help us carry out the enrollment and disarming." They also said they had made eight sections of the district, and wanted forty soldiers and two cannons for each section. This the Turks readily granted them and forty soldiers were sent to each section. Not long after the Arab chiefs returned to Kerak, and said that the Arabs were running away, that the sections were too large, that they must make sixteen sections of the district, and that forty soldiers and two cannon must go to each. In the aggregate, this would take out of the garrison six hundred and forty of the twelve hundred soldiers, and thirty-two of the thirty-three cannon, yet the authorities readily granted them this second request also. We actually met about one hundred of these soldiers going out on this mission, on our way to Kerak. After these sixteen companies of forty men each had reached their stations, it was planned that they were to be killed Sunday evening, immediately after which the Arabs were to start to Kerak. This part of the plan was carried out, and all the six hundred and forty were killed, excepting those whom we met on our way. The officers of this last company were invited to dine by the Arabs, and during the meal they were killed, but the men learned of this, and fortified themselves as best they could, thus saving their lives, or at least most of them.

Kerak rapidly filled with armed Arabs on Sunday and Sunday night. The plan for Kerak was, that at nine o'clock on Monday morning, when the soldiers were out on the drill ground, without arms, the Arabs were to divide, one company capturing the Castle, and the other taking and killing the unarmed soldiers. Had they carried out this part of their plan as well as that with the soldiers in the country, it would have been accomplished, but the success already attained made them so anxious for loot, that they could not await the appointed time, but, long before daylight on Monday morning, they began an attack on the Government building, shops, etc.

The Rebaptism Question.

BY DANIEL HAYS.

A CIVIL officer may perform, by virtue of his office, any act prescribed by law for him to do within the bounds of his jurisdiction during the term of his office, and such act will stand the test of the law. But when his term of office expires, or for any misdemeanor he be removed from office, or if he be a nonresident, or a foreigner, or in any way associated with a different government, any act he may perform, in such official capacity, will not stand the test of law in any civil court. There is no way to legalize such an irregular procedure. It must be done by a regularly-authorized officer of the law. There is no one who would risk his title to a piece of land unless it was executed by a magistrate, or notary public, who is regularly authorized by the County and State where the transaction took place.

On the other hand, shall the church be less consistent in the interpretation and requirements of the Gospel of the Kingdom of God than the civil government in that of the law of the land? Is the law of Christian baptism of so little importance that the church may endorse its performance by an irregular, unauthorized administrator, and by one who is not in communion with the church?

Baptism stands at the very entrance into the kingdom, and is a condition of entrance into the church. "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body" (1 Cor. 12:13). To recognize irregular baptism to be consistent, is to sanction open communion. The antecedents of baptism are true teaching, faith, and repentance, and these can not be placed after baptism, when the Word of God requires that each precede the sacred rite. The fact that the antecedents of baptism, especially the teaching, were found to be erroneous, imperfect and insufficient, rendered the baptism itself inadequate. (See Acts 19:1-6.)

The Twelfth Apostle.

BY D. E. CRIPE.

WHOSE name shall appear in the foundation of the apostles and prophets, made vacant by the fall of Judas Iscariot,—Matthias or Paul? This is an interesting question, and one which carries with it more practical importance, perhaps, than appears at first sight. The only light we can get on this subject is from the Scriptures of Divine Truth.

An apostle was one chosen of the Lord and sent out. One of his chief duties was, "Founding churches and upholding them by supernatural power." (Smith's Bible Dictionary). The night before Christ chose his twelve apostles he was engaged in prayer; he prayed all night. The choosing of the apostles was a very important work, even for Christ, who knew what was in the heart of every one. In this choosing he was not circumscribed by any limits, but chose whomsoever he would.

While the eleven apostles and disciples were tarrying according to the command of Christ, waiting to be endued with power from on high, they felt the need of one to fill the broken ranks of the twelve. They had always been sent out two by two to do their work, and now there was an odd number, a continual reminder that one of their number had proved to be a traitor. Peter stood up and said, "One must be ordained to be a witness with us of his resurrection." They appointed two who had the proper qualifications. Apparently the apostles did this appointing, for he addresses himself to them. These two had been with them all the time that "the Lord Jesus went in and out among us." Therefore, when Christ did his selecting, he must have passed by these two as not having the proper qualifications. After they had appointed these two, they prayed the Lord to show which of the two he had chosen. The lot fell on Matthias, and after that he was "numbered with the eleven apostles."

Two things are to be noted here. The apostles, as yet unfilled with the Holy Ghost, selected two men, and asked the Lord to choose from them an apostle. This limited him to choose, not from the whole world, as he before had done, but to two men whom they had selected. Then, again, we have this testimony by Luke, "He was numbered with the eleven apostles." This numbering, according to the sacred writer, was done by the people. He is silent as to whether the Lord numbered him as an apostle. But he could have been numbered with the eleven apostles, as filling up the gap in their broken ranks, without being counted an apostle. Indeed, Luke never says that he was numbered as one of the twelve apostles.

It need not, for a moment, be thought that the apostles did wrong thus to select one to fill their ranks. It was necessary that the vacancy should be filled, to prepare them for active work. But it was not necessary that the twelfth one must be an apostle. A minister of high character and high qualifications answered almost as well. This, no doubt, Matthias was, but we have no account that he was ever "sent out" by the Lord as an apostle.

As we have only one witness to testify that Matthias was even "numbered with the eleven apostles," so we have only one witness to substantiate the fact that Paul was an apostle. Unfortunately, perhaps, this witness is Paul himself. But in a case of this kind the character and veracity of the witness counts for much. As a witness in every other matter Paul has been found perfectly truthful. In testifying that he was an apostle he had nothing selfish to gain, and we have no right to believe that in this one isolated case he was a false witness and in everything else true.

According to Paul's own account, which is accepted as truth by Luke, Paul was miraculously converted. The Lord told him when he was smitten to the ground, "I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, to make thee a minister and a witness both of these things which thou hast seen, and of those things in the which I will appear unto thee; delivering thee from the people, and from the Gentiles, unto whom now I send thee, to open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in me" (Acts 26:16-18). Thus was Paul not only especially called to conversion, but especially sent to preach to the Gentiles.

On several occasions after this time, the Lord sent Paul to preach to the Gentiles. While he was engaged in the work of preaching to the Gentiles and founding churches, Paul had the Divine assurance that his work pleased the Lord, for he was Divinely visited, encouraged and strengthened. If founding churches and upholding them by supernatural power is the work of an apostle, Paul gave as much evidence of being an apostle as any of the eleven. If accomplishing great work for the Lord is such an evidence, Paul accomplished more than any of the eleven.

He opens eight of his epistles by introducing himself as "Paul, an apostle," and sometimes adds, "Not of men, neither by man, but by Jesus Christ, and God the Father." Again he says, "Neither went I up to Jerusalem to them which were apostles before me" (Gal. 1:17). If they were apostles before him, it naturally follows that he was now also an apostle. In writing to the Corinthians he asks these questions: "Am I not an apostle? am I not free? Have I not seen Jesus Christ our Lord? Are not ye my work in the Lord?" There can evidently be but one answer to these questions, and that is "yes."

A careful study of this subject can lead to but one conclusion. Paul thought he was an apostle. If he was not an apostle, chosen by the Lord and sent out by the Lord, he must have been deceived. If he was mistaken on this subject, was he right on everything else?

The only evidence we have that Matthias was an apostle is the language of Luke, "He was numbered with the eleven apostles," which is not strong nor decisive. We have it clear and plain in almost every epistle which Paul wrote, that he was an apostle, an apostle chosen, instructed, and sent out by the Lord himself. We do no violence to any other Scripture by accepting him at his word, but if we refuse to accept his word on this subject, it weakens our faith in everything else which he has written. Let us not question the correctness or the veracity of a witness who was always found truthful, who sacrificed as much, who labored as much, who accomplished as much, as Paul did, and who was faithful to the martyr's death.

The Mexican Trouble.

BY JACOB FUNK.

It is painful to note what flimsy excuses for hostilities can be manufactured when war is the game of nations.

Several years ago, when the Cubans were making a determined effort to gain their independence, there was a widespread cry in the United States to aid them on the ground of humanity. Just now, when civil war is raging in Mexico, there is a cry for interference on the part of many Americans,—not for humanity's sake but because of the vast business interests of Americans in Mexican territory. The mobilizing of one-fourth of the standing army of the United States, near the Mexican territory, and bringing near the Mexican coast several of our war-ships, is interpreted to mean war, in case our interests in Mexico should suffer.

What a spectacle to the world we Americans are! Claiming to be a Christian nation,—followers of him who is the Prince of Peace,—and yet, on the slightest provocation, we are ready to muster arms and go forth to slay and destroy.

There can be no questions but what, if the friendly influence of the United States were exercised, to bring about a reconciliation in Mexican affairs, much would be accomplished.

The trouble is that, for the past few years, the United States has been increasing her military equipment on such a vast scale, that now she has a keen desire to see what can be done with such an equipment.

The following extract from a letter, written by a soldier, indicates the spirit of the men composing our standing army just now: "It is a dandy practice, whatever it is, and all the boys are just itching to do something." This "itch" to do something will manifest itself, in some way, and if it is not war for humanity, it will be war for the protection of business interests or something else. Surely the outlook for the millennium in the near future is not so bright.

It seems to me that just now would be a very good time for every local congregation to petition the President of the United States to do nothing in the Mexican trouble that will, in any way, reflect upon the good will and friendly relations that exist between our own and the Mexican Government.

The Book.

BY LULU C. PENTECOST.

I NOTICED a short article in THE MESSENGER of Feb. 18, 1911, which set me to thinking. Therein was noted that the Educational Boards of various States were advocating the study of the Bible in the high schools.

It is true, as was stated, that many of the teachers are incompetent to take upon themselves the sacred responsibility of teaching this Book; still, I can not help but feel that surely some good would be done.

My personal experience leads me to that conclusion, because I shall never forget the impression given me of the Bible in the hands of two of my teachers in the Clinton, Mo., high school. In the convocation of our classes, each morning, these men read selections from the Bible; then, in unison, the entire assembly would repeat the Lord's Prayer.

One of these teachers, Mr. Arthur Lee, had the goodly gift of making persons live, and scenes tangible, as he read of them from the printed page; and never shall I forget his reading, one morning, Paul's defense before Agrippa. Mark Antony's oration over Cæsar's dead body has never since seemed to me so superbly perfect.

I was at the age when the youth begins to feel within him that God-given force of thinking. Like many another, I was still a novice, and could not rightly realize that delicate judgment was needed to control this power; and, as do others, I felt like scoffing at the Bible and God's holy religion.

But now, when, to some extent, I comprehend, and humbly speak with reverence, the impression that my teacher made of the Bible and its sacredness; and its nobleness of these, still remains. Very few impressions, given me by the hands of man, stand so vividly as does the memory of the Sacred Book in the hands of two of my high school teachers.

I do not presume to speak authoritatively, but what harm will its use in the schools inflict? Some heart, as was mine, will be touched, because its influence is ever subtle and penetrating.

The Mack Memorial Tablet.

BY M. C. SWIGART

ON Sunday afternoon, April 9, at 2:30 o'clock, there will be unveiled and dedicated, in the old Mother Church at Germantown, a brass tablet, a memorial to Alexander Mack, Sr. This tablet is the gift of seventy-five persons, each person giving one dollar. The contributions came from six different States. Nineteen women are contributors. Three contributors bear the name of Mack and are the direct descendants of Alexander Mack. An invitation is extended to all who can, to be present, especially the contributors: Bro. M. G. Brumbaugh will deliver the memorial address. The old mother church now has three of these Memorial Tablets. The first was placed in 1899, to the memory of Christopher Sower and father. The second was placed in 1909 to Peter Keyser and wife, and this, the third, is placed in memory of Alexander Mack.

We wish yet to see a memorial in the old church to Alexander Mack, Jr., who served the Germantown church so long and faithfully. The following is the inscription on the tablet to be unveiled:

ALEXANDER MACK,
The First Minister
And Organizer of the
CHURCH OF THE BRETHREN.

Born in Schriesheim, Germany, ...1679
Baptized in River Eder, ...1708
Organized the Church at Schwarzenau, ...1708
Came to America, ...1729
Died in Germantown, ...1735

He was a man of strong conviction and a careful and devout student of the BIBLE. He organized a church with no creed, but with all the NEW TESTAMENT ordinances, as taught by Jesus and his immediate followers.

DEATH OF BRO. JACOB HOLDERMAN.

The subject of this sketch was born in Holmes County, Ohio, April 16, 1837, and died within the bounds of the Reedley congregation, Cal. He was in the seventy-fourth year of his age. Bro. Holderman was of Mennonite parentage, and at the age of eleven he moved with his parents to Elkhart County, Ind., where he united with the Mennonite church.

Oct. 16, 1860, he was united in marriage to Catharine Miller. To this union thirteen children were born. His faithful wife and eleven children survive him.

Early in life Bro. Holderman was elected to the ministry in the Mennonite church, and served about a score of years in that capacity. He united with the Church of the Brethren in the Mount Hope congregation, Okla., and in a short time was called to the ministry. For nearly twenty years he was an untiring and faithful worker, serving the church in the Mount Hope, Okla., and Fruitdale, Ala., congregations, thence to Ramona, Kans. From there he removed to Newberg, Oregon, and then to Northern California. He has been living at Reedley, Cal., for over four years.

Bro. Holderman had just returned from a long visit to his old home in Kansas, when he was stricken with paralysis, and was confined to his bed for eight weeks. He suffered intensely, yet he was patient through it all, often saying, "I am glad I can suffer for Christ who suffered so much for me." Finally, on March 8, 1911, God called him to his reward. The young men of this congregation will miss his good counsel and kindly greetings. Services were held in the Brethren church by our elder in charge, Bro. J. J. Brower. Text, 2 Cor. 5.

Reedley, Cal., March 16. W. H. Johnson.

DEATH OF ELD. DANIEL M. BAKER.

March 4, 1911, Eld. Daniel M. Baker, of the Antietam congregation, Pa., passed to his eternal home, aged eighty years, six months and four days.

Bro. Baker was born in the room in which he died, on a farm three miles from Waynesboro. He was not only a good farmer, but a potter by trade. For many years he conducted, what was, at that time, considered a large pottery, and he had an extensive sale for his ware.

Until a little more than a year and a half ago he was apparently in good health. At that time he was overcome by the heat of the sun while cutting weeds in a field. Since then he was confined to his home, spending much of his time in bed. The sunstroke affected his memory, which steadily failed. Finally, it was impossible for him to recognize even those of his own family.

He is survived by his wife, nee Catharine Philippy, four sons and three daughters.

Bro. Baker united with the Church of the Brethren early in life. Many years ago he was elected to the office of deacon. In 1875 he was elected to the ministry. After the death of Eld. Jacob F. Oller, in 1897, Bro. Jacob Snider and he were ordained to the eldership. Upon Bro. Snider's death, in December, 1900, Bro. Baker became presiding elder of the Antietam congregation. In 1902 Bro. Ruthrauff was ordained to assist him in the work. Because of his advancing years, the work of the eldership was soon transferred to his assistant.

Bro. Baker was a sincere Christian. He dearly loved the church with which he was affiliated, and was earnest in his effort toward promoting her welfare. He was gentle, kind and compassionate toward the erring.

Services were held in the Antietam church. Interment in the graveyard adjoining. Eld. C. R. Oberholtz had charge of the services, assisted by his colaborers. Text, Job 5: 26. Sudie M. Wingert.

Waynesboro, Pa., March 15.

EMPIRE, CALIFORNIA.

The love feast and dedication of this church took place March 11 and 12. We had been looking forward to this for a long time. The services began Saturday, March 11, at 10 A. M., at which time Eld. D. R. Holsinger preached for us. At 2 P. M. we met again, when Eld. J. J. Brower gave us a talk. At 6: 30 P. M. we had examination services. Eld. D. R. Holsinger conducted the service. Immediately following this service we had our love feast. Eld. J. J. Brower officiated. One hundred and twenty-one members communed. The sisters had the privilege of breaking the bread and passing the cup.

March 12 we had Sunday-school at 10 A. M. The superintendent held a short session and then had one of the brethren talk to the children, which they enjoyed very much. At 11 A. M. the dedicatory sermon was preached by Eld. S. F. Sanger. He gave a very able discourse. A collection of $133.04 was then taken. Eld. J. W. Deardorff, in giving a short history of the Empire church, brought out the fact that on April 3, 1909, the members met at the home of Eld. J. W. Deardorff to reorganize what is now known as the Stanislaus church, there being only four members left. At that meeting nine letters were read, which made thirteen in all. The name of the congregation was changed from Stanislaus to Empire.

We now have on our church record 146 members, and several more letters are to be read. Seven have been added to the church by baptism. At present we have twelve ministers and eleven deacons, five preaching points, four Sunday-schools that are conducted by the Brethren, one union Sunday-school, and a thriving Christian Workers' Meeting.

The hearts of the members are overflowing with gratitude that we have a house in which to worship. At first services were held at the homes; then in a hall until our church was erected.

Our belief is new to most of the people here, but those who attend our services seem very much impressed. We ask the prayers of the dear brethren and sisters for the success of the work at this place. Myrtle Julius.

THE ROUND TABLE

Two Pictures: One Bright, One Dark.

BY SAMUEL WEIMER.

In Gospel Messenger No. 9, March 4, appeared two articles, one on page 130, under the heading "New Testament Principles and Methods," the other on page 132, under the heading "Optimistic or Pessimistic." These present two pictures. The former is rather a dark one, of a gloomy nature, while the latter is of a bright, cheerful cast.

The former presents the idea that the church has been on a standstill for the last thirty-five years. The writer says, "We have made but little if any appreciable gain." Now, if that be true, it would argue that prior to thirty-five years ago the church did make wonderful gains in her short period of time, and that we, with all of our modern equipment of methods, as adopted by the sanction of Annual Meeting, are at a standstill. Then, why should we try to add more methods? If those already adopted do not prove efficacious, why not fall back upon the method of thirty-five years ago and cancel all others introduced since that time? It seems rather unfair, to me at least, to measure or try to compare the work of the church and her advancement with that of other denominations.

I am fully persuaded that the church has made great advancement in numbers and many other ways. No, I do not believe that the church has been standing still for that period of time, and therefore I would not want to turn back.

Now take a view of the latter picture and what a bright, cheerful outlook it presents! It proves the opposite of the former, and it clearly indicates that the church has not stood still,—simply holding her own,—but that she has been, and is now, on the aggressive. Look at our annual church visits, and where is the church that does more? Then be cheerful and look on the bright side, always!

"I Don't Care."

BY A. G. CROSSWHITE.

Yes, you do, too. It would be a pretty grave case of despondency if you really mean what you say and say what you mean. There are several reasons for making this expression:

First; it may be the safety-valve of an inward fire that first finds expression in the countenance. We call this very undesirable inflation, anger.

Second; it may be the culmination of a series of unsuccessful efforts at any work in which "patience" is at a discount. This is discouragement.

Third; it may be a truthful confession of the loss of self-respect; and, who should pick us up when we deliberately lie down and want to die? In other words who should care for us more than we care for ourselves? This is degeneracy.

Fourth; it is an acknowledgment of the loss of confidence in one's ability to perform a given task. Satan never used a better argument to secure the downfall of a human being than to make him believe (1) that others have lost confidence in him; (2) that he is down and can not get up. This accommplished, he is an easy victim. This is depravity.

Fifth; it is the death wail of "conscience," as she withdraws her guiding hand and takes down the last fingerboard on this side of the dark, mystic river which all are compelled to cross, whether attended or not. This is despair; and, not until the soul realizes its eternal loss, will those three words be fully understood.

A Few Books of Long Ago.

BY EDGAR M. HOFFER.

Recently the writer noticed a few old books in the pulpit of the Canowago meetinghouse, in the Spring Creek congregation, Eastern Pennsylvania. Here we noticed one old hymn book called, "Das Kleine Davidische Psalterspiel." It is a German book, of 512 pages, printed by Samuel Saur in 1791. It is arranged quite differently from the hymn books of a later day.

We noticed here also two old hymn books printed in 1850, and sold by Eld. Henry Kurtz, of Poland, Ohio. We also found an old German hymn book called, "Geistliche Lieder," containing 324 hymns, and dated 1862. We also saw here the hymn books of later years.

The Church of the Brethren has used quite a number of hymn books in days gone by. A new book is being prepared at the present time. This is right, for we need new books from time to time.

We also noticed several German Testaments of 1824, an English Bible of 1823, and a German and English Testament of 1849. Eld. William Hertzler's name may be seen in several of these books. It is probably due to his wisdom and discretion that these books were put here as a memorial for future generations.

As we looked at these sacred books, we did some meditating. The book of 1791 may have been used by Eld. Geo. Miller, and later by Elders Jacob Hollinger and William Hertzler. These brethren have long ago passed from labor to reward.

As we quietly laid the books down again in this sacred pulpit, we were impressed with the thought that the time will surely come when the Brethren who preach here now will also follow those dear old brethren of long ago.

The Upper Newness.

BY R. D. MURPHY.

Some one has said, "There is nothing new under the sun." There is a truth couched in this saying. The novelties we see are perhaps only last year's goods, repainted and placed upon the market. The latest story is the same old thought, told in different words from a different view point. People are allowed to look at things from another perspective and they are said to be new.

Later on some one supplemented the adage with these words, "But there is something new above the sun." These words contain the deeper and more vital truth,—meaning that even up to the sun the material world offers nothing new, but in Jesus, above the sun, are discovered new things. It is this newness, in a glimpse of God, that compels a converted person to retrace his steps, to supplant sin by righteousness and strife by peace. The novelties of the earth do not satisfy the ardent longings of the soul, but the newness in Christ Jesus completely supplies. Surely there is a newness above the sun! If we desire to experience it, we must rise above this world, yea, above the sun into the thin air of the upper firmament where the battle dust has not been stained by human blood in mortal carnage, but where the immortal blood,—the Calvary blood,—stained the cross.

One-Third Right: Three-Thirds Wrong.

BY G. W. ANNON.

[Because of a few mistakes, inadvertently made in placing this incident in type, in a former issue, we are giving it another insertion, in which the keen point is brought out more clearly.—Ed.]

More than forty years ago there was a discussion between two preachers of different persuasions on what it takes to constitute Christian baptism. One was a pedobaptist, the other a Baptist. They discussed the question for three days. At the end of the third day, when they were about to conclude their discussion, —the Baptist having made it very warm for his opponent, the argument being strongly on his side,—his pedobaptist friend said, in his closing remarks: "If there are any Tunkers here, they have my opponent for sure, for the apostolic mode of baptism was trine immersion, and I have the books here to prove it. If I were an immersionist, that is what I would be." The Baptist, in his reply, said: "If that be the case, then I am one-third right, while my opponent is three-thirds wrong."

Precious or Worthless.

BY IDA M. HELM.

It is the kind of work which we do that counts in the structure that each one of us is building in life with our thoughts, words and acts. God cares more for the quality of work we do than for the amount. Don't understand me to mean that we can please God if we are idle half of the time. To be approved, our work must be gold, silver, precious stones. We must do our best. Though we are not able to do much, God will rejoice and claim it as his own. And when this present life is over, we shall find our structure among the many mansions in a better world than this. But if, while busy every moment of our life, our work be chaff, tares, stubbles, God will reject it, and the angels will cast it out, to be burned with the rubbish of a lost, ruined world.

Ashland, Ohio.

A recent number of the Biblical World, an organ of the University of Chicago, contains an article by G. B. Smith, professor of Theology in its Divinity School, asserting that there is no difference between the Bible and other books. He openly repudiates the doctrine of the inspiration and authenticity of the Holy Scriptures. It is deplorable that such misleading teaching is being imparted to the students of this far-famed educational institution of the West, and we need not wonder, if, by and by, there is an alarming increase of unbelief in the minds of those, supposed to be taught by these spiritual (?) guides and leaders. It is a case of the "blind leading the blind," and the end will not be hard to foresee.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

What Is the Use of the Saloon?

Rom. 14: 19-21.

For Sunday Evening, April 9, 1911.

A Lesson for Young Workers.

I. Bible Temperance.—Deut. 21: 20; Prov. 20: 1; 23: 20, 29, 30; Eccles. 10: 17; Luke 21: 34; Rom. 13: 13; 1 Cor. 6: 10; Eph. 5: 18.

II. Bible Samples.—Gen. 9: 21; 1 Sam. 25: 36; Luke 12: 45; 1 Cor. 11: 21.

III. Bible Commands.—Lev. 10: 9; Prov. 23: 31; 31: 4; Rom. 14: 21; 1 Cor. 8: 13.

IV. Fruits of the Saloon.—Gal. 6: 21. (1) Woe: (a) to the saloon-keeper (Hab. 2: 15); (b) to the drinkers (Isa. 5: 11); (c) to those having wine in their feasts (Isa. 5: 12). (2) Shut out from the kingdom (1 Cor. 6: 10). (3) Warning for the young (Prov. 1: 10).

Note.—(1) If Christ stood visibly by your side you could not possibly be vile or mean. A saloon-keeper's little daughter said to him one day: "Papa, why do you not take me down to the store and let me play there? Mary's papa takes her with him, and brings her home at night." The innocent question made the man think. He said: "I can not stay in a business that I am ashamed of. I'm going to quit." (2) Who ever heard of a drunkard making a success of life? (3) Who ever heard of a business man who wanted a boy that drank?

PRAYER MEETING

Getting Ready to Live Forever.

(An Easter Message.)—Col. 3: 1-4; Eccl. 12: 1-7.

For Week Beginning April 9, 1911.

1. Scriptural Testimony.—(1) Paul's longing to be with Christ (Philipp. 1: 21-26). (2) Our earthly home and the hope for the home beyond (2 Cor. 5: 1-9). (3) Job's triumphant faith (Job 19: 25-27). (4) Hezekiah's experience and testimony (Isa. 38: 1-22). (5) Paul's glorious assurance (1 Cor. 15: 42-55). (6) Christ's own view (John 14: 27, 28).

2. Preparing for Eternity.—We can not get ready for eternity if we refuse to think of it, and shrink from the very idea. The central, all-embracing essence of Easter is the thought of immortality. Christ, the first-fruits of the resurrection, has brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel. He alone can reveal the mystery of eternity (2 Tim. 1: 7-12).

3. The Glorious Victory.—Through Christ we have a double victory,—over sin and over death. Victory presupposes warfare, and warfare presupposes enemies. Getting rid of sin is getting ready to live forever. Victory over sin is one part of the wonderful triumph that Easter suggests. Though "the sting of death is sin," "thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." Truly wonderful is the great victory over sin and death (1 Cor. 15: 57).

4. The Life Supernal.—By the valley of darkness we reach the everlasting light,—the life of beatific bliss! We must pass through the depths of the valley ere we can find our way to the mountains of immortality beyond. By dying we are made to live forever,—for the life that is not reached by death seems but half secure. The life that lasts,—the life that is truly immortal and eternal,—is only obtained by dying (1 Thess. 4: 13-18).

HOME AND FAMILY

Christ's "Brethren."

This alley is dark, and lone, and bleak,
But I see the print of the Master's feet.
Its noisome odors my senses greet;
But I catch the smell of his garments sweet.

From out of this den come oath and gibe;
But I hear the Master's voice beside.
The gambler piles his coins of gold;
My Master's wealth is wealth untold.

I see the drunkard pour his wine;
I drink the juice of the living Vine.
A bold-eyed woman crowds my side;
It was for such the Savior died.

In that attic bare a sufferer groans;
In sympathy the Savior moans.
Her children are starved, and pinched, and white;
The little ones are his delight.

My basket holds little to meet such need;
With the blessing of God, 'twill the hungry feed.
So health and comfort, and blessing she brought.
The Master said: "For me 'twas wrought."
—Winifred Spaulding.

The Young Men's Class.

BY ELIZABETH D. ROSENBERGER.

"RONALD came to Sunday-school this morning," said a mother smiling happily.

"I never saw a class grow as fast as that class is growing," said another.

"What is more it is made up of young men who are going to stay by the ship! No desertions there! Every Sunday morning there are one or two new members to be enrolled." The superintendent of the Sunday-school here announced the opening hymn and the conversation ended.

But the Sunday-school class under discussion occasioned much comment in the church. It was made up of young men whose ages ranged from sixteen to twenty,—perhaps a few were older. They were in earnest. And the chairs placed in the aisles, to accommodate the boys, showed that the number was close to fifty; it used to number twelve or fifteen. The boys declared that there were more to follow, and old men thanked God and took courage.

As we listened to these comments, we asked ourselves the question, "Why not?" We always deplore the fact when we find a Sunday-school in charge of women. Do not misunderstand us. We are glad and praise the Lord for all the work being done in our churches by women, but we are looking for the day when John will be just as anxious to do his part of the church work as Alice. We think it is time for us to make an effort to have all the men in the church, at all the church's work. There is much to be done, and both men and women can find employment in the vineyard, the church. But a church which must depend upon women for its Sunday-school, and prayer meeting, and Sunday morning congregations, can never become the power for good in a community that God meant it should be. We are beginning to see that the men are needed in this service, and our boys' class is a result of some earnest thinking and planning.

It is a common thing to criticise the church when our young men refuse to attend services, and it may be that the church is to blame in some cases. But we must remember that men are free to choose and many of them would wander away from the church, if every preacher in the land were perfect and the service were faultless. The Garden of Eden must have been a very attractive place, yet Adam and Eve got away from Eden. So let us not be too hasty in our criticism. Men and boys do not stay away from church because they are bad and do not wish to be better. Religious appeals do not please a man who has decided upon a worldly life; he does not want to be reminded of the unselfish life of Christ when he is bending all his energies towards worldly success. When a man does not want to give up sin, he avoids those places where sin is rebuked. A certain bank cashier,—afterwards a defaulter,—was spoken of as a Sunday-school teacher. But he said, "I quit going to church soon after I started to go wrong."

The young men of today are coming to church. A hundred years ago about five per cent of the students in college were church members; today fifty-nine per cent of the students at Yale University are church members. The boys of today are willing to accept the scriptural test "By their fruits ye shall know them." Despising the church of God, and neglecting its services is not the way to success and contentment. The bloated and blasted men have kept away from religious services because they have departed from right living. The gay and godless young fellows of today are likely to be the failures and wrecks of tomorrow. We are waking up to the fact that salvation means that men shall be saved here and now, in this real and practical time when there are many temptations to draw a man away from home and family. Our boys see that there is real work to be done by Christian men in the temperance cause, and that there are many evils to be overcome. So they come to the church, ready to do valiant service for God.

One young man was seriously considering the question of his soul's salvation. His sister was a regular church attendant. He spoke to her about accompanying her to church. She was one of those who was following the Savior "afar off," and so she failed to recognize the real need in her brother's request. "You wouldn't like the sermon," she frankly assured him. Then she criticised the music. Will the day ever come when people will be content to sing the songs of Zion without so much criticism? She also spoke slightingly of some of the church members. In one way or another not a word of appreciation was spoken for the church, but all the glaring faults of weak members were slightingly referred to, and the family circle broke up that night without realizing that they had put real stumblingblocks in the way of this young man. "If there is no more in it than that, I shall give it no more attention," he said to himself, as he went to bed. Some of our boys are not in church because the evening talk is discouraging; their parents do not try to win them. It may be that parents do not realize the results of criticising church and preacher before the children.

Change must always be where there is life and movement. If you want things to remain the same as years come and go, turn to Arabia, or to China, now suffering from a famine. Do we want such stagnation as is found in the Orient? No, we want to realize that part of our service is to bring about those changes which we ought to bring about. Paul made changes in the early Christian church which were of value. Moses brought changes for which the whole world must bless his name. The young men in our church are ready to work and pray for the advancement of Christ's kingdom on earth. What Jesus told the woman at the well is true today—that God is a Spirit and they who worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth. Purity creates purity. A true, noble life will help others. The best way to make others good is to be good ourselves. We may look for great results from our classes of young men, for their zeal will kindle enthusiasm in others.

"Sing, pray, and swerve not from his ways,
But do thy own part faithfully;
Trust his rich promises of grace,
So shall it be fulfilled in thee.
Who trusts in God's unchanging love,
Builds on the rock that naught can move."

Covington, Ohio.

SPRINGS are little things, but they are sources of large streams; a helm is a little thing, but it governs the course of the ship; a bridle bit is a little thing, but we know its use and power; nails and pegs are little things, but they hold the parts of large buildings together; a word, a look, a smile, a frown are little things, but powerful for good or evil.

SISTERS' AID SOCIETIES

MANSFIELD, ILL.—Our Aid Society met Feb. 15 and reorganized for one year, with Sister Mary Lykins as president; Sister Mary Claudin, vice-president; Sister Mabel Meyer, secretary-treasurer. During the past year we met eleven times, with an average attendance of five. We mended clothing, sewed carpet rags, made new garments and pieced quilts. We sent two sacks of clothing to St. Joseph, Mo., and three sacks of clothing to the Kansas City Mission. Our receipts have been $16.36; expenses, $13.14; leaving $3.22 in the treasury.—Mabel Meyer, Secretary, Mansfield, Ill., March 4.

LIBERTY, ILL.—Our Sisters' Aid Society met at the home of Sister Hester Harshbarger March 11. Eleven members were present. We decided to put down a cement walk in front of our church, sometime during the spring. We adopted a new plan at the last meeting. All the members are to bring their Testaments and read one verse each in regular rotation, beginning at Matt. 1: 16, closing with prayer. We have on hand $13.75.—Rosa Kaiser, R. D. 3, Liberty, Ill., March 18.

DECATUR, ILL.—The Sisters' Aid Society of this church held thirty-six meetings, from Dec. 5, 1905, to March 9, 1911, with an average attendance of five. Our work consisted of piecing and quilting quilts, knitting comforts, making aprons and prayer coverings. We received during this time $44.91. Our expenses were $42.76, leaving a balance of $2.15 in the treasury. We also received two bags of clothing from the Sisters' Aid Society at Cerro Gordo, Ill., to be distributed among the poor. At our council meeting, March 9, the following officers were elected for the year: Sister Nettie Dubes, president; Sister Blanche Barnhart, vice-president; Sister Lulu Hoffman, secretary. May the Lord bless us and may we be able to do more and better work this year, is our prayer.—Hattie E. Oliver, 2121 N. Woodford Ave., Decatur, Ill., March 12.

DONIPHAN, KANS.—During the past year we held sixteen meetings, with an average attendance of five. The work consisted mostly of quilting comforts. We received for quilting $11.25; paid out for cement walks, $7; for chairs for the church, $3.60; for a pole sheet, $1. We sent $5 to the Denver Mission about 160 articles. At present we have $11 in the treasury. The following officers were elected for the coming year: Sister Emma Sprinkle, president; Sister Shank, secretary-treasurer. We meet for sewing every two weeks. We feel encouraged to do more and better work in the future. We pray that we may become interested in this good work of helping the needy, that whatsoever our hands find to do we may do it with our might. We desire the prayers of the brethren and sisters in behalf of the work here.—Sadie Potter, Doniphan, Kans., March 14.

OUTRICK, O.—In preference to having the sisters work alone, the brethren and sisters have joined forces and formed a society to be known as the Brethren Aid Society, with Bro. J. C. Shininger as president; Bro. E. W. Shininger, vice-president; Sister Birdie Lehman, secretary; Bro. J. D. Shininger, treasurer. We decided to have a business meeting at the church the first Friday evening of each month, and working meetings at the homes of the sisters, when there is occasion for them. Sister Hannah Neher was chosen manager of the working meetings, with Sister Minnie Lehman as assistant. Will say to the sisters who have been ordering prayer coverings, that we can put the price of them at twenty-five cents in the future, instead of twenty as before. We hope to be favored with this year in the work before, as we will have the support of the brethren.—Birdie R. Lehman, Guthrie, Okla., March 15.

SALAMONIE, IND.—Our Sisters' Aid Society of the Loon Creek house, met and reorganized March 8. Sister Sarah A. Thatcher is our president; Sister Matilda Eckman, superintendent; the writer, secretary-treasurer. Sisters Charlotte Potts, Lauru Eckman and Cullerine Moss were chosen as a committee to solicit funds to paint the roof to the house of congregation. During the year we held twenty meetings, with an attendance of seven. Collections and donations for the year amount to $21.38; received for work done, $19.34; carried over from last year, $5.87; amount received during the year, $43.79; paid out $31.69; leaving $12.70 in the treasury. We sent one sack of clothing and one comfort to the Mexico Orphans' Home; gave $5 to the Kansas City Mission and $5 for a Bible to the minister's wife. During the year we sold one comfort, one quilt and fifty aprons. May the Lord and pray that we may do more work next year.—Nora M. Paul, Huntington, Ind., March 14.

WEST DAYTON, OHIO.—We herewith give a report of the Sisters' Aid Society, College Street, for the quarter ending March 1, 1911. We had $8.46 in the treasury Dec. 1, 1910; basket collections and sales during the quarter, $38.21; money received for work done, $2.00; turned over to the treasurer of the Aid Society, $50.36; total amount in the treasury during the quarter, $58.46; paid out for mission work, $25; for Home Missions, $25; for clothing, $19.20; total amount paid out, $69.20; balance in the treasury to date, $10.76. Seven meetings were held during the quarter, with an average attendance of seven. Our society consisted of piecing comforts, quilting, making prayer coverings, bonnets, aprons and various kinds of sewing. We held two all-day meetings, which were largely attended and well enjoyed. We are encouraged with the work, and hope, by the help of God, to do more and better work this year. In his name.—Beede Abshire, 1839 West Second St., Dayton, Ohio, March 18.

SOUTH BEATRICE, NEBR.—In the past fourteen months the Beatrice Sisters' Society has held twenty-five meetings, with an average attendance of eleven, and a collection of $16.16. We have received from dues $28.15, and for work comfort $2.25; making a total collection of $56.56. We donated one day's work for the Sister. Our expenses were $53.56. Out of this we sent $16 to support an India orphan. At one time we sent twenty-five articles of clothing to the Orphans' Home. We sent four sacks, containing four comforts, two quilts, forty pieces of second-hand goods and twenty new garments, with a cash donation of $3. At another time we sent two sacks of clothing, containing one comfort, one quilt, ten new garments, and several second-hand garments and one pair of shoes to Kansas City. These goods were valued at $45. Our society has been in existence for five years, and the same superintendent has served all the time, except one year. Many times we have become discouraged and would probably have failed but for her untiring efforts to keep the work going. As a token of appreciation for what she has done for the society, we presented Sister Cripe with a rug for a Christmas present. The present officers are: Sister Lizzie Miller, president; Sister Susan Cripe, superintendent; Sister Grace Cullen, secretary-treasurer.—Grace Cullen, Secretary, R. D. 3, Beatrice, Nebr., March 18.

MIDDLE RIVER, VA.—Feb. 11 closed another year's work of the Sisters' Aid Society. Twelve meetings were held during the year, among these three all-day meetings, with an average attendance of eighteen. Our work consisted chiefly of making quilts, comforts and coverings. Five quilts, seven and five comforts and a number of prayer coverings were made. One quilt was donated to the Washington City Mission, and bonnet was sent to a sister at Wayside, and several prayer coverings were donated to "Sunshine," such as clothing, etc. It was sent to Sister Rebecca Click, of Bridgewater. Our financial report is as follows: Amount in the treasury at the beginning of the year, $22.28; received for monthly collections, $42.70; received by subscriptions for wardrobe, $6.30; received for work done, $12.76; total amount, $84.03. Our amounts paid out are as follows: Paid to the Orphans' Home, $25; to the Brethren's Home, $5; to the Washington City church, $5; to the District Mission Board, $10; to Home missions, to send the Gospel Messenger to the poor, $5; to the Kansas City Mission, $5; for carpet for a new room, $6.50; for wardrobe, $9; for goods, etc., $16.77; total amount paid out, $82.27; leaving a balance on hand of $11.75. Officers for the ensuing year are as follows: Sister Mary Garber, president; Sister Barbara Norford, secretary; Sister Mary Garber, treasurer. Our work is small, yet we feel the Lord approves of the feeble efforts. We ask the prayers of all the dear brethren and sisters in our behalf.—Barbara E. Norford, Secretary, Mount Sidney, Va., March 18.

☞All business and communications intended for the paper should be addressed to the BRETHREN PUBLISHING HOUSE, ELGIN, ILL., and not to any individual connected with it.

BRO. E. B. LEFEVER, of Pennsylvania, changes his address from Lancaster to Groff's Store.

BRO. J. CARSON MILLER, of Virginia, should now be addressed at Timberville, instead of Moore's Store.

FROM Lordsburg, Cal., Bro. Wm. Lampin went to Glendora, where he is engaged in an interesting revival meeting.

BRO. J. B. BOWMAN, who removed from Fountain City, Tenn., to Michigan, should be addressed at Hardwood Lake.

BRO. A. L. B. MARTIN, of Harrisburg, Pa., has accepted a call from the church at Long Beach, Cal., and will enter upon his work as pastor April 1.

BRO. O. C. CASKEY, of Iowa, but now of Chicago, called at the MESSENGER office on Monday of this week. This was his first visit to the Publishing House.

ON page 195, this issue, the Corresponding Secretary of the Annual Meeting Committee of Arrangements, has something to say about the coming Conference.

THE Sunday-school workers of Southwestern Missouri and Northwestern Arkansas will convene at Nevada, Mo., on Easter Sunday, April 16. The program for the meeting will be published next week.

BRO. PAUL MOHLER, of Chicago, says that he will have time to do some Bible Institute work, in the Middle West, during the month of May. Those desiring his services should address him at 3435 West Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

BRO. J. G. RARICK and wife, after spending the winter at Glendale, Arizona, have left for the Middle West, and may be addressed at Batavia, Iowa, R. F. D. They say that there is a good opening for a wide-awake minister at Glendale.

How many of our patrons have read the Brethren literature since Bro. Henry Kurtz started the GOSPEL VISITOR in 1851 to the present time? We shall be glad to hear from all of them. A few of them may have some interesting experiences to narrate.

UNDER date of Feb. 23, Bro. W. B. Stover, of Ankleshwr, India, writes us saying, that Bro. Wieand was in his home at the time, having just returned from a visit to some of the older missions in various parts of India. Bro. Souders had also returned from a visit to Calcutta, and some other points. Both of these brethren had planned to be at the District Meeting, held one week later.

THE rebaptism question would appear to be an interesting one, and is being discussed by several close thinkers and good writers. We have already heard from Brethren I. J. Rosenberger, L. W. Teeter and Daniel Hays. We are next to hear from Bro. Noah Longanecker and B. E. Kesler. We shall publish a limited number of articles on the subject,—enough, at least, to help our people to do some of their best thinking.

BRO. ISAAC FRANTZ, of Pleasant Hill, Ohio, is in the third week of his meetings at Lancaster, Pa, with twenty converts, who have chosen to serve Jesus and enjoy eternal life.

THE District Meeting of Northern Virginia is to be held in the Zion church, near Luray, Page Co., April 13 and 14. The elders of the District are requested to meet on the 12th at 2 P. M.

SISTER CATHARINE HOOVER MILLER, well known as the widow of Bro. S. W. Hoover, recently buried her second husband, Bro. Aaron Miller, of Dayton, Ohio. She is, for the present making her home with her son, Bro. O. P. Hoover, 5518 Kimbark Ave., Chicago, Ill.

SUNDAY, April 9, is the day set for unveiling the Alexander Mack Memorial Tablet in the mother church at Germantown, Pa. Bro. M. G. Brumbaugh is to deliver the address for the occasion, and the services will begin at 2: 30 P. M. For further particulars see page 197, this issue.

SOME religious papers, for various causes, omit an issue occasionally, but the MESSENGER has not missed a week since the office was moved to Elgin in the fall of 1899, and only a few times, during all these years, have we gone to press even a few hours late. This means a regularity of which not many papers can boast.

We receive a letter from Bro. D. L. Miller every few days. His health seems to be fairly good, and he is much interested in the general movements of the Brotherhood. He expects to be with us next week, for the purpose of attending the meeting of the General Mission Board, which meets on Thursday morning, April 6.

BRO. W. R. MILLER, who may now be addressed at Nappanee, Ind., Box 564, writes of the safe arrival of his party at New York, practically on schedule time. While crossing the Atlantic his vessel was struck by lightning and the wireless equipment put out of commission. Aside from this, little damage was done to the vessel, and none of the passengers, 1,200 in number, were injured.

THOSE who discuss the rebaptism question, or any other open Conference question, will please not single out writers holding opposite views, and reply to them. Let each article stand strictly on its own merits. It will be sufficient for each writer to present his own side of the case, and grant his brother, on the other side, the same privilege. In this way there can be an exchange of views without drifting into personalities.

WRITING from Hagers Grove, Mo., Bro. G. S. Lapp says: "Send us a preacher. Our minister is old, in poor health and not able to do much." We certainly would be pleased to send preachers where they are needed, and where they would be appreciated, but it is now like it was in the time of Christ: "The harvest is great, but the laborers are few." If we knew of a few preachers like Brethren James R. Gish and John Metzger were, in their prime, we would be sure to mail this request to one of them. Possibly this notice will reach the eyes of some one who will be only too glad to go to an isolated place and help an aged shepherd feed the flock entrusted to him by the Master.

We have just received information concerning the death of Bro. A. L. Clair, of Willard, Wis., one of our promising young ministers, who was killed in a sawmill on Friday of last week. To make the situation more distressing, he leaves a wife with a little babe only one week old. At the time of his death Bro. Clair was a member of the Auditing Committee for the Brotherhood, in which position he had served a number of years. He also had considerable experience in educational work as a member of the faculty of Mount Morris College. Failing health made it necessary for him to close his connection with the institution. He was widely and favorably known and the news of his departure will be received with many regrets.

MR. WM. A. MCKEEVER, of Manhattan, Kans., is publishing a number of Home Training Bulletins that ought to be widely read. They deal with this class of subjects: "The Cigarette-smoking Boy," "Teaching the Boy to Save," "A Better Crop of Boys and Girls." We have Bulletin No. 3, entitled, "Training the Girl to Help in the Home." These tracts are full of good common sense and ought to do good. They may be had at one cent a copy. The author is Professor of Philosophy at the Kansas State Agricultural College, and knows what he is writing about.

THE Detroit Times has decided to admit no more liquor advertisements into its columns. In justification of its sensible policy the editor says: "To many, the young especially, beer drinking is the beginning of evil. It seems to lead directly to that excess which jeopardizes health, position, happiness. Morally, industrially, economically, the age is against the intemperance of which beer drinking is often the first stage. The Times believes it has no moral right to antagonize the conscientious convictions of homes and communities through what it prints in its advertising columns. We do not care to be talking beer every day to people who do not want their children to be invited to drink it by their home paper; nor to those who ought not to drink it."

AN earnest worker on the frontier wishes to know whether it would be proper to select an outsider to superintend a Brethren Sunday-school. In a community where we do not have enough efficient members to officer a school, such a course might possibly be an unfortunate necessity, and therefore justifiable, but as a rule the officers and teachers in a Brethren Sunday-school should be converted men and women. Brethren and sisters, who are not willing to take hold and help along with the church work, in new localities, where there are but few members, should not be too free about criticising one or two irregularities of this sort. It is one thing for all the members to come to the front and help the Sunday-school out of a tight place, but quite another to stand off and find fault with the few faithful ones who are doing their best to carry forward the Lord's work.

TALK about the preachers of the past generation or two not doing anything in the way of educational work among us! Had it not been for the money furnished by them, we wonder how many colleges and schools there would be in the Brotherhood? Deduct from the large sums of money, raised for education, all that has been paid by the hard-working preachers, and what per cent, do you think, would be left? We have scores of kind-hearted preachers, who never attended college a day, that have given their thousands of dollars to educate the young men and young women of the present and future generations. Is it just to say that these earnest Christian men have never done anything worth mentioning in the interests of advanced education? Candidly, if the future generation shall do as well, proportionately, as has been done by these preachers, we may look for some marvelous results before the close of another century.

We have just finished reading that splendid volume, "Mormonism Against Itself," by Samuel W. Traum, with Christian Standard Publishing Company, Cincinnati, Ohio, publishers. It is a neatly-printed cloth-bound volume of 321 pages, and sells for $1. We regard this as the very best treatise that we have yet seen on Mormonism. The author takes the Mormons at their word, compares what they say with known facts, and shows most clearly that their claims, all the way through, are a gigantic fraud. More than ordinary attention is given to the claims of the Book of Mormon, along with what has been recorded from time to time in the Book of Doctrine. By testimony that can not be called into question, he most securely fastens polygamy on Joseph Smith, Jr., and proves that he not only taught the doctrine, but that he actually had a number of wives while residing at Nauvoo, Ill. We recommend the book to those who need to be posted on Mormonism. It may be ordered from this office.

BRO. W. B. STOVER, of India, says that last year he baptized sixty natives, and so far this year twelve have confessed Christ and received baptism. He could easily baptize four times as many, did he not insist on some special and very necessary teaching before administering the rite.

BRO. J. E. MILLER, President of Mount Morris College, and Bro. E. T. Keiser, of Pomona, Cal., accompanied by their wives, have arranged to visit the Bible Lands during the coming summer. They sail June 10 and land at Naples June 22. From there they go direct to Egypt, then to Palestine, and thence to Greece and Italy. While abroad they are to visit Switzerland and other points in Europe, and sail from England in time to be at the opening of the school at Mount Morris in the fall.

THE suffering in China has touched the hearts of a number of our people, and they have sent their liberal offerings to the General Mission Board here at Elgin, to be forwarded by their Secretary to the section of China where the money can be used to the best advantage. While the MESSENGER is making no special call for funds to help care for these starving people, still the Secretary of the Board will take pleasure in forwarding all the money sent the Board for that purpose. It will be placed where it is needed, and where it will be properly applied.

Sanctification.

IT is feared, says one of our correspondents, that some of our members do not believe in the doctrine of sanctification and holiness. Possibly they do not, in the sense the doctrine is sometimes taught. Sanctification means the setting apart of something for a holy or a religious use. God sanctified the Seventh Day. That is, he set it apart for a holy use. He also sanctified the tabernacle. He dedicated it to the Lord, and had it set apart for a religious use. Sanctification also means to cleanse, or to make holy. When one is fully set apart to serve the Lord, or is dedicated to the Lord, then he is sanctified; he is made holy.

In John 17: 17 Jesus prayed the Father to sanctify the disciples "through thy truth," then added: "Thy Word is truth." The sanctification, or more fully setting apart, was to be effected through the truth. The Word of God gives directions how this may be done. In 1 Peter 1: 22 we read: "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit." Here the process is given. Men and women are to be purified, sanctified, or made holy, by obeying the truth. All of this is to be done through the Spirit, but not independent of obeying the Word.

Those who accept Christ in faith, repent of their sins, make confession with their mouth and are baptized, as the Word of God directs, are by this process set apart for the Lord's service. They are dedicated, consecrated and therefore sanctified and made holy unto the Lord. They receive the pardon of their sins, are filled with the Holy Spirit and are therefore, by the atoning blood of Christ, cleansed from all the sins of the past. In this process they are regenerated,—born again,—and are made new creatures in Christ Jesus. All of this is done through the agency of the Spirit, but not separate and apart from obedience.

This is the kind of sanctification in which the Brethren believe,—the sanctification that is effected in obedience of the truth and through the Spirit. The man who goes on seeking for perfection lives the sanctified life. If he lives a pure life, loves God and keeps his commandments, then his is a life of holiness unto the Lord. There is no such a thing as Bible sanctification independent of loving God and keeping his commandments. The Bible doctrine of holiness implies love, faith and obedience. There is no such a thing as holiness unto the Lord separate and apart from complying with the conditions laid down in the New Testament.

The Sixtieth Anniversary.

BEGINNING with April we enter upon the sixtieth anniversary of the publishing interest among the Brethren. The initial issue of the monthly Gospel Visitor, our first church paper, bears date of April, 1851, with Eld. Henry Kurtz as editor and publisher. It was a small sixteen-page journal, two columns to the page, and was published in the loft of a spring house, on a farm near Poland, Ohio. For the first year its circulation was less than 400. From this small beginning our publishing interest has grown until we now have one of the largest and best equipped denominational printing plants in the West.

A full century before the Gospel Visitor was started our people enjoyed the fruits of another publishing house, not owned and controlled by the church, but owned and managed by members of the Brethren church. We refer to the printing plant established by Christopher Sower, Sr., in 1738, and continued by his son of the same name for a period of forty years, or until 1778. Several papers, a family almanac, hymn books, a Bible and hundreds of other books were sent forth by the establishment. The paper attained a circulation of eight or ten thousand, and exerted a wide influence among the Germans of this country. The Sower Publishing House had a national reputation, and to some extent gave our people a standing. The paper was widely read by the Brethren and had its influence among them.

But all of this came to an end during the Revolutionary War, when the fine establishment was confiscated and sold by the Government, simply because the earnest and devoted proprietor was misunderstood. After the war an attempt was made to collect the scattered material of the plant and build up the business again, but without any marked success. Hence, for a period of a little over seventy years, our people were without a printing establishment of any kind. Spread out before them was a great country, to be settled and developed, and they became so thoroughly interested in opening up new sections and in establishing new congregations, mainly by emigration, that they did not feel the need of a church publication. The way they succeeded in building up influential churches, and the way they were kept together without a medium of communication, during this period of seventy-three years, is a marvel.

But the time came when the need of a religious journal was keenly felt. No one saw the need of such a publication more clearly than did Bro. Henry Kurtz, and in 1851 he decided upon making the venture. There was, at the start, some opposition to his paper, the Gospel Visitor, but in the course of a few years it disappeared. After several years he associated Bro. James Quinter with him, and the Visitor gained a good circulation, and was widely read by our people and others. The paper, in magazine form, was well edited, neatly printed, and contained some reading matter as fine as has ever appeared in print among the Brethren. It had much to do in indoctrinating and unifying our members on gospel principles.

The publishers never saw their way clear to make the Visitor a weekly publication; so, in 1864, H. R. Holsinger, who had learned the printer's trade in the Visitor office, began the publication, in Tyrone, Pa., of the Christian Family Companion, an interesting, aggressive weekly paper. A few years later The Pilgrim, a weekly, was started at James Creek, near Huntingdon, Pa., by H. B. and J. B. Brumbaugh. Still later the Brethren at Work was started in Lanark, and finally removed to Mount Morris. In the meantime the Visitor and Christian Family Companion were consolidated, and then the Pilgrim was added and gave rise to the Primitive Christian, leaving the Brotherhood with one paper in the East, with its office at Huntingdon, Pa., and another in the West, with its place of publication at Mount Morris.

In 1883 these two papers were consolidated, and became the GOSPEL MESSENGER, with the office of publication at Mount Morris. Under the new arrangement the business grew, the circulation of the paper increased, Sunday-school helps were added, books were published, and as the business grew too large for the mailing facilities at Mount Morris, the plant having become the property of the Brotherhood, was moved to Elgin in 1899, and installed in a large, new brick building, which has since been greatly enlarged. Briefly told, this is the history of our present publishing interest, started in April, 1851, and brought up to the same month in 1911,—a period of sixty years.

It is the sixtieth anniversary that we wish to celebrate this year by telling our readers, from time to time, the story of the past and what has been accomplished by the press among us. During this period our people,—numerically speaking,—have grown from about 40,000 to at least 90,000. We have spread from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and have churches extending from the gulf to far into Canada. Then we have opened up work in different parts of Europe, in India and also in China. This marks the growth and development of the educational sentiment among us. Our schools—and there are nearly a dozen of them—extend from Maryland on the East, to California on the West. The rise and growth of our Sunday-school interest parallels our publishing interest. What is the history of one is almost the history of the other, and the same may be said of the missionary sentiment.

We have gone on publishing papers, tracts, pamphlets and books until we have a commendable assortment, and our work as well as our influence is widening. Our people have been made to think, plan and execute. Various activities have been set in motion, and the once quiet little church of the far East has become, with her various auxiliaries, an active and aggressive influence of national note.

It may be well for us to pause a little, this year, and recount what has happened during these sixty busy years. We know a little of what has happened during this period, but we do not know it all. We may ask a number of our correspondents to tell us what they know that will be worth reading, but we can not reach all of those who have something of interest they would like to tell. While we have briefly mentioned much that has happened along different lines, we wish to collect many facts regarding the publishing interest, and especially regarding the men who have figured prominently in this interest. There is much that has never yet been told in print, and even some things that have been told may be worth repeating for the benefit of the present and future generations. Any suggestions from our readers regarding what would seem suitable for the occasion will be appreciated.

Is an Itinerant Ministry Desirable?

In Two Parts.—Part Two.

THE itinerant system, no matter under what plan it is operated, implies control of the Pastor's location, wholly or in part. And this implies support wholly or in part. Support is logically implied in the proportion that one becomes the servant of another in location and service. This principle accords with both reason and scripture, and it is acknowledged by all, though not practiced by all.

Now, with the facts and conditions pretty well before us, is an itinerant ministry desirable? It is, in my judgment, very desirable as a general rule, where the conditions make it practicable.

In the Church of the Brethren it is to be understood, of course, that the itinerant ministry could not be practiced in general, because the support system is not general in the church. The question of desirability, considered independently of the support system, or other things essential to it, is easily answered; for on general principles it is certainly very desirable both to the minister and the laity. In this, I should think, judgment is practically unanimous.

The chief advantage in the itinerant system is that it provides changes in pastors. It is based on the judgment that such changes are wise and desirable. And, certainly, this is the testimony of all past experience.

Usefulness should constitute the law of changes. When a pastor reaches the limit of his usefulness in a congregation, why should he not change? Is it not the suggestion of reason and good judgment? Is it not much to the advantage of both the pastor and the parishioners? And isn't it true that pastors do reach the limit of their usefulness to those whom they serve? It is one of the common things, and no one is to blame, either, unless, however, it is brought about by indiscretion, which should be rebuked most sharply. But let the ordinary man do his best, and he can serve a congregation profitably only a few years at the longest.

The experience of each member of the congregation is proof to himself on this point. Then give the pastor another charge, where he may serve others profitably for a few years, and so on. This is the only plan, it would seem, to reap the highest benefit from the ministry, especially from the ministry of ordinary men. And it must be remembered that the vast majority of men belong to this class. The extraordinary men constitute a small class, indeed.

The difference between the ordinary and the extraordinary pastor, is that the one is able to serve a congregation profitably longer than the other. But this does not argue that even the extraordinary pastor does not reach the limit of his usefulness, also, with his parishioners. He does. However, in a few cases, men of the strongest character, greatest talent, deepest learning and grace, have served pastorates profitably a lifetime. But these cases are so rare that they scarcely demand recognition in this connection.

In such cases the pastor should not be disturbed. Usefulness is the limit. As long, therefore, as he is growing in power where he is, leave him; don't disturb him. It is not less than a sin to do so. Let him climb power and influence to their climax. Nothing more glorious, with the evidences of victory all around. But when the climax is reached, then things change. Then is the time when the pastor needs help. And then is the time when the wisdom of the itinerant system is seen most clearly.

You may say what you please against the pastor's usefulness wearing out, and you may criticise the people as you will for getting tired of one pastor and desiring a new one, now and then. These conditions exist. They have always existed, and they promise to continue. And if it is wrong for people to tire of pastors when they cease to be helpful, and to desire new and fresh ones who can help, anyhow for awhile, then every parishioner will find himself very busy with himself, for the condition is universal. Certainly, one has no ground to find fault with another, as much as we are inclined to do so.

In all itinerant systems, no inflexible rule of tenure can be used wisely. A certain term of years sometimes removes men when they should remain, and, on the other hand, it sometimes allows men to remain when they should be removed. Wisdom and prudence should dictate. The usefulness of the pastor must be considered as supreme in the case. And it is well to have a third party touch the case at some point,—especially is this true as it regards the support question. The pastor is placed at great disadvantage, when he must represent his financial interests. Many misunderstandings and little squabbles can be saved by a third party. The conference that takes the whole question of ministerial distribution and support in hand, to cooperate with the churches and pastors, acts wisely.

Now, since the itinerant system seems desirable, having decided advantages over the stationary system, as proved by experience, and since ministerial support is growing in the Church of the Brethren, which is the forerunner of the itinerant system, is it not wise to take knowledge of these facts? And is it not wise to work out a system now, for the control of the future, while the whole matter is in its incipiency and easily controlled? Or, is it the part of wisdom to allow the matter to rest with the congregations and pastors whom it directly concerns? Should there not be one uniform system throughout the Brotherhood? And should it embrace three parties? If so, there must be Conference action. Already a good many congregations have their supported pastors, and this number is increased year after year.

A Gentle Man.

James says, "But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy." A Christian Gentle Man will, so far as in him lieth, measure up to this high measure, to this high standard in life. He may not be able to reach the highest ideal but will be found striving to attain to the highest standard. Kauffman, in his "Winning Fight," gives the following description of a Gentleman. It's worth a careful reading and study:

He remembers his own mother and is therefore considerate in thought and deed of all her sex. He neither degrades them by act or word.

He indulges in no excesses. He is master of his appetite, and does not lose control of his passions, his judgment or his voice.

He estimates no man except through his own experience, and then forbears to pass judgment until he is certain of his knowledge.

He does not spread scandal, nor does he permit it in his hearing.

He does no wrong but what he immediately seeks to set right, and with his own hands.

He is as eager to apologize as he is loath to offend, and is always anxious to acknowledge an error.

He does not mistake words for deeds; therefore his politeness is more than polish.

His given word is his pledged bond, and the bad faith of another never justifies its default any more than theft of his own property by a neighbor would lead him to retaliate in kind.

He bestows charity with a smile, and then seeks to erase the sense of obligation in those whom he assists.

He advertises neither his good works nor his attainments.

He is gracious to all of lowly station or of advanced years, and never flaunts his better fortune before his inferiors.

He makes ostentation neither of his possessions nor his culture, realizing that his opportunities may have given him advantages which less favorable surroundings might not have produced.

He discusses his grievances with no one, not wishing to inflict his essentially personal worries upon his fellows.

He is cleanly of habit and of tongue, and prefers to find the world as himself.

He trades neither upon his name nor his birth, nor does he traffic in the power or influence of his friends.

He does not prostitute his honor to business profit, nor does he request his women folk to sacrifice their personal inclinations in the cause of his advancement.

He asks no man to perform any service which he could not and would not perform without smirch to his own self-respect.

He regards wealth as a pleasant possession, but one which does not justify the cancellation of a single attribute of honor.

There are countless things which he will not do for the sake of money, because he knows how few real things money can do in return.

Above all else, he is a Gentle Man.

When you have read this far, go back to the beginning and read again, and then strive to attain to the high ideal, if you would be, in the true sense of the word, A Christian Gentleman.

Our Progress.

One of our readers is a little disturbed over the statement that the Brethren church, numerically speaking, has made little or no progress for thirty-five years, at which time our number is said to have been one hundred thousand, or practically what it is at the present time. In our issue of Jan. 14, under the heading of "Our Numerical Strength," we explained how this report about our people numbering one hundred thousand, forty years ago, got started. It found its way into a lengthy write-up of the Brethren in a leading Baltimore paper; when, in fact, we probably did not number, at that time, more than 50,000. In 1882 our number was given out by the Government at 57,749, and in 1890, as 61,393. At the present time the number is not far from 90,000. If those who have gone off from us and formed separate organizations, should be counted like the other denominations count, we could show that, during the last forty years, there has been an increase of over one hundred per cent, and the increase is still going on. With probably one exception, our increase last year was as great as any Christian denomination in the United States. There is nothing about this that should prove discouraging.

Union Meetings.

A few of our churches are having some experiences in union revival meetings that are no credit to the principles for which we, as a religious body, stand. While the members who attend hear some very able preaching and hear a few of the popular sins denounced, they also hear expressions that do not become the preacher of the Gospel. Occasionally they must listen to a wholesale condemnation of teachings that we are sure may be found in the New Testament. True, the popular evangelist aims to steer clear of all denominational claims, but in doing so he has very little of the Gospel left to preach. The tendency of the work done is to oppose the very principles taught by the Brethren. Occasionally our members have their faith weakened, and they cease to walk and work with the body as they once did. We are just in receipt of a letter, in which we are told of a young sister, who was so taken up with the very liberal preaching of the evangelist that she actually left the Brethren church and united with another church in her city. This was what the union meeting did for her. As a rule, these union meetings contain nothing for us, for the reason that the people are made to believe that one can be just as well saved by obeying only half of the Gospel as by obeying all of it. Get this half-gospel idea well established in the minds of the people, and there will be but little demand for the all things set forth in the Word of God.

The Use of Illustrations.

When two vehicles in this country meet on the public highway, it is customary for each one to turn to the right, and give half of the road. From the simple custom many a good lesson has been drawn by which we are taught the importance of always turning to the right. We are told how Jesus instructed his disciples to cast the net on the "right side of the ship," and how the net was then filled with fish. Many a minister has dwelt with emphasis on the value of invariably casting the net on the right side, if we would have our efforts crowned with success. These illustrations in the interest of truth and good moral lessons have their bearing in this country where everybody turns to the right. But in England, where the custom is to turn to the left, they lose their force. The minister on the Isle of Great Britain would admonish his hearers that if they would do the fair and honorable thing, they must always turn to the left. But when enforcing his lesson he can not make use of the New Testament incident about casting the net on the right side of the ship. By this it will be seen that some illustrations may not appeal to all people alike.

More Work, Less Criticism.

If will be wise in us to give more attention to the best known methods of doing things, and not waste time writing and talking about the mistakes of the past. If we do as much as did some of those who have preceded us, we shall certainly do well. We now and then receive for publication articles severely censuring preachers and elders for the lack of approved methods, who actually did far more for the cause of Christ and the good of humanity than their would-be critics have ever done. People who volunteer to censure others because they have accomplished so little, should be sure of some results of their own. But we have generally noticed that the men and women, both in the church and out of it, who accomplish anything worthy of mention, do not have time to say much about the weakness of those who have lived and labored before them. They are usually too busy with the work the Lord has entrusted to them, to give much attention to the little (?) that may have been done by others.

Why He Resigned.

A minister in Connecticut recently resigned his charge as pastor, saying that in his judgment the organized church of today is not living up to the standard set by Christ and the apostles. He charged the church with neglecting the common people and giving too much attention to the wishes and demands of the rich. He is probably correct, generally speaking, in what he says about the average city church, but in order to avoid one extreme he goes to the other, and falls in with those who would discard the church altogether. We are of the impression that, as a minister, he did not teach the whole Gospel himself. This being the case, he should not expect his people to measure up to the New Testament standard. Let every man of God teach the full Gospel, as did the devout men in the times of the apostles, and we shall have churches all over this country, that will look after the interest of the common people, as the Master intended his faithful followers should.

EXTENSION NO. 2, CHICAGO, ILL.

We are glad to announce to all interested that we have entered the new building. It is not finished yet, however, and for that reason it has not been dedicated, but will be in the near future. We can not definitely say just when.

Opening day was March 5, and the services consisted of songs and recitations by the children, and an address by Bro. M. R. Myers, explaining the work of the Extension, how it is a blessing both to the giver and the receiver. How I wish that all who have contributed towards this good work could have seen the happy faces that morning! The new building is such an improvement over the store-room in which we have been worshiping for the last five years. May the Lord bless abundantly those who have made this blessing possible for us. We ask you again to pray for us that we may live up to all of the opportunities that may open unto us through it. The field is large.

GREENE, IOWA.

Our church met in council March 11. Our elder, Bro. W. H. Hood, presided. Much business came before the meeting. We decided to hold our love feast June 10, at 10: 30 A. M., to be followed by a series of meetings, to be conducted by Bro. I. N. H. Beahm, of Nokesville, Va. Six letters were granted to members that moved to the Franklin County church, Bro. Geo. W. Hilton, wife and son, missionaries from China, gave us four meetings. A large crowd was in attendance. They gave us a great deal of information regarding the manners and customs of the people in that country. They also described the work of the missionaries and what is now being accomplished there in converting those heathen people. It was very interesting and uplifting. It awakened us to a sense of the duty we owe to God, and the giving of our means to save sinners in heathen darkness. The talks were convincing, and calculated to bring some to obedience to the gospel, to give to the cause of raving souls. Our collection to the China Mission was a little over $53. J. F. Eikenberry.

Greene, Iowa, March 13.

DUNNINGS CREEK, PA.

Our congregation convened in council March 11. Considerable business came before the council. Brethren Geo. H. Miller and Elias Snowberger were elected delegates to District Meeting. Brethren S. Y. Whitaker and T. B. Michael were elected superintendents for the Sunday-school at the Holsinger house; Brethren Allen Harbaugh and A. D. Rouzer, superintendents for the Sunday-school at New Paris. Two certificates of membership were granted and one was received. We decided to hold our semiannual love feast May 12, in New Paris. Eld. Peter Knavel, of the Shade Creek congregation, was with us at this council and gave us some very good suggestions. Bro. Knavel spent some time visiting in our congregation and preached several sermons for us, both at New Paris and in the Holsinger house, which were very much appreciated. I wish that more of our older ministers might visit throughout our Brotherhood, giving encouragement, comfort and help by means of the experiences and trials they have endured. Levi Rogers.

Alum Bank, Pa., March 14.

FROM BEAVER CREEK, VIRGINIA.

We met in council March 10. The visiting brethren gave us a splendid report. Love and union exist among us. A number of ministers were present from other congregations. Their excellent talks were given by Brethren J. M. Kagey, S. N. McCann and W. K. Conner. We were admonished to labor for a higher degree of spirituality, and greater love to God and our fellow-men. Brethren M. B. Miller and J. D. Glick are our delegates to Annual Meeting; Brethren S. T. Glick and J. L. Zimmerman, alternates; Brethren M. J. Cline and S. E. Garber, delegates to District Meeting; Brethren S. T. Glick and J. B. Coffman, alternates. Fifteen were received by letter. Eight letters were granted.

Bro. B. B. Garber has been secured to conduct a series of meetings at Beaver Creek the latter part of July or the beginning of August. At a recent meeting of the officials of our congregation, and those of Bridgewater, who were formerly of our congregation, it was decided to locate a minister in the West Virginia field. The Beaver Creek congregation is to bear two-thirds of the expense; the Bridgewater congregation, one-third of the expense. It is two days' drive to that place and across six mountains.

Delegates were appointed from the different Sunday-schools to attend the District Sunday-school Meeting. Bro. S. E. Garber is the delegate for Beaver Creek; Bro. J. D. Miller, for Montezuma; Mattie Long, for Franklin.

At our last council it was decided to raise $100 for the Orphanage. Solicitors were appointed, and up to this time $87.88 has been raised. The penny-a-week mission money amounted to $66.38. It will be used in our Home Mission work. The officials of the congregation and the workers at Dry Run will select a minister to have special care of the work at Dry Run. One query was sent to District Meeting. Statistics for the year: Twenty-three letters were granted; four letters were received; one member was reinstated; four members died; present membership, 336. Nannie J. Miller.

R. D. 2, Bridgewater, Va., March 14.

MEADOW BRANCH, MD.

Our church met in council March 11. Our elder, Bro. Uriah Baker, presided. Ten letters were granted. The committee to visit the sick reported regular meetings held and some forty visits made since last report. This committee has been strengthened and now consists of Sister Gertrude Smith and Bro. Noah Albaugh, appointed for three years; Sister Annie Royer and Mollie Starner, for two years; Sister Lucinda Haines and Brethren Amos Wampler and Clayton Morningstar, for one year. The temperance committee report shows progress. Bro. Harry Devilbiss was appointed to the temperance committee to serve in place of Bro. D. S. Petry, who has removed from the congregation. Bro. Howard Warehime was appointed as collector for Home Mission money, in Bro. Petry's stead. Eld. Uriah Baker and Brethren John Little and Jas. Young were appointed to the Sunday-school committee for one year. An A. C. and P. 'phone is being installed in the new sexton house here. Two papers were sent to District Meeting. Brethren J. W. Thomas and the writer were chosen as delegates to District Meeting.

Westminster, Md., March 11. W. E. Roop.

EAST NIMISHILLEN, OHIO.

Bro. L. T. Holsinger, of Rossville, Ind., began a series of meetings for us Feb. 26 and continued until March 12. He preached eighteen sermons. As an immediate result of the efforts put forth, four accepted Christ and were baptized. While the number of accessions was not so large as it should have been, the church feels built up spiritually, for Bro. Holsinger gave us excellent sermons, from start to finish, upon the faith and principles, as set forth in the Bible and practiced by our church. The strong were encouraged to greater zeal, and the weak were strengthened in the principles. Many others were made to see their condition, but were not willing to yield. We hope and pray that they may come before these impressions leave them. Although the roads were very bad, the weather conditions unfavorable and many were sick with la grippe, yet the attendance was very good. People came for miles, in spite of these unfavorable conditions to receive the Bread of Life, as dealt out by our dear brother. May God bless him and the good seed that was sown, to the glory of his name and the salvation of souls! A. J. Carper.

Middlebranch, Ohio, March 13.

THE ANTI-SECRET CONVENTION.

A State Convention of the National Christian Association was held in the Brethren church at Chambersburg, Pa., March 13 and 14.

Eight different religious denominations were represented, and the convention was very largely attended. Subjects relative to the secret lodge system were very ably discussed by those to whom they had been assigned. Many others also took part in the general discussion.

The meeting was characterized by a high degree of spirituality and earnestness, which can not fail to result in much good.

There were many testimonies given, by both men and women who had formerly been active in the lodge, to the effect that when they received the light of the Gospel of Christ, and experienced a change of heart, they could no longer retain their membership in the lodge, and have peace of conscience.

One young man,—not a professor of religion,—testified that he had severed his relation with Masonry purely on ethical grounds, maintaining that he could not live a self-respecting life and hold to the principles of Masonry. The lodge system is repulsive not alone to Christian thought, but also to the cultured minds of men of the world. Quincy Leckrone.

Royersford, Pa., March 15.

ANKLESHWER NOTES.

—During the present time at this our station, and round about (I have been saying again and again the time is drawing nigh), the field is ripe to the harvest. I have never seen it quite as it appears to me now. All about us we learn, every few days, of new villages of people who have said, just recently, that they want also to become Christians. You would not understand their request. They often come saying, "Sir, we want bothiss," and as I do not expect the people who cannot write their own mother tongue to speak freely any Greek word, I take it they want baptism, and call it bothiss. Never mind, when they come thus, we sit down and talk and pray, and then I do not bapitze them. How I would like to do so! But I can't become convinced that it is best. So we enroll them as applicants, and follow them up with preaching, and when we can do so, put a teacher in the village they represent, and have him open a night school for them. This done, soon the whole company is ready for baptism, and we receive them.

—Last year we baptized sixty. The year before it was fifty. Thus far this year we have baptized twelve. And there are scores of applicants. Some who had been refused last year are reporting as being ready now. New localities send word to come and teach them, as they want to have bothiss too. And the calls come from ever-widening circles. Only this evening I learned of three villages, the Bhils of which report that they have given up the drink, and are hoping for our coming with the Gospel to them too. Last week I was out twenty miles from here, where we have opened two new schools, and had good meetings. As we were going to other villages we were overtaken by two men who said they heard of our where-abouts, and had followed us up. We sat down to hear their story, and to tell them ours.

—I asked one what he knew about us and our religion. He said he knew not very much, but that it was a good religion, that no drinking was allowed, and that it was good. He went on: "We learned to know this much from the men at yonder village whom you gave bothiss, and sir, you gave them bothiss, and they are happy. We want bothiss, too. Sir, can we not get it here this afternoon, or may we not come along with you to Ankleswer and there get the bothiss? We want what makes men good! And we know this is a good religion, for we have heard enough to believe. And our religion doesn't seem to satisfy somehow."

—I asked them a few questions, and found that, aside from being apparently earnest, they knew nothing. They went on to say: "We organized a church ourselves about a year ago, and a teacher came from the north somewhere, but he never came since that day, and our whole church of about fifty came to pray to join your church. Sahib, did you say you would not receive us? We will be so disappointed if you do not!"

—I might have spent all afternoon with them, and baptized them in the evening, and it would have been well, as far as I know, to have done so. But there were all around, ijht waiting to see what would be done, and they would do the same thing. "I can not," I said to myself, and as the tears came to the eyes of the old man speaking to me, the thought of penance trickled down my cheeks. I could not help it. But I felt it was a choice between judgment and feeling, and I must follow my better judgment. If he will not stand till we can teach him something, he will not stand if he is baptized, not knowing.

—I asked them about the church they had organized. They told me freely: "We have quit all liquor drinking. We have not drunk for over a year. Not a drop! We quit toddy, and we quit fish and meat and eggs. We have left off doing everything they told us to leave off, and we do not steal? We want to be people of religion, and God does not want us to steal."

—We prayed together, and they were hearty with Amen. Not saying Amen. That is another Greek word we don't expect them to learn the first day, but they say in the last word of every emphatic sentence, as in the prayer, and it is a joy to pray with those who follow you like that. You then realize, with a double fullness, that you are really praying for others.

—I have sent these men some easy Christian reading, a few simple questions and answers to ponder over, and to learn if possible, and we will soon be with them again. If they are really as true and warm for the truth as they seemed to be on that day, there will be a day of baptism following.

—The people among whom we are working are a simple people. We can see their necessities better than they can. In a neighboring county, where many are now calling for us, there is a double incentive, of which we are well aware, not only of getting a religion, but of getting out of the Bhil-hair,—an oppressive restriction that is a real burden.

—An army of people, all over India, at this present time is keenly interested in the coming census. A number of us missionaries have been asked by the government to help, and we are glad to render some service when we can. The preliminary enumeration is on now. School-teachers and clerks and village officers are at it morning and evening, or as they may have time, each in his specially-designated little territory, making out correct lists of the people. This list is taken to the supervisor, and he examines to see if it is correct. This is the kind of work missionaries have been asked to do,—to direct the actual enumerators. It would hardly be counted unwise to ask a missionary to go out counting the people.

Ankleshwer, India, Feb. 22. W. B. Stover.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

ARIZONA.

Glendale.—Services have been conducted regularly in the different departments all winter. There was a good interest and attendance each Thursday evening at the Bible class taught by the pastor. By request of several the pastor delivered a course of doctrinal sermons, beginning with "The Divinity of Christ" and ending with "The Lord's Supper." Our regular council meeting will be next Saturday evening. My husband will finish his labors as pastor here next Sunday. We intended staying longer, but on account of my husband's prevalent attack of hoot pneumonia it will not be advisable to stay in this climate through the summer. The Lord willing, he will start for the Libertyville church, Iowa, next week. Our future address is R. D., Batavia, Iowa. There is a good church started here for a Seventh-day Baptist Sabbath-keeping minister. For information address Bro. Fred Woodward, Glendale, Arizona, or Bro. Geo. Hills, Los Angeles, Cal., President of the Mission Board.—Mrs. J. G. Rarick, Glendale, Arizona, March 29.

CALIFORNIA.

Chico.—Our little band feels much encouraged now that our churchhouse is completed. The dedication services will be conducted by Rev. Mr. Hall, of Oroville, assisted by Rev. Mr. Osborne, Cal. Rev. Mr. Hall is one of our best friends in this region. In spite of the rainy weather, the attendance and interest were excellent from beginning to end. Bro. Landph expounded the Word with such power as to convict the sinner and enthuse the Christian. Those professing conversion at the salvation of last souls, in our midst, met in a consecrated prayer meeting a short time before preaching service and claimed victory. Satan, however, was not idle. Some wonderful battles were fought. Victories came only to the Lord's side.—Grace Hileman Miller, Lordsburg, Cal., March 16.

Pomona.—Our church met in council March 18, with our elder, Bro. A. L. Lundt, presiding. Sabbath dates for Divine Meeting were elected. Since last report twelve have been received by letter, and Prof. Fred Clarke-Smith, of Ocean View, was with us March 12, and delivered a stirring address on temperance.—Clara B. Wolf, 310 Kingsley Ave, Pomona, Cal., March 17.

COLORADO.

Arriba.—Our church met in council March 16. Much business came before the meeting. Two letters were received. We are looking forward to a series of meetings to be held early in April. Our Sunday-school is growing in interest and attendance.—Nellie Stanhope, Arriba, Colo., March 17.

First Grand Valley.—We met in council March 18, with our presiding elder, Bro. H. H. Mohler, in charge. Seven letters were granted. Our services were appointed to solicit in the district to raise money to pay the debt on our mission house in Grand Junction. Bro. J. D. Coolman was called to help us in the home church; Bro. Homer Wenger, to solicit the Palisade church; Bro. Frank Miller, to visit Fruitland church; and Sister Teager is to solicit Grand Junction. Our love feast will be held May 27. Brethren passing through here, on their way to the Council Meeting, are invited to meet with us over our love feast. We are located five miles northwest of Grand Junction, on the Interurbus car line.—Mrs. M. Ethel Davidson and Fruita, Stop off at Hollany.—D. M. Cliek, Grand Junction, March 20.

Good Hope.—We met in council March 8, with Bro. J. H. Kinzie presiding. Not much business came before the meeting. We decided to hold our love feast June 3. We would enjoy very much to have other brethren and sisters with us at that time. The committee was instructed to secure the services of a minister to hold some meetings for us this fall. One of our members, Bro. A. J. Crofoot, is moving to the fields of labor. We would like to have some of the brethren looking for new homes, come to this field, and help us out. We are in need of more workers, and would desire a minister to locate with us. We have a few vacant houses and homes. Any one wishing information in regard to our location, will please address the writer.—Maude C. Kinzie, Hastings, Colo., March 20.

Idalia (Colo).—We commenced meetings at this place Feb. 26, continuing until March 15.—Attendance, about 100. The attendance was small at the start, but as the meetings continued the interest and attendance grew. The meetings closed with a full house. The people seemed to enjoy the good old story of the cross.—E. D. Steward, Collyer, Kans., March 14.

McClave.—This church is still moving along nicely. We had Sunday-school regularly the past year, and every winter is past our attendance is growing. Last Sunday two more were received by letter—a young married man and wife, who we expect to be of great service to the church. Bro. Oxley, our young minister, is home now from school, and is taking a good interest in the work. We have a Mr. Powell, Wisphalia, Kans., is to commence a series of meetings for us May 14.—W. D. Harris, McClave, Colo., March 23.

IDAHO.

Boise Valley.—At our late council, March 4, our church showed a desire for a still greater interest in the Lord's Master's kingdom. Eld. J. E. Shamberger, of Fruitland, was with us to assist in our meeting. Eld. Shamberger is a Home Mission Board to look after the interests of the church and Sunday-school from a missionary angle; also to assist the elder in the work. Before passing to the next conference or three was also selected to investigate the light question, with a view of organizing a lighter light. Committee met to investigate ways and means to secure a baptistry. Four letters of membership were granted. We hope to have our Sunday-school Meeting of Southern Idaho, April 29, to be followed by a love feast in the evening. We look forward to this meeting with special interest, and hope for a good representation from neighboring churches.—David Betts, Nampa, Idaho, March 16.

Payette Valley.—The protracted meetings in Fruitland have been in progress since March 5, conducted by the home ministers. The weather and roads are fine, and the attendance and interest good. Eight precious souls, mostly from the public schools, have already expressed a desire to unite with the church, and others are counting the cost. Baptism will be administered in a few days.—S. J. Kenepp, Payette, Idaho, March 15.

Twin Falls.—We met in council March 19, with our elder presiding. One letter was received. Two were granted. We decided to hold our love feast May 14, at which time a missionary sermon is to be preached and a collection taken, to be sent to the Meeting for Western Interests. We look for prospect to hold a series of meetings this coming fall. We now have twenty enrolled in our teacher-training class. Bro. B. A. Meher is our instructor. The Sunday-school is moving along nicely. We are increasing in numbers every Sunday. We are getting ready for our Easter program.—Ella Fahrney, 761 Second Avenue, N., Twin Falls, Idaho, March 19.

ILLINOIS.

Bethel church enjoyed a treat during the past week, while Bro. C. W. Guthrie gave his lectures and stereopticon views on his trip around the world. He was greeted with a full house almost every night.—Estella B. M. Erb, Naperville, Ill., March 21.

Lanark church met in council March 21, at 7:30 P. M. Our elder, Bro. J. M. Hurt, presided. It was decided to hold our council meetings biannually, instead of quarterly. Bro. I. B. Trout was elected delegate to Annual Meeting. Bro. P. E. Eckerie, alternate. One church letter was received.—Ada Wilson Royer, R. D. 2, Lanark, Ill., March 22.

Lanark.—Our church met in council March 18, with Eld. M. L. Hahn presiding. He came to our place March 16, remained over Sunday, and preached three times. Our church decided to sell the two vacant church lots, and use the proceeds in repairing the church-house. Bro. Hahn will have a love feast; time to be announced later.—Myra Pittman, Lanark, Ill., March 21.

Mount Morris church met in council March 18, our elder, Bro. J. L. Maxson, presiding. Business was very good. One who had grown cold toward the church, expressed a desire to come back. Our pastor, Bro. Ira J. Gillette-Perrin, had left. March 24 has not yet been decided upon. Brethren M. W. Emmert and D. L. Miller were chosen as our delegates to Annual Meeting, with Brethren J. G. Burdick and J. P. Holsinger as alternates. Bro. Geo. W. Kieffaber was advanced to the second degree.—Ella Kieffaber, 1004 Brunskill Mount Morris, Ill., March 18.

West Hallock.—We met in council March 15. Eld. S. S. Plum presided. One letter was granted. The visiting brethren reported all in the meeting in love and union. Our love feast will be May 20 and 21, at 10 A. M. We have a flourishing Sunday-school, with Bro. Ora Dollenberger as superintendent.—Frank Lanphear, R. D. 1, East River, Ill., March 20.

INDIANA

Arcadia.—We met in council March 4, with Eld. Elias Smeltzer in charge of the meeting. Bro. Smeltzer will begin a series of meetings in June. At the close of these meetings we will have our spring communion.—Lulu E. Ulrey, R. R. 6, Box 41, Marion, Ind., March 21.

Bethel Center.—We met in council March 11, with Bro. John Kaser presiding. Bro. J. H. Hollowell was elected to hold a series as superintendent; Sister Mabel Print, secretary. We decided to hold our love feast June 3. S. P. M.—Annie Rogers, R. D. 4, Matthews, Ind., March 18.

Dodge Center.—We met in council March 18. Bro. Leroy Smith was elected as delegate to Annual Meeting, with Bro. Merritt Hansen as alternate. Our love feast will be May 19.—E. D. Lockrow, Jonesboro, Ind., March 22.

Elk River church met in special council March 18, our elder, O. Lockrow, presiding. Two letters were granted and one received, and seven granted. The annual church visit had been made previous to this meeting. Brethren J. Fletcher and O. Buttrbaugh were elected as delegates to Annual Meeting. We appointed our love feast for June 1 at 2 P. M.—Annie Rogers, R. D. 4, Matthews, Ind., March 18.

Dodge Center.—We met in council March 18. Bro. Leroy Smith was elected as delegate to Annual Meeting, with Bro. Merritt Hansen as alternate. Our love feast will be May 19.—E. D. Lockrow, Jonesboro, Ind., March 22.

Elk River church met in special council March 18, our elder, O. Lockrow, presiding. Two letters were granted and one received, and seven granted. The annual church visit had been made previous to this meeting. Brethren J. Fletcher and O. Buttrbaugh were elected as delegates to Annual Meeting. We appointed our love feast for June 1 at 2 P. M.—Annie Rogers, R. D. 4, Matthews, Ind., March 18.

Fort Wayne.—Bro. C. S. Garber, of St. Joseph, Mo., is with us holding a series of meetings. So far, we have taken up the cross and followed Jesus. Last Saturday evening we had a children's meeting with the Sunday-school. Fifty children were shown is very good. We have a large attendance every night. Our Sunday-school is in a flourishing condition. Last Sunday the Sunday-school attendance was 72.—George F. Bottoms, 2826 Calhoun St., Fort Wayne, Ind., March 21.

Goshen City.—March 12 Bro. J. S. Zimmerman, of Waterloo, Iowa, came from Bethany Bible School and preached for us in morning and evening. Bro. Zimmerman held our meetings last fall, and we were all glad to hear him again. If all our ministers were as good as Bro. Zimmerman, the Seventh-day would have more preachers. It is a help to any one to hear him. He loves the Lord's kingdom and is true to the mission. March 15 we met in regular council. Eld. Isaac Van Horn presided over the business in the absence of our elder. Bro. Melvin Swartz was chosen as clerk; Bro. Warstler, delegate to Annual Meeting, with Bro. Swartz as alternate, until we are completed to make room. The church has decided to finish two rooms in the basement.—Cal A. Forney, Goshen City, Ind., March 20.

Howard.—We met in council March 4. Our elder, Bro. Scott Hoch, presiding. Bro. Ira Chamberlain was elected delegate to Annual Meeting. Bro. Ira J. Gillette-Perrin was elected to hold a series of meetings for us, commencing the last Sunday in May.—Ella Kieffaber, March 21.

Logansport.—We just closed a very interesting series of meetings held in the Adamsboro house, conducted by Bro. J. L. Maxson. The attendance was good and we had a good attendance. All enjoyed the meeting and were strengthened by the Word which was preached with power. One accepted Jesus as his Saviour. Sabbath-day, March 18, a meeting is located six miles east of Logansport in the country. We have a two-horse wagon for the use of the church. In the vicinity of the Adamsboro house, and because of the inconvenience of the distance to come to church, we will not lose those in the city; but we are doing what we can. We have appointed a Sunday-school and it is growing.—Gertrude Oberton, Logansport, Ind., March 18.

Marxie.—We met in council March 18. Our elder, Bro. D. H. Garber, presiding. Two letters were granted. Two letters of membership were received. Officers for the Christian Workers' Society were elected for the ensuing year. Sister Pearl Brumbaugh was reelected as president; Sister Effie Hiles, secretary-treasurer. Our love feast will be May 23, at 7 P. M. Our love feast in the fall is to be an all-day meeting, instead of the evening service. The church has decided not to use the Lord's prayer at the close of every prayer offered in the church and Sunday-school services, especially the Lord's prayer as a form. The duties of the church and Sunday-schools are combined.—Lillian Earhart Pippen, Marxie, Ind., March 20.

Nappanee.—We met in council March 16. Our pastor, David Metzler, presiding. Two letters came before the meeting. One was received by letter and six letters were granted. Brethren Ira Chamberlain and Ira J. Gillette-Perrin elected a temperance committee as follows: Brethren Irvin Dukes, Everett Pippen and Geo. M. Martin. Bro. Everett Pippen was appointed delegate to Annual Meeting, with Bro. Daniel Wysong, alternate.—B. J. Miller, Nappanee, Ind., March 17.

North Manchester church met in special council March 9. Elders J. H. Hollowell and J. G. Burdick were appointed delegates to Annual Meeting; Elders G. L. Studebaker and L. D. Seager, alternates. Bro. Burdick was also appointed delegate. One letter was granted. March 19, at the Sunday-school hour, Bro. Burdick gave a lecture on temperance. An offering of $21.35 was received for the temperance cause. After the program Bro. C. C. Ellis, of Juniata College, gave us a most inspiring and uplifting talk on the Christian life in the evening.—Alice Mummert, North Manchester, Ind., March 24.

Poplar Grove.—We met in council March 4. In the absence of our elder, the meeting was presided over by Eld. B. F. Sharp. We had a pleasant meeting, but were sorry to grant letters to sixteen members, among them being two of our deacons, Brethren Peter Wolf and Joel Bonham. We also received several members by letter, for which we are glad. Our delegate to Annual Meeting is Eld. B. F. Sharp; to District Meeting, Bro. Joel Bonham, and Bro. W. W. Blocher. Our love feast is appointed for Oct. 7, at 2 P. M.—J. M. Blocher, R. D. 38, Union City, Ind., March 20.

Fyrmont church met in council March 11. A good deal of business came before the meeting. Three letters of membership were received and six were granted. The church decided to have a Bible school next fall or winter, conducted by Bro. Ed. Edsen Ulrey. Some of the members of the District suggest that the District Sunday-school and Bible Institute, previously held at Indianapolis, be changed to some country church. But this will be done, Fyrmont church asks for the Institute for 1911. A committee was appointed to secure a teacher to conduct a singing school course during the coming summer. The church also decided to retain Bro. Jerry Barnhart's name on the church roll. Bro. Jerry Barnhart was chosen as delegate to Annual Meeting, with Bro. Jerry Barnhart, alternate. We added to the church by letter at this session since our last report.—Lulu E. Ulrey, R. D. 4, Box 41, Marion, Ind., March 21.

Syracuse church met in council March 11. Bro. Manly Deeter, our elder, presided. One letter was granted and one was received. Two letters of membership were granted; two were visited. A few were not seen. No complaints were handed in. Our love feast appointed for regular Communion. Our love feast is set for May 11, beginning at 6 P. M. Bro. William Lemmon and Bro. Ira Polsteldt were reinstated. Secretary, and Bro. Otho Warstler and wife were advanced to the second degree. Most of the members of the church were present. Bro. Otho Wysong, of North Manchester, Ind., gave us a short talk.—Mrs. Irene Neff Newkirk, Ind., March 15.

Turkey Creek.—Our church met in council March 4, our elder, Bro. Henry Wysong, presiding. Bro. Manly Deeter and wife were with us. Six letters of membership were granted. Our elder was elected delegate to Annual Meeting and the writer as Sabbath-observer correspondent.—Harvey Hartsough, Nappanee, Ind., March 18.

Union.—Our church met in council March 11. Eld. John Miller presided. Two letters were granted. A free-will offering of $14.14 was taken for the Seventh-day Baptist Bohemian College. Bro. D. H. Inglemyer was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting—Amanda L. Newcomer, Union Center, Ind., March 18.

Union church met in regular quarterly council on the afternoon of March 4. Eld. S. F. Bahcock presiding. Daniel Whitmer, of North Liberty, was with us, and assisted in the work of the Lord. Two letters were granted and one received. The church decided to retain Bro. Burdick as our pastor. Whitmer preached on Sunday, both morning and evening, giving us very wholesome instruction which was strengthening to us all. We were much pleased to have him with us.—Sunday, March 18, the church met in a business conference, for the purpose of considering the building of a new church and parsonage. After a lengthy discussion concerning the defects of the building, it was decided a committee be appointed to make the approximate cost of repair work, etc. Because of the forthcoming meeting of the Western Interests, to be held in Nortonville, we have decided not to send a delegate to Annual Meeting this year.—A. Laura Appelman, Plymouth, Ind., March 21.

Union City church met in council March 11, with our elder, Bro. W. K. Simmons, in charge. Brethren Hollinger and Mitchell were present. Two letters of membership came before the meeting. Two letters were granted. Our elder, Bro. W. K. Simmons, was appointed to the Annual Meeting, and Brethren Ezra Noffsinger and George Netsley at District Meeting. We decided to hold our love feast March 17 at 2 P. M. We have lately had the privilege of having the following ministers with us: Brethren Hollinger, Mitchell, Whitford, and Hoover. Their presence was much appreciated. We are glad for their help and the inspiring thoughts they gave.—Effie K. Netsley, R. D. 38, Union City, Ind., March 16.

IOWA.

Cedar church enjoyed a pleasant visit from Bro. Geo. W. Hilton, corresponding secretary, March 12 to 15. He gave us two very interesting discourses on the conditions and needs of the Seventh-day Baptist cause. The attendance was good, and the people were much interested. We were glad to hear that old-time hostilities of the people in China, to missionary work, are fast passing away. The door is open for them to be won for Christ.—An offering of $16.01 was taken for the Tract Society. Bro. Hilton has our hearty approval to our Christian Workers.—Bessie I. Boyer, Clarence, Iowa, March 20.

Coon Rapids.—We met in council March 18. Our elder, Bro. Irving Hamilton, presiding. Bro. Hilton was in attendance, and much business was disposed of. Our love feast is appointed for May 6 and 7, at 2 P. M. Bro. Hilton was chosen as our delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. Chas. Reynolds, alternate. Bro. Irving Haughtelin was reelected as standing clerk.—Mrs. Ethel Robinson in charge of series of meetings at Yale in June.—J. D. Haughtelin, Panora, Iowa, March 20.

Dry Creek church met in council March 7. Bro. D. W. Miller presided. Bro. Hilton was present and spent the week-end. Bro. Geo. W. Hilton, our missionary from China, was with us March 11 and 12, and gave us two very helpful talks, and also a stereopticon lecture. This lecture was intensely interesting. An offering of $14 was taken for mission work. March 19 Bro. S. H. Miller, of Nortonville, Kans., was with us and gave us an address in the morning on "Child Rescue Work," and in the evening a missionary address.—Minnie M. Robinson, Indiana, Iowa, March 26.

Grundy County.—March 13 Bro. G. W. Hilton began a series of four lectures on mission work in China, which were very interesting. Bro. Hilton was present at the March 18 our quarterly meeting. Bro. W. H. Lichty presided. Three letters were granted and one received. We expect to begin a series of meetings in May, closing with a love feast May 27. Bro. I. W. Brubaker is our delegate to Annual Meeting. Bro. Brubaker is also to preach on Sunday of the meeting.—Hannah C. Musser, Grundy Center, Iowa, March 23.

Welcome (Grundy County).—March 18 at 10 A. M. We was the first all-day meeting for this church in a long time. Brethren Hilton and Lichty were with us and carried through successfully. It will mean hard work and a grand awakening of the people. A committee was appointed soliciting the churchhouse. The matter was deferred six months. By request Bro. Hilton corresponded with the people in Alba, our county-seat. The matter will be discussed at our next council. The Sunday-school at Haynes is to be started April 1, after which Welcome will be closed. We decided to hold our spring love feast May 13, at 4 P. M. Bro. Geo. Hilton, missionary from China, will be present and speak for us soon. We will hold a series of meetings at Haynes if proper arrangements can be made.—Willis Hurley, Grundy Center, Iowa, March 17.

Shiloh.—Sabbath-morning 13 we held our council, in which our work was all reorganized. Bro. Morris Robinson was chosen superintendent of our Sabbath-school; Bro. Ora Babcock, superintendent of the Christian Workers' Meeting. Brother and Sister J. F. Burton placed their membership with us at a conference meeting held at the home of Brother Burton at home. Considerable business was disposed of.—T. A. Robinson, 43 Bridgewater Place, Milton, Wis., March 14.

Panther Creek.—Our church met in council March 11, a large number of members being present. An excellent Christian spirit was shown during the meeting. Bro. S. W. Rook was chosen church clerk; Bro. R. W. Bentall, trustee for three years; Bro. D. F. Walker, treasurer; Bro. O. E. Messamer, our young minister, delegate to Annual Conference. Bro. Ottis Stine was ordained to the eldership. Elders C. B. Rowe and Irving Haughtelin conducted the ordination services. Elder Rowe will begin a series of meetings at Panther Creek in the South. We expect Bro. A. C. Daggett to conduct a series of meetings for us, commencing Aug. 27.—Etta Spurgeon, Adel, Iowa, March 16.

Spring Creek.—Bro. G. W. Hilton, our missionary from China, gave us four lectures on China, one of which was a stereopticon lecture. These pictures he took while he was in the field. The lectures were very interesting and helpful. An offering of $14 was given for the work in China.—Perma M. Miller, Fredericksburg, Iowa, March 19.

KANSAS.

Altamont.—We met in council Feb. 13. As our elder, Bro. Clark, was unable to be with us, Bro. Wampler, of Fredonia, presided. Bro. Wesley Morris was chosen secretary. Bro. Will Hamilton was chosen trustee for the care of the graveyard, and Brethren Hamilton and C. Morrison were re-elected to the same position. Sister Barbara Carpenter and the writer were elected as a committee to make arrangements for our love feast to be held in June. The date will be set later. Bro. Wampler preached three interesting sermons for us. As we are few in number at this place, yet we feel that the Lord is ever mindful of his own and we are still hoping and trusting that some active minister will locate among us.—Cora Morris, R. D. 3, Box 25, Oswego, Kans., March 19.

Independence.—Everything in our church is very encouraging. Bro. W. H. Miller preached two powerful and soul-inspiring sermons yesterday. The subject, "Christ Consciousness" and "The Rock." Sister Nellie Morris, the president of our Ladies' Workers' Meeting, who has been in faithful worker since she came here, left us to go home. Bro. Joseph Frankhouser was elected president to fill the vacancy left.—We have organized a teacher-training class, which meets each Wednesday evening. Bro. Miller is the teacher of this class. Seven have been received by letter, and four were dismissed since last report. A very one desiring to change location will be welcomed into our midst. Any inquiry will be gladly answered.—Pella Carson, R. D. 2, Box 8, Independence, Kans., March 21.

Mont Ida.—Our congregation met in council March 18, with Eld. F. G. Crumpacker presiding. We decided to call Bro. P. G. Edwards to represent us at Annual Conference. Our love feast will be held May 17 at 7 P. M. Our congregation is also growing spiritually, as well as in numbers.—Lucy Beahm Price, Mont Ida, Kans., March 20.

North Solomon church met in council March 11. Our elder, Bro. J. S. Mohler, presided. The following were represented: Bro. John Whitney and wife, and Sister Flory, from Ohio, have recently settled here. Their letters were received at this meeting. We are always glad to have consecrated people with us. We need their assistance. A temperance committee was appointed, consisting of Sister Bessie Mohler, Sister Arthur Dague and the writer. Our love feast will be held May 16. A collection of $82.10 was taken for the Orphans' Home.—Bro. Kesler was with us Feb. 1. He delivered three sermons. Our Sunday-school keeps growing, both in interest and numbers during the year. We have recently organized a teachers' meeting, which will likely prove helpful to both teacher and pupil.—Anna Wagner, Portis, Kans., March 21.

MARYLAND.

Beaver Creek.—We met in council March 18. Elders J. C. Buterbaugh and S. H. Bashore presided. Much business was disposed of pleasantly. Bro. Geo. Perrott was elected to the office of elder. Bro. with his wife, moved from Mt. Eld. Caleb Long was chosen to be our elder for one year. He was also chosen to be our delegate to Annual Meeting. We decided to hold a series of meetings in the Chewsville and Maugansville houses during the year. The Chewsville house will be reorganized at Mount Zion March 26. Our love feast will be held May 31, at 1:30 P. M.—Katie S. Grossnickle, Boonsboro, Md., March 19.

Beaver Dam.—We met in council March 11. Eld. G. K. Sappington presided. Elders J. J. Yundt, of Ohio, and S. H. Union Bridge, Md., were with us. Although a large amount of business had to be transacted, we got through with it very harmoniously. Two certificates were granted. It was necessary to elect a deacon, and Brethren Jacob Hoffman, who was called to his reward. Bro. Thomas Metz was chosen as deacon; Bro. Bradley Bitely, as trustee. Our delegates to District Meeting are Brethren Wm. Hoffman and Walter Myers. We also organized our Sunday-school with Bro. D. O. Metz as superintendent. Bro. Metz is our Sunday-school superdent.—Edna A. Dotterer, Union Bridge, Md., March 22.

MICHIGAN.

Prescott.—I am now located at this place, having moved here from Greenville, Ohio. The need for active church work is very great. The Full Gospel is strange to these people, but it is being readily received. I am very grateful to Eld. E. L. Wilkins, Chairman of the Mission Board, and also elder in charge of the Riverside church, seventy miles away, in which territory we live, to have him come. We want to organize a Sunday-school at once. Bro. and Sister W. D. Bowman, of Fountain City, Tenn., to locate here in a few weeks. We will then have between twenty and thirty members. This is a fine place to do missionary work, as there is no organized church of any denomination here. The Brethren are first in the field, and we need more earnest workers for our school. The country is improving fast, and just now there is a fine opportunity for one to locate. I am also writing to this community, and, at the same time, get good homes cheap.—Ira G. Blocher, Prescott, Mich., R. D. 2, March 14.

MINNESOTA.

Worthington.—We have just closed a most instructive and inspiring week of meetings in the Lake Side church, Worthington, Minn. Sister Sadie Miller came to us and began her work here on Sister. She seemed to know exactly what the helpful songs of Zion, as directed by her. She was greeted each evening until March 7 with a good class, eager for her instruction in vocal music. Along with this she gave us, in all, eleven lectures on India and the mission work there. The topics were treated in a most interesting and touching manner, not only to the Christian, but to those who make no profession. Another part of the work that should be done much to our instruction, was our Bible Institute. In all, we have had five Bible lectures conducted by Bro. Jesse Ziegler, at Worthington. For those who have neither the means nor the opportunity to attend one of our Bible schools, there is no better way to study the Bible, with a view of getting a better knowledge of its teachings than the Institute method, and I feel that we have arrived at this in the short time we have been with you. We are not do without them.—J. Schechter, Jr., Worthington, Minn., March 14.

MISSOURI.

Shoal Creek.—Our church met in council March 18. Bro. J. H. Argabright presided. On account of the age of our elder, Bro. Henry Etter, Bro. R. F. Bowman, of Carthage, Mo., was chosen to take charge of the church for the rest of the year. Three letters of membership were received. There still being a deficit of $46 on our church debt, we raised $42.35 in order to pay same. Bro. J. H. Argabright was chosen as our representative at Annual Meeting.—Virgie Argabright, Fairview, Mo., March 20.

MONTANA.

Gildford.—The Mission Board has sent Bro. D. F. Landis, of Williston, N. Dak., to this place, who is giving us soul-stirring sermons. This is the first preaching done by the Brethren in this place. The meetings are well attended and the interest is good. Several expressed themselves as never having heard the gospel sermons before. We feel sure that the good seed sown may bring forth fruit. This is a good place to build up a Brethren church, as there are some living here, as yet unidentified with any church.—R. T. Good, Gildford, Mont., March 18.

NEBRASKA

Octavia church met in council March 4. A very favorable report by the visiting brethren was given. We decided to have our love feast April 14. March 5 our Sunday-school and Christian Workers' convention was held. We had a very good meeting.—Lillian Ruth Keller, Octavia, Nebr., March 19.

South Beatrice.—Our church met in council March 18. Bro. J. F. VanDyke opened the meeting. Bro. Jacob B. Dell presided. Nine letters of membership were granted. One letter was received. Our elder, Bro. Jacob Gish, wished to be relieved from the eldership, at least for a while. The church granted his request for the time being. Bro. Dell was chosen as our overseer for that time. Eld. Gish was chosen to be our delegate to Annual Meeting. Our spring love feast will be May 10, at 5 P. M. On Sunday we had a good temperance program, which took up the Sunday-school hour, after which Bro. Jacob Gish, Eld. Dell and Bro. Ziegler gave us a good sermon.—Lydia Dell, Beatrice, Nebr., March 22.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Fraternity.—Our church met in council March 11, with Bro. J. F. Robertson presiding. We had the pleasure of having Bro. Andrew Miller, of Virginia, with us and his mother, with us. They were on their way to the Maple Grove church-house, of this congregation, to hold a meeting, and consented to stopped over with us. Bro. C. R. Paw was elected as our delegate to District Meeting. Bro. Luther Sides, church janitor.—Emma Spaugh, R. D. 1, Wentworth-Selem, N. C., March 15.

OHIO

Beaver Creek church held her council March 9. Eld. Aaron Coy presided. The regular business of business was transacted; also some new interests looked after. We appointed a committee to look after repairing the house. Sister Osgood Messenger, secured a teacher to give instruction in singing for the Sunday-school. Our congregation was also invited to several members. We have three sick sisters,—Lucy Snyder, Sister Hoffman and Sister Hoffman. Bro. Benjamin Coy is also sick. We have Sunday-school throughout the year, and the interest is good. We also have preaching every Sunday.—Mrs. Sadie Hoffman, Beaver Creek, Ohio, R. D. 70, Box 20, March 21.

Covington.—This winter has been a blessed season for our church. Commencing Jan. 1, we had a series of meetings, a revival service." As the culmination of our dedication service eight members were baptized, and the church is now even more await baptism, making twenty-five in all.—Elizabeth J. Swihart, Covington, Ohio, March 19.

Eagle Creek.—Our church met in council March 16, at 1 P. M. Bro. J. J. Yundt presided. By request of the church the following elders were with us at this meeting: Elders L. H. Dickey, B. F. Snyder and G. A. Snyder. Bro. J. J. Yundt was chosen to be our delegate to Annual Meeting. We send no delegate to Annual Meeting this year.—Hattie Bame, Williamsport, Ohio, R. D. 1.

Fairview.—Our church met in council March 11, with our elder, Bro. Wm. Stutsman, presiding. Our elder was chosen to have Bro. C. W. Stutsman represent us at District Meeting; Bro. Wm. Stutsman, Bro. Jesse P. Rodkey and Bro. Jacob Hoover, to represent us at Annual Meeting.

Junction Mission.—The Brethren Sunday-school at this place started on its third year. We reorganized March 1. Sister Edna Trout is superintendent; Sister Ruth Shock, secretary. We have had a total of 75 in our school during a month, but we hope to be able to have services every two weeks in the future.—J. H. Cline, Sunday-school worker. This has been coming here, for which every one is very thankful.—Ruth Shock, Box 1, Ada, Ohio, March 21.

Notice.—Any one writing to the District Mission Board of Northwestern Ohio, please address them to 1136 Fairfield Court, Ohio, the present Secretary. Some have been writing to I. P. Thomas, who was the former Secretary, and this always causes confusion.—J. H. Cline, Secretary of the Mission Board, Ada, Ohio, March 20.

Pleasant Valley church met in council March 11, with Eld. Andrew Miller presiding. Three letters were received and three were granted. Bro. Thos. Bookwalter was elected as our delegate to Annual Meeting, and Brethren Andrew Miller and Jacob Hoover were elected to represent us at District Meeting. Since our last report one was baptized.—Mae Longenecker, West Alexandria, Ohio, March 21.

West Milton.—We met in regular council March 16. Eld. S. A. Blessing presided. Bro. John Miller, of the Middle District, was present. Two letters were received, and two letters were granted. Bro. S. A. Blessing is our delegate to Annual Meeting. Bro. Jesse Hoover, of Ohio, is with us as writer. We had a very pleasant meeting.—Russell C. Wenger, R. D. 1, Union, Ohio, March 21.

OKLAHOMA.

Pleasant Plains.—We met in council March 18, with Bro. I. H. Miller presiding. Two letters were granted. Our love feast will be held April 22, at 2 P. M. Bro. I. H. Miller preached for us March 19, delivering two soul-inspiring sermons.—Hulda Prentice, Tulsa, Okla., March 21.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Beck Creek.—We met in council March 18 at the Upton house. Eld. Jacob Pfautz presided. Sunday-school Supt. Eld. David Foust presided. Five letters were granted. Brethren Jacob Pfautz and Bro. Jacob Ziegler were elected as reporters at District Meeting. Our love feast will be May 13, at 10 A.M. at the Bruno house. We organized our Sunday-school March 15. Bro. Wm. Yedrich is superintendent.—D. L. Wilson, R. D. 5, Greencastle, Pa., March 20.

Big Swatara.—Our church met in council. A number of papers were disposed of. The attendance of the members was unusually small. It took more than half of the day to work. It was decided to have our love feast May 11 and 12. Bro. Harvey Hoffman, beginning at 10 A.M. Sunday. Brethren officers were elected for three schools, and a committee appointed to see about securing an assistant pastor. Sister Thomas Patrick was elected as delegate to Annual Meeting; Brethren Emmanuel Eline and Josiah Gingrich, to District Meeting. Brethren Frank Fraim and Frank Witmer were elected church choristers. Bro. Emmanuel Grubb was chosen secretary of the Sunday-school. The forenoon session was moving to another point of our District. John J. Shiffler, Harrisburg, Pa., R. D. 7, March 21.

Little Swatara.—Our church met in council March 13. The general routine business was attended to, and reports were disposed of. The paper, asking for a division of our District into two parts, was considered by the church, and decided to make no change. The time for our spring love feast will be May 11 and 12, at 10 A. M., at Ziegler's house. Eld. E. M. Wenger and Bro. Jacob Pfautz are our delegates to Annual Meeting; Brethren Henry C. Ziegler and E. W. Edris, delegates to District Meeting. Our certificate of membership was received and eight were granted. Superintendents for four of our Sunday-schools were elected as follows: Bro. Jacob Pfautz for Fryestown; Bro. A. L. Light, for Union; Bro. Henry C. Ziegler, for Ziegler's; Brethren Jacob Pfautz and Samuel Sherman for Merkey's. Schubert's church as yet is unsupplied. No secretaries will be appointed until the schools will organize, beginning with the second quarter.—H. M. Frantz, R. D. 3, Myerstown, Pa., March 16.

Philadelphia (First Church of the Brethren, Dauphin St., above Broad St.).—March 6 we had the pleasure of having Bro. H. C. Ober, from Elizabethtown College, with us at our Sunday-school. He gave the lesson and then gave us a very helpful talk. Bunday evening, March 12, our pastor, Bro. Jacob Ebbert, gave us a very splendid sermon on the subject, "God Seeking Man." At the close of the service an invitation was given and three persons accepted our God's call. Three young ladies were then led into the baptistry and buried with Christ. Sister Lucy Spieth is working in our midst, for quite an awakening is manifest.—Mrs. Sallie B. Schnell, 1906 N. 29th St., Philadelphia, Pa., March 21.

West Conestoga.—We held our council March 13. Bro. I. W. Taylor had charge of the meeting. A great deal of business was pleasantly disposed of. Ten letters of membership were granted and two were received. Sunday-school officers were elected. The writer was chosen to be our Annual Meeting. Brethren Geo. Shreiner and John Myers, to District Meeting. Our love feast will be held in the Middle District on May 15 and 16. We closed a series of meetings in the Akron house, March 15. Brethren labored with us. Some showed a willingness to follow the Master, we believe some need was realized that will result in the future.—Henry B. Nice, Lititz, Pa., March 19.

West Goshen.—At our recent council meeting Bro. J. H. Cassady was elected delegate to Annual Meeting, with Eld. J. F. Dietz as alternate. Brethren J. A. McDowell and J. F. Dietz were elected as delegates to District Meeting, with Brethren J. E. Blough and J. H. Cassady, alternates. Our church has had a prosperous conference year, according to the statistical report. The membership has increased twenty-five per cent, and the Sunday-school, fifteen per cent and a half per cent. Five Christian Workers' Meetings and five Sunday-schools are maintained in addition to the regular preaching services in the teacher-training class. The church has done well financially, and has paid all its obligations. Evangelistic services will be held at our Pleasant Hill church, beginning April 9; also at Lancaster, beginning April 16. Both will be conducted by the pastor. Our love feast will be May 7, at 5:30 P. M.—J. H. Cassady, Fourth and Bell Streets, Johnstown, Pa., March 22.

TEXAS.

Manvel church met in council March 17. A collection of $25 was taken for famine relief in China. Five new members were added to our church by letter. Our church council received by baptism and more are expected by letter soon.—A. J. Hicks, Manvel, Texas, March 22.

VIRGINIA.

Bridgewater.—Our church met in annual visit council March 11. Eld. H. G. Miller presided. Several ministers were with us during the meeting. Many visitors were also among good admonitions, which were much appreciated. The meeting was held at the Thomas house. A collection report was very encouraging. Seven members were received by letter. Delegates and writers were elected. Bro. McCune and H. G. Miller are our delegates to Annual Meeting. Brethren J. M. Cline and Jesse Wine are alternates. Brethren Marshall Garst and Jno. A. Wenger are delegates to District Meeting, with Brethren Jno. P. Miller and A. M. Miller, alternates. Our love feast will be held in District Meeting. CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

CLOVIS, NEW MEXICO.

Bro. C. H. Brown, our pastor, closed a four weeks' series of meetings on the evening of Feb. 22. The crowds and inclement weather hindered the meetings to some extent, yet we feel greatly encouraged over our prospects. Four precious souls were received by baptism and two were reclaimed. Others are very near the kingdom, and we pray that the Holy Spirit will continue to strive with them till they are willing fully to yield to his will.

Our council was held on Saturday evening, March 4. The visiting brethren reported all the members in love and peace, and prospects for the coming year bright. Bro. A. J. Rodes was reelected as our Sunday-school superintendent. Our Sunday-school has almost doubled in attendance during the past three months. Then, too, we have nineteen home department members.

A Christian Workers' Meeting was organized, with Sister Sarah Mayo as president. We are also to have a training class, to study the Bible and methods of teaching, better to fit us for the service of the Master. Our teachers' meeting and prayer meeting are held on Wednesday evening. We are truly thankful for the interest that is manifested in the study of God's Word.

Our love feast was held March 5, which was a spiritual feast to the soul. Seventeen members were present. We regretted very much the absence of the isolated members who, for some reason, were not with us. These ordinances were new to almost every one. The house was filled with a very orderly, respectable audience. Judging from the attention and expression given, many good impressions were made. May God's name be glorified by the efforts of this Mission! Minnie B. Rodes.

ROARING SPRING, PA.

The church at Roaring Spring, Pa., and the people of the town in general, were afforded a spiritual treat, last Thursday and Friday evenings, when Brother and Sister J. M. Blough, who have returned from the India mission field, were with us and gave us some very interesting and inspiring talks concerning their work at Bulsar, India. Their description of the vast number of superstitious, idolatrous people of India was so well rendered by Bro. Blough that those who heard him were eager to hear how they might reach any of them with the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Sister Blough more than satisfied their anxiety by her description of the mission work, and what work they have been doing in the Orphanage at Bulsar. We hope that these worthy, self-sacrificing people will bring their joy in the homeland, the help that will enable them to go back and accomplish still more for God in this wonderful work.

Many lasting impressions were left upon the large congregation of people who assembled to hear them speak. We believe that our church at Roaring Spring is helped very much by such meetings as were these two; together with the splendid preaching we are having every Sunday morning and evening. We hope that all who can will avail themselves of the opportunity of attending District Meeting in our church April 18 and 19.

A DOUBLE FUNERAL.

Our community was shocked on Friday evening, March 3, 1911, when the news was received of the sudden death of Mr. Renney Allen Howdyshell, an industrious and worthy young man, who lived two miles southwest of Sangerville, Augusta County, Va. While acting as fireman on a train road he was thrown under the car wheels and instantly killed. He was twenty-eight years, six months and two days old. He was the son of Brother James and Sister Sarah Ann Howdyshell. He leaves his aged parents, his wife, one little son, three brothers and four sisters. He lived a quiet, unassuming life. He was brought home to his father-in-law's home,—J. W. and Anna Belle Carson,—whose infant son, William Melvin Carson, aged 2 months and 14 days, had died but a few hours before.

On Sunday morning, March 5, a double funeral took place at Emmanuel's Church of the Brethren, conducted by Brethren J. W. Hess and M. G. Sanger, to a large and sympathizing congregation. Text, James 4: 14.

R. D. 2, Bridgewater, Va. Annie R. Miller.

WEST VIRGINA.

Berkeley.—Our church met in council March 18. Eld. John E. Otto presided. Our love feast will be held at 10 and 11, at 2 P. M. Bro. Chas. N. Grub and Bro. Francis M. Miller are our delegates to District Meeting of the Middle District of Maryland.—F. M. Miller, R. D. 8, Box 22, Martinsburg, W. Va., March 22.

Second West Virginia District.—March 12 the writer was with the brethren at Nose Chapel house, Bethany congregation, and assisted them in organizing the Sunday-school. Bro. E. F. Wilson is moving into their midst, and they have elected him superintendent of their school. They have a good Sunday-school worker. They were in the midst of a series of meetings, the 11th. I also assisted the brethren at the Nicklow house, Shiloh congregation, to organize their Sunday-school. Bro. C. C. Nicola was elected superintendent. We have succeeded in placing the Brethren literature in this school, and hope for the best results.—A. C. Auvil, Thornton, W. Va., March 24.

NOTES NOT CLASSIFIED.

Saunders Grove.—Our church met in council March 18, with Eld. Samuel Crumpacker presiding. Quarterly meeting will came before the meeting. Sister Nannie Saunders was elected to represent us at District Meeting. We intend to begin our Sunday-school April 2.—Jennie Saunders, Goodview, Va., March 22.

Cedar Rapids.—Bro. Geo. Hilton and wife were with us March 11 and 12, and gave us three services relative to their work in China. The addresses were interesting and instructive.—Grace Tisdale, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, March 20.

Garrison.—This church met in council March 18. Bro. J. P. Edmister is elected delegate to Annual Meeting. We intend to hold our love feast May 27 and 28, at 11 A. M.—Estella Blough, Box 206, Garrison, Iowa, March 24.

Beaver church held a council meeting March 11. Brethren Harvey and Roscoe Royer were with us. We are to have a love feast June 17 and 18, at 6:30 P. M. We will have services on Saturday evening also. We are expecting to get the Brethren Hymnal for church and Sunday-school work.—Bella Ruth, Beaver, Iowa, March 20.

Weston.—We began a series of meetings March 8, and if the Lord wills, we will continue until March 26. We expect to hold our love feast March 25. Some dear soul came out on the Lord's side. Good interest prevails. We expect to hold a one week series of meetings at one of our preaching points on the Weston Mountains, five miles east of Weston.—Addie E. Withers, R. D. 1, Weston, Oregon, March 21.

Hickory Grove.—We will hold our love feast May 21 at 6:30 P. M. We will also have preaching on Saturday evening, May 20.—Anna Pierheller, Mount Carroll, Ill., March 16.

Farmers Grove.—We met in council March 18. Our elder, Bro. Henry Beelman, presided. Bro. Otho Hassinger was elected secretary; also superintendent of the Sunday-school for one year.—Addie Hassinger, Box 24, Bellevue, Ohio, March 24.

Shelton.—Sister Sadie Miller came to us March 8 and remained until March 11, delivering three lectures on India which were very interesting, and enjoyed by all.—Jennie Glessner, Sheldon, Iowa, March 25.

Psalms, Hymns and Spiritual Songs

Nos. 4 & 5 Combined

By J. Henry Showalter

In choosing a song book for use in public worship, two things should be carefully considered: (1) the words and music, and (2) the binding. As a rule, the price asked for an article is a pretty fair measure of its worth. A song book which, owing to its inferiority, either as to literary and musical merit or quality of binding, must be discarded at the end of a year or two is not worth buying.

Psalms, Hymns and Spiritual Songs met with great favor from the sale of the first edition of No. 1 and has stood the test through the years. In the compilation of each succeeding number only the best selections were duplicated, and each time more than a hundred hymns, together with a number of first class new pieces were inserted. Nos. 4 and 5 contain the BEST of the GOOD and NO trash. The hymns appeal to the spiritual and the music is suited to the words. The great variety of subjects makes it available in all kinds of religious services. The chants and anthems make variety possible.

The book is substantially bound in cloth, stiff backs. It will not break when opened, nor fly shut when not held open. It will stay open just as down or standing up or in one's hands.

If you are contemplating a change in song books it will pay you to give this one a trial.

Home Department of the Sunday School

The need of the Home Department is not limited to any locality. It is needed in every church no matter where that church may be. It is sadly needed in the great metropolis, with its unchurched millions. It is needed in the towns with their thousands outside of the Sunday school. It is needed in the village and rural communities, where only a few are indifferent. It is needed in your school. It will work in every community, whether city or country, where one or more persons are out of the Sunday school.

AROUND THE WORLD

Russia's Terms Accepted by China.

Under date of March 28 China's complete acceptance of Russia's ultimatum is reported as having restored the ruffled feelings which, for a time threatened serious hostilities between the contending parties. While, by the assumption of the tenet that "might makes right," Russia is probably taking advantage of China's temporary inability to withstand a threatened invasion of its territory, such things are to be expected, as long as the force of arms gives emphasis to insolent demands. With the present serious conditions of famine and plague confronting the Empire, China, undoubtedly, has neither the funds nor the inclination to go to war. This, no doubt, has largely prompted the ready acceptance of the peace conditions as stipulated by Russia.

Multiplied Millions for Jewelry.

Civilized nations are apt to point the finger of scorn at the benighted people of heathen lands who make an obtrusive and, to our mind, senseless display of jewelry. Recently, however, a prominent native of India, in withering irony asked why it was necessary for Christian nations to spend twenty times more for jewelry than for gospel promulgation, which, as Christians claim, is the "one thing needful." No one, as yet, has attempted to answer the pertinent question of the inquiring Hindoo. It is to be hoped, however, in the interest of progress in real Christian activity, that soon a sense of responsibility will so overwhelmingly inspire each believer that missionary enterprises, and the uplift of humanity in general, will drive out any inclination to deck the body with the vain display so severely denounced by apostolic precept.

Attempt to Bar the Bible from the Mails.

Objections were recently raised by James B. Stillman, a lawyer of Boston, Mass., to the mailing of the Bible, it being, as he declares, an unfit publication. In alleged proof he cites various sections of Genesis, Deuteronomy, and Paul's Epistles to the Corinthians and Romans. His complaint was duly submitted to United States Attorney French, who, after carefully noting the passages cited, was informed the would-be objector that he can see no reason whatever for barring the Bible from being transported or delivered by the United States Postoffice Department. It is gratifying, indeed, that, while enemies of the Blessed Word are continually endeavoring to hinder its use and circulation, their plans and devices are bound to fail. The Lord of Hosts has promised to care for his own, and he will not allow one word of his blessed promises to come to naught.

Protecting Secrecy by Law.

That secret orders are endeavoring to secure protection under the potent sway of legal enactments, savors strongly of fear lest possible exposures should result to their disadvantage. Following in the wake of several other States, bills were recently introduced in the Legislatures of Oregon and Nebraska, to prohibit the printing and circulation of exposures of any secret society except by the specific authority of the organization in question. This practically means suppression of what is written by men like Morgan, Bernard, Finney, Blanchard, Stoddard, and others, who have shown up secret societies in their true colors. To our mind the attempted legislation in behalf of secrecy is one of the most incriminating confessions of its shame,—a desire to escape the scrutiny of public criticism. The secret orders "hate the light, neither come to the light, lest their deeds should be reproved."

A Cheerful Giver.

It is really refreshing, amid the many instances of greed and intense commercialism, characteristic of the present age, to turn to the life of a generous and wise giver. We have before referred to the benefactions of Dr. Daniel Kimball Pearsons, of Hinsdale, Ill., who has already given nearly $5,000,000 to over forty struggling colleges, schools and mission efforts. At his coming ninety-first birthday, April 14, he expects to distribute another and perhaps final gift of $300,000. Several things, in connection with the life of the aged philanthropist are worth noting. He has lived simply and unostentatiously himself, in order to help others; he has given where his donations were sure to do good; he has, as he declares himself, derived the keenest pleasure from his giving, and rejoices in the thought that the forces for good, which his gifts have helped to set in motion, will live long after he has gone to his reward. We need hardly suggest to our readers that there is an eloquent suggestion, in the example of Dr. Pearsons, for those in our own Brotherhood who desire to use wisely the means with which the Lord has so richly blessed them. Our schools as well as the mission interests might largely increase their fields of usefulness if the liberal givers among us would come to the rescue. "God loveth a cheerful giver."

A Lonely Old Age.

The representative of a Paris newspaper recently interviewed Abdul Hamid, the former Sultan of Turkey. The one time autocratic and remorseless ruler of the Ottoman Empire illustrates, most vividly, the scriptural teaching on sowing and reaping. During the days of his prosperity he lived for self; now, when he has been shorn of power, and largely of his possessions, he presents the pitiable spectacle of a friendless, forsaken old age. Confined to the narrow limits of his prison-house at Salonika, he sees but little of the outside world, and during the brief span of life that may yet be allotted him he has little to make his life cheerful, nor does he have a hopeful outlook as to the life beyond. How different the experience of Paul who, in his last moments, could, in absolute assurance, say, "I have fought the good fight, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness!"

Barriers Between the Church and the Masses.

Pew renting came in for its share of well-deserved censure at the hands of A. C. Dixon, of the Moody church, Chicago, when he recently declared that it is the most pernicious barrier between the church of Christ and the masses, and that it places gospel efforts on an absolutely commercial basis. Mr. Dixon gave emphasis to the remarks, just quoted, by stating that he refused the proffered pastorate of the Metropolitan Tabernacle, London (Spurgeon's old church), because of its pew-renting system. He pointedly remarked: "Putting wealthy worldlings in prominent pews, while praying, spiritual children of God are made to occupy lowly places, is often entirely reverses God's order. The really rich, in his view, may be the poor in purse; the poorest before God may be a millionaire according to God's bank account." More than ever are we convinced that the Brethren's plan of "free seats and all made welcome" is based on apostolic precedent and gospel principles.

The Third National Peace Congress.

Under the auspices of the American Peace Society, which has so successfully taken charge of previous gatherings, the Third National Peace Congress is to convene May 3 to 5 in Baltimore, Md. It is hoped to make this the best and most effective effort for peace and arbitration that has yet been attempted, and to this end a number of speakers of world-wide note are to add their strength and influence to the work. To our mind the value of this and other efforts in behalf of peace could be largely augmented by intelligent coöperation of all those who make the peace principle an essential tenet of their faith. Little can be accomplished by the various organizations in and of themselves, but they might become a factor of national importance in the great cause of peace promotion, were they to join forces to the accomplishment of that end. The best of results are sure to follow systematic, well-organized and united efforts to center public attention on the great advantages of peace and arbitration.

Further Oppression of the Jews.

The Holy Synod of the Russian church issued an edict March 30, by which all Jews are prohibited from bearing Christian first names, as the authorities think they may insist on wishing to retain the names by which they have always been known, and under which they have conducted their business enterprises. It is declared by those in touch with Russian official circles that the late edict is but a step in the gigantic plan by which the Holy Synod eventually expects to drive out the Jews from every part of the Russian domains. The great question now confronting the Jews of other countries is: "Where shall the Russian Jews go?" Those with means, of course, can take care of themselves in any land. But there is no country in Europe that is willing to look after the wants of the Jew without means, and not even America is willing to allow Jewish immigrants to enter unless they can show sufficient funds to make their own way. It is no credit to the so-called Holy Synod of Russia to bring this unprecedented era of persecution upon the Jews. It is utterly foreign to the spirit of the loving Christ.

The Law Knows No Mercy.

Recently a man in South Carolina was returned to State's prison from which he had escaped sixteen years before. During his days of liberty he had turned over a new leaf, settled down, got married, and lived an exemplary Christian life, helpful to all in the community. Some one, unfriendly to him, accidentally discovered his identity, with the result that he is now behind the bars again, serving out his unfinished sentence, plus the penalty for escaping. While the man, to all intents and purposes, had reformed, the letter of the law knew no mercy. Far different is the great and abounding mercy of God, which assures forgiveness, full and free, to all who turn to him with a broken and contrite heart. "The Lord is merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy."

Chinese Christians as Peacemakers.

New York's "Chinatown" presents problems of unusual magnitude. When troubles arise between the various societies and clans of the motley aggregation of Chinese, the police force is practically unable to restore peace and harmony. During a recent feud about twenty lives were lost and fifteen of the contestants wounded, before an effective means for a cessation of hostilities was found. The much-desired peace was brought about by the well-directed efforts of a commission of Chinese Christian ministers, students, merchants and other representatives of church organizations. So effectual were the conciliatory overtures of these Chinese Christian workers, that hereafter they are likely to prove an important factor in preserving peaceable conditions in New York's "Chinatown." It is to the credit of any Christian people to put their gospel principles to a practical test, smoothing existing difficulties and "pouring oil on the troubled waters."

A Zeal Worthy of a Better Cause.

Since the completion of the Mecca railway, the pilgrims to the sacred shrine of Mohammedanism have greatly increased in number. Time, distance and expense do not, in the least, interfere with the completion of the weary journey to the tomb of the prophet. Unbounded enthusiasm and zeal characterize their efforts. Erroneous as their belief may be to us, who rejoice in the perfect law of gospel liberty, one thing is sure,—every returning pilgrim becomes an active missionary! While many of the leaders insist upon a certain measure of reform, and demand a higher standard of life, the great mass of people have but a blind zeal, and never rises higher than the sordid level of Islamism. Even the fact that eighty per cent of the followers of the Prophet are living in the domains of Christian Governments, has in no way weakened their zeal and devotion. While they have doubtless largely profited by the protection thus given them, and by the contact with a higher civilization, they have not abated in the least in their zeal, that would,—like the Jews of old,—go "to the uttermost parts of the earth to make one proselyte." Their intense loyalty and devotion really puts to shame many so-called Christians of the homeland, who fail to show by their lives that they are co-workers with him who gave his life that all men might come to the truth.

Pitiable Conditions in Mexico.

While our sympathy is aroused in behalf of deplorable conditions in far-off heathen lands, it is well to remember that at the very threshold of our nation there are oppressed people that well deserve our pity. Mexico's immense estates, owned by the comparatively few rich land owners, are cultivated by the peons, or laborers, who have no prospect, under prevailing conditions, of rising above their present state of industrial serfdom. Their wages, especially on the ranches and plantations, seldom exceed six cents a day, while their cost of living,—imposed on them by heartless and in most cases absentee landlords,—is from ten cents to one per day. Thus they fall deeper in debt with the setting of each day's sun, and under their laws they are prohibited from leaving a hacienda until their debt is paid. Consequently every laborer who reaches his or her majority soon becomes a lifetime prisoner for debt. It is not to be wondered at that the prevailing dissatisfaction is loud and strong, and it does not require a prophet to foretell that better living conditions must be established in Mexico before the downtrodden people will exact their demands for "a square deal." In these days of enlightenment no nation can hope to succeed in its administrative affairs without a practical acknowledgment of mutually fair and equitable rights for all, and that presupposes at least an approximate application of "Golden Rule" principles.

If I Had Wings!

BY B. F. M. SOURS.

If I had wings, the stars where glory hovers
Would be my path; the seas of ether deep
No more would from my wistful vision keep
Their hosts sublime,
Through endless time,
While surging glory all of nature covers,
The while our human spirits laugh or weep.

If I had wings, beyond the present vision,
Beyond where moonlight trembles, evermore
Above the earth-sward would my glad heart soar
To pierce the skies
Of vast surprise,
Vaster than earth's dreams of light Elysian—
Pierce the sweet skies of rapture, brimming o'er.

If I had wings to pierce the veil material
And pass the curtains that now shade the day,
In that effulgent, calm, expansive ray
Where no decay
Can foil for joy
Of life—of life! beyond the vales ethereal,
Beyond our ken, there, in the far away—

If I had wings?—O glory surge on glory
Would break upon my ever wondering eyes!
The length, the breadth, the vastness never dies,
But one calm call
Sounds over all—
The King, earth-sung in psalm, and song, and story,
Speaks, and his voice reechoes through the skies!

If I had wings to leave these fields terrestrial
And find a dwelling-place in yonder shrine—
The home of him, the Fashioner Divine—
O glorious part!—
O happy heart!
To soar to Heaven's streets of light celestial,
And claim an habitation there as mine!

And I have wings. O heaven thrills with brightness
Beyond the knowledge of the earth-born throng!
I soar—the Father bears my soul along
In arms of love—
Faith wings above,
Upborne in happiest heights of holy whiteness,
In sight of Jesus and the Land of song!

Homiletic Hints.

BY E. B. HOFF.

Two Missionary Discourses:

(1) A Call to Consecration.

(2) A Large Missionary Outlook and Commission.

We are here merely giving suggestions towards mapping out two missionary sermons. One involves the consecration and call of the individual to the Lord's service, based largely upon a few texts in the prophets, together with a few texts in the Gospels. This lends itself to home work of any kind and to foreign work, and is needed by every Christian. The second one is a world-wide commission,—such as is found in the great commission in Matt. 28: 19, 20, and comes as a complement to the first discourse.

For the first discourse take Isa. 6, which is regarded by all to be Isaiah's call and commission.

In verses 1-3 he has a vision that opens his eyes to the high and holy things, and gives him a larger vision of God and the world, and of the unworthiness of humanity.

Verse 4 indicates how the prophet is affected,—a sort of collapse,—which usually comes after a vision.

In verse 5 the prophet, after having the vision and the collapse, makes a beautiful confession of the unworthiness of himself and his people.

This confession is immediately followed, in verse 6, by the cleansing. Compare Psa. 32: 5 (in fact, read the entire Psalm, as well as Psalm 51).

This cleansing is at once followed, in verse 8, by the prophet's response. He now, as never before, hears the call to service.

This response is immediately followed, in verse 9, by the commission. The commission includes the rest of the chapter. It does not have a hopeful outlook, but that does not matter. The prophet's business is to go, and when he has been thoroughly cleansed and is thoroughly responsive, he says: "Here am I." The whole book is a sequel and shows what this means.

You might also take up Jer. 1: 4-19, and appropriate some excellent lessons upon the call and consecration, to add to this discourse.

In Jer. 1: 4, 5 point out plainly how strongly the prophet has appointment from above. And that is not only true with the prophet but is true with all of God's people.

Verse 6 indicates the unworthiness of the prophet, a confession which he does not, however, allow to interfere with his usefulness, and which he overcomes in the balance of the book by his wonderful consecration and bravery.

The commission falls, in a general way, in verses 7-10. Rather a large commission for a child, but a child with God is a man. The rest of the chapter contains the commission and very plainly intensifies it. The whole book bespeaks the prophet's close abiding with God, and the mighty service in divine power.

It will be helpful, also, at this time, to look at the call of Ezekiel, which also is prefaced by a vision, in chapter one, and which adds, in chapter two and three, the need of consuming the book, containing the message; for any ministry without a message is vain.

The call of Gideon, in Judges 6, also illustrates some excellent phases of consecration and powerful service.

The call of the fisherman by Jesus, in Luke 5: 1-11, and the associate promise of a large ingathering will find a helpful place in this discourse.

Now for the second discourse, which is the world-wide commission. Our basis is found in Mark 16: 15, 16, and Matt. 28: 19, 20. The literal Greek of these texts is much stronger than the English, and I take the liberty to set it forth, as clearly as I can, and I am sure you will appreciate its added strength. In the Mark text the one main verb in the text is "preach the Gospel." This is the great command in this text. The "Go ye" is not coördinate with it, as it is in the English, but is an Aorist participle of antecedent action, and, properly translated, it would read thus: "Having gone into the world, preach the Gospel to the whole creation," or "to every creature."

This text is exceedingly large, when looked at from that standpoint. When we, as Christians, have done verse 15, our work is done; the whole matter of responsibility rests on the other side,—"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Of course, "believing," here, is not merely faith, but the two words stand for the human side of justification, the first the abstract side, and the second the ceremonial. The first is active and the second is passive. On the other hand, if one will not act in believing, but disbelieves and, of course, is not baptized (and even if he were it would not avail), he stands condemned. If, however, the response is genuine, then the strong promise of the power of God to his children, as we see in verses 17 and 18, follows.

Let us now go over to Matt. 28; 19, 20. You will notice, first of all, that this commission was not given on Mt. Olivet, and that, probably, the Mark commission was given at the same time this was. It was given on the mountain, during the interview that Jesus had with his disciples in Galilee, maybe several days before his final ascent on Mt. Olivet.

Jesus puts his beautiful introduction in verses 17, 18, where he gives to the worshiping disciples their assurance of authority. This authority, necessarily, lies back of the commission, as authority must lie back of any commission of any worth. Note the large, universal breadth of this authority.

In verses 19 and 20 we have the same general setting in the Greek that we have in Mark. The one main verb in this statement is "make disciples." Better, still, use the verb "disciple," or the word "Christianize."

The text reads, therefore, in the Greek: "Having gone, therefore, disciple (or Christianize) all the nations." How this is done is indicated by two identical actions, present participles—baptizing and teaching—by baptizing into the name of the Father, into the name of the Son, and into the name of the Holy Spirit, and by teaching them. Both these are essential to Christianizing. They can not be Christianized without both.

Then comes the beautiful promise of Christ, which, of course, indicates the presence of the Holy Spirit, as we see in John chapters 14 and 16, and in Acts 1: 8, and elsewhere.

Note now that the great burden on Christ's heart was not "Go ye" but it was Christianize the world,—not, Christianize a little handful, here and there, but Christianize the world. And many texts of the prophets and of the Gospels indicate that this will be done in some large sense of the term, and the quicker the church awakens to its responsibility and opportunity, and throws off its blue glasses and puts on the glasses of Jesus Christ, the better.

I have purposely avoided making an outline and have given only suggestive hints for the opening of these texts. If you allow the Spirit to direct and empower you, you will find in these texts great discourses,—such discourses as will actually move men into the active service of the Lord.

Pictures of Desire.

BY GEO. F. CHEMBERLEN.

Long ago, by an ambitious king, was the statement made: "Better is the sight of the eyes than the wanderings of desire." Or, in other words, the present seen blessings, enjoyed by a thankful spirit, are better than the gifts and positions we sometimes picture for ourselves. How often has it been our experience to run out and far beyond ourselves, and imagine things to be for ourselves, which, though in picturing them they appear to be so lovely, if brought to pass, would bring a full measure of misery.

There are certain elements in these pictures of desire that make them baneful to our spiritual selves. The lack of trust, the wanton destruction of the soul's best gift,—gratitude, the culture of covetousness, perhaps the unbridling of "fierce ambitions," and the consequent wrecking tell us they are but illusive and delusive pictures and not the real purpose in living.

Sometimes these pictures of desire, instead of mature plans are but the wanderings of a fevered spirit, or the brooding of an infantile, ungrown mind. With the coming of years the wandering desire returns to us, and empty handed, and we are glad that it did not glean where we sent it.

I well remember that, years ago, in the opening of my school-life, I very much desired to have a trained goat and a wagon. The ambition, so much beyond my years, was not altogether for my own pleasure. There was mixed up with the desire the pleasure of a certain feminine earthbeam of my own age and experience in life. How great the beauty of that picture, and with what intense gallantry it was viewed by an eight-year-old! But time and the conquest of life dealt with it as these untiring and indomitable forces deal with many similar and even more substantial things. It was before them like the paintings of the masters before the untutored rabble. They cared not for it. For there came a day when I could have owned a trained goat and a wagon, and was considered of proper age to enjoy the society of a "girl." But when that day came I could not enjoy that girl, or endure the odor of a goat. How the years had led me out, by and beyond this infant picture of desire! It was,—as are so many things of life,—the creation of an ungrown mind.

Brethren, I am persuaded that there is a vast population in a land we have not seen as yet, who are thinking, "How foolish it was for me to desire one more farm. Had I known then what I now know, I should have looked beyond the toys of a fleeting world to the enduring 'things not seen as yet' for possessions." The making of a man for either time or eternity lies in leading him by,—even beyond,—his follies.

Going Up to Jerusalem.

BY W. R. MILLER.

Siege and Looting of Kerak.—No. 6.

DURING the early morning of Dec. 6 (Tuesday) the Sheikhs notified our party that we must leave the city, because there were so many Arabs coming into Kerak who did not know Mr. Forder that they would not be able to give us protection very much longer. They agreed to furnish us an escort to one of their camps some three hours down the wady towards the Dead Sea. At an early hour we were up and getting our stuff packed, that is, what we could take with us, for as two of our muleteers, with their mules, had deserted us when the rebellion began, it was certain that we must leave a portion of the baggage, consisting of our tents, stools and tables, two boxes of provisions, a small portion of the bedding, and our five-gallon can of oil (for we did our cooking with oil stoves). These goods were stored in one of the vacant rooms, and left with little hope of ever seeing them again.

Fighting had already begun when it was light enough for us to attempt the descent of the steep wady, and the ping of the bullets was heard in every direction, sounding out their note of warning in their flight over our heads. It is most surprising what almost inaccessible pathways these native horses, mules and donkeys will pass over safely, and for one to fall is an exception. The pack animals will carry very heavy burdens over roads most difficult for one to scramble over on foot, and travel twenty-five to thirty miles per day. It was down one of these very difficult paths, zigzagging to the bed of the valley, that our way led that morning. By the dim light of early day, each one leading his horse, and in perfect silence, we threaded, in single file, our difficult path to the valley below. The day before I climbed to a window, high in the wall of our building, and, while looking out of the narrow window, saw an Arab on this same steep hillside which we were descending that morning, not more than fifteen yards from our rooms. As he was cautiously slipping from one hiding place to another, there was a rifle crack from overhead; he seemed to pause momentarily, an apparent tremor convulsing his body, and over he went, rolling down the steep hillside. The next morning, as we passed the spot where he fell, I saw his mendiel (head-cloth) lying there. In plain view from another window in the west wall, and close to the spot where we stood with the soldiers on Monday morning, lay another poor fellow, from perhaps ten o'clock until night. He evidently was shot dead, for at no time during the day could we see that he made any movement, lying as he had fallen.

Just as our escort came to the door for us, and as we were getting our horses ready for the start, there was some little commotion, as the officer in the cistern began to call lustily, and here is where our grave danger came in, for had he been heard by the Arabs, our doom would have been sealed, as well as his own. I think here we were called upon to decide, under strange and peculiar circumstances, a question so unique and extraordinary as may never come to many people in this world. What was our duty and obligation to our fellow-man in this case? To leave him in the cistern, with no possible means of escape, with no food, and all knowledge of his being there going out with us, seemed heartless and cruel. The house in which the cistern was located was vacant and how could he be discovered? Would he remain there starving to death in darkness? Where did our responsibility begin and end? These were the questions that some of us had to face and decide. The sequel of our decision will appear in a subsequent article.

As we passed down the valley or wady,—as they are known in this country,—we had to cross an open space at the junction of another wady, and as we went across this, it brought us in plain view of the city. Just at this time the rifle shots began ringing out in real earnest, and not a few of our party believed we were under fire. If so, then the wonderful protection that had already been so clearly defined as Divine in our case, was still protecting us, and not even the bullets of either Arab or Turk could harm us. Notwithstanding we all breathed a sigh of relief when we were out of range of the guns. Many bands of Arabs were met on our way out, that morning, all hurrying forward to take part in the siege and looting of Kerak, for the fleeing old men, women and children, carried the news to the camps, that the fighting had begun and they seemed to be losing no time in getting to the scene of action.

Some of our party had previously expressed a desire, that we should have some experience in "Bedouin Tent Life," before we returned from this twenty-five days' touring through Arabia, not thinking however that it would come to us in the way in which we were destined to have this coveted experience.

Now, having left the besieged city, with all its horrors, bloodshed, suffering and butchery, we were glad, indeed, to be away from the very present danger and awful environments, to seek the quiet and shelter of the friendly camp to which we were wending our way, not knowing that there were in store for us, during the next few days, a still more strenuous life and dangers untold.

The camp to which we were sent had twenty-four tents, and two clans were represented, hence two headmen in the camp. To the tent of the younger chief, appearing in the foreground of the picture of the camp, and back of which our horses are staked, we were taken, about one-half of the tent being put at our disposal. As word had preceded us of our coming, the tent was made ready by the time of our arrival. Rugs had been spread on the ground, and on these some heavy comforters were laid for us to sit upon, as chairs are an unknown quantity in these camps. Our advent into their camp was the source of much interest to men, women and children. However, it was only the older men, on this occasion, who paid their respects to us, as all others were on duty at Kerak. Nearly all the camp came to our tent, to inspect us and our belongings. They would crowd nearer and nearer, until there was scarcely room for ourselves. Then they must be driven out, but little by little they would crowd back and it would not be long until they had gained as much space as they had before, or a little more, if possible. An old man would come and drive the children away to make more room for their women, and so the time passed, and it was time for us to prepare our meal. To do this, Bedouin style, was a little trying on our lady cooks. A bit of a fireplace was made with stones, the kettles were set on these, and with the thistles which the Arab women gather for fuel, our first meal was prepared in their camp.

Turn on the Light.

BY JACOB FUNK.

THIS is an age of publicity, an age when man is demanding an open explanation of every man's life and conduct. "No man liveth to himself" was never more true than today. The man who lives and moves among his fellow-men as a neighbor, a citizen, a Christian, must live so that his every act,—yea, his very thought,—is an open book, for every one's inspection. To keep back, to hide, to refuse to divulge his thoughts, his intent, his act, is to admit mischief.

The world is coming to know, more and more, that nothing which is good can, in any way, suffer from being brought to the light, and very much that is evil could be eradicated by being made known. This is not only true of the individual but it is also true of societies, corporations and government. Governments are demanding that corporations, doing business under its protection, keep an open book, where each citizen may, if he so desires, investigate for himself, as to the methods, profits, expense, etc., of the corporation.

The secret methods of the political trickster, whereby the will of the people is ofttimes misused and miscarried, are no longer looked upon as honorable, and the party using such means is soon brought into disrepute. The world of nations is demanding that the different governments deal with each other in a free, frank, open manner, and so, no matter whether it be individual, corporation, society or government, if it refuses an honest investigation of its work and conduct, it is an evidence of graft and corruption. The normal condition of humanity does not need secrecy to develop its resources. An open, knowable, public knowledge of facts and conditions is a barrier to evil doers. Not to admit access to such knowledge, is to invite corruption.

Some one has said that "to build chambers in a commonwealth, into which the official agent of the commonwealth may not enter, as an officer of the people, is to prepare at least the place and possibilities of hurtful plotting." No honest investigation will demand of any man facts or knowledge that does not enhance the general welfare of humanity, but every man's business must be in such a condition that he not only will give publicity to his affairs, but he will court such publicity, so that the citizen in his vocation, the office-seeker asking for your vote, the office-holder, serving the public, the judge on the bench, the criminal at the bar, the lawyer pleading his case, the minister in the pulpit, the teacher in the school,—all shall so conduct themselves and their business that, instead of publicity being a hindrance to success, it shall be a guarantee of confidence.

In ancient times, when war and strife were the program of the day, secrecy was encouraged and publicity denied. But in these days of peace and good will, the order ought to be reversed. The evil effect of secrecy, in its various forms, is known to all. Political rings have been formed, bound together in secrecy. This has resulted in the corruption of politics, the curbing of liberty and the miscarrying of justice. Business men have combined, and, by secret manipulations, have stifled competition and amassed great fortunes of ill-gotten wealth, which, today, is a positive menace to the government.

Even religious organizations have, with secrecy as an instrument, been the means of doing great harm in times past. Only as the light was turned on, was the enormity of the evil recognized.

To fear the light of honest investigation means either cowardice or criminality, and any society or organization that must, by promise, pledge, oath, threat, or penalty, bind its members to secrecy, is founded upon an exceedingly shaky foundation.

The Committee's Report on Rebaptism.

BY S. E. KESLER.

BEFORE moving that this report be accepted by next Conference, it is desired to analyze it a little, that we may get a clear conception of the matter, if adopted by Conference.

The report, in the first place, shows deliberation and care in wording, and is so very simple in its nature, that it may be easily understood by all. Note, —those "who are in harmony with us as to the nature and design of baptism," who have been baptized by churches "whose regular form of baptism is trine immersion." This admits members of the branches that have separated themselves from us, from the Progressives, and from the Old Order people. This also includes the members of such other churches as baptize as we do,—the River Brethren, some branches of the Church of God, Armenians, Greeks, Copts, etc., provided such, of the last named, are "in harmony with us as to the nature and design of baptism." This being ascertained, the way is clear.

The second and third divisions of the report need no comment. Any minister could follow the course outlined in them. Give the usual instructions as to the order of the church and the law of trespass (Matt. 18), and then follow with laying on of hands (if neglected) and prayer, and receive with the hand of fellowship, and kiss of love, and all is over.

As to the merits of the paper, it is moved that the report be accepted without discussion at next Conference, or, should it fail, refer it to the individual congregations and decide it by the vote of a majority of the churches, for or against it, at the Conference of 1912.

In favor of the report the following is submitted:

1. Its reasonableness. To illustrate: Brother A is a minister in the church in good standing. He is baptizing right along for the church. His work is ratified by the church, but, for reasons satisfactory to himself, he withdraws his membership from the church. The church in council agrees to "grant his request,"—the only thing left to do. No charge being against him, he could be restored any day. But he goes on baptizing. His converts are, in all essential points, as nearly in harmony with us as many whom we baptize. We would say to him, "You can come back, but you can not bring your converts along unless we baptize them."

The Spirit led these converts to the right form and nature of baptism, and now wishes to lead them to accept the whole Gospel, but we say to the Spirit, "You must lead them to accept the true form and nature of baptism again!" And why? Can you tell?

2. Again; the Spirit leads Mr. B to receive the true form of baptism by a minister who never was "of us." He now is leading Mr. B. into a fuller light of the Word, and now Mr. B is led to accept the full Gospel and wishes to unite with us, so that he can. But we say, "Good Spirit, we can not take him unless thou persuadest him to receive true baptism a second time!"

It will not do to say that the devil led these parties to receive the true form of baptism, and if we admit that the devil led the minister to administer the true form of baptism (which he does not) would that make the baptism wrong?

3. The Spirit led Bro. A. Mack to receive the true baptism at the hands of an unbaptized man. Those who contend for rebaptism, would unbaptize, or nullify, the baptism of the whole church, because Bro. Mack did not receive baptism by "royal descent."

4. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." "Baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Compliance with these scriptures brings pardon of past sins. It brought pardon to all of John the Baptist's converts, and to all of Christ's converts before they knew anything about many practices we now have. How much faith had John's and Christ's converts in feet-washing, the Lord's supper, communion, salutation, anointing, non-secrecy, non-lawing, non-conformity, etc., when they were baptized? The Spirit does not lead one into all the truth at once; it takes time to do it.

He may lead one to receive the true baptism even on the protest of a minister who does not believe in it. No doubt instances of this kind have occurred.

5. Jesus prayed that his people might "all be one in him." Here is a man who is one with us in Christ, having been "baptized into him," on more faith, in many of our practices, than John's or Christ's first converts had. He wishes now to enter into a closer oneness with us in practice, being led by the Spirit to see things as we do. He is already one with us in baptism. Christ is in him, he having put him on in baptism. The Spirit is leading him to accept the full Gospel, but those who want baptism by organic succession say, "Come not until the Spirit leads you to reject a baptism that has not come down the royal line by succession."

6. There is no instance of rebaptism in the Bible or in the early Fathers. When the Arians,—trine immersionists,—renounced Arianism, they did not drop the trine immersion they had received from their own people, but were received into the church without rebaptism. (See any historian who mentions it.)

The twelve whom Paul met at Ephesus, were not rebaptized; they were simply baptized. Had they been baptized, it would not have been repeated. There is no instance to show that any of John's converts were ever rebaptized, and, indeed, if one of them had been, all of them should have been. These twelve were not baptized by John. The record does not say they were. They had not "even heard if there be any Holy Ghost." John taught all whom he baptized about the Holy Ghost.

7. "By one Spirit are we all baptized into one body." Not by one man nor even by one church, but by one Spirit. But can the Spirit use an unbaptized man to administer the true baptism? Surely he can. The Spirit has, in many instances, used ungodly men to accomplish God's will and purpose. And every time when he leads a man to demand trine immersion of a minister who does not himself believe in it, he is using that minister in defense of the true baptism. The case of Dr. Talmage and Mr. Houston is an instance.

8. Those who contend for rebaptism, place the efficacy not in obedience to the act of baptism, but in the man or in "succession." Then it makes no difference how much or what faith a man may have, or how anxious he may be to obey in baptism,—he is lost if the minister is a hypocrite, or has not received baptism by succession from the unknown and unbaptized man who baptized Alexander Mack! Surely, inconsistency is not a jewel!

"The Temptation,"—A Great Painting.

BY JAMES M. MOORE.

RECENTLY I had what I consider a very great privilege. It was my good fortune to see Thomas F. Mostyn's celebrated $50,000 painting, entitled "The Temptation" (Christ in the wilderness).

I have never been much taken up with art as I have seen it. That may be because I do not know enough about the celebrated paintings to appreciate them. But when I learned that a great painting of the temptation of Jesus was on exhibition, I determined to see it, and arranged to give myself time carefully to study the masterpiece.

There it was, and words fail in a description of it. The scene is in a lonely place among the rocks and hills. The central figure is a young man who has taken upon himself the responsibility of life. His face is distinctly Jewish.

His hair, which is rather long, is parted on the top of his head, but its disorder shows clearly the effect of mighty struggles. His brow is set with determination not to swerve from a definite purpose. His face, while resolute, is the picture of innocence.

Those eyes,—I hope I shall never forget them,—are set upon some point ahead and upward. There seems to be no possibility of getting them off their object. They are red with weeping, and show that there has been intense trial. Even the clinching of the hands show determination. On the back of them the veins stand out as though it were requiring the supreme effort of the entire being to remain firm to the purpose ahead.

As I stood with bared head, there came to me a longing to be more like Jesus was in his temptation, and I found myself offering up a prayer to that end. I stood and looked. I walked away, but soon returned, and for some time I lingered near, in order to study that face. May that picture never leave me.

And this is all the work of a great artist, as he transferred his conception of the New Testament account of the temptation to the canvas. It gives the event a new interest and puts a new meaning in that wonderful struggle. May the attitude of Jesus in that, as well as in all other events of his life, be our example, and may we conquer by the same power.

The Eucharist.

BY S. N. M'CANN.

THE communion is the most important yet the most dangerous ordinance in the Church of Christ. This is true because of its great power either for good or evil in the life of the communicant. The more powerful anything is, the more good or the more harm it is capable of doing. This is illustrated in a fine horse under control or not under control, in electricity controlled or not controlled, in a strong intellect properly directed or improperly directed. The ordinance is most dangerous, because it is most important, most life giving, most powerful in its effects upon the character of the Christian. Its blessings are experienced in eating worthily. Its dangers are found in eating unworthily. To eat the bread or to drink the cup of the Lord in an unworthy manner is to become guilty of the body and blood of the Lord (1 Cor. 11:27).

No person can safely take the bread and cup who has not been sanctified by the blood of Jesus. The man who has been dedicated to God by the blood of Jesus will, in partaking of the bread and cup of the Lord, renounce all hindrances to a full realization of the Christ likeness in his life, else eat unworthily. A wrong attitude to Christ incarnate in us, when we take the holy emblems, makes us guilty of the body, and of the blood of the Lord. A wrong attitude makes us the betrayers and crucifiers of Jesus. A wrong attitude here is to kill the Christ in us, to crucify him, to dethrone him, and to enthrone the world, in the shape of lust, pride, avarice or some sinful desire. If the taking of the bread and cup in an unworthy manner exposes us to the guilt of the body and blood of Jesus, we should be awake to the danger, lest we, indeed, crucify our Savior afresh and put him to an open shame. If the danger of becoming guilty of the body and blood of Jesus is not enough to alarm us, and to make us examine ourselves, lest we eat unworthily and bring sleepiness, sickness and death spiritual upon us, then we are insensible to danger.

Can we be guilty of a greater sin than to be guilty of the body and blood of Jesus? Is our guilt not greater than the guilt of him who betrayed Jesus, than the guilt of those who crucified him on Calvary? We have been washed, we have been sanctified by his blood and now take the holy emblems into our hands and into our mouths, without the proper attitude of heart and mind to the indwelling Christ, and thus become guilty of his body and blood. A single known sin or fault, not confessed and repented of, with a determination to get rid of it through the help of Christ, renders us unworthy to take the bread and cup of the Lord.

If there is a place or time in a man's life where he should be strictly honest and conscientious with himself and with the Lord, it is as he approaches the tables of the Lord. "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin" will apply here with full force.

A child of God can not allow a thing of doubtful propriety to remain in his life, and eat worthily at the Lord's table. This would cut out the wearing of jewelry by many who allow it because of their surroundings. No one can read 1 Peter 3:3, 4 and 1 Tim.

2:9, 10, and go to the table of the Lord with superfluous adornment, without being guilty of the body and blood of Jesus. They need no exegete to define these scriptures. The Holy Spirit will speak in language clear enough to be heard by every one, until they refuse to hear, and thus become guilty of the body and blood of the Lord.

No one can afford to do what his conscience will not clearly allow, else the Word of God becomes a dead letter, the voice of the Spirit ceases to speak, and conscience becomes seared as with a hot iron. The whole man,—soul and spirit,—being dedicated to the Lord, is sanctified, having been cleansed by the blood of the Lamb. Jesus is holy, being free from sin. The man who is dedicated to God is holy by imputation and thus sanctified. His will being God's, is holy. His plea is, "Not my will but thine be done."

The emblems of the broken body and shed blood of Jesus are holy. The life of the Christian, though sin is not reigning, yet, failing here and there, is not holy. Without an earnest and prayerful effort to bring the life up to the Christ likeness by penitence and rededication of soul, body and spirit to the Lord, we become guilty of the body and blood of the Lord. As we approach the tables of the Lord, realizing our failure in thought, word or act, we promise, by the help of Jesus, to do better, to live closer to his holy life. As the Christian, sincerely and honestly, reviews his life on approaching the tables of the Lord, he, like the publican, cries out, "Lord, be merciful to me a sinner." The honest review of life, and the sincere cry for mercy places the communicant upon the only ground where he can eat in a worthy manner.

It is the only ground that will not make him guilty of the body and blood of Jesus. It is the one position that will insure a real growth of the Christ life. Eating must always be a source of strength, or else of weakness. If conditions are right and the food the proper kind, strength is the result of eating. If this is true physically, how much more is it true spiritually, when we eat and drink at the Lord's table the sacred emblems of his body and his blood! To see the failures in life, to feel sorry that the life has not been better, and to ask forgiveness as we come to the Lord's table, is right. Yet all this is not enough. We may have all this and still be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord. Mournfully to beg forgiveness for failures, without a consent of mind to quit them,—to overcome them now, not afterwhile, is to be guilty of the body and blood of Jesus. It is to be guilty of crucifying the Christ-life, begotten in us. It is to silence the voice of conscience, to trample conscience, to trample under foot the Word of God, and to drive his Holy Spirit out of our bodies.

To eat worthily, we need not only to see and mourn our failures, but to have consent of our wills to quit whatever is wrong in our lives for Jesus' sake. If one wills to quit wrong, then, by the help of Jesus, he will quit. There will be growth and strength in the life, more and more, until the Christ incarnate becomes manifest as "The Light of the World."

The apostle, in 1 Cor. 11:29, says: "For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body." The danger that faces one who eats unworthily is surely great if it means damnation or judgment. If eating in an unworthy manner is such a crime as to make one guilty of the body and blood of the Lord, then there can be no reason why its results should not be damnation or condemnation.

The sin that makes one unworthy, that brings condemnation, is the sin that is known in the life. It may be a very little sin of omission or of commission. It may be the very sin that we have resolved to quit, yet still allow.

It may be the sin of foolish joking and jesting, it may be the sin of hearing and enjoying a doubtful jest. The new-born nature within cries out against all such impure jesting and insinuating thoughts. To resolve, for Jesus' sake, to quit, to banish from thought and life all such, is clearly to discern the body of Christ and to eat without condemnation.

The sin of impatience besets some day by day. They are sensible of the sin, yet carry their burdens, refusing to lean on Jesus for help and strength. To commit all to Jesus,—our worries, our work, everything,—is to discern the Lord's body and get victory over self, and eat worthily. In the complex affairs of commercial life the principles of honesty, of strict integrity, are often lost. The child of God is drawn into doubtful plans and propositions to contend against less conscientious competitors. The fascination of success leads to doubtful means and methods. To go to the Lord's table without a will to quit all doubtful or questionable methods of business, is to fail properly to discern the Lord's body and hence to eat damnation to one's self.

Some are led to the dance, the theater, or other questionable places, through the influence of associates. They feel condemned, but are too weak to stay away from such association. They come to the Lord's table with this sin upon their conscience, and eat damnation to themselves, not discerning the Lord's body. To eat worthily they must let conscience speak, condemn the wrong, resolve, by God's help, to quit such things, and will then and there to quit.

In daily contact with a fashionable world some are led to adorn their bodies with superfluous adornment, to even wear jewelry. Their conscience condemns them, but, because of associates, the evil is not conquered. They go to the Lord's table without condemning and overcoming the evil, and eat condemnation to themselves, not discerning the Lord's body. They fail to distinguish between the world and the body of Christ in their own lives and they become more and more severed from Christ until there is no life.

As we illustrate in a few things, so "let a man examine himself" and condemn the evil, reconsecrating his soul to God. Unless we properly examine ourselves, we fail to realize our true relation to God. We eat without a deep sense of our utter unworthiness, except in Jesus, and thus eat unworthily. If we deeply realize our nothingness, and determine, by the help of Jesus, to lay all on the altar and walk in his footsteps, he becomes our real ground of worthiness, and we become like him more and more in practice. We are not only his in a passive sense, but also in an active sense. God is not satisfied with us if our salvation, by the atonement of Jesus, does not develop a real active, aggressive war against sin, especially in our own lives. To the one who is sanctified by the blood of Jesus, and rises in the strength of his new-born manhood to conquer every known sin in his life, there is no condemnation in partaking of the sacred emblems.

Rebaptism.

BY NOAH LONGANECKER.

I ENDORSE the "Committee's Report" on "The Rebaptism Question." What the query lacks, the report supplies:

1. I like the "Committee's Report," because it guards well Acts 19. John the Baptist never commanded any of his disciples to baptize. The missionaries of Acts 19 were never baptized by John the Baptist, for John taught his disciples that Christ would baptize them with the Holy Ghost and with fire. When Paul asked the twelve, "Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed? they said unto him, We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost." Hence they were not baptized into the Holy Ghost. The Committee's Report, as well as Acts 19, would have all such "baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus." That is, "By trine immersion according to Matt. 28: 19." In this the "Committee's Report" is pure Bible. So is the query. Certainly, "All persons who have been baptized by trine immersion, according to Acts 2: 38, have received true 'Christian Baptism.'" Acts 19 has nothing to do with all such cases, but Heb. 6: 1, 2 certainly has. "Not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God, of the doctrine of baptism," etc. To all such Paul says, "Let us go on unto perfection." So says the query with its answer. "Closer fellowship with Christ" means, "Let us go on unto perfection." More comments might mystify Paul's plain teaching on "rebaptism."

Now and then members of the Church of the Brethren request to be rebaptized. Some say, "The one who baptized me was anything but a pure, moral man." To such Christ says, "All therefore whatsoever they bid you observe, that observe and do; but do not ye after their works: for they say, and do not." Were we to rebaptize all such, where would Heb. 6 be obeyed? Indeed, there might be many rebaptisms if said baptisms were illegal. But again. There are those who are satisfied with the administrator, but they tell us that they were not praying for the gift of the Holy Spirit when they were baptized; hence they request to be rebaptized. We tell all such, "Pray now, and go on to perfection. Pray for the gift of the Holy Spirit; for the seal of the Holy Spirit; for the earnest of the Spirit; for the guidance of the Divine Comforter." John, the beloved disciple, had one thing to learn of his Master. (See Mark 9: 38-40.)

A Caution.

BY J. D. HAUGHTELIN.

BRO. WAYLAND'S splendid article on "How to Use the Men Called," page 130 of the GOSPEL MESSENGER, has a point in it that is liable to be misunderstood, and in some places may do harm.

He says, "Not more men in the ministry, but more preachers and pastors." Annual and District Meetings urge the churches to call men to the ministry as fast as they have material, whether they need them or not. The church can not always tell whether they have the material; but if they will prayerfully give the Lord a chance, he will direct. Where this has been done, we generally have strong congregations, where it has been neglected, there are weak ones.

It is better for the church to make an effort and fail, than to fail to make use of the opportunity. Then, when a man is chosen, develop him; give him something to do. If a church has more ministers than it needs, enlarge the field, or let the Ministerial Distribution Committee locate some of them where they are needed, and thereby have "more preachers and more pastors."

The comparison of the ministry in the Church of the Brethren with the salaried ministers of other denominations, does not do our ministers justice.

Our self-supported ministers of the past were fearless men, and did noble work, though sometimes they were sorely handicapped for want of means. The assisted ministers of today have many advantages,—and also dangers and temptations,—that their fathers did not have. The general tendency toward a salaried ministry is manifested. This is a point that needs a word of caution.

Where a salaried ministry is the order, there is danger of the man choosing the profession, instead of the church choosing the man. If young brethren, who feel the call of God, use the means and opportunities at hand, backed by a righteous life, the Lord, through the church, will find them.

The Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meetings, with the splendid supply of church literature that we now have, give our young members of today many advantages over those of half a century ago. The ever-increasing fields of missionary work call for all the ministers and workers, both brethren and sisters, that we can furnish and equip. Our Ministerial Distribution Committee have more calls than they can fill.

Though we have more ministers, in proportion to the laity, than the churches with salaried ministers, yet we have many fields suffering for want of ministers. Perhaps a better distribution would relieve the trouble somewhat.

A salaried ministry puts a premium on popularity. When a man becomes popular, he can command a salary in proportion to his popularity. I never expect to see this in the Church of the Brethren; but, as I see danger in that direction, I would, in love to the church, and more especially in view of the ministerial problem, give a word of warning.

THE ROUND TABLE

A Church of Protest.

BY D. W. CRIST.

YES, Brethren, we are a church of protest. And are there not many that claim to be such, and combat vigorously the hierarchical domination and papal absolutism of the Church of Rome? Verily, they do! But is it not also a fact that, as a church, we stand for more than all others, and are, therefore, more emphatically a church of protest than any of the other churches?

Now, my question is, Are we all protesting against the threatening liberalism and holding up for our time-honored Bible principles? Or are half of our ministers crying for more liberty and for a letting down of the restrictions, so that the world can walk right in? Let each individual worker of our church face the question squarely. Are you a liberalist or a real protestant?

To let down all restrictions is a good way to get the world into the church, but it is no way at all to make Christians, and the slowest possible way of making even worldly church members, as statistics clearly prove. Take Bro. Early's figures of the other week, $3^1\frac{1}{16}$, as compared with $1\frac{3}{4}$, and it proves that our growth has been more than double the growth of all the churches of Christendom.

It also convinces me of this fact, that the closer we live to the Word and our protesting principles, the more easily and rapidly will we win the world for Christ. Away, then, with the notion that we must give liberty, and remove all restrictions in order to get people into the church! I never did believe it. It is pernicious in the extreme.

Now, Brethren, I would that we might all do some solid thinking along this line. If we, with our principles of protest, can more than double the rate of increase of Christendom in general, what could we do if all of us would only hide ourselves doubly deep in the Rock of our protesting, self-denying, conquering Lord? Think of it now! Which way are you pulling, brother,—worldward or Godward? Toward the liberal and broad way, or toward the self-denying, narrow way of Christ?

The Open Door.

BY IDA M. HELM.

THE call of Abram practically closed the door of salvation to all but the chosen people. The call to Cornelius opened the door to all people. Cornelius had a vision, and Peter had a vision. The Lord had a work to be done. Both went to work and followed the directions of the Lord, and God's name was glorified. It was a great mission work. No grander call can ever come to any one than the call to service for God.

The Lord has a work to be done today, and the call comes to every one of his children. Go, work, pray, give, teach. If we draw very near to God and seek to do his will, he will give us a vision of the work he would have us do. Look around. There is a work lying directly in the line of life. The parable of the good Samaritan is one of the grandest teachings of Jesus. He himself is the good Samaritan. He stooped to rescue us when he saw us robbed and wounded unto death. He poured the healing oil into the deadly wound that was inflicted by the enemy, that we might be made whole and have eternal life.

Jesus would have us pattern after him, and act the good Samaritan to our fallen fellow-beings. In every community there are souls reeking with wounds and ulcers of sin, and the ultimate end of sin is eternal death. The healing oil of salvation has never been applied, but the cleansing, life-giving stream is flowing, that they may come and be made whole, free of cost. If we do not do all in our power to lead them to the Redeemer, that the healing oil may be applied, we will not be held guiltless.

Helpfulness.

BY WEALTHY A. BURKHOLDER.

IN our walk through life we meet people who are not learned or beautiful, but, somehow, there is something about them that inspires us and makes us feel that the world is better because they are in it. We wonder what it is that makes us feel they live in a higher realm than many and we discover it is their sympathy, their helpful spirit and the interest they take in everybody and every object that is good. There is nothing low or mean about them. And they do not take insult easily because they always try to have that kind, forgiving spirit,—that mantle of charity that covers over all crookedness and unkindness and, instead of harboring feelings of hate and revenge, they exhibit a spirit like the Master,—a spirit of love and forbearance.

Selfishness will pencil its lines on the face, and all the powder and paint in the world won't hide it, but real helpfulness will light the dimmest eye, and give a beauty that never fades to the plainest countenance.

Many long for a "mission" to do great things, but the best way is to do the little things, day by day, with great earnestness and simplicity, with a feeling that they are important and far-reaching. Keep the lamp burning brightly and you will be enabled to throw light upon others that will be beneficial to them and enable them to emerge from the darkness to the light. You will thereby be of great help. Carlyle says that one can not move a step without meeting a duty, and that the fact of mutual helpfulness is proved by the very fact of one's existence. "No man liveth unto himself, and no man dieth to himself." "Deserve friends, and you will have them. The world is teeming with kind-hearted people, and you have but to carry a kind, sympathetic heart in your own bosom to call out goodness and friendliness in others."

Love.

BY CLERK FORTH.

THERE is one thing worth living for, worth striving to obtain and to keep,—that is love. Love is eternity, —from everlasting to everlasting. Love caused the Son of God to leave his home in glory, and come down and take upon himself flesh and blood, and live here on earth as man lives, and become acquainted with sorrow and grief. Through Christ's love for suffering humanity he opened the eyes of the blind, unstopped the deaf ear, and raised the dead. He thus set up his kingdom on earth,—a heaven for his people to dwell in, and gave them examples and rules by which to be governed. These all require love to carry them out.

Christ preached an everlasting Gospel, and sent out his ministers to preach the same glad tidings to every creature. He promised to be with them even to the end of the world. It was because of his love for man that he suffered that awful death on the cross.

Love fulfilled the law. Love is the greatest of all the commandments in God's Holy Word. "Faith, hope and love, but the greatest is love."

Love sweetens our home life. It endears family ties and gives us peace with our neighbors. It sweetens the heart, mind and tongue, and binds us together with cords stronger than death. It binds brethren and sisters in Christ, in union with each other. Oh, how we should strive for this love, that we may have peace and union in the Zion of our God!

In Place and on Time.

BY BESSIE BARNHART

IT was one Sunday morning during the past winter, as a light snow was on the ground, that one of our dear elders had harnessed his horse, and hitched it by the gate, while he and his wife were making the last preparations for starting to Sunday-school.

In the meanwhile the horse broke away and went alone to Sunday-school, and on arriving at the church it walked calmly to its usual hitching post.

There might be a lesson gained from "Old Nell's" loyalty. If all those who realize their duty, and yet neglect the assembling of themselves together, would, each Sabbath morning, be in place and on time, the problems of the Sunday-school superintendent would be largely solved, as the ranks would be filled.

The church service would not lack in attendance and interest, but would be overflowing, and it would be hard to overestimate the good that might be done in the saving of immortal souls.

We may never know what it means not to be in place and on time until we come in sight of the city of the New Jerusalem, only to see the gates closed, and then to realize we are too late and out of place.

Wirtz, Va.

MISSIONS are the chief end of the church. The chief end of the ministry is to guide the church in this work, and fit her for it. The chief end of the preaching in a congregation ought to be to train it to take its part in helping the church to fill her destiny. And the chief end of every minister in this connection ought to be to seek grace to fit himself thoroughly for this work.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

The Sepulchre.

Luke 24: 1-12.

For Sunday Evening, April 16, 1911.

I. The Tomb Itself Was a Strong Proof of the Resurrection of Jesus.—It was (a) an open tomb (Matt. 27: 64-66; 28: 2); (b) a rocky tomb (Mark 15: 46; 1 Cor. 10: 4); (c) a new tomb (John 19: 41); (d) a costly tomb (Matt. 27: 57; Isa. 53: 9); (e) a borrowed tomb (Matt. 27: 60); (f) an empty tomb (Luke 24: 3; John 20: 2, 12). "Now is Christ risen from the dead" (1 Cor. 15: 20).

II. The Stone.—(1) They found it "rolled away" (V. 2). (2) It had been stamped with the "seal" of the law (Matt. 27: 66). (3) The angel dared to break the seal (Matt. 28: 2).

III. Natural, Physical, and Human Law Are Subordinate to Him Who Is Above Law.—(1) Natural law was set aside for Joshua (Joshua 10: 12). (2) Physical law was set aside for Hezekiah (Isa. 38: 1-6). (3) Human law was set aside for Peter (Acts 12: 6-9).

IV. The Sealed Stone Guarded.—(1) Stands for the active forces that would oppose us—the devil and his. (2) When the angel stood beside the tomb, "for fear of him the keepers did shake" (Matt. 28: 4). (3) Christ will overcome all his enemies (Psa. 110: 1; 1 Cor. 15: 25; Rev. 17: 14). (4) His resurrection is a guarantee that Satan and his shall not harm us (1 Peter 3: 13; Prov. 16: 7).

Learn.—(1) Everything Christ-like is risen. (2) Let life, not death, be our companion. (3) After death, life (John 12: 24; Rom. 6: 5). (4) It is "newness of life" (Rom. 6: 4).

PRAYER MEETING

Patient Faithfulness Wins the Crown.

Rev. 2: 1-10; 3: 18, 19.

For Week Beginning April 16, 1911.

1. What Faithfulness Means.—To be faithful is to be true to one's self and true to one's duty, through good or ill report, in little things or big things, and to stick to our post till the Master says, "Come up higher!" It is not easy, for it means that all we do must be done the best we possible. It includes our business, our trade, our household duties, as well as our praying and Bible reading (Philpp. 2: 5-11).

2. The Call, "Be Thou Faithful."—It rings from heaven into every ear. If obeyed, how soon it would put a stop to all dishonesty and fraud! Faithfulness gets all the more emphasis because so much unfaithfulness is to be seen everywhere. Because of this lack of faithfulness we see all the varied forms of fraud,—skimping by false weights and measures, all shams, all neglects or slightings of duty. Religiously and morally, unfaithfulness has even worse results. The withholding of our gifts, the neglect of our opportunities for service, want of fidelity to God's truth, or to our God-given commission, may mean not only the loss of precious opportunities but of multitudes of immortal souls who perish on account of our failure to do our known duty. How noble the example of Paul (2 Tim. 4: 6-8).

3. The Beauty of a Faithful Life.—It is something we all admire, but it takes courage to live such a life. It may go against the world's standards and requirements, but nevertheless the heroism of faithfulness wins the admiration of all (James 1: 12; 1 John 3: 1-3).

4. The Reward of Faithfulness.—For each faithful one these are the welcome words, "I will give thee a crown of life." God promises to honor those who are faithful, and this means much. It is well worth our highest and best efforts (1 Cor. 9: 24-27).

HOME AND FAMILY

The Fairest Girl.

BY DR. J. S. DORSEY.

Who is the fairest girl on earth?
'Tis she who owns the Spirit's worth,
Whose spirit, ever free from strife,
Lives, free from care, the simple life.

Among the world's vast, giddy throng
This fairest maid does not belong,
With dress so plain, and looks so sweet,
She passes on the crowded street.

She chooses not the worldly throng,
But to our "Brethren" does belong,
And you will surely ever find
A voice that's sweet, a heart that's kind.

Her inward life and every grace,
Beam into smiles upon her face.
To one so pure there shall be given
The best of all, a home in heaven.

Marriage.

BY JAMES A. SELL.

To Our Young Brethren.

"Seek for a bosom, all honest and true,
Where love once awakened will never depart,
Turn, turn to that breast like the dove to its nest,
And you will find there is no home like the home in the heart."

MARRIAGE is a divine institution, and the well-being of our race depends largely upon it. If entered into with proper motives, it places man and woman in such a relation to each other that all the secret treasures of life are opened to them, and joys gush forth from hidden fountains, making life to them a perfect bliss. But when the true purpose of this union is lost, through impure motives, and man and wife are simply tied together by civil and social law, financial interest, or lustful passions, then marriage is truly a failure, as the wretched lives, criminal deeds, and divorce courts, abundantly testify.

There is, however, more to consider than the mere matter of love. Of course persons should not marry when they do not love each other. But people fall in love,—yes, fairly tumble in, and think at once that the affair must be rounded up in matrimony. They soon awaken to the dreadful fact that there was but little love about it. It may have been veneration, esteem, or passion. Those who marry hastily, under such an impulse, very often spend the rest of their life regretting their folly. As there is so much happiness or misery both in this life and in that which is to come, depending on the selection of life companions, one can well afford to take time to consider the matter well. The time of waiting is called courtship. It means, or ought to mean, more than simply wooing, more than writing gushing love letters, taking walks and drives, and dreaming of a blissful state, not far distant. It means, or ought to mean, getting acquainted.

Cupid, whom the ancients deified, and had him to preside over love affairs at this interesting time, had his eyes tied shut. From this the idea obtained that love is blind. The faults of the beloved are not seen. It may be well enough, after marriage, to keep a bandage of this kind over the eyes, but before marriage it is best to keep the eyes open, and sometimes pretty wide, too. You want to be acquainted. You want to know if the private company is suitable and agreeable.

It will be a terrible discovery, after marriage, to find that your chosen companion is not companionable,—not agreeable to you. Before marriage you could exchange for another, but your doom is now sealed. Those who go about this business blindly, usually get their eyes opened when it is too late. One need not look for faults, but one should not fail to see and consider them when they really exist.

There is considerable deception practiced in courtship. Young people of marriageable age are continually striving, in the company of each other, to appear better than they really are. They meet in their best dress and best manners, and keep back their personal habits, contrariness and bad temper. You must not expect to find in another that which you do not have in yourself.

A young man must not expect an angel for a wife, while he is almost a Satan himself. Do not expect her to bring everything and you nothing. You have a right to look for good health, good sense, industry and all other good qualities that you may desire, but do not forget that she has a right to expect the same from you. And if you try to conceal yourself and act the hypocrite, you are unworthy the prize you are seeking to gain. You may imagine high ideals for a wife, but if you ever marry, you will, after all, have to live with a real woman, one with human nature, and subject to all the failings you have yourself. So you may as well do away with some of your conceit, be careful of your habits, and cultivate a gentle and refined disposition, so as to be able to make a truly virtuous woman happy.

You should not think that you must marry the first girl that you think you have fallen in love with. All persons are not adapted to each other. A young woman may possess many excellent qualities and still be utterly unsuited to you. There is much in the temperaments, family connections, social position, habits and disposition, for you to consider. You want an agreeable, affectionate partner, one who will share with you the joys and sorrows, prosperity and misfortunes that will come to you in life. You want a mate who is able and willing to help along in your business by economy in the kitchen. This does not mean that she is to be a slave or a drudge, but she must do things to make money go as far as possible.

Some young women are extravagant, and it is a great misfortune for a young man, just starting in business, to get such a one for a wife. No matter what his income is she will get away with it, and not even have a good living at that. She buys without judgment, right and left, without regard to price. She can not adapt herself to her circumstances. What she has been in the habit of having, she must still have, even if it takes away her home, and leads on to a separation from her husband.

You may wonder how you are to know all this before marriage. You can know if you wish to. If parents are wasteful, children are likely to be the same. Consider the family. How are they getting along? Is it always from hand to mouth when the income is adequate to live well and lay by something? Good health, good common sense, pluck and plod are to be preferred before social position or wealth. Sickness is unavoidable and may come to any one, but persons in delicate health, especially if it is hereditary, can afford to wait. They should avoid entailing themselves a burden upon the one whom they love.

Consider well the family into which you marry. It is a great thing to be well born, to descend from good ancestors, sound in mind and body and morals. You do not want to marry into a family of sickly, feeble-minded or immoral people. You will have more or less to do with the family with which you are connected. Your newly-made relations may become a serious burden on your hands. Think what it will mean to have them visit you while drunk, and annoy you with their simple and filthy talk. They might bring you presents that you know were stolen. If you accept them you are a partner in the crime. If you refuse them you give offense. Your home itself may be pleasant, but if it is so frequently invaded with unpleasant things that you must simply endure, it will be unfortunate indeed.

My dear young brother, remember that marriage fixes your social status for the rest of your days. A man rarely rises higher than his wife. She will drag him to her level or be a serious hindrance to him through all his life. Avoid the cold and indifferent, and select the kind and affectionate. She should love her home, her parents, brothers and sisters, and be kind to the poor and unfortunate. She should be ever ready to assist in works of charity and benevolence. She should be neat and tidy in her personal appearance, and a lover of the true, pure and beautiful. If these things are in her heart, the traits of true and noble womanhood will be manifest in her gentleness, sympathy, affection and refinement.

Do not allow yourself to be caught by the young woman given to general amusement. She has dashing and winning ways, and is usually very captivating and flirty, too. She seeks to draw attention with the plumage of fashion. In the severe tug of life you want something better than glitter and display. A woman may dress sumptuously and yet keep her home in an uproar of untidiness. A young woman who is untidy in the house is not fit to be a man's wife. Her slovenly apartments may invite the germs of sickness, that may inoculate a whole community.

You have made choice of the Lord Jesus Christ and connected yourself to his church. In all you do, look unto him. Seek to advance the glory of his kingdom and ask his help and guidance in all you do. "In all your ways acknowledge him and he will direct your ways." His service should be the greatest charm of your life, and the associations of his children the sweetest drop in the cup of your existence. These traits you should seek for in your life companion. The selection should be a matter of thoughtful consideration and prayer. There should be a union with Christ in the closet, in the home and at the communion table.

"There are two hearts whose movements thrill
In unison, so closely sweet,
That pulse to pulse responsive still
They both must heave—or cease to beat.

"There are two souls whose equal flow
In gentle streams so calmly run
That when they part—they part! Ah, no!
They can not part—those souls are one."

Nonattendance at Church.

BY LENA B. FLESHMAN.

I FEAR that too many of us have not the spirit of Christ when we let a little rain or stormy weather keep us from going to God's house. Remember the Divine injunction, "Do not neglect the assembling of yourselves together." True, sometimes sickness or necessity calls us to stay away from services, but sometimes only trival hindrances keep us away.

We hear people say, "I work so hard during the week, that, when Sunday comes, I am too tired to go to church." The genuine Christian never gets too tired to worship God. As we follow our dear Savior from that upper room in Jerusalem to the cross on Calvary, and learn what he suffered and endured to redeem us from sin, can we not sacrifice more for him? There is no danger of living too near our blessed Redeemer. The nearer we live to him, in this life, the better it will be for us in that great day of judgment. We cannot be too careful in our daily walk of life, or meet for Divine worship too often. Let us all arouse to a deeper sense of our duty, and live closer to our blessed Savior! May God help us all to work till Jesus comes!

SISTERS' AID SOCIETIES

WALTON, KANS.—During the year ending March 22, 1911, our Sisters' Aid Society met thirteen times, with an average attendance of seven. Our collections amounted to $13, from which we bought new goods and made children's clothing, which we sent two boxes to the Mission in Kansas City. Sister Lucinda Murray, of Eldorado, Kans., donated to our society three whole comforts, the top for three comforts, and three quilts. We nominated, and Sister Sophia Dudte was chosen as president; Sister Mary Meyers, assistant president; Sister Leah Miller, treasurer, the writer, secretary.—Sadie Thomas, Secretary, Walton, Kans., March 25.

SUGAR CREEK, OHIO.—During the past year the Sisters' Aid Society of the Sugar Creek church held eight meetings, with an average attendance of eight. Our work consisted mostly of making quilts and comforters, and clothing for the poor. We collected $39.56, paid out $38.04. Balance on hand, $1.46. We sent one large barrel of clothing and shoes, and eight pounds of butter to the Akron Mission. We paid $25.00 toward clothing for the Akron church; for goods, $10.86. The former officers were retained for the present year. Owing to the severest fever epidemic in our community, we missed several meetings. Our meetings are closed with devotional exercises.—Amanda Zimmerman, Secretary, Sugar Creek, Ohio, March 22.

BRO. HARVEY SNELL, of Covina, Cal., has been chosen Sunday-school Secretary for Southern California and Arizona.

FOR the next issue we have a splendid report of the District Meeting of India. Bro. J. M. Blough was chosen a member of the Standing Committee.

BRO. R. A. NEDROW, of Nokesville, Va., should now be addressed at Frederick, Md., he having accepted the pastorate of the church at the latter place.

THE Sunday-school Extension building in Chicago is practically completed and will be dedicated next Sunday, April 9, Bro. I. B. Trout conducting the services.

THE members of the Colorado City Mission, Colo., are planning to build a church at that place, and a building committee has been chosen to look after the work.

BRO. C. B. SMITH did some effective evangelistic work at the Minneapolis Mission, Minn., and eight were added to the church,—five baptized and three reclaimed.

THE correct date of the District Meeting of Northern Illinois and Wisconsin, is Aug. 3, instead of Aug. 10, as formerly announced. The meeting will be held at Mount Morris.

WE have three Annual Meeting queries from Southern California and Arizona, that are to be published next week. The District also asks that the Conference of 1912 be held on the Pacific Coast.

WE are receiving some very interesting and encouraging letters from aged members, who have been interested in our church literature since the Gospel Visitor started in 1851. We are likely to hear from others.

BRO. JAMES A. SELL having been requested to say something about the kind of women young brethren should marry, thought proper to prepare the article we are publishing on page 215. What he says is worth considering. And, by the way, too little is said on these domestic questions in the religious papers and from the pulpits of the various churches.

SISTER ELIZABETH HOWE-BRUBAKER writes us from Huntingdon, Pa., saying, that her aged mother, the widow of Eld. William Howe, passed away March 30. Sister Howe was a most devoted Christian woman and spent many years in trying to help others. Her widely-known husband, a faithful elder of Maitland, Pa., died a dozen years ago. Theirs was an ideal home for the Christian pilgrim.

AT Forest Chapel, in the bounds of the Botetourt church, Va., Bro. E. C. Crumpacker recently held a series of meetings, and ten were induced to put on Christ in baptism. Two others were restored to fellowship.

WE are having a number of ministers, from different parts of the Brotherhood, with us this week. The Dress Committee is arranging its report for the Conference, while the General Mission Board is winding up its work for the year.

BRO. G. A. SNIDER, of Lima, Ohio, writes us that he is moving out of the city, will locate on a farm, and should hereafter be addressed R. D. 5. He says that four recently united with the Lima congregation by confession and baptism.

THE District Meeting of Southern California and Arizona is reported to have passed off very pleasantly, being presided over by Bro. Geo. F. Chemberlen. The District is to be represented on the Standing Committee by Bro. W. Q. Calvert.

BRO. J. S. KLINE, Chairman of the Committee of Arrangements for the coming Annual Meeting, would like to know how many are thinking of attending the Conference. Read his notice on page 224, this issue, and then help him to the information he is seeking. He may be addressed 2919 St. Joseph Avenue, St. Joseph, Mo.

BRO. J. S. FLORY, whose residence has been at Pasadena, Cal., during the last few years, is reported to be very sick, and it is thought that he may not recover. He requested his daughter, Sister W. H. Neher, of Inglewood, to say to us that he has a strong desire to be at rest, and hopes that he may not have to remain here much longer.

SISTER MARY QUINTER will sail from New York for India April 12, by the Cunard Steamer, Coronia. A Mennonite sister, L. Ellen Schertz, is to accompany her, and they are to reach India early in May. Sister Quinter is glad to get back to her work in the mission field, and is never so happy as when helping the natives of India to more Gospel light.

WHILE going from point to point, visiting the Brethren schools in Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania, Bro. A. G. Crosswhite, of Flora, Ind., is giving, in his home paper, The Hoosier Democrat, a very interesting account of his travels. He speaks of visiting his old home, Jonesboro, Tenn., and also Bristol, where the Annual Meeting was held in 1905.

ON page 219 Bro. H. Snell, of Southern California and Arizona, is doing for his District what ought to be done by the clerk of every District in the Brotherhood. He is giving the names of all the members of the District Mission Board, with their addresses, and the organization of the Board. This he did immediately after the close of his District Meeting. We suggest that this be done by the clerks of other Districts. We shall be pleased to publish all information of this sort.

THE pastor of one of our congregations in the East sends to each family in his charge, a carefully-prepared, monthly, pastoral letter, and usually accompanies the same with a few good tracts that he procures from the Tract Department of the House. In this way he keeps in close touch with the members of his flock, and by the help of tracts and in other ways, keeps them well indoctrinated. Members who receive a tract in this way are almost sure to read it, and then pass it over to some of their neighbors.

WE wonder how many times we must expose the fraud regarding the letter, said to have been written by Christ and hid under a stone at the foot of the cross. No such a letter was ever written by Christ and signed by the angel Gabriel, ninety-nine years after the crucifixion. It is stated that some misfortune would befall those who have the letter in their possession, and refuse to have it published. This threat has led to the fraud being kept constantly before the public. And though we have exposed the deception possibly a dozen times, some of our readers continue to ask us to publish it.

THE church at Covington, Ohio, is said to have a membership of about 400, with a Sunday-school numbering over 300, and also thirty teachers. Probably 100 have been added to the membership during the last twelve months.

BRO. ABRAHAM WOLF, of Udell, Iowa, finds in Albia, a town of his State, a very promising field for the Brethren. He did some preaching at that point and reports six applicants for membership. With proper attention he feels sure that a number of people may be gathered into the fold.

BRO. DORSEY HODGDEN tells about a condition in the Clear Creek congregation, Ind., that is encouraging. In the thirty families composing the church, all the children that are old enough to confess Christ in obedience, are members of the church, and for that reason the congregation is made up largely of young people. For years he has made a specialty of looking after members' children, and is happy to report the result as stated. See his encouraging letter on page 219, this issue.

BRO. RALPH MILLER, who accompanied his father on his late trip to the Bible Lands, spent an hour with us on Friday of last week, and together we talked of the experiences of the party among the Bedouins. And while he is grateful for what was learned during the sojourn in Moab, he has no desire whatever for a similar experience. And, by the way, a trip abroad, and especially a few months in the land of the Sacred Story, is quite a training along educational lines for any young man.

WE have a letter from Bro. J. F. Eikenberry, of Greene, Iowa, in which he tells us that he is now in his eighty-first year, that his wife is six months younger, and that March 20 they celebrated their sixtieth marriage anniversary. They left Carroll County, Ill., in 1855 and located on a farm near Greene, Iowa. Two years later the church at that place was organized with twenty members, and in 1860 our brother was called to the ministry, and still remains with the congregation, having had the oversight thirty years. For the church his has been a long and useful life.

WE urge our correspondents, while discussing their differences in the MESSENGER, studiously to avoid all insinuations of every character. There is no argument in an insinuation. Its only purpose is to hurt some one's feelings, and accomplish no real good in the end. Writers who hold different views on a subject should, under all circumstances, have some regard for each other's feelings, as well as for each other's rights. It is truth that we need, regarding a proposition that is under consideration, and the writer who can give the most truth, and do it in a Christian spirit, is the one who will prove helpful to the cause he represents.

A SHORT time ago a Catholic priest assailed the teaching of the Brethren at Portland, Texas, and put in each evening for a week, endeavoring to show the weakness of Protestantism in general. He also dwelt with emphasis on the soundness of Catholicism. Bro. Jacob Witmore, who is engaged in mission work at Portland, thought the condition about right to show up the errors of Catholicism, and in the presence of the priest and his people gave an address that contained more Gospel regarding the character of the true church than had ever before been heard in the place. The address seems to have put an end to any further disturbance.

A GOOD education should prove helpful to any minister of the Gospel, but a fine college training without a heartfelt Christian experience is of no value in the pulpit. We need learning, but we need a sound Christian experience more. The man who has experienced the deep work of grace in his heart, will speak from his heart as well as from his head. He will make his hearers realize that he has a message from God, and that he not only has confidence in his message himself, but has also made a personal application of it. It is well to be able to dress up our thoughts in creditable English, but it will produce better results if the man of God can lead his people to think more about the deeper work of grace in the heart, than about the polished English that he may employ.

Bro. Andrew Hutchison, after spending some weeks with his sick wife at McPherson, Kans., has again entered the evangelistic field, and is now holding a series of meetings at Centerview, Mo., his former home. He has planned to visit several congregations in the State before the Annual Conference.

Are any of the churches preparing for an Easter offering? The Lord gave his life for the church; now, what can the church do for the Lord's cause? He purchased the church with his own blood. Will the church show some appreciation for what has been done? Can we let Sunday, April 16, go by without making an offering? There are a number of good causes to which we may contribute of our abundance.

Mistakes Among Officials.

We received a number of requests for information regarding the course to pursue when elders, ministers and deacons make mistakes. Some of the questions submitted have a personal bearing, and for that reason can not be given and commented on in our columns. Then it is no credit to the church, or the cause we represent, to parade the imperfections of church officials before the public. Churches having trouble of this sort, should arrange to settle them at home. To illustrate in a brief way: We are told of a preacher, having a large financial interest in a creamery that runs on Sunday. Another uses tobacco and tries to justify his course by the Scriptures. Another permits tobacco to be raised on his farm, and then represents his congregation as a delegate at Annual Meeting. A minister is very radical in his preaching, while he tolerates wrong-doing in his own family. The elder in charge rules his congregation with a strong hand, but can not govern his own family. One to whom the Lord's flock is entrusted is so wrapped up in money-making that he actually neglects his Master's work. A minister in the pulpit shows marked ability, but he is careless about his finances, and owes so many people that his influence for good is crippled. Another attends gatherings not suitable for a man of God to attend. All of the points named would afford occasion for as many editorials, but we are not certain that so much space should be occupied discussing the failings of church officials. Some of these defects upon the part of ministers may be remedied, while others are not so easily disposed of. But we suggest that if a minister or an elder does what seems to be wrong, in the eyes of sensible people, some one have a fatherly talk with him about it. If he is the right kind of a man he will receive the admonition kindly and profit by it. If he resents all well-meant efforts, put forth in his behalf, then make out written charges against him, sign them, and present the same to the other elders of the congregation, or to the adjoining elders. Either do something of this sort, or quit talking about the defects of officials. If one does not care to defend the charges he holds against an official, let him cease talking about God's servants. There is too much injudicious talking about men supposed to be called of the Lord to preach his Word. Men and women who do such things ought to be required to either abstain from that kind of talking, or prove their charges.

Which Way?

Which way is the world tending, morally and religiously? This has been, for years, a lively and interesting subject for discussion, and the problem is, as yet, by no means solved. On the one side we have the extreme pessimist, and on the other the extreme optimist. Between these two extremes we have, happily dwelling, a large class who are not overanxious as to which side is right, but are working, as all good and sensible Christians should, with all the possibilities which our good Father is giving them, to make the world better and save the world for Christ, because it is for this purpose that God gave his Son, and for this purpose Jesus suffered and died—that sinners might be saved. As long as there are sinners to be saved, the church of Jesus Christ has a great work to do, and should be at it with might and main.

The ministers and churches that are always harping about the world going to the dogs and the devil, have a wrong view of the purpose for which they have been called, and the work which they have been given to do. God has declared of old that his Word shall not return unto him void, but shall accomplish that unto which he has sent it. "Go ye into all the world," "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." What for? That souls may be lost? No, not that, but "that all men may come to the knowledge of the truth and be saved." This is the purpose for which God sent out his Word, through his Son; and for the same purpose Jesus says: "Go ye into all the world and preach my Gospel to every creature." This is God's will concerning us as his ministers. If we do it willingly and faithfully he will take care of the results. If it is God's will that souls may come to a knowledge of the truth and be saved, it seems to us that he knew what he was saying, and that, in some way, other souls will be saved, and that, in the great judgment day, untold thousands will come sweeping in through the gates of the kingdom of whom we never dreamed.

At any rate, it will be well for us to go on joyfully, hopefully and lovingly, working and praying till Jesus comes, remembering that it is those who continue and endure unto the end that have the promise.

Some of these thoughts came to us during our journey through the Southland, where thousands of the people have never heard of us, as a body of Christian people, and a church. Everywhere we were recognized as a minister of the Gospel; and everywhere the question was: "To what church do you belong?" We were always glad to tell them and explain, the explanation always being the greater part of our answer. For this we were sorry.

The thought that so large a territory, and such a large number of people should be found, inside of the borders of our own country, who do not know anything about us as a church, was a sad revelation to us, and for this we were called upon to give an explanation.

And what do you think it was? How would you explain it, my brother? If any of you think of going down South, and letting yourselves be known as Christians, it will be well for you to take this question under advisement, that you may be able to give an answer that will have some show of reasonableness. Was it because the South was, as yet, an undiscovered country, and nobody living there that needed the Gospel? No, not that. The Southern States were settled quite as early as our own, and a long time before many of our Western States.

Was it because the greater part of the land is very sandy and barren—not a goodly land to raise corn, wheat, oats, barley, hogs, sheep and steers? Well, we don't know. We do know there were many souls there that needed salvation worse than they needed cattle, sheep and hogs. What we mean is, the salvation of these people should be a greater inducement for our ministers to go South than to make a satisfactory living and to accumulate wealth. Well, we shall not tell how we explained. Perhaps others can do it better than we can.

While at St. Petersburg we attended all the different churches and cults in the city, including the "Christian Alliance," the "Christian Science," and the "Sanctificationists." The basic doctrines of the latter are,—full sanctification, the gift of languages and the gift of healing.

At the meeting we attended some four of them gave evidence of the gift of tongues by speaking in strange tongues, which were different from any known language and understood only by those who made and used them. They knew that they were sanctified because of this gift, and, in their experiences, gave some very remarkable cases of healing.

We also came in contact with a new religious sect, named the "Holy Baptists." This new church was started in the South only four years ago, by Mr. Turner, a Baptist minister. We met and had quite a lengthy interview with him on the doctrine of his new church. He said that, after a careful study of the Scriptures, he found that the Baptist church was not living up to all the teachings of the New Testament and therefore he was not satisfied. So he decided that he would take the Scriptures as his only guide, and whatever they said he would do. In this he found repentance, faith and baptism, by immersion, the essentials to church membership. Feet-washing and the Lord's supper as church sacraments. His people also observe the anointing as a means of healing, the simple life, dressing in modest apparel, and the peace principles. They have no salaried ministry, but support their pastors as needed. They have already organized churches in thirteen States, and are rapidly adding to their number. After giving the origin and explaining the doctrine of his church, he asked for a full account of the faith and practice of the Church of the Brethren, which we gave him. He said, "Why, that is all right. That is Scriptural. Had I known of your church before I started mine, I would not have organized, but united with you people." He is a man of considerable ability, a ready talker and a very zealous worker.

Which way is the world tending? What does all this reaching out after the truth mean? May it not be preparing the way for the better time when all shall know the Lord and accept Jesus Christ as the Savior of the world? H. B. B.

The Promise of Universal Peace.

The Independent is the most scholarly advocate of universal peace in this country. We take pleasure in laying the following late editorial, slightly condensed, before our readers:

The great event of the week, we may say of the year, is the declaration, by the voice of their rulers, of the two greatest nations in the world, that there shall never on any pretext be war between them, and the assurance which follows that what they have said the other nations of the world will say a little later. Thus the cause of universal peace makes splendid progress. It is the morning hope of the world.

Observe the steps in this progress. In 1897 the Olney-Pauncefote treaty was negotiated but lost by three votes in the United States Senate. The time was not yet for confidence. The Senate was afraid to accept with trust a treaty which would automatically provide for arbitration. A few years later Secretary Hay renewed negotiations, but it was still too soon, and his proposals were withdrawn. Then Secretary Root negotiated a treaty, yielding to the Senate the right to approve each case as it might arise, but with what are called "vital interests" excluded. But that evades the real difficulties, for who shall tell what are vital interests, or, rather, what interests will not be vital in a time of passion?

So matters stood until, in March of last year, President Taft took a great step forward. In a public speech he said:

"I have noticed exceptions in our arbitration treaties as to reference of questions of honor, or national honor, to courts of arbitration. Personally, I do not see any moral reason why matters of national honor should not be referred to a court of arbitration any more than matters of property or matters of individual proprietorship."

That was radical and startling. It was the first time that the ruler of a great nation had said so much. It attracted favorable attention in Great Britain and in this country. The conditions were more hopeful for an advance than they had been in 1897. The Hague Court had been established, and many arbitrations between Powers, some of great importance, had followed. Once more, in December last, and on a more important occasion, the President spoke plainly:

"If now we can negotiate and put through a positive agreement with some great nation to abide by the adjudication of an international arbitral court in every issue which cannot be settled by negotiations, no matter what it involves, whether honor, territory or money, we shall have made a long step forward by demonstrating that it is possible for two nations at least to establish as between them the same system of due process of law that exists between individuals under a government."

For such an agreement he believed the United States was now ready. This was a challenge to Great Britain, and Great Britain now accepts the challenge.

Sir Edward Grey is British Foreign Secretary. He speaks for the British Government, and he said in a late speech in Parliament:

"Such a statement ought not to go without response. We should be delighted to have such a proposal made to us. We should feel that it was something so momentous and so far-reaching in its possible consequences that it would require not only the signature of both Governments, but the deliberate and decided sanction of Parliament. That, I believe, would be given."

His declaration that the British Government would accept such a treaty, which excepted nothing, was received with great applause. Even the Irish members did not object. Then followed Mr. Balfour, the head of the Conservative Opposition, and he, too, enthusiastically approved what Sir Edward Grey had offered, and even warmer cheers were sounded from all over the House. Great Britain consents, and she now sends back the challenge and tells us to move forward.

And we do move forward. Secretary Knox and Ambassador Bryce are at work on the formulation of such a treaty, which will except nothing, however "vital," however much a matter of "national honor." It will provide for the easiest and quickest arbitration of all difficulties that may arise; and we believe the Senate will approve it. The new Senate will be quite as favorable as the old. We do not believe that the President expects another rebuff. He has doubtless sounded the leaders of both parties, and he knows that he has the great American people behind him. We shall, in a few weeks, so far as assured and solemn mutual pledges can go, have settled that there shall never be war between the United States and Great Britain. That will be an epoch in human civilization, for these two nations lead the world.

And what is thus done, other nations will be willing to do. We are assured that across the Pacific Japan is ready and anxious to make such a treaty with us. That would end all chance of any great war in which we might be engaged. It would shut the mouths of all but the howling Hobsons. We shall then need no more navy, except for international police. And meanwhile France will be asking for such a treaty, and Germany will have to follow, and the European nations will be compelled by public opinion, and by the growing burdens of war in times of peace, to accept the example set by us.

May we not now, today, look forward to the time, not so very far distant, when the nations of the world will be freed from the heaviest burden upon them; when their energies shall no longer be wasted on the useless costs of war, but shall be devoted to the arts of peace; when there shall be no more national debts, no burdensome taxation, no international jealousies and fears, but all shall be friends in one great commonwealth of the world? May not the boys of this generation live to see it? What says the great political coronation Psalm attributed to King Solomon:

"In his days shall the righteous flourish,
And abundance of peace, till the moon be no more.
There shall be abundance of grain in the earth upon the top of the mountains,
The fruit thereof shall shake like Lebanon;
And they of the city shall flourish like grass of the earth.
Amen and amen!"

May it not all be in our day?

Working with Other Societies.

SHOULD our sisters become members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union? This is a question that is disturbing prudent members in a few localities. There is no question about the propriety of associating, in a limited way, with the people who are working hard to promote the cause of temperance, but many of the moral, and even religious, societies have, in their entertainments, performances in which our members can not consistently engage. Should brethren and sisters become members of such societies, and take part in their questionable entertainments? Here is where the real trouble comes in. There can be no question about the good that some temperance societies are doing. For their work, in the interest of humanity, we have nothing but praises. But these are days of entertainments of various sorts, and it is practically impossible for our members to become associated with these outside societies, and not be called upon to engage in some things wholly unbecoming their religious profession. The more careful part of our brethren and sisters have seen this danger for generations, and for that reason have advised that members, in helping to carry forward any good work or reform, stand aloof from influences that are likely to lead to the compromising of our religious principles. This we can do without interfering with the good that others are doing, or discouraging them in their well-meant efforts.

The Country Church.

UNDER the heading, "The Country Church Problem," a writer is urging the different religious bodies in the rural districts to unite their efforts, have but one place of worship and employ but one pastor for each community. In this way he thinks the country churches could secure pastors that would measure up to the preachers employed in cities. On the face of it, the idea is a splendid one, but in what way are those churches to unite, and then, what kind of a preacher are they to employ? Are the churches to unite on the whole Gospel, and then secure the services of a pastor who will consent to preach only half of the Gospel? Are our people to unite with those who reject a good part of the Gospel, accept their idea of religion and then listen to a minister Sunday after Sunday, who shuns to declare the whole counsel of God? That is just what this country movement means. It does not contemplate uniting the churches on a gospel basis. If it did, we should certainly urge our people to encourage it in every possible way. It simply means to unite the churches in the rural sections on as little Gospel as possible; and, should our people enter into the movement, they will soon be swallowed up with the other denominations. Then we will need another Alexander Mack again to reorganize the church of Jesus Christ on the New Testament basis. Our people would better stand by each other, and their gospel principles, and show the other denominations what kind of a religion is needed in the country. Our forefathers did this years ago, and made a success of it.

The Preacher on Horseback.

ONE of our preachers, who has been kept so busy preaching the Gospel and looking after church work, that he finds no time to criticise the methods of those who served before him, writes that he practically grew up on horseback, and we presume that he feels about as comfortable on his trusty horse as some others do in a nicely-furnished Pullman. We may say all we please about improved methods, but we shall have to experiment quite a while before we find a method of reaching more people with the Gospel than did the faithful ministers who grew up on horseback. On their faithful animals they could climb the mountains or cross the plains. They feared neither heat nor cold, and it made little difference to them whether the Mission Boards were prepared to meet their expenses or not. It took little to do them. They carried the Gospel right into the homes of the people, and in their rude meetinghouses preached sermons that were a marvel to their hearers. Men and women heard the earnest pleas, accepted Jesus as their Savior, and, in the act of obedience, were added to the believers. The horseback preachers converted people by the score, and seldom needed a protracted meeting to gather them into the fold. They came when they were convicted, and baptism often occurred every few weeks the year round. Their method was a success, and the large churches they established remain as monuments of their faithful and intelligent efforts. They deserve our praise, but not our censure. We need not criticise their methods, but we will be wise indeed, if, by our improved ways of doing things, we gather more people into the fold than have been placed to the credit of these faithful horseback ministers of the Gospel.

At the Grave of the Unconverted.

A MINISTER in one of the eastern cities is convinced that most preachers compromise their Christian principles at the graves of the unconverted. He thinks that, after a man has defied God all the years of his life, and died in open rebellion to his Maker, he is not entitled to the special honor bestowed upon such on funeral occasions. Speaking of the ungodly and workers of iniquity he says: "I ask every one who still has a spark of conscience in him, Ought such a man to have a Christian burial? Ought we to open the doors to such a person, who refused to enter them when alive? Shall we confess that we look forward to his resurrection into everlasting life? Is not that denying the faith, denying Christ as the only hope of salvation? Do we not know that God says: 'Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord'? Shall we alter or change this? Let us remember that God said: 'Be not deceived, God is not mocked.' It is just this gross denial of faith, at the graves of the ungodly, that causes men to become indifferent in religious matters. Christianity is, therefore, laid bare to open ridicule. Men will ask, 'Why should I run to church?' When I die they can easily get a preacher who will bury me for ten dollars, and will preach as fine a sermon as he does for those who constantly go to church."

Fasting.

A DEVOUT sister wishes to know why all of our members do not more fully live up to the New Testament requirements regarding fasting. So far as we recall, there are no special New Testament demands enjoining fasting, but there are not a few scriptures in which the duty of fasting, under conditions, is implied. A mere hint is sufficient for the earnest saints who meditate on the Law of the Lord day and night, and for that reason a number of brethren and sisters fast, and some of them have their regular fast days. It is said that Bro. Quinter, one of our most devout elders, fasted every Friday. The General Conference has set apart the Annual Meeting Sunday as a fast day. The fast was observed by hundreds last year and the year before. Some of them omitted one meal, while not a few ate nothing during the entire day. Thousands paid no attention to the fast. This, of course, was regretted by those who had insisted on the Conference adopting a fast day. We suggest that it would be good to have a sermon on the importance of fasting preached in all congregations. This might be done before the Annual Meeting. Then it would be well for each member of the church to set apart certain times for fasting and prayer.

The Preacher's Home Invaded.

ONE of our self-sacrificing elders in the West, whose name we need not mention, tells how his home was invaded by members of his congregation. They came with smiles on their faces and well-filled baskets on their arms. Never before had he been blessed with such a fine supply of good things all at one time. Some who did not carry baskets brought sacks of flour, or a few sacks of potatoes. There were apples, beef, butter, and other things too numerous to mention. They did not forget to hand their minister and his wife a well-filled purse. After this there was some singing, some praying and some lovely speeches. It was all sunshine and love. The good people went their way, but it will be many a day before the earnest preacher and his good wife get done thinking of the blessings that came into their humble home on the evening referred to. Now the preacher prepares his sermons with more ease. He puts more work on them, and his people think that he can preach better than he could a year ago. All of this is the result of efforts upon the part of members who were not afraid of spoiling their preacher by showing some appreciation for what he was doing for them.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

GENERAL MISSION BOARD OF THE CHURCH OF THE BRETHREN.

D. L. Miller, Chairman, ...Mt. Morris, Ill.
H. C. Early, Vice-Chairman, ...Penn Laird, Va.
Galen B. Royer, Sec. and Treas., ...Elgin, Ill.
E. M. Wolfe, ...Huntington, Ind.
Chas. D. Bonsack, ...Union Bridge, Md.
J. J. Yoder, ...Dorrance, Kansas.

Address,
General Mission Board, Elgin, Ill.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA AND ARIZONA.

The Mission Board, as it now stands, after election of members, at District Meeting, held at Covina, March 23, 1911, is as follows: President, W. E. Trostle, R. D. 1, San Gabriel, Cal., 1914; Secretary, Geo. Hildebrand, Pasadena, Cal., 1916; Treasurer, J. A. Brubaker, Pomona, Cal., 1912; H. A. Whisler, Lordsburg, Cal., 1915; A. M. White, Glendora, Cal., 1913. H. Snell.
Covina, Cal., March 24.

WALNUT, INDIANA.

We met in council March 18, with Bro. John Dickey presiding. Sunday-school officers were elected. Bro. Fred Rohrer is our superintendent; Bro. Henry Rohrer, secretary. Ruth Luther Sweveland was chosen church treasurer. Bro. John Markley is to represent our church at Annual Conference; Bro. Levi Puterbaugh, alternate. We decided to have our love feast May 13, beginning at 6 P. M. Bro. Otho Winger, of North Manchester, Ind., is to preach at our harvest meeting, which will be in August. The church has awakened to her opportunity and duty in helping to banish the soul-destroying liquor business from this fair land of ours, and manifested their zeal by electing a local committee which is as follows: Brethren Howard Dickey, John Hoffman and Sister Susan Puterbaugh. The Sunday following Bro. Levi Puterbaugh, Secretary of our District Committee, preached a temperance sermon, after which a collection of $7.03 was taken for the temperance work of the church. Susan Puterbaugh.

SOUTH ST. JOSEPH MISSION, MO.

We enjoyed a visit from Sister Sadie Miller, of India, who gave us inspiring lectures, last Sunday, at 11:30 A. M. and at 8 P. M.; also one on Monday, at 8 P. M., on the "Condition in India." The audiences listened very attentively and showed their appreciation of her talk by giving $6.50 for the World-Wide Mission Fund. The mothers' meeting, which meets every Wednesday afternoon, is doing much good for those who are in need of clothing. They make comforts, quilts and aprons to sell, and garments are made and donated to the poor from the proceeds of the sale of goods. It teaches mothers to make their own garments, and also teaches them to help one another. We are conducting a doctrinal course of study each Friday evening, which is very well attended and is very helpful to those who wish to know the truth of the Bible. Saturday afternoon is devoted to teaching the children how to sew. They are also taught to commit verses to memory from the Bible. We have four services each Lord's Day at the church, and one Sunday-school in a private home. Tuesday evening is our prayer meeting. No one can realize how busy mission workers are until they come and see and attend to them in themselves. When cleaning house this spring, don't forget to send us what you do not need. E. N. Huffman.

AHWA, INDIA.

Our cool days are over and already we have had some days and nights that made us wonder how to keep cool.

Feb. 19 our hearts were made glad by seeing another child of these forests born into the kingdom. These tender lambs need your prayers and help.

Last week we had the good fortune to have with us Bro. Souders. It does us good to associate with brethren fresh from home, and we pray that they, too, may gain something that may be helpful to the dear home church.

Bro. Pittinger went out with Bro. Souders to attend our District Meeting at Vulli, so Angeline and I are alone, and yet not alone.

The people from all over this forest are gathered about Ahwa now. They came to pay to the Government their yearly tax. Each day from fifty to seventy-five come to us for medicines, and to ask favors of various kinds. Some come merely to see.

Through the kindness of a friend we have, in our home, a roller organ. This is a great wonder to these people. Ignorant as they are, they like music. We find this an avenue to their hearts.

They camp under the trees near us and all night long they keep up a commotion. How we wish we might wipe liquor from off the face of the earth! Surely, in God's own time, these who are now slaves will become free in Christ Jesus.

We are expecting another native Christian family to join us soon, in this great work. Surely the harvest is great and the workers few.

The Lord blesses us daily and gives us good health. Our native brethren and sisters, with us here, have fairly good health, too, at this time. Some of them suffer almost constantly with fever. It appears to be harder on them, physically and otherwise, to leave their native district and come with us into the jungle, than it is on us to leave America. Those who are our helpers need your prayers, and truly the needy people, among whom we live, do need your prayers and sympathies.

The brightest boy in our schools now reads in the fourth book. Among all his ancesters not one could read a word. We have bright hopes for him. May the Lord make him a great power among his own people. In our prayer! Florence Baker Pittinger.

CLEAR CREEK CHURCH, IND.

I came to this congregation when I was twenty years of age, being then in the ministry. I was ordained to the full ministry by Elders R. H. Miller and Samuel Murray. Two years later I was placed in charge of the congregation, having the oversight for twenty-nine years.

Being in the evangelistic work six or seven months out of the year, I have been made to feel that I am not doing the work justice as elder in charge. Then, too, a change of shepherds often brings about a better condition among the flock; hence I have turned over the work to others.

I have often felt, in traveling among the churches, that many elders fail to see that a change in the eldership would be very beneficial to the church at large, as well as their resignation simply to test their strength in the congregation, but to their surprise it was accepted.

But I started out to speak of one thing in the Clear Creek church that I have failed to see, and this one thing prompted me to write this article, thinking that it might be an incentive to others to do likewise. In the thirty families of the church practically all of the children who are old enough are members of the church. There is not a son or a daughter outside of the church, except two. We have made a special effort along this line, and we have therefore been able to receive these boys and girls at about the age of twelve years. As a matter of course, our membership is largely composed of young people.

In the years that have followed we have succeeded, by the help of aojoining churches, in establishing a good, strong church in the city of Huntington, which territory at one time belonged to the Clear Creek church. A large part of the membership, now located in Ft. Wayne, also moved there from the Clear Creek church.

I am now closing up a series of meetings in the Prairie Creek church,—my sixth series for this winter. May the Lord bless the work and the workers!

Dorsey Hodgden.

MOUNT MORRIS COLLEGE, ILL.

The year has been passing pleasantly, and quickly too. Along with it there have come many things to make the work more pleasant than it would otherwise have been.

The series of meetings by Bro. O. F. Shaw, one of our former students and graduates, was a refreshing indeed. The old Gospel was preached in its old-time power, with good results.

During the winter Eld. D. L. Miller gave a series of eight lectures concerning his travels. The proceeds of these lectures were donated to the college for its various needs. In addition he also presented the school with his large stereopticon that cost him over $200. This will be used for class and lecture purposes, and will prove quite a help along the different lines of instruction.

Bro. C. H. Keltner, who has charge of the Department of Agriculture and Chemistry, is having a very large class in agriculture. He is building up that department and will continue to stay with us. Bro. S. H. Sherfy, who has charge of the Department of Biology, has been pushing that work splendidly and will also stay with us next year.

One of the mainstays of the college, for many past years, has been the fact that the management comprises enough permanent members to give stability to the school from year to year. President J. E. Miller is at the head of the Department of Latin and Greek; Professor Culler, the Department of English and Philosophy; Professor Sherrick, the Department of Modern Languages and Education; Professor Emmert is the Dean of the Bible Department; Professor Hendrickson is at the head of the Department of History. Bro. L. S. Shively, who has been with us for three years, at the head of the Department of Mathematics, will become a member of the management at the beginning of next year. With six men who are sure to remain from year to year, the students know what they may expect, and the trustees are relieved of a great deal of anxiety.

President Miller and wife expect to spend the summer abroad, leaving immediately after commencement. Because of this it is necessary for him to make the arrangements for the summer work earlier than otherwise, and he would be glad for the churches, who are planning to have some one from the school to stop with them during the summer, or who may wish some one to conduct a series of meetings, to write early, so that he may make the arrangements for them before leaving. We have a number of young ministers in the school who will do splendid work either in the missionary or evangelistic field during the summer. V. Grace Neher.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

To District Temperance Committees and to All Other Temperance Workers.

In the Annual Meeting Minutes for 1907 will be found the beginning of the organized activity of our people in the modern temperance world. The Minutes for 1908 provide for a permanent General Temperance Committee. In said Minutes and in the circular letter of the General Committee, dated Feb. 8, 1911, will be found an outline, in embryo, of the duties and responsibilities of said Committee. Realizing that this Committee would need funds to carry on their work, the General Conference of 1909 readily sanctioned and adopted the Committee's plan for raising funds. Moreover, the General Committee has tried to point out, to a degree, the duties and responsibilities of the various District Temperance Committees, some of which, however, have apparently stood in no need of any such information, for they had been splendidly active long before the circular letter from the General Committee appeared.

Some of these active District Committees having felt the need of funds, have gone to work and raised money without advice, and without interfering with the plan of the General Conference, for the General Committee. Certainly it is the privilege of each District Committee to go to their District Meeting with a plan for raising funds, even as did the General Committee to the General Conference, and with confidence expect to be favorably heard. This, it was hoped and believed, all would do. However, the General Committee has decided upon which, they believe, will not only appeal to all the workers but which will result in the common good of all concerned. The plan is as follows:

1. Let all the elders, ministers, members of the District Committees, Sunday-school superintendents, and other temperance workers, in each District unite to carry out the decision of the General Conference, referred to above, which is as follows:

(a) That special collections be taken quarterly on Temperence Lesson Sundays in all our Sunday-schools.

(b) That Temperance Sermons be preached annually in all the local churchhouses in the various congregations, at which times the offering be received.

(c) That at all Local and District Temperance Meetings special offerings be received.

(d) That all these offerings be sent to the Treasurer of the General Temperance Committee, P. J. Blough, Hooversville, Pa.

2. In State Districts where this is done the General Committee purposes to answer all pleas of any District Temperance Committee for needed funds to carry on their work, to the extent of one-half the proceeds from said District.

It is evident that this plan which will go into effect April 1, 1911, will require much more book keeping on the part of the General Treasurer, for whom the Committee now appeals to bear with it in all cases, where funds are forwarded to him, it be clearly stated from which State District the offering comes, in order that proper credit be given.

The General Committee is hopeful that this generous arrangement will not only appeal to all the temperance workers in the Brotherhood but that all will work together to make it a success for all the Committees, both District and General. The District Committees are specially urged to popularize this plan, and to see that it becomes effective in all parts of each and every State District. Shall we not hope and pray that this cooperation will stimulate us all to further activity, and to sympathetic and systematic cooperation along all lines? If so, the service of all will be more effective and joyful, and God will use us in notable ways in the building up of his kingdom and in the overthrow of the strongholds of Satan.

By order of the General Temperance Committee
W. M. Howe, Secretary.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

ARKANSAS.

Black Fish.—On account of bad weather, last Saturday, our meeting at this place was postponed, as our minister could not get here, but he will be with us in April. We are glad to have him with us again, as we believe our few meetings we have had were a great benefit to those who have attended. We long to see the time when there will be a great harvest here for the Lord, and that the reapers will be many.—Dora Stonker, Box 16, Wilmer, Ark., March 24.

CALIFORNIA.

Chico.—Our church met in council March 24. Our elder, Bro. Forney, presiding. We held our regular prayer meeting the time on account of our revival meetings, which we expect to hold every month. Two letters were granted.—Mrs. Ida Chito, Cal., March 25.

Glendora.—Our church met in quarterly council March 18. Three members were sent to District Meeting. We decided to have a series of meetings in April. On Tuesday, Bro. F. L. Brumbaugh will open the meetings, and Bro. L. B. Martin, of Harrisburg, Pa., to take charge of the preaching. Bro. Martin is now with Bro. J. F. Dicker, of Lordsburg, gave us two excellent sermons. Next Sunday End. J. S. Snively is to conduct a meeting especially for the children.—J. M. Shively, Box 1, Glendora, Cal., March 20.

Lordsburg.—We met in council last Thursday evening at 7:30. Bro. J. F. Dicker, presiding. After the meeting, I was then called his assistant elder, Bro. W. F. England, to the church. A total of business was transacted and everything was satisfactorily. End. W. F. England and Bro. J. F. Dicker were elected delegates to District Meeting. Bro. Clarke M. Heckman and L. W. Vanderburg, alternates.—Grace Hileman Miller, Lordsburg, Cal., March 23.

Patterson.—Better attendance at our services here is still on the increase, ranging from twenty-five to thirty-five at Sunday-school and preaching. Have had to rent a hall, as some people with us and we have arranged to meet each alternate Sunday, for one-half hour in the forenoon and one and one half hour in Bible reading and study. Yesterday we had a temperance meeting. Our collection for the month of March was $1.45. The spirit of temperance prevailed. We decided to send the address of the Temperance Committee of the Northern California Home District. We ask any one to come on, and help us in this great work. Our Sunday-school is growing nicely and our evening services. The interest is growing. Our little tent looked as though it was about full. Pray for us that the good work may go on.—Will be glad to get a larger place in which to hold our services.—W. P. Haynes, Patterson, Cal., March 24.

South Los Angeles.—We met in council March 16, with our pastor, Bro. L. B. Wertenbaker, presiding. Elder Bro. Wm. Trostle was absent. We elected Brethren Wm. H. Wertenbaker and Wm. Trostle as delegates to District Meeting. We also sent two queries to the District Meeting. We decided to have our love feast May 13 at 2 o'clock p. m. in the attendance of our Sunday-school at the Mission, corner of Sixty-first and Wall Streets, is very encouraging, and we hope success will be done in the future. Bro. L. B. Wertenbaker has charge of the Sunday-school. He also conducts preaching services every Sunday evening. We are glad to say we feel there is a great opportunity for doing much good. We expect to hold revival meetings at the Mission in a couple of weeks. We hope to enlighten the people along the line of our labors.—Mrs. Lucinda Wertenbaker, 1715 East Sixty-sixth Street, Los Angeles, Cal., March 25.

Tropico church met in council March 18, with our elder, Bro. Wm. Stutsman, presiding. Brethren S. S. Garst and Wm. Stutsman were chosen to represent us at District Meeting. We will also represent at Conference. Bro. D. M. Eshelman is our delegate; Bro. S. S. Garst alternate. Three papers were read to District Meeting. Since our last report two have been received by letter and we hear of others who are coming among us.—Loraine Stutsman, Corner Third Street and Sinclair Avenue, Glendale, Cal., March 27.

COLORADO.

Prowers church met in council March 24. Our elder, Bro. Homer Ullom, presided. Three letters were received. We now have three ministers since Bro. Albert Ellenberger and family have located here. Sister Ellenberger is our Sunday-school superintendent. We are very anxious for a churchhouse, as we have none so far, but have the use of a schoolhouse. The church decided to build a house of worship this summer or fall to be located in Prowers. We are very much in the midst of a large scope of a very fertile, irrigated country on the line of the Arkansas Valley. We consider this a splendid location for our people who wish to try this healthful climate. We welcome them here.—Laura V. Ullom, Lamar, Colo., March 25.

Mount Garfield.—March 25 our church met in council, with Eld. Silas Hostetter presiding. In the absence of our elder, W. A. Rose, two letters of membership were read. Bro. A. G. Rust, a deacon elect, has come among us. We are glad to praise God, as our ministers are getting up in years and need the help of young men. Our sister was reclaimed some time ago, making three since our last report. We are expecting Bro. Hostetter and wife, if possible, to be with us some lectures on India, some time next month.—Clara Clark, 2 E. D. 2, Grand Valley, Colo., March 27.

Smith Fork church met in council March 25, Eld. N. F. Brubaker, of Fruita, Colo., presiding. Bro. W. A. Rose, of Palisade, Colo., was sent by the District to represent the writer to the full degree of the ministry, which was duly attended to. An effort for a meeting-house was set on foot, and Brethren Ruda A. Saylor and Daniel Eikenberry, Brother and Sister Saylor were installed. Other business being before present, his installation was deferred. Bro. N. F. Brubaker was chosen as elder for one year.—Mrs. J. G. Hove, clerk; Bro. L. W. Howell, Messenger agent; Bro. Ruda A. Saylor, church correspondent. We had a most enjoyable and profitable meeting.—Geo. A. Dove, Hotchkiss, Colo., March 27.

FLORIDA.

Dania.—We are located at Dania, Fla., for the benefit of our health. We have a mild climate and a beautiful place to spend the winter. We find but few members in this part of Florida. There is a large field here, but few workers. We crave the prayers of the brethren and sisters in our behalf.—Sister Clay Dillon, Dania, Fla., March 27.

IDAHO

Weiser.—Our church met in council March 18. Our elder, Bro. L. W. Fike, and Bro. Coffman were with us. Eld. Coffman presided. Five letters of membership were received. We held an election for a deacon, and Bro. Jesse Fike, Bro. Holl. He was not installed, as his wife was not present. We expect to have an Easter program. Bro. S. S. Burger was elected trustee.—Sarah A. Burger, Box 417, Weiser, Idaho, March 23.

ILLINOIS.

Dixon.—We met in council March 13. Eld. Olin F. Shaw presided. He will also represent us at Annual Meeting. We decided to hold our love feast May 7, at 7:15 P. M., to be preceded by a series of meetings. Bro. J. G. Royer is to conduct the meetings. The following church officers were elected: Bro. S. Forney, Sunday-school superintendent; Bro. C. H. Boyd, treasurer; Bro. W. J. Swigart, messenger; writer, church correspondent; Sister Bessie Dickey, president of the Christian Workers'. Brethren Victor Lois Metz, secretary. —Emma Boyd, 108 Harrison Ave., Dixon, Ill., March 27.

Mount Vernon.—We met in council March 18. Bro. Daniel Story presided. It was decided to change the name of our church to Pleasant Grove. Bro. J. M. Angle was elected delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. D. Hershey, alternate. We decided to begin our Christian Workers' Meetings April 3, and our Sunday-school April 9. Sister Ida Swihart was chosen superintendent.—Robert C. Wells, Shellier, Ill., March 25.

Panther Creek.—This church met in council march 18, with our elder, Bro. Daniel Hays, presiding. A large amount of business came before the meeting, which was disposed of in a satisfactory manner. Bro. Daniel Hays was chosen as delegate to Annual Conference; Bro. R. C. Bryant, alternate. New Sunday-school officers were elected for the year as follows: Bro. Daniel Hays, superintendent; Sister Lottie Kindig, secretary; the writer, correspondent. Bro. C. A. Switzer and wife are laboring in the bounds of Mount Morris. We decided to hold a love feast May 19, at 5 P. M. A ministerial meeting is secured to be with us Saturday night in the fall, sometime during the latter part of September or the beginning of October.—Mrs. Lottie Kindig, Polo, Ill., March 20.

Polo.—The Mission Board of Northern Illinois and Wisconsin held a short meeting March 25. Only a few items of business came before the Board. It was decided to organize a Sunday-school. Correspondence. We have at present six workers (not counting wives) giving all their time to the work. We have had interesting services nearly all the time, where workers are giving part or all of their time to the Lord's work. We are looking forward to the beginning of work in one or two new places this year.—John Heckman, Polo, Ill., March 27.

Shannon.—Our church met in council March 25, with Eld. D. Rowsey presiding. Our elder, Bro. Daniel Hays, was absent. Bro. Baum was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting. Our home department has been started again with nine members.—Lucinda Wertenbaker, March 25.

Sugar Creek.—March 16 we met in council. While our membership is small, we have been working nearly all present. Bro. Chas. Gibson and wife were with us for the last two days of our meeting. Bro. D. H. Bashor assisted in charge of the congregation. Although he is young in the work, we feel that he will be a blessing to us. Four letters of membership were received, and two letters were granted. Sunday-school officers were elected for the year. Our next local temperance committee of two was appointed. Bro. John Miller will be our delegate to Annual Conference. Bro. Bro. Chas. Gibson will be our next temperance talk. He is one of our District Committees in this work, and is preparing to do his duty well.—Mrs. Ida Sherrey, Auburn, Ill., March 20.

INDIANA.

Bachelor Run.—Bro. C. B. Smith, of Red Cloud, Nebr., has promised to help in a series of meetings at the house in town, some time in September. Bro. J. H. Crosby, of Landess, Ind., is expected to conduct meetings at the country house, beginning the first Sunday evening in June. We will be about the middle of October.—Mattie Welty, Flora, Ind., March 21.

Camp Creek.—Our church met in council March 8, with our elder, Bro. Daniel Hays, presiding. Two letters of dismissal were taken. We decided to have our love feast June 16. We also decided to have Bro. Eli Heestand conduct our protracted meeting to begin the first Sunday in June. Bro. Wesley is to see to this matter.—W. E. Shively, Bourbon, Ind., March 21.

Middle Fork church met in council March 25, with Eld. H. Wheeler presiding. Bro. D. Hershey, elder-elect, was granted a temperance committee, consisting of Brethren Nettie, Jesse Beyler and D. Hershey. The meeting-house time of our Sunday-school was changed from 9:15 to 9 A. M. sharp, and several other changes were made. Bro. D. Hershey is A. M. Bro. J. H. Wright was elected as delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. Frank Replogle, alternate. Bro. Wright will preach at Salem church next Sunday. A love feast will be held at the country house May 27, at 6 P. M.—Florence Replogle, Silver Lake, Ind., March 27.

Portland church met in council March 4, Eld. Byerly being present. Bro. Wm. Hoffert, Bro. D. Hoffert, Sister Hoffert, wife, and Bro. and Sister Miller, from the Camden church, were present. Bro. Hoffert was elected elder, and Bro. Miller's petition was taken for the purpose of placing the Gospel Messenger at the Camden church. Love feast will be held Sept. 9.—Elizabeth Grafmiller, Portland, Ind., March 27.

Request.—We, the Trustees of Manchester College, urge the churches in Indiana and Ohio to cooperate with us in making the attendance large during the Bible Term of the year. We ask that the churches arrange their series of meetings so as to close by the first of December. We suggest that they encourage their ministers and Sunday-school teachers to attend the Bible Term. Bro. H. B. Brumbaugh will assist in that meeting.—L. W. Teeter, Secretary, Hagerstown, Ind., March 24.

Rock Run.—Our church met in council March 25. Bro. John Weaver presided. Five letters were granted. Bro. I. L. Berkey is elected delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. Ira Long, alternate. We decided to hold our love feast May 20.—Jennie Martin, R. R. 1, Box 19, Akron, Ind., March 27.

Tippecanoe church met in council. Our elder, Bro. Manly Crafton, presiding. Bro. Daniel Hays, elder of the Panther Creek, was found to be in good working order. We also appointed a temperance committee. Bro. Daniel Hays was elected delegate to Annual Conference; Bro. R. C. Bryant, alternate. New Sunday-school officers were elected for the year as follows: Bro. Daniel Hays, superintendent; Sister Lottie Kindig, secretary; the writer, correspondent. Bro. C. A. Switzer and wife are laboring in the bounds of Mount Morris. We decided to hold a love feast May 19, at 5 P. M. A ministerial meeting is secured to be with us Saturday night in the fall, sometime during the latter part of September or the beginning of October.—

MARYLAND.

Locust Grove.—We met in council March 18. Eld. A. P. Snader presided. Two letters were granted. We decided to begin a series of meetings April 23. Brethren J. O. Wilhide and D. Klein were chosen as delegates to District Meeting. We also elected a local temperance committee, consisting of three brethren. We will hold our love feast Oct. 7, at 1:30 P. M.—Maggie E. Ecker, Mount Airy, Md., March 24.

Long Green Valley.—March 26 Eld. W. E. Rohp preached for us in the morning. At 2 P. M. we met for council. Eld. A. P. Snader presided. Brethren J. M. Priest and W. H. Stouffer are to represent us at the District Meeting. We also appointed a local temperance committee of four, consisting of chairman, president, secretary and treasurer. We decided that we will have our love feast June 17, at 1:30 P. M. As we met for Christian Workers' Meeting, which was followed by a sermon on "The Prayer Veil." Both the meeting and sermons were much appreciated. We decided to hold a quarterly council.—Ida M. Stevenson, Glenville, Pa., March 27.

Manor church met in council March 23, our elder, Bro. John F. Otto, presiding. Two letters of membership were granted. Our love feast will be held May 20 at 1:30 P. M. Bro. John Otto was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting, and Brethren Jos. Thomas and Wm. Grove Coffman, delegates to District Meeting. Bro. Charles Coffman was elected superintendent of the Manor Sunday-school. Bro. McClellan is to act as superintendent at the Dunnville Sunday-school.—M. Portia Rowland, Fairplay, March 27.

Piney Creek—Our church met in council March 11. Our elder, Bro. J. H. Utz, presided. A letter was read before the meeting and was disposed of satisfactorily. We reorganized our Sunday-school, to begin April 2. Bro. Chas. Hornbaker is our superintendent. Sisters Edward Stephenhaver and T. C. Ecker are our delegates to District Meeting. One was baptized, who has decided to unite with us. Eld. H. M. was suddenly taken ill with fever. This makes two since our last report. One letter of membership was granted.—M. E. Ecker, R. D. 2, Taneytown, Md., March 27.

MICHIGAN.

Crystal.—We have been enjoying a Bible school, which was conducted by Bro. J. Edson Ulery, of Onekama, Mich. Our church was much benefited and strengthened, and we made a start for the right. Several others were almost persuaded when the meetings closed.—Olive N. Lechner, Crystal, Mich., March 13.

Harlan.—We met in council March 26. In the absence of our elder, Bro. C. E. Deardorff presided. Bro. Jesse Hoover was chosen as delegate to Annual Meeting; I. P. Albright, alternate. One letter was received, and one was granted, leaving a total membership of 35.—Grace E. Messner, Lake Odessa, Mich., March 27.

MINNESOTA.

Winona Mission.—March 21 Bro. S. M. Pike, President of the Mission Board of Northern Iowa, Minnesota, and South Dakota, came to us. That same evening a fair-sized congregation met at the church for worship. Bro. Pike gave a splendid and very helpful talk on missions, after which some of the members gave short talks. At the close an invitation was given to receive one young girl by letter of recommendation, and expressed her desire to live a Christian life. Sunday evening of March 19 Bro. Pike preached, having our own baptistry put in yet, we were again compelled to go to the river in the city. The congregation had some baptizing to do that same evening, so when they were through, they came to us, one of their flock. Thus, in a short time the members were enabled to see the administration of the single and triune forms of baptism.—Martha Hilary Keller, 852 West Seventh St., Winona, Minn., March 24.

MISSOURI.

Cahool church met in council March 25. Our elder being absent, Bro. J. E. Harris presided. One letter of membership was granted. We decided to hold our love feast May 20, at the Union Church. Our Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting are progressing nicely.—Sylvia M. Harris, Cahool, Mo., March 28.

MONTANA.

Gilford (Montana).—I went to the above-named place to hold a few meetings. I found six members there. One is a deacon. They are very anxious to have others locate with them. They have a church and two good houses to homesteads. For information write Bro. W. H. Meeks, formerly of Gilford, Mont., or Frank Good, Gilford, Mont.—Jacob Hoff, the place given above, enclosing stamp for reply.—D. F. Landis, R. D. 2, Box 167, Williston, N. Dak., March 25.

NEBRASKA.

Beatrice.—On Sunday evening the Christian Workers gave a stirring temperance program, and Brethren Harry M. Darnell and Lincoln, Nebr., State Attorney for the Anti-saloon League, gave us an address in our church. We deeply feel the loss of the absence of our members and friends immediately.—Alice Elsenbise, Beatrice, Nebr., March 28.

Hickory Grove.—Bro. C. Rodd, of Lincoln, began a series of meetings for us March 21, but on account of much sickness in the community we were obliged to close before the meetings March 26. We appreciated Bro. Rodd's efforts with us. We have been strengthened by his visit with us. We hope to have him with us again next fall to labor with us.—Katie E. Hoffert, Highline, Nebr., March 27.

Logan Grove.—We met in council March 16, at the home of Brother and Sister S. B. Andrews, with Bro. Levi Snell presiding. Bro. N. B. Nelson has moved to our church and will be our minister. The church relicted Bro. Snell as our elder for another year. Bro. Snell reported for our church treasurer, Sister Mary Henninger, clerk; the writer, correspondent to Messenger again. Sister Andrews, Chas. Hackenburg, called for the anointing service. It was attended to March 18 by Bro. Snell and Bro. N. B. Nelson.—Ingabes Andrews, Gandy, Nebr., March 23.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Berthold.—Our church met in council March 24. Our elder, Bro. D. Warren Beeghly, presiding. Considerable business came before the meeting. We reorganized our Sunday-school, with Sister Ollie Miller as superintendent. Bro. Beeghly is our church treasurer for one year; Sister Ailie Petry, clerk; the writer, correspondent to Annual Meeting; Eld. J. H. Petry, alternate.—F. J. Weimer, Berthold, N. Dak., March 28.

Kenmare.—Our last council meeting in this county was pleasantly adjusted. Bro. J. Harp will represent us at the Annual Meeting. Bro. A. Hutchison is to be with us in a series of meetings July 15. Our love feast will be July 29.—C. J. Michael, R. D. 2, Kenmare, N. Dak., March 25.

Perth.—Bro. J. Koolhof, of Cando, came to Perth March 4. He preached on Saturday evening and Sunday morning and evening. CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

ELK CITY, OKLA.

This church is in a prosperous condition. Sister Lantz's mission work is meeting with fruitful results. Last Sunday evening four young girls were received by baptism. Our appointment is detained by sickness, and one has met with parental interference. A good interest has been worked up in our Sunday-school. The number varies from 110 to 160. Recently twenty-four members have located here. Sister Lantz is a welcome visitor and worker in our regular council, March 18, at which meeting Eld. J. Appleman, of Thomas, Okla., presided. Eld. E. J. Smith was placed in charge of this church for one year. Our spring love feast was appointed for June 11. March 19 Bro. J. C. Nininger, of Guthrie, Okla., our District Sunday-school Secretary, came to us and preached each evening until the 19th. He also presided at an interesting Sunday-school Meeting last Sunday, at 3 P. M. At this meeting a number of Sunday-school topics were discussed. Since Jan. 1 we have been afflicted and disabled from ministerial duties, but we can see God's blessings showered all around.

Elk City, Okla., March 25.

BELLEFONTAINE, OHIO.

Our church met in council March 18. Our elder, Bro. B. F. Snyder, presided. We also enjoyed having with us two members of our District Mission Board, Bro. David Rigdy of Lima, Ohio, and Bro. John J. Kaylor, of DeGraff, Ohio. Bro. I. Findlay, of Maxwell, Iowa, and Bro. J. I. Lindower, of Fostoria, Ohio, were also with us. These brethren added encouragement to our work at this place. Bro. Spindler may decide to remain with us. The Mission Board are awake to their opportunities and willing to assist in securing a pastor for us, knowing our great need of a resident pastor. Bro. E. P. Yoder was elected delegate to District Meeting. We also sent one paper to this meeting, relative to more efficient work along the line of ministerial distribution in our District. Sister Bessie Kaylor was elected president of the Christian Workers' Meeting; Sister Gordie Snyder, secretary. The writer was appointed leader of the prayer meeting and solicitor for Foreign Mission funds. We expect Brother and Sister Blough to visit the Bellefontaine church a few days, about the first of April. We know their work will be appreciated. The attendance and the services is lessened, at present, by much sickness among our members, but the interest seems to be growing, especially in our teacher-training class and the prayer meeting services.

A DAY WITH THE AGED.

Last Tuesday, March 14, was a day long to be remembered by old and young of the Denver congregation. Our dear brother, Leonard Love, and wife, who have lived together for fifty years, gladly welcomed us all to their home, out in the country, four miles from the church.

March 14, 1861, Leonard Love was married to Martha E. Shreck in her parents' home near Elizabeth, Harrison Co., Ind. They settled in a little home and attended the church of their father until ten years after their marriage. Then there came riding along one Sabbath some of those good old pioneer missionaries, who taught them the Word of God more perfectly. Both were baptized, and not long after Bro. Love was chosen to the ministry, and preached in the little flock of brethren and sisters who had entered the fold.

Later on he moved to Nebraska, and in 1895 came to Denver, where he has lived and worked in the service of his Master. He was the first elder of the church in Denver, being here when the church was organized.

Sunday after Sunday, year in and year out, he used to drive eight miles to fill the appointments over on the West Side, and then ride home in the cold or heat, dust or rain, never wavering in his faith in his Master. He knows the joys and sorrows, hopes and failures, connected with city work, and today he rejoices to see the comfortable churchhouse and goodly number of members in attendance, where before there was only a temporary place of worship, with only a few to come to the service.

As age comes on, he feels to give the charge over to others, but his love and zeal increase as the body grows less strong. His dear companion has carried well her share of the busy work of the home. They have raised twelve children of their own, besides six motherless grandchildren "who rise up to call her blessed."

Because of the esteem in which they hold their faithful aged elder and wife, the members from Iowa, on their way to California, Brother and Sister Weidman, and Brother and Sister Bair, who have been faithful laborers with our brother in the work of the Lord.

Bro. Wm. Eder, had charge of the exercises of the day. There was not a dry eye in the house when Bro. Weidman, with tottering steps, stepped out on the floor, and with faltering tongue lined a hymn in the good old-fashioned way. As we joined these dear old brethren and sisters in singing, "My Father, Awake and Bless the Sweet Story," we could not help but wish and pray that when we get old we might look back over our past years, and find that they have been as well lived as those of these aged pilgrims before us.

Bro. Snowberger and others gave some touching remarks, and then Bro. Love, whose heart was almost too full to express his joy, arose and thanked all for their kindness. He then plead with his children that they might give their hearts to Jesus, and that there might be a great reunion indeed over on the other side. He said he had been long in the work of saving souls, and he was anxiously waiting to see the time when his own home flock would be gathered there in the fold. All we pray like children and never will the pleadings of that parent be forgotten by any present there that day.

One son and daughter have gone on before, but ten are still living, and those who could not be present sent messages of love. Thirty grandchildren and two great-grandchildren are numbered in the family, and fondly cherished by the grandparents.

The day, spent in singing, praying and talking of heavenly things, will not be forgotten soon. We left feeling it had been a day well spent in the service of the Master. Nora E. Berkebile.

CASSTOWN, OHIO, MISSION.

The Lord's work at this place has recently been revived by a two-weeks' series of meetings, closing March 19 with full house and a splendid interest.

The Mission Board of Southern Ohio, having this point in charge, authorized Bro. J. W. Fidler, of the East Dayton church, to conduct this meeting. He preached ten sermons, including several strong doctrinal sermons, which seemed to be entirely new and unusual to the people of this community.

Unfortunately Bro. Fidler could not continue longer, on account of taking a severe cold. The people were really stirred in this place, and showed spiritual things, that hitherto had seemed strange to them.

To fill out the second week, Bro. S. A. Blessing, of West Milton, Ohio, gave us two sermons, and Bro. O. P. Haines, of the West Dayton church, preached five sermons, making, in all, seventeen discourses, all filled with food for the soul.

Bro. Haines, who has recently been advanced to the second degree of the ministry, fills the regular Sunday appointments at this place, at Troy, the two places being connected by a traction line.

Brethren, surely more doctrinal sermons ought to be intelligently preached from the pulpit. We should not give up doctrine in sound when it comes to the principles and doctrine of our beloved Fraternity. There is by far too much false teaching and preaching, and not enough of truth-living.

May God abundantly bless the work of his church wherever it is and is preached!

Casstown, Ohio, March 20. Mina H. Bosserman.

FIRST CHURCH OF THE BRETHREN, SOUTH BEND, IND.

Our regular quarterly council convened March 20. Several letters were granted. Quite a number of items, relative to our work as a local church, and several relative to our part in the work undertaken by the Northern District of Indiana, were disposed of in a manner that we feel will advance the cause of the kingdom. One matter, that concerns us more than usual, is our pastor's resignation because of his health. We regret that, for the time being at least, it will be necessary to make some new arrangements for our pastoral work. A readjustment of the line between our own and the Bremen church, for the sake of greater convenience in working the territory, was favorably considered. The demand for more Sunday-school room has been troubling us for some time and we have asked our trustees to use their judgment in providing more class rooms. Bro. E. C. Miller was elected a trustee of the church. Cora V. Wise.

ONESIMUS

The Runaway Slave

By ELD. H. B. BRUMBAUGH

A book of sacred history, and biography, which, in a fascinating style, portrays an interesting phase of Eastern life and the condition of Roman Society at the time when Paul wrote his epistle to Philemon. This little volume of 176 pages was not written in a day. Much patient research and careful study are clearly evinced throughout.

Better not begin the reading of it at a time when you have an important appointment near at hand. When once you begin it you will not want to stop short of the end. It is a charming story of an elevating character. Bound in cloth with gold side title.

Life and Sermons of Elder James Quinter

We have just completed the Second Edition of this book and are filling orders every day. We feel certain that several of our customers neglected to place an order in advance, and have printed a few hundred copies besides those needed to fill the advance orders.

The work should prove helpful to thousands of our readers who know little of Brother Quinter. In his day he was one of the most scholarly and devout men among us, and it will do the younger generation of members good to learn more of his life and experiences. His sermons will prove especially interesting.

The book contains 426 pages, large, clear print, on excellent book paper. The frontispiece is a splendid likeness of Elder Quinter and adds much to the appearance and value of the publication. The introduction is written by Eld. H. B. Brumbaugh. Besides the interesting sketch of Bro. Quinter's life and labors there is a full account of the funeral services and numerous tributes of respect from his co-workers.

Part Two contains some forty of Brother Quinter's choicest sermons, delivered here and there throughout the Brotherhood.

The binding is an artistic cloth, on which back and side titles are stamped in white foil. If you are interested, order today.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER AND OUR SATURDAY NIGHT

For $1.85 we will send you the Messenger for one year and a copy of Our Saturday Night. This is only 35c for the book which contains 192 pages.

The Gospel Messenger

is a religious paper of superior merit. Our Saturday Night is a book that will interest and help you. The Messenger, being the official paper of the Church of the Brethren, is of special value to members of the church, though many not identified with our Brotherhood read it with interest and appreciation. The things of most vital interest to the church are communicated through the columns of this paper only. Its work is being appreciated more and more, as the increase of the list of subscribers indicates. The Messenger is indispensable as a religious educator and spiritual counselor. One brother says: "It has been a forerunner to conversion and church unity in city and rural districts."

Our Saturday Night

is a collection of the best gems of a master mind. Following are a few phrases from those who have read the book: "Interesting and instructive." "Food for various moods." "Once reading and will do good." "Good from beginning to end." "I am delighted with it." "Replete with warnings, citations, examples and good counsel. What more need be said? You must read it to learn its real merits. Get it now. It is going rapidly.

But Do Not Forget

it is not for sale. A subscription to the Gospel Messenger is the only means of obtaining this charming little volume.

The Messenger one year, $1.50; the book, 35 cents; both, $1.85.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

So far ten have been baptized, and two others were received. A rare and most pathetic scene was witnessed on the occasion. A very intelligent young man (a mute), made the good confession. The questions that are always asked our applicants were presented to him on paper by the administrator, Bro. E. C. Crumpacker, while he was kneeling in the water. Then the power of God is causing even the deaf to hear (Matt. 11: 5).—Jennie Crumpacker, R. D. 1, Box 48, Roanoke, Ind., March 28.

Bristol.—Brethren B. B. Sherfy, Peter Reed and Samuel Garat met with us in church session, Bro. William Rairey acted as moderator and, with his wife, duly installed. On Sunday we had services at 11 A. M and 7: 30 P. M., at the Fair Ground schoolhouse, West Bristol. The attendance was good. —J. S. Good, Bristol, Va., March 29.

Ogle.—Our church met in council March 25. Our elder, Bro. John Clanahan, was present. We decided not to send a delegate to District Meeting. Bro. W. N. Burner was elected secretary-treasurer. Bro. S. W. Burner, trustee.—Jacob W. Funk, Jr., Seven Fountains, Va., March 28.

Pleasant Valley.—We met in council March 18, with Eld. S. F. Reed presiding. Considerable business came before the church. The dividing of our territory was discussed. We decided to hold a series of meetings this coming fall. Brethren M. Reed and the writer were chosen as delegates to District Meeting.—Peter Hylton, Floyd, Va., March 22.

NOTICE TO THOSE WISHING LODGING DURING ANNUAL MEETING.

From numerous applications for places to lodge during our coming Annual Meeting we infer that our recent communication was misunderstood by many.

We are not ready to assign definite places. If preferred, your wants can be made known, and we will file same, as we have filed those already received. We will advise, in consecutive order, after May 1. Nothing definite before that date.

We are anxious to know AT ONCE, from those who have not yet responded, THE EXACT NUMBER WHO WILL ATTEND. We want to know how many to provide for first. We will then secure the accommodations and make assignments. J. S. Kline.

REMEMBER YOUR FRIEND

WITH AN EASTER POST CARD!

An attractive post card bearing your good wishes and expressions of interest and sympathy at Eastertide will do as much toward preserving sincere friendship as anything.

The following list was selected with a special view of accomplishing this end, and we are sure no one will be anything but pleased with the selections. The real beauty of the cards can not be told in mere words.

No. 1289. On a silver panel is a bouquet of flowers. Behind the panel and mostly hidden is a cross, of different tints. The borders of the cards are festooned and draped with silver cords, while below is the Easter greeting, artistically lettered. Per pack of six, three designs, 10c; three packs for 25c

No. 1292. A cross also forms the background for this series. Bunches of flowers, consisting of six arranged neatly together. The body of the cross is colored, while it is edged with silver. Card is white. Per pack of six, three designs, 10c; three packs for 25c

No. 1294. A white cross is almost entirely concealed by a large silver egg; in front of which, in a basket suspended by a pretty ribbon, are two smaller eggs, white. The basket is composed of flowers and leaves. Two greetings on the card, one on the large egg, the other below the cross. Per pack of six, three designs, 10c; three packs for 25c

No. 1295. The principal feature of this series is a verse in four lines, very appropriate for the season. The other items of the design are a small cross and a large bunch of flowers, tied lightly together in the form of a wreath. Per pack of six, three designs, 10c; three packs for 25c

No. 1290. Another cross design, in the center of a white card, the cross in the form of a vine. The front of the cross is a bouquet of violets, lilies of the valley or narcissus. Festooning around the border of the card. Per pack of six, three designs, 10c; three packs for 25c

No. 1288. The cards in this series contain a panel in which are a basket full of flowers and three or four different colored eggs. There is a suggestion of color around the outside of the panel. Easter verse and greetings on the end of the card. Per pack of six, three designs, 10c; three packs for 25c

No. 1296. The body of these cards is a delicate tint of purple, with a silver border. A white cross is dimly outlined and embossed with a silver cord. Prominent is a spray of Easter flowers, some entirely open, some only buds. Verses and greetings on the card. Per pack of six, two designs, 10c; three packs for 25c

Nos. 711 and 712.

No. 711. The distinguishing feature of these cards is a silver cross, which is the background for a spray of beautiful flowers of different sorts. The cards have borders of satin finish, and there are plenty of Easter greetings. Per pack of five cards, all different, 10c; three packs for 25c

No. 712. Similar to No. 711. However, the flowers are not of the same variety, and there are different Easter greetings. These cards are very desirable and will be much appreciated as an Easter remembrance. Per pack of five cards, 10c; three packs for 25c

No. 4000. Floral pastel in colors. Printed in many colors on a green metallic finish card. A little chick is coming on or near an egg shell. Assorted designs of violets, forget-me-nots, daisies and clovers. Each card has Easter greetings. 5 cards, 15c; per pack of 4 cards, assorted designs, 10c

No. 4001. An attractive blue tinted card. Heavily embossed, with fine coloring and a pretty egg-shaped bangle, in the center of which is a beautiful landscape. Sprays of forget-me-nots, violets and lilies. A post card in every sense. Per pack of 4 cards, 10c

No. 1161. A very pretty series. Absolutely new. A large white Easter cross in centre with a few delicate flowers or Easter lilies. A very pretty landscape or an open book or picture in the centre of the cross. Easter greetings on each card. Embossed post card in 6 distinct designs. 6 cards, 15c; per 4 cards, 10c

No. 8079. Floral beauty. An artistic border of white on a green metallic background. A profusion of violets, lilies and roses. An appropriate Easter greeting printed in white on each card. Size, 3¾ by 5½ inches. Three designs. Per pack of 4 cards, assorted, 10c

No. 1300. Floral cross Easter greetings. Silver background, with a border of beautiful floral greetings, surrounded with a cross made of flowers and other items flowers. Appropriate greetings in white on a short poem. Per pack of 5 cards, three designs, 10c; three packs for 25c

Easter will soon be here, so if you want your friends to have these cards before that day, order now so as to avoid delay or disappointment.

AROUND THE WORLD

Temperance Gains in Jerusalem.

While it must be said to the credit of the Moslems in Jerusalem that intemperance is not as common among them as among those of other Oriental religions, it must be confessed, to the shame of Christianity, that the sale of intoxicants in the Holy City is largely due to the so-called Christians who unblushingly engage in the traffic. At present a strong temperance movement among the workingmen of the city is gaining in power and influence. A petition in nine languages was recently circulated, praying that the Turkish Pasha close all the drinking places in the world's spiritual metropolis. The request will likely receive favorable consideration, and if so, it will add a most notable victory to the growing list of the world's temperance gains.

Why Not Preach the Word?

The apostle of old spoke of people in his time that had "itching ears," and even today there are people with the same kind of ears, for some of the popular ministers try their very best to satisfy the most absurd whims. They preach almost anything except the old Gospel. Some give charming essays, some recipe poetry, some discuss politics, some talk learnedly of science, and some speculate on intricate, abstruse questions. Only a few, alas, preach the Word. A recent issue of "Leslie's Weekly," commenting on popular styles of preaching, has these appropriate words: "To laymen such preaching seems to indicate a dearth of ideas and a lack of conviction concerning the great central truths of religion." It is strange, indeed, that a secular paper has to call attention to this serious lack in pulpit efficiency.

A Check on Fraudulent Advertising.

William P. Harrison, a Cincinnati millionaire, recently was sentenced to a fine of $1,000 and three years in the penitentiary for fraudulent advertising. He had made unwarranted claims for several household appliances he advertised, and the Federal Court decided that such a gross misrepresentation was fraud, to all intents and purposes, and sentenced him accordingly. The costs of prosecution,—about $10,000,—must also be paid by the defendant. The verdict, it is to be hoped, will work a much needed reform in modern advertising methods. Too often the most preposterous claims are made by the wily advertiser, to the great financial loss of those whom he basely deceives. A little more of the old-time honesty, implanted into the heart of the average advertiser, would tend to a wonderful revival of honesty and integrity in the business world.

Quality Versus Quantity.

A good showing of numerical strength is regarded by many churches as the highest degree of efficiency, and yet a large aggregation of members may be a source of weakness rather than of strength. Some of the best-informed students of church matters admit that "the importance of getting people into the church has often been overemphasized, when compared with the stress laid upon the important task of securing consistent Christian living on the part of those already within the fold." Nothing is more important than bringing the life of our church members to the highest possible plane. We must recognize the important fact that, most of all, we need better members rather than a large number of members. If the church is to be a power for good in the world, it must be so by reason of a sterling Christian character, rather than by its great numerical strength.

An Eloquent Tribute to American Missionaries.

During the appalling plague epidemic in India the self-sacrificing labors of American missionaries have been so remarkably efficient as to arouse the unstinted praise of Lord Harris, Governor of the Presidency of Bombay. He declared in a recent address that "India's gratitude toward these American missions has been piling up for the last hundred years." To the President of the United States he expressed "the most grateful thanks of the Government of Bombay for the assistance which the American people are rendering in pushing forward the cause of education in India." It is a well-known fact that American missionaries have taken a leading part in the civilizing of the people of British India, and they have done even more for them morally and religiously. The seed that was sown in the past, and that is still being sown, is sure to burst forth into a glorious harvest in the years to come.

Bible Progress in Italy.

Perhaps one of the most cheering evidences of a real awakening among the people of Italy is found in the growing demand for the Bible. Much of this is due to the activity of Italian Protestants, who, upon their return from America, have been, and are, most earnest Bible distributers among their countrymen. There is practically no opposition, now, to aggressive work along this line, and in a number of cases even Catholic priests have been eager recipients of the Blessed Word. At present more than fifty priests are ready to break the shackles of Roman bondage, having been brought to the light by a study of the Bible in their own tongue. Surely the Blessed Book is proving a "savor of life" to these people of Sunny Italy.

The Ignorance of the Orient.

One of the greatest hindrances to the successful progress of gospel propagation in the Orient is the lamentable ignorance of the people. In the Indian Empire 277,000,000, and in China 300,000,000 can neither read nor write their own language. It may readily be imagined how such a deplorable condition militates against the best efforts of the missionary. Such natives are hard to reach; they can not think, they can not understand the most simple teachings until they are repeated again and again by the ever patient missionary. If any one has imagined that the life of a gospel worker in the Orient is one of ease, let him quickly disabuse his mind of such a thought. Ignorance, indifference and prejudice constitute a formidable trinity, opposed to all gospel progress.

Appalling Conditions in Brazil.

Illiteracy in this South-American republic is declared to be so prevalent that but sixteen per cent of the entire population are able to either read or write. Lying is so common that it is taken as a matter of course. Family discipline is neglected to an alarming extent, and productive of much of the moral delinquency so painfully apparent. While Catholic influences have for years been in charge of the religious and educational activities of Brazil, the people show but a very low development. Their religion is a dead formalism. They know nothing of the real, life-giving power of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. It is undoubtedly true that Brazil, as well as the other South and Central American States, needs the proclamation of the pure Gospel fully as much as do the heathen nations in Darkest Africa. What an opportunity for several consecrated workers from our own ranks to tell the Good News!

Habits of Industry as a Crime Preventive.

An experienced police official in one of the large cities recently said that nearly all criminals owe their downfall and criminal tendencies to the fact that in early life they were not trained to regular habits of industry. It is undoubtedly true that many parents, with mistaken ideas of kindness, neglect to instruct their children in the really useful occupations of life. One of the officers of the late Census affirms that there is a most deplorable laxity everywhere in this respect. Thousands of parents bring up their children with the idea that they must be dependent,—sheltered from every contingency and responsibility. Instead of this the child should be taught to be independent and reliant upon its own resources. Real usefulness rather than the glitter of so-called "accomplishments" determines the future worth of the rising generation. If to active employment be added a deeply religious life, a most desirable factor in civic righteousness will be the result.

Outdoor Services.

Judging by late reports of the National Free Church Council of Great Britain, our English friends engage in a great deal more outdoor preaching than is done in the United States, and that, too, with most satisfactory results. We are assured that by their open-air efforts the Gospel has been preached to the "excursionists in the country and by the seaside, to agriculturists as they stand in the markets, to dockyard men as they leave their work; in short, to all sorts and conditions of men at every opportunity." It seems to us that we, as a church, have yet to learn the value of this method of reaching the vast throngs of humanity at the very places where they congregate,—people who probably would never darken a church door. Paul's persistent endeavor to be "instant in season and out of season," should teach us the importance of being wide-awake to every opportunity for gospel ministration. Like Christ and the apostles we may often find a most appreciative audience under the blue dome of heaven, to whom the fervent appeal for righteousness may be the beckoning hand to a renewed life.

From City to Country.

Most significant is the present movement of city dwellers towards country districts, and the more thoughtful student of sociological matters is pondering the "whys" and "wherefores" of the remarkable exodus. Looking at existing industrial and especially commercial conditions at our trade centers, one can readily see that close and intense competition has made business success exceedingly problematical. In fact, so conspicuous are the failures in the business world of the cities, that the favored lot of the farmer appears all the more alluring. During last year hundreds of city families have located in farming districts, to their great benefit physically as well as financially, and this tendency bids fair to continue. In view of this "back-to-the-farm" movement it would seem advisable, therefore, that we, as a church, continue our appointments in rural districts, and reach out to still other near-by points. That method of expansion can be employed at small expense and with most excellent results.

Then and Now.

In a brief review of events, as they have crowded upon each other in the Orient during recent years, the Bible student can not fail to see the hand of the Lord in the various changes that have dispelled the darkness of heathenism, and ushered in the glorious light of the Gospel. In 1807 Canton was the only place in China where foreigners could reside; now all the country is open to missionaries, and in many places they are not only tolerated but helped in every possible way. In 1807 Robert Morrison, the first Protestant missionary, reached Canton, and eleven years later published the entire Bible in Chinese. Since then the Bible has been circulated by multiplied thousands in the remotest bounds of the Celestial Empire. In 1834 medical work began its beneficent career, and has never ceased its mighty and far-reaching efforts. In many instances the most stubborn opposition to missions was overcome by means of medical mission work. Looking at the wonderful progress of missionary efforts, one can not fail to see that a hand stronger than our own is shaping all things to the further progress of the truth and God's ultimate glory.

German Excavations at Babylon.

The excavators who for some years have labored so diligently on the site of ancient Babylon, have recently identified completely what they believe to be the foundations of the Tower of Babel, though not very much is left of the once famous structure. The ruins of Nebuchadnezzar's palace, where the memorable feast of Belshazzar took place, and where the fateful handwriting on the wall recorded the doom of the licentious ruler, have been shown to cover the remains of quay walls, built on the riverside by Sargon and Naboplassar. Here, also Alexander the Great died, —seemingly unable to conquer his own evil passions, though he had all the world at his feet. The enormous brick buildings, constructed by the Babylonian architects, were veneered with glazed and colored bricks, in ornamental designs, and in the days of their glory undoubtedly presented a fine appearance. But their doom came upon them, and what little we find today, of the once magnificent structures, bears silent testimony to the truthfulness of God's Word. The sure word of prophecy, foretelling the destruction of Babylon, was fulfilled to the very letter.

Five Thousand Souls, Annually, for Vice.

Chicago's Vice Commission, in its struggle with the problem of the social evil, has secured an array of facts that, in their enormity, are absolutely staggering. Amid other startling disclosures two leading statements are especially impressive: (1) "Chicago spends $15,000,000, annually, for vice;" (2) "The traffic in women in that city annually demands and destroys the lives and souls of 5,000 young girls." It is a commentary on modern business methods that the life of a working girl, in our cities, often rendered exceedingly difficult. No wonder that poverty is, undoubtedly, the most prolific cause of vice. A lack of proper sustenance means not only starvation of the body, but a destruction of the common blessings of life,—decent living conditions, and proper food and clothing. The Vice Commission, after an exhaustive examination of prevailing conditions, has decided that evil environments rather than wrong inclinations are the prime cause for the unfortunate social complications that well nigh defy the most earnest efforts of the reformer. One thing is sure,—no improvement is possible until better economic measures are made available, and until radical changes in the home life and training of children help them to attain to the highest plane of self-help and general efficiency.

Resurrection!

BY B. F. M. SOURS.

O my brother, does the darkness fill your heart with bitter wail?
Do the lowering clouds of trouble o'er your slumber tell of gloom?
Do the stars die out in blackness, and the howling winds prevail?
Do the hopes you cherished vanish in the darkness of the tomb?
Have you fought and been defeated in the jargon of the fray
While the dreaded foe was victor, and you fell upon the field
All too valorous to own him, and too frail to win the day,
But, by all the odds of battle, overcome and made to yield?

O my brother, you are wearied with the strivings of the gloom,
And the dull dismay entombing all the ministers of hope.
O make room for blossoms blooming, for Death now is hurled to doom,
And we view the future triumph through faith's mighty telescope;
And we see—O brother hearken!—past the clouds that lower above,
There are golden coronations, there are angel hosts come down,
And for thee, if thou art faithful, from the happy Land of love,
The glad call will come to mansion thine, and harp, and robe, and crown!

Night is vanished. Easter morning saw the tomb an empty room,
For the bright, angelic rapture scattered all the night of gloom;
And the resurrected Son of God proclaimed immortal bloom,
For he shattered by his life the bolted prison-bars of doom!
Hark! "I am the resurrection!" Shout it! Glory to his name!—
He is risen? Christ is risen! O my soul, the Christ Divine
In the power of life immortal all the darkness overcame,
And with him, in life triumphant, in his glory we shall shine!

All the rainbows after tempests in the times long sped away,
Are surpassed in holy grandeur by the brilliancy of this,
And the buttercups and lilies, and the sunbeams of the day,
Seem to brighten with the splendor of the sweet and heavenly bliss;
For the gates of Death are broken, and the jasper gates swing wide,
And the King of Glory triumphs, and he intercedes for thee,
And the gloom is pierced by splendor, and thy future glorified,
For no tongue can tell the rapture of the years that are to be.

"For Our Justification."

BY JOHN R. SNYDER.

"Who was delivered for our offenses, and was raised again for our justification" (Rom. 4: 25).

THERE are many phases of the resurrection that are dealt with by writers and those who serve from the pulpit. The usual Easter song is one of joy and extreme happiness because of the victory over death and the grave. Well may it be so, for not since the "morning stars sang together" has there been such a song to break through the corridors of heaven, no, not even the "Gloria in excelsis Deo," of the Bethlehem plains, can compare with the song of the resurrected and glorified Lord.

But there was a purpose in it all and Paul has revealed the secret of it in his letter to the Romans in the text quoted above. "He was raised again for our justification." Our justification would never have been complete, had it not been for the mystery of the resurrection. The death on the cross expiated for our sins, but it was the breaking of the bonds of death and the standing forth in the bright sunlight of the early morn, that completed our redemption. This is the burden of Paul's message to the Romans.

As we look into the words of Holy Writ, it is made plain that the death of Christ was an atonement or expiation for the sin of the whole world. "For him hath God set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood to declare his righteousness" (Rom. 3: 25). Again, "For when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more being reconciled we shall be saved by his life" (Rom. 5: 10). Man himself could not avail. Israel tried, but failed. There was the sigh for the priest, but no priest came. There was a cry for a king, but it was unheeded. Then came the quest for the prophet, which was in vain. But in the fullness of time there came the Priest, King and Prophet in the person of Jesus Christ, who fulfilled all three offices in one and "In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins" (Col. 1: 14). Thus the expiating Christ brought us atonement but not justification. Our redemption was not complete.

As his death was an atonement for our sins, so his resurrection was the proof and pledge of our eternal life. As his death brought to us victory over the grave, even so does his resurrection bring to us life beyond the grave. He was brought forth from the tomb that we might have the fullest assurance that his death accomplished the end for which it took place, namely our reconciliation to God. Mark well the words, "And was raised again for our justification." This gives us full title to eternal life, into which he has entered and taken with him our old nature as the first fruits of the resurrection.

To us it appears that this doctrine of the resurrection, justification by faith, which Paul so ably proves in the Book of Romans, is one of the most glorious in the whole scheme of redemption, for it is the climax, the keystone of the arch, which completes the structure. Without it all would have failed and, as the apostle says, "If Christ be not risen then is our preaching vain, and your faith is vain also." The whole structure and superstructure rest upon this one truth, and we are not surprised that Paul was so emphatic in his teaching regarding this fundamental truth.

It is also a very plain truth. There need be no mystery about it. The new birth may mystify, conversion may be a perplexing question, sanctification may be difficult to comprehend, but the truth of the resurrection, our justification, is plain. All may comprehend it and all may attain to it.

Our work has, very frequently, taken us into the court-room. We have seen the prisoner brought before the bar and heard his indictment. We have been there when the jury would silently file into their box and return a verdict of guilty. We have heard the judge pronounce the sentence which took from the prisoner his liberties. In the eyes of the law he was a guilty and condemned man, with no one to interfere, no one to save. So it was with us. We were condemned under the law. The priest, through his libations and oblations, and the shedding of the blood of bulls and goats and rams, could not purchase our justification. The king, with all his authority, could not interfere in our behalf. The prophet could not mediate with an angry God. But Jesus Christ, our all in all, came, lived, died and rose again, and, bless the Lord, it was all complete. We are all in the state of the sinner, condemned to die and unable to save ourselves. No man can give a ransom for the soul of his neighbor. But that angry God,—just through it all,—has provided a Savior. As our life was forfeited to death because of our transgressions, Jesus Christ has redeemed us by giving up his own life for us. He died in our stead and has made an atonement for our sins. That part of the debt has been paid. But he goes farther still. He offers to us the pardon he has purchased and on the simple condition that we believe his death is a sufficient sacrifice for our sin. Do we believe it? Do we accept it? If we do, then are we "justified by faith," and the purpose of his resurrection has not been in vain.

Beloved, the resurrection is a glorious doctrine. It does bring justification if we accept its simple conditions. But if we deny it in fact or in theory, then are we yet in our sins, and there is no redemption. We are yet in the tomb, and no angel has "rolled away the stone." There is an inclination, in these latter days, to put away the miraculous, which would put away the resurrection. It is putting away the life of the plan of redemption. If we reject it we leave Christ in the tomb and we are yet in our sins. But, beloved, if we believe, we can say with Paul, "But now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept. For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection from the dead" (1 Cor. 15: 20, 21). Death can not be destroyed by there being simply no further death. There must be a resurrection, following a passing away of the old life into a new existence. This we have in the delivery of him who was slain "for our offenses and was raised again for our justification."

The Silent Sermon.

BY JAS. A. SELL.

"The temple of our purest thoughts is—silence."

THERE are times when silence is more eloquent than words. A hotel man, with some businessmen of his town went to the city to make a purchase of goods in their line. Being there over Sunday, one of the number proposed attending divine service. This was agreed to and the company set our in search of a place. They happened to enter a place where the Quakers worship. Perfect silence reigned supreme. Here each one was left to commune with his own heart, apparently waiting for the minister to come and begin the public ministrations. But no one came. Not one word was spoken openly, but to the hotel man the Spirit of God was speaking inwardly. It seemed that all the mean and sinful acts of his life came to the surface, and rose before his mental vision. The wrecks and ruin, caused by his own hellish business, stared him in the face. He saw the young men, starting out in life with fair prospects of success in usefulness, soon converted into staggering, senseless, driveling wretches. He heard their many utterances changed into the disgusting, profane babbling and quibbling of a bloated sot, and his firm look and demeanor changed into the vacant stare of a demoniac.

Then, too, he was reminded of his lovely wife. He saw her in the flush of joy, as a rosy, blushing, confiding bride. With fond devotion she yielded her name, her parental home, her destiny, her all, for love's dear sake, willing to share the burdens of her beloved in making a new home, and in rearing a new family. But he, with his fiend-making business, steps in and blasts all her sweet prospects. His slumbering conscience is awakened, as he sees her white robes of joy exchanged for the sable ones of bitter grief. Despair has taken the place of her fond hope, and her bright anticipations are crushed beneath a broken heart. Instead of the ideal home the fancy erected, and painted as a result of patient toil, the silence and solitude of the tomb would be welcomed as a place where she could lay down the crushing burdens, cast upon her by the depraved passions of others.

Then there, too, appeared before him her children,—the bright, happy, joyous children, looking to some one to instruct their inquiring minds, to restrain their wandering dispositions, provide food for their appetites, shelter and clothing for their comfort, and to set them an example of noble manhood and womanhood.

As these things, like a flood in spring time, rushed into his soul, he realized, as never before, that he was engaged in a character-wrecking, home-destroying, heart-breaking and heaven-insulting business. The Good Spirit was doing his work. The man was listening and his heart was responding. The storms of wind and fire, in some form, had often swept over him, as they did by the cave of Elijah, but it seemed that the Lord was not in them. But when the "still, small voice" came, he heard and answered. He returned to his home a changed man, and gave up his business. The sermon was powerful, but not a word was spoken.

"God speaks to the heart that listens
In the silence of earth."

Israel's sweetest singer said: "While I was musing the fire burned." And at another time: "Commune with your own heart upon your bed and be still."

Hollidaysburg, Pa.

The First Easter Morning.

BY OMA KARN.

It is night in Judea. Like sparkling jewels, set in the deep, dark azure of the Oriental sky, the stars look down upon a garden, flooded with the soft, silvery radiance of moonlight and fragrant with the perfume of flowers. In this garden is a tomb, the door of which is sealed, and a great stone placed before it. Armed men are watching around this tomb. The glistening points of helmet and spear gleam brightly through the veiled light, and an occasional click of metal is heard as these watchers pace to and fro in front of it. Otherwise a strange, mysterious silence hovers over the place, causing a sensation like that experienced when one is face to face with some great crisis, or confronted with some supernatural wonder. "Surely," whispers the inquiring mind, "some great presence, some royal personage must sleep within those sealed walls, else, why this unusual guarding, and why this strange, unusual feeling with which the very air seems laden?"

And, while we look and wonder and question over this strange scene, and this stranger feeling, behold, the tranquil sky opens, the glory and power of a heavenly presence fills the place, and, straight from the invisible land, an angel descends. One glance from his majestic countenance, and the martial keepers become as dead men. One touch upon the massive stone and it rolls away. Quietly this celestial visitor seats himself upon it, and awaits the dawn of day.

DIVIDING THE LOOT TAKEN FROM KERAK.

It comes! Away off, on the edge of the eastern horizon, a bar of light appears, standing out clearer and brighter than the surrounding moonlight. One by one the stars pale and disappear, to be followed with long, bright rays, heralds of the coming great presence just beyond them. Scarcely has their announcement been made, and their banners unfurled across the blue vault above, when the Lord of Day himself appears, irradiating the world of nature with golden light, and laying his touch of superb beauty upon the low-lying hills, the distant mountain tops and the white domes of the Holy City. Shadows have vanished. A new day has awakened. Morning has come.

But is this grandly beautiful awakening in the world of nature the only awakening that has taken place within our view? Ah, turn thine eyes to yonder tomb and see! Behold, the door is open and the still sleeper has gone from within. See the devoted Mary, as she peers into the gloom, and finds the form of her Lord and Master gone. Hear her heart-broken lament, as she says, "They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him."

See the excited disciples, as they come rushing to the scene! Gone? Yes, but not taken. Sometime within the time described a movement has taken place within the tomb. The sealed door has swung open and a figure has issued forth,—a glorious, majestic figure, such as human lips could not describe, even had human eyes been permitted to look upon it. No need now to ask the why of the strange proceedings we have witnessed earlier in the night, nor the cause of the strange sensations that have stirred within us. This radiant figure, issuing forth in the stillness of the early morn, is no other than the Son of Heaven, conqueror over death and the grave. For the human race the darkness of the night of death is past, and the resurrection morning has dawned.

"At break of day
The Savior burst that cavern's stillness deep,
Rising in conquest over death's shattered sway,
As from a sleep."

"He rose as God,
Rose as a mighty victor strong to save,
Breaking death's silent chain and unseen rod,
There in the grave."

Because of these triumphs of this first Easter morning, many dark clouds over this world have been embroidered with gold, and lined with silver, many sin-darkened souls have been flooded with life-giving light; many tears have glistened with hope, and life itself has been crowned with immortality. The disciples "saw and believed." We also look into that empty tomb and believe. "He is risen." We also may rise.

Have your plans gone wrong? Have the things you trusted in withered like the leaves of last year? Is your spiritual heaven dark and threatening with foreboding? Do you see no bud of hope in your moral life? Look upward toward the risen Christ. Place yourself where the warm beams of Eternal Light and Love can shine upon you! Take courage in the thought that the power that burst open that sealed door can overcome all things, and the power that brings the lily's fair face out of the mire is the same power that works for beauty, and harmony, and goodness, in the human soul. The God who changes the face of nature also changes the heart of man. For him who will believe in this power, the Easter lilies are blooming, and all his tears are wiped away.

"We're all of us glad at the Easter-time,
For deep in our souls the joy-bells chime;
For the Savior who loved us and died for our sin,
Through the gates of glory hath entered in;
And his heart above
Is throbbing with love,
And his Spirit comes down, as the Holy Dove."

Going Up to Jerusalem.

BY W. E. MILLER.

Siege and Looting of Kerak.—No. 7.

THESE people were exceedingly friendly, and made our stay in their camp just as pleasant as possible. We had the privilege of all their tents and were expected to walk in without knocking, sit down by their fires, and generally make ourselves at home. Should they be parching wheat or making bread, it would be no discourtesy to help ourselves; indeed, one is rather expected to do so, once he is given the privilege of a camp. We had access to their wood pile (thistle pile). This I wondered at, for it is no small or pleasant task to go a long way over the mountainside to dig up and carry home this dry material for fuel. There are two things you never see a Bedouin man do,—carry water or gather fuel. It is a work which entirely belongs to the women. Some of our party thought it not the thing to do, to use the fuel, which cost these poor women so much hard labor, and because of much time on their hands, they went out and gathered some fuel, but were soon informed that it was an indignity they were offering the people of this camp, as we were expected to go to their fuel pile and help ourselves. From the time we arrived in their camp until leaving it, there was scarcely a moment when there were not from five to twenty-five people sitting as closely to us and our luggage, as they could crowd, and this was especially true at cooking and meal-time. One old man would come and sit until he was tired; then would fix himself comfortably and lie down to sleep, as composedly as he would in his own tent. Thus the time went by from early morning until dark, our neighbors constantly entertaining us by sitting in our tent, intently looking at us.

Our advent into their camp occurred about eleven o'clock Tuesday morning, the second day of the siege. That day and night many donkey loads of loot came to the camp from Kerak. Much wheat and barley was brought out, and about every other conceivable thing, which could be carried out, as well as some of the wounded men, who belonged to this camp. One poor fellow I shall never forget,—Atullah Abashney, by name,—who had been shot through the thick part of the leg about midway between the hip and the knee. The ball had apparently struck the upper portion of the bone, splintering it and driving the splinters in various directions, some of which could be located, by a slight pressure of the finger, imbedded in the flesh. I dressed this poor, suffering fellow's leg a number of times, while in their camp. The limb was swollen twice its normal size, consequently his suffering was great, and he was very grateful for everything done for him. He desired to know if the bone were broken, and tried to ask me, but it was impossible for me to get his meaning, not knowing Arabic. Then he secured a small stick and breaking it showed it to me, at which I caught his meaning, and quickly answered him with the same stick. Taking my knife, I, with the point of the blade, lifted up several splinters from the stick; representing the splintered bone of his leg, and indicating it was not broken, greatly pleasing him, as shown by the expression of his face, notwithstanding his dreadful suffering.

Having all the privileges that we were enjoying with these Bedouins, it would scarcely seem that we were prisoners, and, in the strictest sense of the word, we were not. In another way, however, we were, for it would have been foolhardiness for us to have attempted to escape without an armed escort, while the country was in rebellion. So it was our lot to remain here, until such a time when the Arabs would be willing to conduct us safely to another friendly camp. There is an unwritten law among the Arabs that to pass through another tribe's territory without permission would mean an infringement, and most likely cause trouble.

On Wednesday morning we dispatched a note to the head sheikh at Kerak, saying that we must get out of the country, and if he would not furnish us an escort to the friendly tribe at the south end of the Dead Sea, we would move on without it; also, if anything happened to us, he and his people would be held responsible for all damages. Late in the afternoon a messenger arrived in the camp from Kerak; bearing a note from the head sheikh to our guide, saying they would furnish us an escort, and do all in their power for us, but they must see Abu-Jerius at once, and that he should start for Kerak that same evening. So, with but a cup of tea, and without supper, he took the best horse we had and started with the messenger, hoping to get as near Kerak as possible that same evening. As it was, he stayed all night in a Bedouin camp, and at a very early hour rode to the city in the morning. How many dangers, seen and unseen, were passed in this journey, will likely never be known, but he was assured that he was accompanied by the prayers of every one of us.

The evening was spent in company with our newly-made friends, for we were already becoming somewhat chummy. Ralph and I went into our next-door neighbor's house of hair. One of the women of the house (for the man had two wives) was parching wheat in an oval pan set on three stones, with burning grass for fuel. She would take the dirtiest, blackest rag, I have ever seen used, and mop a lot of grease, presumably goat, around in the pan and then put in about a pint of wheat, which cracked and popped almost like pop corn. After it was finished she requested us to help ourselves, which we did, and found it exceedingly good. Our ability to stow away a considerable quantity of her parched wheat pleased her exceedingly.

Beds were sought soon after dark, and I believe all slept as well this second night as we did the first night in our new home. Our beds were thin mattresses which we carried with us. They were spread on the ground. With a pillow of cotton, blankets, and plenty of God's fresh air, we experienced no trouble in sleeping. However I believe the younger members of the party thought the nights were shorter in the land of Moab than in other parts of the world, for they were not through with their morning naps, when they must get up. We all slept in the same room, and when one got up, then all must come forth.

The forenoon of this third day in camp was spent in going to the tops of some of the near-by mountains, and in playing ball with the Bedouin children, with an occasional glance up the path towards Kerak, to see if our guide was returning. When his head did appear above the ledge, a fourth of a mile away, I am sure that one heart I know of beat a trifle easier.

A Modern Passover.

BY WM. J. BUCKLEY.

CHRISTENDOM hails the blessed Eastertide, as it comes and goes, with delight. We rejoice in our Master's victory and glory, and gladly commemorate the day of his resurrection. It is well that we do. But, Christian brother, do you remember that while you rejoice on Easter, your Jewish brother is also celebrating a great day? He does not, however, commemorate our Lord's resurrection with the joy that fills the Christian's heart; but he commemorates, in sorrow, the distant day when Israel was led out of Egypt. He reviews the unhappy history of his people, from the time of Abraham to the present day, and his heart yearns to be in the old national capital, and to enjoy the long-expected reign of the Messiah.

The Jewish celebration continues for three weeks, reaching its climax of interest and enthusiasm on the evening of April 14. On this date the ancient "passover" is still observed in every orthodox Jewish home.

Though contrary to the usually strictly-observed custom of this ancient people, we were admitted, by the influence of a Jewish friend, into the home of a Jewish gentleman of Chicago on the evening of April 14, 1908. There we enjoyed the rare privilege of seeing the old "passover" observed.

A view of the home convinced us that extensive preparations had been made for the feast. All articles, contrary to the letter of the law, had been removed from the house before sunset. Everything had been given a thorough cleaning. Some of the old furniture had been replaced by new. The members of the home wore their best clothing. We were told that all were expected to secure new clothing for the occasion, if their resources would permit. The table was spread with special dishes, which are used only for the feast. About eight o'clock, shortly before the feast began, the house was lighted with numerous candles. A few other simple decorations were made, which gave a very pleasing appearance.

As the feast was about to begin, the members of the home, except three small children, were seated around the table. According to their custom, the men all wore their hats during the feast. When all were seated, they began reciting a part of their early history. This was written in Hebrew. During this concert reading, considerable confusion prevailed. They knew little of the Hebrew language, and, consequently, mumbled and chanted in an unintelligible manner. After this was continued for several minutes, wine was served as the first course.

When all had been given a small glassful, they dipped their fingers in the wine, and sprinkled some of it on the tablecloth. This was their substitution for the striking of blood on the lintel, and posts of the door. A short prayer was then offered, after which they drank the remainder of the wine.

The next course served was bitter herbs and unleavened bread. Another section of their history was read, and then each one ate his portion of the herbs and bread.

Wine was then again served, which, after reading more of their history, was partaken of by each one of them.

Beef, chicken and fish were next served in substitution for the lamb. Again they continued the reading of Israel's record, and then each ate of the meat.

Again they spent several minutes in reading more of their history, and then drank another glass of wine.

After this the company arose from the table. The ladies put on their hats. The doors were unlocked and opened. Then they united in prayer for the Messiah to enter their home and bless them, and asked that he would be with them at Jerusalem as their Sovereign, at the feast day of the next year. They seemed to rejoice in the thought of returning to Jerusalem. The doors were then again locked, and they were all seated at the table.

Another glass of wine was served to each one present. Again they read in concert. This time they finished reading their history. After prayer, they drank the wine, which was the last course of the feast.

Thus Israel continues to observe the great feast, year after year, and their hearts still yearn for the Messiah to come and establish a temporal kingdom.

Pleasant Hill Church Indiana.

BY GEO. L. STUDEBAKER.

IT has been my pleasure to be associated with the above-named church several times in various meetings. We have just enjoyed another series of meetings beginning March 11, and closing April 2. Some sickness and unfavorable roads and weather militated much against the success of the meetings. Three were baptized, others were near. May God's Spirit continue to strive with them!

This church has been in charge of Eld. Jeremiah Gump since its organization. On account of age, he resigned its care about one year ago. A brief history of this little band of faithful members will, perhaps, be of interest to many.

This church was once a part of the Cedar Creek church. As early as 1853 some of the Gumps, with a few families of members moved from Miami County, Ohio, to Allen County, Indiana. Eld. Geo. W. Studebaker, of Delaware County, Ind., began preaching among them in their homes and schoolhouses, making these trips, some seventy miles, in a buggy or on horseback.

One time, as he was making his way to his appointment at this place, he overtook a little girl carrying a Testament, trudging along through the rain. He invited her to ride, which she, childlike, accepted.

He asked, "Where are you going?"

She answered, "To church."

"What, going to church through the rain?" he said.

"Oh, yes," she answered, "I am one of them."

Our services would be much better attended and greater good taken, if all members would only look at the matter as did the little girl, and say, "I am one of them."

Among the number who had moved from Miami County, Ohio, to Allen County, Indiana, were Jacob and Jeremiah Gump. Jeremiah settled on the farm on which he still lives. June 21, 1854, Jacob and Jeremiah Gump, with their wives, were baptized by Eld. Geo. W. Studebaker. There being no organized church and no resident minister, the Brethren met in their homes, and had prayer and social meetings.

The same fall Brethren James Tracy and John Miller, of Goshen, Ind., came among the few scattered members, and organized them into a congregation known as the Cedar Creek church. An election was held, and Brethren Jacob and Jeremiah Gump were elected to the ministry, and Brethren Samuel Snider and Jonathan Wolf to the deacon's office. Eld. Studebaker, as long as he resided in Indiana, took great pleasure in visiting these members and breaking unto them the Bread of Life.

In 1874 the Cedar Creek church decided to divide her territory, which resulted in four separate congregations: Cedar Lake, Little St. Joe, Pleasant Hill and Cedar Creek. Bro. Jacob Gump was given the care of three, and to Bro. Jeremiah Gump was given the care of Pleasant Hill. Since then another organization has been effected in Ft. Wayne.

Eld. Jacob Gump died March 13, 1896. He, with his brother, Jeremiah, was elected to the ministry in the fall of 1854, forwarded to the second degree in 1857, ordained in October, 1862. They were faithful workers in their holy calling in the Northern District of Indiana, Eld. Jeremiah having had the oversight of eight different congregations during his active service. He will be eighty-two years old, should he be spared until May 7.

He did not attend all the services during the series of meetings, but was present, with his companion, several times. They have journeyed together for over sixty-one years. Sunday, March 26, feeling somewhat indisposed, he called for the anointing. In the presence of his wife, several of his children, grandchildren, great grandchildren and neighbors, he was permitted to enjoy this most sacred service. Brother and Sister Gump are quite active, considering their age. They live alone on the same farm upon which they settled over fifty-eight years ago.

The Pleasant Hill church is an interesting place to go. The members are active in God's service. It is now in care of Eld. J. A. Gump, the youngest son of Eld. Gump. Bro. D. M. Hart is a minister in this church, but, on account of advanced age, lives somewhat retired. Two young brethren, grandsons of Eld. Gump,—Chas. Gump and Elmer Pepple, have lately been called to the ministry. These, with four deacons,—Albert Gump, Martin Jackson, Burt Bosler and Chas. Myers,—compose the official board.

To meet with these old veterans of the cross, and hear them tell of the hardships of the frontier life, is interesting. It encourages one to greater zeal in the Master's service.

May God bless them all, and may we, who are younger in years, and upon whom the work of our forefathers is falling, "study to be workmen approved of God."

Easter Triumph.

BY IDA M. HELM.

EASTER should be made a fruitful season for the Sunday-school and church. It is the season of life and joy. At the Easter season every one thinks more or less about life and death. Every member should make the interest of the church the subject of much prayer and meditation, and the saving of souls should be made the burden of every heart. Where the main aim of every one is to live Christlike in thought, word and deed, great things may be accomplished for Christ. In an atmosphere like this all spiritual attainments are possible. Christ was Paul's strength. He said he could do all things through Christ. God works with and through his children today.

This Easter season might be a most blessed one if every one of us would, in spirit, live with Christ his last great days on earth. If we would give him a joyful triumphant entrance into our lives, if we would feast with him and his disciples in the upper room, if we would watch with him through the hours of agony, while the cup of anguish is being pressed to his lips, we would realize more fully Christ's great work. Remembering how Judas gave the traitor's kiss, and following him as he goes to the judgment hall and Calvary, we are filled with sadness. We come to the sealed tomb, and after three days of heaviness and despair we see the empty tomb and behold the glory of the resurrection morn that brings to us our joyful Easter Day. As we walk with Christ to Emmaus, we listen while he talks, till our hearts burn within us. A little later we hear doubting Thomas exclaim: "My Lord and my God!" Then we go with the Master to the heights of Olivet and hear his command to go and disciple all nations, and hear him say, "Lo, I am with you always." We see him go into heaven, there to make intercession to the Father for us.

Surely, the great work which Christ has entrusted to his followers should be pushed forward with redoubled zeal. What we need is more of Jesus. There is no danger of our experiencing too much of the power of the Pentecostal gift of the Holy Spirit. We are living amidst the blessings of the Spirit of Christ, but there is a possibility of our not experiencing the fullness of his power in our lives. We may if we will. If we do not, it is as though we were living in the midst of a choice fruit garden and not enjoying the best fruit, and we have not tasted the best that Christ is offering to us under the New Testament.

There is as much of the Holy Spirit within our reach today as there was for those who were present on the day of Pentecost. We are not our own. Christ has purchased us. Stop and think! Is it consistent with the religion of Christ for his professed followers to have fellowship with the things of the world since Jesus bought us with his precious blood? It was the spirit of the world that crucified him. The world is stained with his blood. The cross stands with extended arms between the church and the world, and Christians must abstain from that which is in opposition to Christ. The old man of sin must be dead and buried, if we would experience the joys of Easter life. When we are wholly his we can lead others to him. Christ is risen, and to the child of God death is not a tragedy, but a triumph. Christ's resurrection dispels the darkness and gloom of death, and makes the true Christian's triumph over death possible.

Let us tenderly set forth the lessons of Christ's love for us, of his passion and his triumph, that we may be brought in touch with "him whose garments smell of myrrh and aloes and cassia, out of the ivory palaces," and the life-giving, spiritual fragrance of the heavenly clime may be wafted to the uttermost parts of the earth, and all may experience Easter blessings.

How to Do It.

BY A. G. CROSSWHITE.

THIS article is a humble, though feeble effort, to answer a number of inquiries received at different times, regarding a change of elders and pastors, and, no doubt, affects the minds of hundreds of our members throughout the Brotherhood. Two phases of the subject have engaged our attention particularly, namely, "Churches that are not prospering under the leadership of men who seem to be ignorant of the deterioration of the work, and make no effort to relieve the working force of such embarrassment," and "Elders and pastors who leave their charges without making satisfactory arrangements for their successors."

Under our present church polity there is a splendid opportunity for the adjoining elders to lend a helping hand in such churches,—not by arbitrary ruling or dictatorial power, for if the trouble has arisen through the assumption of authority, or tactless priestcraft, the antidote is worse than the poison. If from loose discipline or lack of diplomacy,—which often results from weakness or disloyalty,—encouragement and teaching along right lines will help conditions. We might easily scout the idea of religious rivalry or interference if we had no Jewish history for reference, and human nature is somewhat the same in every age.

Some congregations would have prospered more if the "adjoining elders" had lived so remote that when they visited them they would have been strangers. But let us feel that such cases are rare and exceptional, and that there are many prosperous churches that owe much to good, fatherly adjoining elders, that can always be depended upon. These are the kind that must help us solve these questions now under consideration.

In both instances it is well for the whole official body to get together and have a heart-to-heart talk about church matters in general, and especially about those things that have occasioned the most discussion among the membership. In some instances it is better for the deacons to have a conference first, especially if the elder or pastor is called in question. When a decision has been reached by them, it should be presented to him for his candid prayerful consideration. If there are other ministers, their counsel should be sought, and if the matter is to go before the church, it should be by the unanimous consent of the official board.

Let us assume that it is regarding either of these cases, and that the church is calling for relief. It is simply a modest request from the officials to have an elder chosen from the outside to preside until the case is disposed of. A further request may originate in this body to have a local committee appointed to take the matter under consideration and report at a future meeting.

Any good, loyal elder will give his consent to such a procedure, and patiently await the action of the church. Should he be obstinate, the way is clearly marked out in the decisions of our District and Annual Meetings. These preliminaries are not clearly set forth in such decisions but may prove helpful. The subject at the top may indicate a thorough acquaintance with such lines of procedure, but such is not the case. Principle and not method is at stake, and criticism is invited.

Dress Committee's Report.

Answer of last Annual Meeting: This Annual Meeting accepts the report of the committee and decides that the questions involved in the question box also the committee's report be recommitted to a committee of five faithful, intelligent, conservative brethren, who are to be instructed to make the whole matter under advisement, and to make a restatement, reducing all the teachings of the Conference on Christian attire to one plain and concise minute, to be reported to next Annual Meeting.

During the time the committee is preparing the report, no phase of the dress question shall be open for discussion in any of our publications; but all suggestions shall be sent to the chairman of the committee; and further, in the meantime, all our ministers, and teachers shall teach earnestly and intelligently the doctrines of plain dressing and plain living, as found in the Scriptures, so that the church may maintain the principle of nonconformity to the world.

We authorize the treasurer of the Annual Meeting to pay the expenses of this committee.

Committee: M. C. Early, John Heckman, Galen B. Royer, C. D. Bonsack, J. W. Lear.

Pursuant to the foregoing instructions "to take the whole matter under advisement and to make a restatement" we proceeded as follows:

I. We examined prayerfully the scriptural grounds of Christian attire, and found that Jesus and the apostles taught honesty and simplicity of life and modesty in dress and manners.

The scriptures bearing on the subject of dress and adornment are of several classes:

First. Jesus condemned anxious thought for raiment (Matt. 6: 25-33; Luke 12: 22-31).

Second. The direct teachings, such as 1 Tim. 2: 9, 10; 1 Peter 3: 3-5.

Third. Teachings on nonconformity to the world in general, and that apply to dress on general principles, such as Rom. 12: 1, 2; 1 Cor. 10: 31; 1 Peter 1: 14, 15; 1 John 2: 15-17.

II. Investigation shows that the early church Fathers and our own church fathers taught strongly and uniformly against pride and superfluity in dress, and constantly in favor of gospel plainness.

III. The Minutes of Conference show that the Church of the Brethren has, throughout her entire history, stood firmly against the fashions of the age, and extravagance in all manner of living, and on the other hand has taught faithfully the principles of simplicity of life and personal appearance. And, furthermore, the Conference has, from time to time, adopted means and methods with the view of maintaining gospel simplicity in dress in the church body.

Now, since the gospel teaches plain and modest dress and since this is taught in the form of an obligation, without rules and methods of application further than to exclude plaiting the hair, the wearing of gold, pearls and costly raiment, and believing that a form that agrees with the spirit of the teaching is helpful in maintaining the principles of plainness and simplicity in dress and adornment in the general church body, "it seemed good to us" to submit the following restatement:

1. That the brethren wear plain clothing. That the coat with the standing collar be worn, especially by the ministers and deacons.

2. That the brethren wear their hair and beard in a plain and sanitary manner. That the mustache alone is forbidden.

3. That the sisters attire themselves in plainly-made garments, free from ornaments and unnecessary appendages. That plain bonnets and hoods be the headdress, and the hair be worn in a becoming Christian manner.

4. That the veil be worn in time of prayer and prophesying (1 Cor. 11: 1-16, R. V.). The plain cap is regarded as meeting the requirements of scriptural teaching on the subject.

5. That gold for ornament, and jewelry of all kinds, shall not be worn.

6. That no brother be installed into office as minister or deacon who will not pledge himself to observe and teach the order of dress.

7. That no brother or sister serve as delegate to District or Annual Meeting, nor be appointed on committees to enforce discipline, who does not observe the order of dress.

8. That it be the duty of the official body of the church to teach faithfully and intelligently the simple, Christian life in dress; and bishops, who are the shepherds of the churches are required to teach and to see that the simple life in general is taught and observed in their respective charges.

9. That those who do not fully conform to the methods herein set forth, but who manifest no inclination to follow the subcoming fashions, and whose life and conduct is becoming a follower of Christ, be dealt with in love and forbearance; and that every effort be made to save all to the church until they see the beauty of sacrificing the fashionable follies of the age for the sake of the Gospel of Christ. But if after every effort has been made, they, in an arbitrary spirit, refuse to conform to said methods, and follow the foolish fashions of the world, they may be dealt with as disorderly members; and in dealing with such cases, both the salvation of souls and the purity of the church should be kept in view.

10. That all are urged and implored, in the bonds of brotherly love and Christian fellowship, to teach and exemplify the order of the church in dress as a suitable expression of "the hidden man of the heart, in the incorruptible apparel of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price."

11. That this report be spread on the Minutes for one year; and that a committee of three who are conservative, familiar with the subject, and used to educational methods, be appointed to conduct a further investigation of the subject of Christian attire and adornment through the Gospel Messenger, or other medium the Committee may determine during the ensuing year.

12. That upon the final adopting of this report it shall supersede all else in the Minutes on the subject of dress.

SOUTHERN TEXAS.

A much needed rain swept over all of Southern Texas, which has started vegetation and made many hearts glad. Cotton is the chief product.

There are many Mennonites in this town, but we can not speak their language. They are of the Catholic faith. There are also some white people of the Catholic faith. They very soldom attend Protestant services, are very radical in their views, and can seldom be reached by the truth or changed from the false teaching they have espoused.

A short time ago my husband received a challenge from a Catholic priest, of Dallas, Texas, for a debate on the following doctrines of the Catholic church: (1) Necessity of Baptism for Salvation; (2) Infant Baptism; (3) Confession; (4) Invocation of Saints; (5) Purgatory; (6) Indulgences; (7) Real Presence of Our Lord in the Lord's Supper; (8) Infallibility of the Church.

The priest did not wait for a reply to his challenge, but came into our midst and gave a lecture on the above subjects in our public school building, where we hold our Sunday-school and preaching services. He lectured each evening during the week. On the following Sunday my husband gave a reply to these lectures to a crowded house. The priest and his members were also present. The Catholic doctrines were so completely refuted, and the priest defeated to such a degree that he left without making any further defense of his doctrine. This was the general sentiment of all Protestants present, and even the school children of Catholic parentage admitted their defeat.

THE ROUND TABLE

Death and Resurrection.

BY J. HENRY BROWER.

One that will allow his mind to linger among the events of the Passion Week, will be loath to make Easter Day other than one of fasting and prayer. Jesus triumphantly enters Jerusalem, and for the first time, in clear-cut, concise terms, he publicly announces his Messiahship. Instead of accepting him as such, the smouldering embers of hatred among his own people grew so intensely severe, that they began to make preparations to put him to death. "He came to his own and his own received him not." What a sad homecoming this was! Think of it! The Heavenly Father's Son, pure, innocent, coming home to die a tortuous death on the ignominious cross, by the hands of his own people.

"The black cloud has a silver lining." We note that about this time the "Greeks" (supposed by some to be proselyte Jews) were seeking him. Christ now realizes that his work is finished among the Jews, and that the time has come when he must be glorified.

Thus he, figuratively, voices a great truth, which, for over nineteen hundred years, has never failed to bring joy and hope to the weary traveler on the turbulent sea of life. "Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die it bringeth forth much fruit." As there is no fruit without death, neither is there a resurrection without death. This has become the foundation of all of our hopes. It is the crowning miracle and Divine seal of all his work. By it the darkness and the sting of death have been forever removed. It is a blossom that promises brighter, better, and more abundant fruitage. Without this hope of a better life, Christianity would be a bleak deception, empty and void.

Go with me into the field or garden, for a moment. Unearthing some of those seeds that you have so cautiously planted, you will find death and resurrection. Go with me to the garner, or to mother's seed bag. There you will find neither death nor resurrection. Christ could not take on the glorified body until the fleshly body die. "For this corruption must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality."

The hoary hair, and the frail body are landmarks that prove to the close or even the casual observer that this life is on the brink of eternity, waiting to dwell in a richer body.

However, in this life we must become dead to some of the former things that were peculiar to our individuality, that we may reach a higher state of development. We must put away childish ways in order to become men and women in the technical sense of the word. We cannot be resurrected into the kingdom of grace without crucifying the old man with his deeds, neither can we reach the top round of the ladder in this Christian life, without daily becoming dead to the rudiments of the world.

This present generation is giving its lives for the future generation. I see fathers and mothers wearing their lives away, atom by atom, for their sons and daughters, that they may more ably cope with life's problems,—be a greater boon to fallen humanity, and achieve greater accomplishments.

The church of today is bestowing her time and best talents upon the lambs of the fold, that they may be equivalent to better work in the various lines of church activities than we.

These life energies that we are bestowing on one another and the lambs of the fold, shall not be lost to our credit. Though much of our energy be exhausted here, yet, in the morning of the first resurrection, we shall hear the welcome voice of the blessed Christ ringing out over the balmy air, with sweetest chords of melody, echoing and reechoing among the angelic hosts: "Come! Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

I see those seeds falling into the earth. Apparently they seem lifeless and insignificant. I see their little bodies mouldering back to mother earth, but that life-germ is sending forth a body of most brilliant foliage. Then I wonder with what kind of bodies we will come forth. The future body will not be, in all respects, identical with the present body. "God giveth to every seed a body of its own" (1 Cor. 15: 38). Yet it shall be organically connected with the present body, and in some respects it will be one of identity, as is manifested in the translations of Enoch, Elijah, and the transfiguration and resurrection of Christ, and the logic of Paul in the fifteenth chapter of First Corinthians. The new body will, in all respects, suit the conditions of the heavenly state, as the earthly body suits the conditions of the earthly state.

It does not seem logical to think of the saints only as being spirits in the resurrected state, as there can be no resurrection without death, and the spirit never dies.

The body will be exempt from all physical discomfort and decay. "They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor the heat." "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things have passed away."

The very thought of "body" carries with it an abiding place for it,—a home. What a glorious homecoming it will be! "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you."

Feeding on Wind.

BY DAVID M. ADAMS.

On one occasion Hosea said, "Ephraim feedeth on wind" (Hosea 12: 1). Ephraim, here, might be understood as representing all Israel. Especially does this seem true when we stop to consider that after the revolt of Jeroboam the tribe of Ephraim became a kingdom, and also that the kingdom of Israel, in due time, embraced little besides that tribe. In other words the history of Ephraim,—after the revolt of that man who became the first king of the divided kingdom,—is the history of the kingdom of Israel.

Now, why did the prophet say that "Ephraim feedeth on the wind"? Because he made unholy alliances, fell into corrupt practices and cherished false hopes. Figuratively speaking he fed himself with vain hopes of human assistance when he was at variance with his Creator. He bolstered up his hopes by making a covenant with Assyria and Egypt, a thing which, to say the least, was unwarranted by his God. He proposed to subsist on that which was contrary to the Divine Will of him who holds the lever that controls the destiny of nations. Error and not truth was the foundation on which he built his hopes for future prosperity.

In the Christian dispensation such a tendency must be strongly guarded against. We must be careful lest we be disposed to feed our souls on wind,—on those things which are not of God but of men. We should watch our spiritual appetites lest we relish a fine moral treatise much better than a solid gospel sermon. We must not feed on "ologies," philosophies and man-made opinions, but on the pure Word of God.

Resurrection.

BY EMMA G. YOUNG.

Easter, the anniversary of our Lord's resurrection from the dead, is one of the greatest festivals of the Christian year. The resurrection is an event significant in itself. Life beyond the grave could have been demonstrated only as it has been, by one well-attested case of rising from the dead. Its significance lies in the fact itself, hence it is that the Gospels dwell with such fullness upon the details, which convinced the disciples that the very body which died upon the cross lived again in tangible reality.

Not such was the significance of the ascension! If so, it would have signified Christ's final departure from the earth, and in that case, how can we explain the "great joy" with which the disciples returned to Jerusalem?

We picture Easter Sunday a bright morning, birds singing, everybody in good spirits and everybody going to church, for even those who usually must be argued or scolded into going will adopt church ways as a matter of course, on this glorious day.

We know that this Easter Day shines on a nobler world than that of a century ago.

Nature and the churches join their voices today in a hymn to immortality. The world is full of the beauty of life. Death seems to be swallowed up in victory, and the very material earth seems immortal. The woods glow with life. The flowers are so bright that they look as if they could never fade.

Christianity pays its visit to the empty tomb as the three Marys did on the first Easter Day and the words of the Risen Lord of Glory tell us, "Because I live, ye shall live also."

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

God's Gifts to Us and Our Gifts to God.

Matt. 10: 8.

For Sunday Evening, April 23, 1911.

I. Earthly Gifts.—(a) "Every herb and tree" (Gen. 1: 29); "Every moving thing shall be meat for you" (9: 3); (b) "It is he that giveth . . . power to get wealth" (Deut. 8: 18); (c) "The first and latter rains" (Deut. 11: 14); (d) "He giveth . . . sleep" (Psa. 127: 2); and "food to all" (Psa. 136: 25).

II. Salvation.—(a) "Gave his . . . Son" (John 3: 16); (b) "Living water" (4: 10); (c) "The grace (favor) of God" (Rom. 5: 15); "The gift of . . . eternal life" (6: 23); (d) "All things" (Rom. 8: 32); (e) "Salvation is the gift of God" (Eph. 2: 8).

III. Christ's Gifts.—(a) "I will give you rest" (Matt. 11: 28); (b) "The keys of the kingdom" (16: 19); (c) "A well of water" (John 4: 14); (d) "Living bread" (6: 51); (e) "Power over the nations" (Rev. 2: 26); (f) "Eternal life" (John 10: 28).

IV. Our Gifts.—(a) "Bring me an offering . . . willingly" (Ex. 25: 2); (b) "Whosoever is of a willing heart, let him bring . . . gold and silver" (Ex. 35: 5); (c) "The silver and the gold are a freewill offering unto the Lord" (Ezra 8: 28); (d) "Honor the Lord with thy substance, and . . . all thine increase" (Prov. 3: 9); (e) "Give to him that asketh of thee" (Matt. 5: 42). "But . . . let not thy left hand know" (6: 3); "Do it with simplicity" (Rom. 12: 8); "They . . . first gave their own selves to the Lord" (2 Cor. 8: 5). The best gift that we can give to God is the gift of ourselves to serve others.

PRAYER MEETING

Money—a Curse or a Blessing.

Luke 12: 13-21; Matt. 6: 19-21.

* For Week Beginning April 23, 1911.

1. The Bible View of Possessions.—The Bible, quite contrary to a prevalent impression, never says anything whatever against the desirability of the mere possession of money. It does point out that the INORDINATE or UNLAWFUL LOVE OF MONEY is a root of all sorts of evil; but it does not condemn either money or the possession of it. In fact, the Bible quite agrees with a sentiment well expressed by Sir Bulwer Lytton when he says, "Never treat money affairs with levity, for money is character." How a man USES money—how he MAKES it, how he SAVES it, how he SPENDS it,—is one of the very best tests of his practical wisdom and soundness of heart. Well may Paul speak so earnestly concerning it (1 Tim. 6: 17-19).

2. Some Things Money Can Not Buy.—(1) Money can not buy A GOOD NAME. That is above price, rather to be chosen than great riches. Each possessor has a right to rejoice in an honorable, clean name. Millions of money look trifling, alongside of character (Prov. 22: 1). (2) Money can not buy A HAPPY HOME. There must be sympathy, trust, a spirit of sacrifice, gentleness, faith, a readiness to do, and to bear. This means love, and that can not be bought with money (1 Cor. 13: 4-7). (3) Money can not buy A THANKFUL HEART. Gifts are good, but it is better to have a heart that recognizes the Giver, and is truly grateful. The best things of earth lose their charms when viewed with a cold and thankless heart. The thankful receiving of favors, great and small, and extracting the honey of enjoyment from them, can not be bought in the wide, wide world (Eph. 5: 20). (4) Money can not buy THE HOPE AND FINAL HAPPINESS OF HEAVEN. Our money will perish with us if we think to purchase either the hope or the final attainment of heaven with gold. Eternal life is a gift (Rom. 6: 23).

HOME AND FAMILY

The Universal Easter.

I made a chapel of my heart,
And there my thoughts on Easter Day,
Gathered a little while to pray,
From all the world apart.

But all the world was singing so,
In vain I kept a silent fast;
For through the open door at last
There entered friend and foe.

And as the dawn on tiptoe stood,
Away went all the dark and doubt—
I did not shut the sunshine out,
And would not, if I could.

For in my sanctuary, I
Found that communion most complete
Where all the world in praise might meet
Beneath the Easter sky.

I made a chapel of my heart;
But Easter's voice was clear and strong,
And mid the universal song
I could not dream apart.

Easter Thoughts.

BY MARY ETTA HOOVER.

Of all the festive seasons that are kept annually by various peoples in various parts of the world, there are two great festivals universally acknowledged by the Christian church,—Christmas and Easter. Both commemorate a birth; Christmas, that of Christ's birth into this world, Easter, that of his birth into a spiritual existence, too wonderful for us wholly to understand. We cannot wholly understand it because it is not given to the finite mind of mortal man to understand the mysteries of the spiritual life to be enjoyed when Christ shall change this mortal body for an immortal existence. But because of the wonderfulness of this spiritual birth the joys of Easter are of a more spiritual nature, thus giving it the greater religious depth of the two festivals.

God implanted a longing in the human soul for immortality; that longing implied a promise; and that promise was fulfilled by Christ's victory over death, so, at this spiritual festive season, so wondrously rich in religious joys, we celebrate the birthday of immortal hope. To us it means a birthday in heaven, because it was the day the plan was completed by which our immortal birth was made possible.

In this world of bereavement, Easter, when rightly understood, becomes the season richest in inspiring thoughts. Here the bitter pang of parting must come to us all,—a pang that would be almost unendurable, were it not for the day which brought life and immortality to light. With the stone that was rolled away from Joseph's tomb, that weight of overwhelming sorrow that comes to the heart when we part with loved ones, was lifted from the hearts which, in all centuries after should mourn the loss of friends. Because of the triumphs of the first Easter morning many dark clouds have been embroidered with gold, and lined with silver. Many tears have glistened with eternal hope because Easter brings us the promise that the parting is but temporary; that the reunion will be eternal. The graves of our loved dead no longer hold naught but gloom, for they are made beautiful, since we sorrow not "as those who have no hope."

But to those who have not known or accepted the fulfilled promise, these joys can not come. To them it is impossible to see the silver lining in the dark clouds of sorrow, for the longing for immortality has not been satisfied within their own souls. Of the sinner the words of Paul, in 1 Cor. 15: 19, "If we have only hoped in Christ in this life, we are of all men most pitiable" may be said to be true, for nothing can possibly give to the human soul the religious joys this spiritual birth holds for those who accept it. And the joy that the soul realizes here is only exceeded by that realized when he changes life for immortality, and comes into a full understanding of this wonderful spiritual birth.

God does not leave us without evidences of his fulfilled promise. Look at nature, and see how it seems to thrill with the world's new hope. Every twig and blossom, and every springing blade of grass tells in one voice,—not audible but nevertheless mighty,—the one story, "There is no death."

Watch meditatively the buds unfolding under the influence of the spring sunshine and listen to God's voice. The first opening bud whispers, "We come forth because he gave us life; we have not been dead, as you supposed. We have only been asleep and I am the first to be awake. Just wait; I am only a sample of the many you will see when summer comes!"

Just as the first buds tell us there will be more, so, says Paul, is the picture of the risen Christ, in his relation to the resurrection of the dead. In 1 Cor. 15: 20, we read, "But now hath Christ been raised from the dead; the first fruits of them that are asleep."

So, why should we not celebrate Easter as the joy-feast of the church, since it touches most closely the hopes and longings of humanity? Let us thank God with full hearts for all that the season means to us! Let us be thankful for the knowledge of his resurrection as a pledge of our immortality; for the hope within us that satisfies our longings; for our faith in a living Christ, who, though once dead, now lives, and will live for evermore.

"I know that my Redeemer liveth,
And on the earth again shall stand;
I know eternal life he giveth,
That grace and power are in his hand.

"I know his promise never faileth,
The word he speaks, it can not die;
Tho' cruel death my flesh assaileth,
Yet I shall see him by and by.

"I know my mansion he prepareth,
That where he is there I may be;
O wondrous thought, for me he careth,
And he at last will come for me."

Jesus in Gethsemane.

BY ELLA M. COTTRELL.

It was near the hour of midnight when Jesus, with his eleven disciples, left Jerusalem and made his way eastward to the Mount of Olives. There, just beyond the vale of the Kidron, among the orchards of fig and olive trees lay the Garden of Gethsemane in solemn quietude. It was here that Jesus had so often retreated from the busy scenes of life to hold communion with his Father, and where this night he had come for prayer.

As he came up Olivet, a deep depression was upon him. At the garden he said to his disciples, "Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder." Prayer was the very atmosphere of Jesus' life. The three chief apostles,—Peter, James and John,—went a little farther, that they might watch with him. The responsive nature of Jesus longed for synpathetic rest in the comradeship of those he most loved. But now, in the extreme anguish of his soul, not even Peter's love, nor James' steadfastness, nor John's truth could still the beatings of his heart. He became before them, oh, so sorrowful, so heavy, so downcast! "My soul is exceedingly sorrowful," he said, "even unto death." "Tarry ye here, and watch with me," and, Luke adds, "Pray that ye enter not into temptation." It was not the prospect of physical suffering that cost our Lord's great agony; it was his soul that was crushed with sorrow.

He withdrew a stone's throw from them, and there, in only a brief space of time, the most awful and overwhelming agony that ever was endured upon this earth, took place. "So when the Divine Man grappled soul to soul with all the forces of sin, there was that night such a shaking and upheaval of the spiritual world as man cannot picture." What it must have been, we can not comprehend, but we know that it seemed unbearable to Christ.

Perhaps the tender new leaves of the olives trembled over him; and as he prostrated himself there, in that mantle of darkness, his words rang out, "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me; nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt." Great billows of emotion broke over him. Thrice did our Savior crave even the weakest expression of human love, and tremblingly would he return to the three disciples, only to find them sleeping. They, too, had gone through a strain of anxiety, but yet, in that hour of impending danger, they had fallen asleep! How his heart yearned for sympathy as he cried in the bitterness of spirit, "What, could ye not watch with me one hour?" Even Peter, who had so recently declared himself ready to die for his Master, was also caught napping. Could it be possible that the supernatural forces of evil had cast them asleep! Even their slumber added to the darkness of that night. But his compassion overcame even his longing for a word of comfort. "The spirit, indeed, is willing," said the loving, suffering Master, "but the flesh is weak."

A second time did he turn to that retreat under the olives. No longer did he pray to have the cup removed from him, but now his prayer was, "O my Father, if this cup may not pass from me except I drink it, thy will be done." What must it have been for Jesus, that night, to answer for all our sins! All the meanness, vice, lies, cruelties and hypocrisies of the whole world were heaped upon him. All this sin to Christ was a thing so black, so vile, so appalling, that his great frame labored under the weight of it. Had not the prophet said, over seven hundred years before, "The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all," and that "with his stripes we are healed"? But he did not turn his griefs away. "Watch him through that bitter hour; Oh, the pangs his soul sustained!" Luke gives us yet another picture of his sorrow: "And being in an agony he prayed more earnestly: and his sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling to the ground." The force of his emotions beat upon his brain. "His visage was so marred more than any man, and his form more than the sons of men."

But see, the man of sorrows was not forsaken by his God! How healing was the touch of that angel, as it imparted new endurance to that worn body! So intense was the suffering in the garden, that night, that Jesus became haggard under the strain, but the angel's touch sweetly soothed the Savior's woes. It was an earnest that his sacrifice was acceptable with the Father, which, at least, brought a cessation of the terrible storm of soul. "Surely he hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows." How beautiful that prayer of Gethsemane—how self-sacrificing!

Once more did the sorrow-worn Savior return to the disciples, only to find that they had again wrestled alone while his disciples slept. "Even the disciple that he loved heeds not the Master's grief and tears." "Sleep on now," he said to them, "and take your rest: behold the hour is at hand, and the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners." And while he was yet speaking did Judas advance as though to warn his Master. "Hail, Master!" was his greeting; then he kissed him repeatedly, thus piling one deceit upon another. Behind him was a strong force of Roman soldiers who, with their torches and swords were ready to take Jesus. It was a large force to seize a handful of men. They carried with them lanterns lest Jesus should seek refuge in the shadows of the garden. But think of the Sinless One being betrayed by one who should have been his friend! What calmness Jesus manifested when he said, "Judas, betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss?" Confused, yet defiant, Judas stepped back to the band, and, as John tells us, there watched the arrest.

Calmly and self-possessed did Jesus step forth to meet the soldiers. Twice did he ask them, "Whom seek ye?" So fearless was he that some of the soldiers became afraid. And twice came the answer, "Jesus of Nazareth." But they did not take him then. Once more did Jesus say, "I am he. If therefore ye seek me, let these go their way." Loving Master! Still thinking of the welfare of his disciples.

The soldiers then came up to seize him, whereupon Peter impulsively, desperately, made an effort to defend his Master by striking Malchus with his sword. But Jesus rebuked him, and even in that dark hour did he heal that wounded enemy! Anything the disciples might have done would have availed nothing then, for the hour of opportunity was forever gone. The Son of God was already submitted into the hands of the enemy, to purchase our pardon with his own blood on Calvary's rugged cross!

☞ All business and communications intended for the paper should be addressed to the BRETHREN PUBLISHING HOUSE, ELGIN, ILL., and not to any individual connected with it.

The new church at Bloom, Kans., was dedicated April 2.

Bro. J. G. Royer gave us a pleasant call. He seems to be in unusually good health.

Bro. Luther Bedel, of Indiana, changes his address from Nebraska to Holton, R. D. 2.

Bro. C. D. Hylton, of Troutville, Va., has located at Bloom, Kans., where he may now be addressed.

We have the program for the Annual Meeting, and will publish the same in the course of a week or two.

Bro. William Lampin conducted a very fruitful revival at Glendora, Cal. There were twenty-seven conversions.

The revival services at Ft. Wayne, Ind., conducted by Bro. C. S. Garber, closed with fourteen applicants for membership.

The members composing the Pleasant Valley church, Ind., have decided to build a house of worship in Middlebury.

Bro. C. W. Guthrie, after spending the winter in Chicago, has gone to Terra Alta, W. Va., where he may now be addressed.

Bro. H. B. Brumbaugh, after spending a few months at St. Petersburg, Fla., has returned to his home at Huntingdon, Pa.

The good revival at Lancaster, Pa., closed with twenty-four applicants for membership. Bro. Isaac Frantz conducted the services.

The District Missionary Meeting of Northwestern Ohio, to be held in the Silver Creek church, near Pioneer, is announced for April 19.

In this issue our correspondents are saying some splendid things about Easter. In fact, they are practically conducting that department.

Bro. W. R. Miller and wife visited Elgin on Saturday of last week. For the present they may be addressed at Nappanee, Ind., Box 564.

Bro. Theodore B. Price, of Unionville, Iowa, changes his place of residence to Bowdon, N. Dak., and should be addressed accordingly.

During a series of meetings in the Pittsburg church, Ohio, conducted by Bro. David Hollinger, thirteen made the good confession and entered the fold.

Bro. D. M. Click, who is yet engaged in school work in Chicago, spent several hours in Elgin, and listened to a part of the deliberations of the Mission Board.

The Dress Committee, composed of Brethren H. C. Early, Chas. D. Bonsack, J. W. Lear, John Heckman and Galen B. Royer, spent a day and a half on their report, which will be found on page 229, this issue.

The House is expecting to have the new song book ready for use at the coming Annual Meeting, but does not care to book orders until the price can be announced.

The Mission Board recommends to the St. Joseph Conference a number of missionaries for approval, some for India and China, and others for France and Sweden.

Bro. Quincy A. Holsopple is again in the Publishing House, and will probably remain with us during the summer. He is educating himself with a view of work on some mission field.

Bro. James M. Moore, of Bethany Bible School, called at the Messenger sanctum on Monday of this week. He spent last Sunday with the Brethren at Batavia, of which congregation he is the elder in charge.

Bro. Geo. W. Hilton visited Elgin last week and conferred with the General Mission Board. He reports his health greatly improved, and it has been arranged for him to return to his mission work in China the coming fall.

It is said that while the recent revival work was going on in Lancaster, Pa., five members of the church called for the elders and were anointed. Not a few of our people are doing some serious thinking about the anointing service.

In cleaning up the Messenger mailing list (a thing that must be done once each year), the names of a few paid-up subscribers may have been removed by mistake. We shall be pleased to correct any mistakes of the kind to which our attention may be called.

Bro. Chas. M. Yearout, of Morrill, Kans., writes us that he did not enjoy good health during the winter, but is now improving. He lately held a series of meetings at Parkersburg, Ill., and is in a position to do some evangelistic work between this and the Annual Meeting.

Bro. Francis F. Durr, of Masontown, Pa., is thinking of changing his place of residence, and would be pleased to locate where his service in the ministry may be needed. He has a wife and four children, all members, save the youngest one, who is too young to apply for membership.

Bro. J. M. Blough, of India, delivered a good address at Elgin on Wednesday evening of last week, and then spent several hours with the Mission Board the next day. We certainly enjoyed his short visit with us, and learn with pleasure that he is to return to Elgin again in the course of a week or ten days.

Bro. Samuel Bowser and wife, of Hancock, Minn., were recently callers at the House. They were on their way to Pennsylvania, where they may remain until near the time of the Annual Meeting. Bro. Bowser will represent Northern Iowa, Southern Minnesota and South Dakota on the Standing Committee.

Bro. J. F. Appleman, of Plymouth, Ind., has been employed as a traveling Secretary for the General Mission Board, and as soon as arrangements can be made to do so, will enter upon his work. He is not only a good business man, but he is a good preacher, and our people in various parts of the Brotherhood will be glad to have him call on them.

When last heard from, March 26, Bro. A. C. Wieand and wife and Bro. J. F. Souders were at Port Said, Egypt. From there they went to Palestine for a short visit, with the intention of sailing from Beirut April 1 for home. Bro. Wieand and wife are to reach Chicago the last week in this month, and may be addressed at 3435 West Van Buren Street.

The report of the Dress Committee, published elsewhere, will be read with unusual interest. We are not supposed to comment on the merits of the report, for that must be left to the open Conference, but it does occur to us that the recommendation to spread the paper on the Minutes one year before acting on it, is worthy of more than a passing consideration.

The dedication of the Sunday-school Extension building in Chicago occurred last Sunday. The services, conducted by Bro. I. H. Trout, were well attended. A love feast was held at the Hastings Street church on the evening before. This was also well attended.

Some one wishes to know if any of our people, while traveling in the vicinity of the Dead Sea, ever saw the pillar of salt, representing Lot's wife. We answer by saying that they never saw the pillar, for the reason that it does not exist, it having long since disappeared.

Bro. John E. Metzger, our field agent, writes us from Rossville, Ind., saying that he will remain at home a few days; then he enters the Southern District of Indiana, where he is to work until time to start to the Annual Meeting. He expects to attend the Conference and will, of course, do what he can to help accommodate our patrons. He further says that at the recent election his county went dry. He is pleased to live in a county that is anti-saloon.

We are requested to call attention as to how those, attending the Annual Conference from Southern California, may avail themselves of the very low rates between Los Angeles and St. Joseph. From the former place to the latter a round-trip ticket may be purchased for $60, and one from St. Joseph to Los Angeles and return for $50. As the distance between the two places is over 2,000 miles, or over 4,000 miles both ways, it will be seen that the rate is less than one and a half cents a mile.

April 1, each year, we clean up the Messenger list, and can then tell, for a certainty, just how the subscription list stands. This having been done for this year, we are now glad to state to our patrons that we have 3,000 more subscribers than we had one year ago. This means a fine growth for the Messenger and that the interest taken in our work is decidedly encouraging. Considering the membership of the church it represents, there is probably not a paper in America having a larger circulation.

The General Mission Board met on Thursday of last week with all the members present, viz., Brethren H. C. Early, L. W. Teeter, Chas. D. Bonsack, J. J. Yoder, Galen B. Royer, and Bro. D. L. Miller presiding. Much business was disposed of in a morning, afternoon and evening session. We are not naming in detail the business transacted, as we sometimes do, but we are incidentally referring to parts of it in a number of the editorial items found on these pages. The next meeting of the Board will be held at the St. Joseph Conference.

The Meyersdale, Pa., Sunday-school, with an enrollment of 425, is an example of what may be accomplished by a well-organized effort. Besides developing the usual departments of the school, special attention is given to the adult Bible classes, of which there are two. One of them, in charge of Bro. W. A. Shoemaker,—at one time a valued employé of this office,—has sixty members, and is doing excellent work. And what is being done at Meyersdale, along this line of work, can be done at scores of other places with equal success, if the proper effort is made.

Bro. A. C. Daggett, of Covert, Kans., representing Northwestern Kansas and Northwestern Colorado, appeared before the General Mission Board in behalf of industrial work among the colored people of Denver, Colo. The purpose is to purchase a body of land within reasonable distance of the city, erect suitable buildings, and so conduct industrial work among the colored orphans as to make the institution self-supporting, and also make it a training institution along industrial, moral and religious lines. The trustees were granted permission to canvass the Brotherhood for the amount of $15,000, with the understanding that if the enterprise does not materialize, or should not succeed, the money collected will revert to the General Mission Board. All money collected must also pass through the hands of the Secretary and Treasurer of the General Board.

Bro. Paul Mohler, of Chicago, called at Elgin last week and spent several hours with the Mission Board. He is making special preparation for work in one of the foreign fields.

Bro. C. B. Rowe, of Dallas Center, Iowa, wishes us to say that the Trustees of the Old Folks' Home, of that State, will be in need of a steward for the Home, beginning with Sept. 1, and would be pleased to confer with a brother and sister having a small family. The Home is located on a farm that is to be run in connection with the institution.

Geo. W. W. Scothern, Mount Jackson, Va., sends us three very interesting post cards. One of them shows the old Flat Rock church, Va., erected in 1841, and another the new church built in 1907. A third picture shows the large dwelling house in which the Annual Meeting of 1794 was held. To us these are pictures full of historical interest.

Bro. H. W. Strickler, of Loraine, Ill., writes us that on the 24th of this month he will round out the seventy-fifth year of his earthly sojourn, and that on June 6, should he and his wife live to that time, they will be able to celebrate the fifty-fifth anniversary of their married life. Bro. Strickler's health is fairly good for a man of his age, but he finds it necessary to remain much at home.

At the coming Annual Meeting the General Mission Board will present the following petition for consideration:

Petition from the General Mission Board.

To Conference of 1911:—

In carrying forward our missionary work, we are finding difficulty to secure sufficient young ministers to meet our needs, and we now ask you to grant us the privilege to recommend consecrated young lay-brethren, if necessary, for the foreign mission field.

Answer.—Approved.

An aged reader, past seventy, tells us that on account of the distance to church, and his age, his family is not permitted to attend the Brethren services very often, but each evening they have a season of worship in their own house, and on such occasions the Conference Song Booklet is used. Each year he sends for a half dozen copies, and since they are used every evening, one set is practically worn out by the time another booklet is published. This is certainly a most appropriate way of employing the Conference Song Booklet. We wonder how many of our readers have thought of this way of using the song booklets they purchase at the Annual Meeting.

Some of our patrons are anxious to secure the addresses of John D. Rockefeller, Andrew Carnegie, and a few other very rich people, with a view of soliciting them for some financial help. It may be well for the public to understand that these rich people probably do not see more than one letter out of five hundred coming to their address. Their mail is looked after by a confidential secretary and his assistants, who pay little attention to the thousands of calls for money. A few of the letters of importance are referred to the rich magnates, and the rest are disposed of by the secretaries. People in the ordinary walks of life can rest assured that their letters, when addressed to Rockefeller or Carnegie, will never be seen by the parties for whom they are intended.

The Louisville Herald, Ohio, has this to say of Bro. John F. Kahler, who is moving his family to Alliance, and will serve in the ministry of the Reading church, south of the city:

Rev. John F. Kahler will preach his farewell sermon as one of the pastors of the Church of the Brethren at Center next Sunday morning. Rev. Kahler is one of the oldest active ministers in this section. He moved into Nimishillen township twenty-nine years ago this spring and labored in the ministry for twenty-seven years in the Church of the Brethren. During his ministry here Rev. Kahler made many friends. He is an active, hard-working man and his efforts bore fruit. Many people were brought into the church during his ministry and he was frequently called upon to officiate at wedding and funeral services. Rev. Kahler is recognized as a strong preacher among church men. His discourses are carefully worked out and he is a pleasing speaker.

It would seem that there might be a good opening at Enid, Okla., to start a mission. Mr. V. K. Meek, 903 North Grand Avenue, writes us that he is a regular reader of the Messenger, and is greatly impressed with the way we worship God and interpret the Scriptures. Though not a member of the church, he would be pleased to have one of our ministers visit his city and preach the whole Gospel to the people. His wife is a sincere member, but as for himself he has never even heard the Brethren preach. We are saying this much, hoping that it may open up the way for establishing another church in Oklahoma.

Railroad Rates to Annual Meeting.

The following letter from Mr. J. E. Hannegan is given, showing rates to Annual Meeting from territory of the Southwestern Passenger Association:

For your information I beg to state that interested lines in the State of Missouri, Kansas and Arkansas, under the jurisdiction of this bureau, have individually authorized an open rate of two cents per mile for the round trip to St. Joseph and return, selling May 30, June 5, inclusive, with final return limit to reach original starting point prior to midnight of June 30, 1911.

I trust that this will be entirely satisfactory to you.

Respectfully,

J. E. Hannegan, Chairman.

The rate of $50 for round-trip tickets from California will in all probability be authorized by the authorities. Other information will be given as soon as received. D. L. M.

On the Higher Plane.

It is encouraging to learn of the work of evangelists, who, instead of employing the usual sensational revival tricks, conduct their meetings on the higher Christian plane. Of late we have several letters referring to this class of revival efforts. We are told of one minister, who gained the respect of the whole town by preaching pure, well-prepared gospel sermons for three weeks. Those of other persuasions may not have accepted all that the minister said, but they respected him for his candor, ability and Christian conduct. He told no deathbed stories, related no funny incidents, and resorted to no tricks. With him the preaching of the Gospel was a serious matter, and men and women converted regarded their church relation as still more serious. The people went from his meetings, evening after evening, feeling that they had been made only the better because of what they had seen and heard. Under his solid Gospel preaching a number were not only convicted, but they were converted. They were not coaxed and pulled into the church, but the promises and the threatenings of the Gospel were presented to them so forcibly and so clearly that they felt constrained to act. With them it was a full and complete surrender. We need more of this kind of work all over the Brotherhood. Then there will be less backsliding, and far less half-hearted Christians.

Easter.

In all Christian lands Easter is the greatest of all days. Representing, as it does, the resurrection of the Master from the dead, it stands for more than any other day in the Christian calendar, and as long as the religion of Jesus shall continue on the earth, it will be looked upon as the queen of days. It not only stands for the resurrection, but it stands for salvation, redemption and the Divinity of Christ. From the New Testament we learn for a certainty that on Sunday morning, the first day of the week, Jesus arose from the dead, thus forever settling the question of his Divinity, for only a Divine person, after being dead for some days, could come alive from the tomb. The mere fact that he did what is thus credited to him, places the question of his Divinity beyond the realm of controversy. We can truly say, then, that he was the Christ, the Son of God, and that all he said concerning himself, the Father, and the religious principles he taught, is true, and should be accepted by all people.

But are we thoroughly convinced that Jesus arose from the dead, and that he is the Son of God? Do we, by the lives we live, proclaim this belief to those around us? We keep the festival. We may seem to make more of it than any other day; but, candidly, do we enter into the spirit of the occasion as we should? Possibly we can not grasp the real situation. We can not comprehend what the resurrection, in its broadest sense, means. We may, by the eye of faith, look upon the wonderful scene and behold the marvelous occurrence, but the far-reaching results are beyond our finite comprehension. It might be well if, on the present occasion, we would pause to take a careful survey of what the resurrection has accomplished for us and for those who have gone before. It has made salvation possible, and clearly shows the finger of God in the great plan of human redemption. It has made possible regeneration, justification and sanctification. It has opened up the true and living way that leads up to everything that is pure, elevating and ennobling. Without the resurrection we would still be in darkness, with the way to eternal life forever closed. Surely, the resurrection means much, and for all this and much more does Easter stand.

The Preacher Land Agent.

For years our people have recognized the fact that much evil was being done by ministers of the church acting as land agents. But, on the other hand, some good was done; for some of these ministers were instrumental in founding churches where we might otherwise never have had them. There was the difficulty—to decide whether gain or loss was greater; and so the condition has been allowed to continue until the present time. The conviction seems to be growing that the matter has become worse instead of better as the years passed.

This question is to come before our Conference this year, and it is to be hoped that between now and then it will be prayerfully considered by the church at large. Individual supplication for guidance, especially on the part of those who will have the voting to do, will go far toward leading the church in the right way. Sometimes we become prejudiced; we form our own ideas as to how things ought to be; we do not consider as we should. These things are bad when we have to solve an important problem; and they keep us from reaching a right conclusion. Most questions have two sides; and if we refuse to look at both of them we may decide against the truth, and retard the progress of the cause we profess to love above all things else.

Yet we dare not always halt between two opinions. Life is the time for decision, for action, for doing with our might the things given us to do. There are—and probably will be to the end of time—land agents in most communities. They have a place to fill. But our problem is with the new sections, where population is small, where a few men have gotten control of large tracts of land and are trying to sell it at a profit in the shortest possible time. Now how far may a minister of the church go in helping to do this? There are those who think he should keep entirely out of it, and there are others who seem to think that he can go into it all over.

The business, of itself, is not bad. But unscrupulous men have brought it into disrepute by misrepresentations. Just there is the rub. Can, or should, a minister engage in a business of this kind? Can he lift it up, or will it pull him down? Will he do more, or less, for the cause of his Master? That is the question which he should decide for himself, without it becoming necessary for the church to make a ruling on the subject. But since he seems to have decided it in the wrong way, some Districts have decided that it should go up for discussion and settlement.

It seems to us that a man cannot be a faithful minister and a land agent at the same time; and it doesn't seem just the thing for a man to go into a community to preach and sell land. If he tries to carry on both lines of work, the land is almost sure to get the better of the preaching. Ministers—and not ours alone—have been too much used along this line. Our conviction is that they will be better men and will have a better influence if they keep out of this kind of business. We know some who have lost practically all their influence for good in a locality by allowing themselves to be used as agents. What men say in their advertising circulars does not always hold good; and the man who has helped another to make a wrong move is sure to get the blame, no matter what his position or how sure he was that he was doing it for the best.

We would not make the minister alone refrain from doubtful occupations. The member of influence or position—and all are such to a greater or less degree—should have the same rule, in this matter, as the minister. The writing of letters favoring land schemes is out of place, and should not be engaged in.

We may not all see alike in this. We do not see it as we did a few years ago. But thought, a looking at the question from all sides, and an earnest desire to do only what is right and for the best, will go far toward making us see alike. We need to lay aside prejudice and get down to hard facts; for facts are the only thing that will count in the end. The truth, not men's conception of the truth, will be the final test. May we ever be led in the ways of truth. G. M.

Some Disappointed People.

Many sad stories come to our desk regarding the experiences of people who sold their little homes, and, in response to glowing advertisements, invested in land they knew little or nothing about. While hundreds have done well by disposing of their small holdings, and invested where they could secure cheaper land, still there are those who made a great mistake in the change of location and lost everything they had. It is sad to read some of these stories. It would be well if some people would learn to leave well enough alone and not make ventures unless they are sure of bettering their condition. Then we would advise everybody to take a careful look at any country, and make a thorough investigation before purchasing property. This would be safe, and then it is fair. It gives the purchaser as well as the seller a fair chance. We have too many people who are carried away by a glowing description of this, that or the other section that is being opened up to settlers, and they invest before making a careful, personal examination, and after it is too late find out their mistake. It is just as honest to sell land as it is to sell wheat and corn, if it is done in an honorable way, but since there has been more or less scheming in the sale of lands, it is wise for each purchaser to be sure of what he is doing before tying himself up. The honest real estate dealer is always glad to have would-be purchasers examine any property he may have for sale. This is not generally true of land schemers. They rush sales, caring little whether they do a strictly honest business or not.

Annual Meeting Queries.

The following papers, from Southern California and Arizona, are intended for the Annual Conference:

1. We, the South Los Angeles church, ask Annual Meeting, through District Meeting, whether a committee, sent from Annual Meeting to a local church, has the right to urge all members from adjoining churches that are interested, to vote on their decision, and then coerce them to submit to their decision, under penalty of being expelled if they refuse to submit?—Passed to Annual Meeting.

2. As there exists a difference of opinion as to whether the Annual Meeting has granted churches the privilege of electing and properly supporting pastors, so that they may give their entire time "to prayer and the ministry of the word," and as it is desirable that we have a decision on which there can be no misunderstanding, so as to avoid trouble and the feeling that those who desire to elect a pastor are disregarding and disrespecting our Annual Meeting decisions,—we, the Covina Church of the Brethren, petition Annual Meeting through District Meeting to grant churches the privilege of so setting apart ministers to give their entire time to prayer and the ministry of the Word (see Acts 6: 4 and 13: 2), giving such ministers a proper support (see 1 Cor. 9: 2-14; Matt. 10: 10; Luke 10: 7; Phil. 4: 15-17; 1 Peter 5: 2; Acts 6: 2-4) during the time for which they have been chosen, so that they may effectually accomplish the work for which they have been set apart.—Sent to Annual Meeting.

3. The Tropico church asks District Meeting of Southern California and Arizona to request the Annual Meeting of 1911 to decide whether the advertisement of "Rally Day Cards, Flags and Buttons," in the September number of the Brethren's Teachers', Monthly for 1910, is in harmony with 1 Cor. 10: 31; Col. 3: 17, and parallel scriptures. If not in harmony with said scriptures, will the Annual Meeting kindly and lovingly admonish the business management of the Publishing House to exercise more care in the admission of the character of the advertisements into the church's publications?—Passed to Annual Meeting.

4. We, the Lordsburg church, hereby ask District Meeting to petition Annual Meeting that the Annual Meeting of 1912 be held on the Pacific Coast.—Petition granted and sent to Annual Meeting.

In the Genial Clime.

We have an interesting communication from an earnest brother who has purchased land in a genial climate where snow and frost are seldom seen. There he purposes to establish a pleasant home for his Christian family, and will also do what he can to establish a Church of the Brethren. He has the Messenger sent to a number of his neighbors, and is distributing tracts in his community. A few members have settled in his locality and he is looking for others. On account of the ideal winters, thousands of people from the North go to that part of the United States to while away the winter months. So far as the climate is concerned, a more charming region can hardly be found on the Western Continent. Not a few of our well-to-do members, in order to escape the blizzards of the North, are spending some of the winter months in this ideal climate. By most people they are favorably known and are welcomed. But there is one thing that puzzles our correspondent. He wonders why it is that brethren, and even ministers, will have one cut of coat for home use, where they are known, and another for the land of perpetual summer. Then he wonders why preachers will spend months in his State and not preach even one sermon. He also wonders why members should be so thoroughly interested in church work in their own congregations, and then show such an indifference for the cause of the Master while sojourning in the land of sunshine and flowers. Is it possible for one to become so charmed by the gentle breeze and the fragrance of the evergreen vegetation that he loses, for the time being, all interest in the church of which he poses as an active and faithful member? Can one blame our brother, and the rest of the members of his State, for being just a little puzzled?

Encourage the Home Minister.

An earnest and a well-informed minister calls attention to what only too frequently happens in some of our congregations. The home ministers are earnest, hard-working men, and do the preaching for the congregation while supporting themselves, and helping to pay the church expenses besides. In fact, they may have helped build up the congregation almost from the start. Yet they receive little encouragement, and especially not of the financial kind. But along comes a preacher, who delivers a few well-prepared and interesting addresses. On every hand he receives congratulations and encouragement, and when he leaves is the happy recipient of a generous offering, made by a number of appreciative members. This is certainly a nice way to treat a visiting minister, but why not also show some appreciation for the untiring efforts of the home ministers who have done so much for the church? Why not have some sort of encouragement for them? Possibly it might be helpful if some of them,—those in limited circumstances,—could now and then share in a generous offering. True, some of the sermons they preach may not be very enticing, but, considering the little substantial encouragement they receive, it is often a wonder that they can preach as well as they do. If our members want better sermons they should make more helpful members of themselves. They must not expect the preacher to do it all.

The Basis of Union.

If the different denominations of Christendom should ever unite and become one great body—and they certainly should—they must unite on the New Testament, and recognize that as their sole rule of faith and practice. There is no such a thing as uniting on some common basis of union, devised and arranged by representatives from the various churches. All denominations must recognize one reliable and undenominational standard, and must adjust themselves to this standard. By all conforming to this same standard, they will become sufficiently alike to be recognized as one, both in faith and practice. This standard is the New Testament—the only standard that will stand the test of the final judgment. On all points it teaches but the one thing, and all those who rightly understand these teachings are sure to understand them alike. If the great convention, called in the interest of Christian union, would insist on recognizing the New Testament as the only basis of union, there would be some hope of a permanent union,—a union that would last, and would certainly have the approval of heaven. This is the kind of a union movement that we favor. It is a union that takes in the whole Gospel, and not simply a small part of it.

The Seventh Day German Baptists.

We have this from a correspondent: "Webster's International Dictionary says: 'The Dunkers are divided into four classes or branches, the fourth branch of which was the Seventh Day German Baptists, founded in 1728, who observe the seventh day as the Sabbath and live a communal and ascetic life.' Is this true? If it is, are they the same as the Ephrata division?" The Seventh Day German Baptists, mentioned above, settled at Ephrata, Pa., where they succeeded in establishing quite a community. For a time the movement flourished, but internal dissensions arose and the society dwindled until it numbers probably not more than 100 communicants. The large buildings, erected for the accomodation of the members, their mills, and their house of worship, are all in a dilapidated state. There is quite a history connected with the movement, and those wishing to read up fully on the history of the society are referred to Brumbaugh's "History of the Brethren," and Falkenstein's "History of the German Baptists." Flory's "Literary Activity of the Brethren" also contains considerable information on the subject.

Some Weeping and Wailing.

It is said that in Lawrence County, Pa., there is weeping, wailing and gnashing of teeth among the saloonkeepers, and a corresponding amount of joy in the ranks of those who have been praying and working in the interest of temperance. Judge Porter, by a wise ruling, has placed every saloon, liquor hotel, wholesale liquor house and brewery in the county under ban. While it is known that the heart of the judge was with the temperance workers, no one expected such a clean sweep. Well, the judge was elected with the understanding that he would do what he could to make Lawrence a white county, and when the proper time came the people, who are in favor of decency and good government, almost snowed him under with their protests against granting liquor licenses, and as he was disposed to protect the interest of the masses, he had little trouble in deciding what course to pursue. We need more judges like Judge Porter.

Whole Gospel Missions.

All of our churches ought to be known as whole gospel missions,—the places where the whole Gospel is preached by a people who claim to love God and keep his commandments. The apostolic church was a whole gospel church, for the preachers sent forth by this church did not shun to declare the whole counsel of God. Jesus was the Founder of the whole gospel church. When he sent forth his apostles to disciple all nations, he told them to teach the people to observe all things whatsoever he had commanded them. Then, be it known unto all our patrons that the Messenger is a whole gospel paper, for it is "set for the defense of the Gospel," and aims to adhere strictly to the form of doctrine once delivered unto the saints. Like the saints, driven by persecution from Jerusalem, it goes everywhere preaching the Word.

COLORADO CITY MISSION.

We met in council March 18, with our elder, Bro. Dan Crist, of Quinter, Kans., presiding. Much important business was transacted. A building committee was elected, composed of Brethren Root, Hoover and Ulrich. This church building is going to mean much to us. Our congregation has been increasing, and we will be thankful when we can have the privilege of worshiping in a house of our own. We are certain of having still better congregations.

A young man, who came here last fall for his health, was baptized a week ago, and anointed the following Thursday. A room on the ground floor has been secured for a mission at 420, and here a series of meetings is to be held by our pastor, L. H. Root, to begin about May 1. We are praying that many will be brought to a knowledge of the truth. Bro. L. H. Root was chosen as delegate to Annual Conference. Minnie A. Johnson.

821 N. Weber St., Colorado Springs, March 28.

MONROE CHURCH, IOWA.

We have just returned from a three weeks' trip to Albia. During that time we preached nine sermons. This seems to be a very promising field, largely because of the earnest labors of Brother and Sister Samuel Miller. Sister Miller is a tireless worker—always at it wherever opportunity presents itself. The second time I went there, March 12, I held four meetings, which resulted in three applicants for baptism.

March 24 I returned again and gave them four more meetings, with three applicants for membership. The last night of the meetings a scene occurred as is seldom witnessed. A young girl desired to come to the church. Her parents declared that if she united with the church they would turn her clothing. When the invitation was given she went to her parents crying, begging them to let her come; but all that she and her friends could do, they would not relent. It was one of the saddest scenes that I have ever witnessed. There are others who are far from the kingdom. All that is needed is for a good, energetic man to go there and devote all of his time to the work, and success will be sure to crown his labors.

During the time we were there we had to hold our meetings in private houses. Bro. Frank Roberts, with five members of his family, is moving there. When those six applicants are baptized, they will have seventeen members, with Bro. Roberts' family. Bro. Roberts will do the preaching for them. Their greatest need now is a good churchhouse. We trust the Lord may direct some way whereby they may attain unto this end.

Udell, Iowa, March 29. Abraham Wolf.

HARRISBURG CHURCH, PA.

We met in council March 24. Our elder, Bro. S. R. Zug, officiated, assisted by Brethren Ed. Martin, J. H. Longenecker and G. N. Falkenstein. The work was disposed of as rapidly as possible, but it was found necessary to call a special council April 5, to conclude the unfinished business. A number of letters were granted, among them being that of Bro. A. L. B. Martin and wife. Bro. Martin and family will change their field of labor to Long Beach, Cal.

Bro. Zug requested to be relieved of the eldership, on account of his advanced age. His request was granted upon condition that he be retained as advisory elder. Bro. J. H. Longanecker was chosen to serve as elder for one year.

Resolutions of regret were unanimously passed, relative to Bro. Martin's and Eld. Zug's resignations. We all will greatly feel the vacancy caused by the removal of Bro. Martin and family. We wish God's blessings to accompany them and to sustain us.

March 25 we held our monthly Sunday-school teachers' meeting. On account of Bro. Martin's resignation as superintendent, a number of changes in the officers and teachers became necessary. The writer was appointed to fill the unexpired term of the superintendent.

DEATH OF BRO. A. L. CLAIR.

Bro. Aaron L. Clair, son of Preston and Mary G. Clair, was born on a farm near Lena, Ill., July 25, 1866, and died in the Marshfield, Wisconsin, Hospital March 23, 1911, aged forty-four years, seven months and twenty-eight days.

As a boy and young man he grew up on his father's farm and attended the district school near by. At the age of twenty-three he entered Mount Morris College and graduated from the Commercial Department in June, 1890. It was in the spring of this year that he gave his heart to the Lord and his hand to the Church of the Brethren at Mount Morris. In the fall of the same year he accepted a position in a commercial college at Maryville, Mo., where he remained to the close of 1892.

June 16, 1892, he was married to Miss Elizabeth R. Albright, who had also been a student at Mount Morris College, and in September both returned to the college to continue their studies. In 1893 he became assistant principal of the Commercial Department of Mount Morris College. In 1895 he was chosen Principal of the department and Business Manager of the College, in which position he served with great credit nine years.

In June, 1904, Bro. Clair retired from active school work, and in 1906 he removed his family to Willard, Wis. Here he was busily engaged, during the last five years, in making a home for himself and family, and in promoting the interests of the new settlement of which he was the pioneer.

On Thursday morning, March 23, 1911, he met with the fatal accident that in twelve short hours ended his busy and useful life. His, seemingly, untimely death was a most distressing shock to his family and his numerous friends. While oiling some of the machinery of the sawmill in which he was interested, his right arm came in contact with the saw and was so badly cut and bruised that amputation was necessary, but, unable to rally from the shock, he died a few hours after the operation.

As already stated, Bro. Clair, at the time of his conversion, joined in fellowship with the church at Mount Morris. Ten years later the same congregation called him to the ministry. He was faithful to the call, and rendered acceptable service as a minister, but his most forceful ministry was rendered by his daily, exemplary life. His everyday Christian life was a sermon to all who came in contact with him,—a sermon over twenty years long.

Brother and Sister Clair were blessed with seven children, and youngest but ten days old at the time of his death. A little son died while the family lived at Mount Morris. The other six are with the sorrow-stricken mother in the home at Willard.

Such is the brief history of our beloved departed brother—a faithful husband, a devoted father, a genial neighbor, an honest and trustworthy citizen—a faithful Christian!

THE NINTH DISTRICT MEETING OF THE FIRST DISTRICT OF INDIA.

This meeting, with the Sunday-school Meeting and other gatherings, was held in the Vali congregation, Feb. 28 to March 2, inclusive.

On the evening of Feb. 27, Eld. W. B. Stover preached a most inspiring sermon from the text, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us." He showed us how the Lord has done this, how he is continuing to do this and how he will do this in the future; how we have opportunities, resources and all things needful to do the work assigned us. The message "went home," and served to prepare all for what followed on the following three days.

During the forenoon of Feb. 28 the Missionary Meeting was held. The speakers were all full of enthusiasm, and gave their messages with such fervor that the audience could only wish that the meeting might have been continued indefinitely. The message left by the brethren who spoke was that of absolute surrender to the Lord's will, and hence to a willingness to serve in any and all ways to make possible the carrying of the message to those who know it not. It will be a matter of joy to you all, to know that these messages were so good and so fully appreciated that the time was all occupied by but half the speakers, and when the moderator, Bro. Long, called our attention to the fact that the meeting must be closed as the time for this had come, there was an unmistakable expression of regret felt by all, some of whom expressed their regrets openly. Surely, it was good to be present at this meeting!

In the afternoon the Sunday-school Meeting convened with Bro. Lellu Kalidas as Moderator. At this meeting living topics were discussed in a most enthusiastic manner. Bro. J. B. Emmert gave a report of the World's Sunday-school Convention, held at Washington, D. C., last year. This report caused much joy to all, and was a mighty revelation to our brethren and sisters of India. They did not know how large and mighty the Sunday-school army is, or in how many lands its tramp is heard regularly, each Lord's Day, or how many men and women are giving the best of their energies and talents to make this great movement a blessing to the world.

Would that it could be a source of great inspiration, help and information, to our brethren and sisters, in the remoter districts at home, if the message of such gatherings could be given them?

This meeting had to be closed without giving all the assigned speakers a chance to give their messages. This caused regret, as it did in the morning, but is it not good to let an audience go away hungering for the good things they hoped to obtain?

In the evening, at 8 o'clock, the subject, "Holiness in Life," was ably discussed under the following heads: (a) "In the Individual Life;" (b) "In the Home;" (c) "In the Church." At its close many expressions of joy were heard for the helpful thoughts given by the speakers.

The climax,—and a most blessed one it was,—of all the meetings was the District Meeting, which convened at 9 A. M., March 2. It was called to order by the retiring Moderator, Eld. Adam Ebey. After the regular routine of business the newly-elected officers were installed. Bro. J. B. Emmert was called to the chair and discharged his duties in a way that brought many blessings to the meeting. No papers were presented. Every one present, including the delegates, chosen from the various congregations, were most anxious to hear the reports of the District Mission Board, the District Mission Board's Treasurer and the report of the Sunday-school Secretary. After these reports had all been heard, the enthusiasm and joy created knew no bounds. The churches sent in a combined free will offering of over Rs. 560 ($180), and a voluntary offering of over Rs. 70 was taken while the business of the meeting proceeded. The total receipts of the Board were nearly Rs. 700, and expenses some over Rs. 500.

Two brethren are working under the supervision of the District Board. They reported three baptisms and a most favorable attitude of the people toward them and the work God has called them to do among them.

I wish I could tell the church at home about the joy felt by all in these meetings over what the Lord has wrought among us through them, how wondrously all felt his leading during the meetings, and how our joys and hopes are made to be full for the future of the work entrusted to us!

Brethren, sisters, rejoice with us over these facts which have been so meagerly given to you. Pray with us for a fuller increase of zeal and devotion to him who will ALWAYS help us.

We were glad for the presence of Brethren J. F. Souders and A. C. Wieand and Sister Wieand. Their presence proved so helpful to us all. What joy we feel when members come to us from the homeland! Bro. Wieand spoke to us through Bro. Stover about the blessed influence of daily Bible study on the life of the individual.

Bro. J. B. Emmert was chosen to represent our District on the Standing Committee at Annual Meeting of 1911.

J. M. Pittenger, English Secretary.

OYANNAX, FRANCE.

By the opening of our new hall, at least one of our problems is definitely solved. The difficulties were not a few, and to many it seemed nearly impossible to secure a suitable hall in a central location. We were afraid that the work of the Master would suffer by leaving our old quarters, but our Father, in his great kindness, so manifestly prospered our undertaking, that we found, in the center of the town, a large, fine hall of nearly four hundred square feet.

Certainly, all this came not by accident. Our dear brother, Adrian Pellett, helped by his dear wife, obtained this most desirable result. Not only did they watch over everything, but they prayerfully labored and persevered, knowing that all their effort was for the advancement of the kingdom of God.

I am convinced that if reader could come into our new house, and spend only a few minutes with us, he would be greatly pleased. Here we have a special room for our public services, and one for our Sunday-school and industrial work. While simplicity prevails in our place of worship, still all the comfort desired.

On Sunday, March 12, the First Church of the Brethren at Oyannax had the joy and happiness of dedicating the new hall. No effort was spared to make known, to all the population of this town, this important event. As a result, our meeting place was nearly filled, some only with our friends who generally come to our services, but with many others who listened with pleasure to the preaching of the Gospel.

Bro. G. Morino opened the services. He spoke of Jacob's vision, and then said: "This hall is our Bethel, where we welcome you. Here you shall always be welcome as brethren and sisters."

After this introduction we heard Bro. A. Pellett who had chosen, as the subject of his address, "Was Christ the Son of God?" This was a timely topic in this country of so-called rationalism, which troubles all Europe, and particularly the French people. The arguments, brought out by Bro. Pellett, were full of conviction, and much stronger was the power of the Holy Ghost, inspiring every one present. Every heart was touched by the truth which was presented.

We have also had the privilege, a few days ago, of having with us our beloved Bro. W. R. Miller, who was at this time accompanied by his wife, his son, Ralph Miller, and little Norman.

Bro. W. R. Miller never misses any occasion to visit us, encouraging us, strengthening our faith, and deepening our confidence in our Heavenly Father and in the Church of the Brethren. The kindness of Bro. Miller is really remarkable. He does not only consecrate his life to the study of the Bible Lands, but he never fails to visit us. He cares not for the fatigue of a long journey, but is always willing to spend a few days for the benefit of our work in France and Switzerland.

All those who are contemplating a visit to Europe are urged to visit us in Cyannax (distant from Paris only eight hours by fast train). You will be welcome. Our Lord will bless you, and your presence will encourage us and all the church. Brethren, pray for us and our work!

Cyannax, France, March 18. G. Morlock.

Notes From Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

ALABAMA.

Fruitdale.—This church furnished eleven school-teachers, nine of them are in the bloom of youth, and all are sound in the faith. One of them, Bro. White, is teaching in town, but others are scattered down in the country where they go to church, Christianise and uplift people from their state of heathenism, ignorance and degradation. Our Sunday-school in the school-house work is progressing fine.—Libbie Miller, Fruitdale, Ala., April 7.

ARKANSAS.

St. Francis church met in council March 26. Eld. J. H. Lilligh presided. The former church officers were reelected for another year. Bro. Lillich preached two good sermons for us. Our next Lord's will be April 23. All are invited to attend.—T. L. Woodiel, Palestine, Ark., April 1.

Fort Wayne.—Bro. C. S. Garber, of St. Joseph, Mo., closed a series of meetings here last night. Fourteen dear souls chose to serve God. We have the promise of four who will follow the Master in the near future. We feel able to fight the battle in this wicked city better now than ever before.—Geo. F. Barnhart, 1501 Oak St., Ind., April 4.

Fountain church met in council March 18. Bro. Arthur Hepler presided. Bro. Hilton was present. Two letters were received by letter. We organized a teachers' meeting, to be held every Thursday evening, one prior to every Sunday-school Workers' Meeting. Our Sunday-school is progressing nicely, with Sister Cora Hepler as superintendent.—Mrs. Pearl Snyder, R. D. 1, Nebraska, Ind., March 27.

Indianapolis (First Church of the Brethren).—Our council was held in the evening during March 24. Eld. Young was in charge. The meeting continued to a late hour, as much business came up for action. We decided to change the time of our Sunday-school in a new addition, about one and one-fourth miles from here, to 2:30 P. M., instead of morning, as it has occurred; also to hold a tent meeting in the same locality sometime during the summer. The date of our love feast was set for May 7, at 7 P. M.—W. A. Lawrence, Central Indiana Avenue, Box 76, for the Insane, Indianapolis, Ind., April 3.

Monticello.—We met in council March 25. Bro. D. W. Hamilton presided. Our elder, Bro. Wm. Hoffman, and Bro. A. R. Bridge, alternate. Our love feast will be held May 27, at 6:45 P. M., to which the brethren and sisters are invited. It was decided that a writing clerk should be elected for a term of three years, none to succeed himself in that capacity. Bro. Hamilton was appointed to act as the church sees fit. We then proceeded to elect Bro. Edward Nora, writing clerk; Bro. Wm. Hoffman, correspondent; and Nora Bridge, receiver; Bro. J. L. Hilmer, correspondent. The trustees were also to be elected by the next business session, which will convene June 24.—Mrs. R. G. Keever, Monticello, Ind., March 31.

Mt. Pleasant.—We met in council April 1, Bro. E. N. Goshorn presiding. Sister Mary C. Stoner was elected delegate to Annual Meeting, and Bro. Goshorn, alternate. We decided to have a love feast; time to be announced later. Bro. Hilton will be with us.—Ida Ulery, April 3.

L. Miller was elected to serve another elder for one year. The question of moving the churchhouse was discussed, but no decision was reached. Bro. Jesse Hildebury. Several locations were considered and one decided upon. Bro. Hildebury will move the house.—Ida Miller, Silver College.—Mrs. J. Harvey Schrock, Middlebury, Ind., April 4.

IOWA.

Cedar Rapids church met in council on Tuesday evening, Our love feast will be held May 6, at 6 P. M. Bro. Ira Wise was chosen as our delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. D. E. Miller, alternate.—Mrs. Ida Wise, 1200 Fifth Ave., April 3.

Des Moines.—April 2 we listened to an appeal for more Bible study, given by Bro. Mary Gump, Bro. Bro. A. J. Woodard, of Gowrie, Iowa. Our Thursday evening prayer service is being revived, the work being directed by a committee of three appointed by the church council.—Virgil C. Pinnell, 1643 Lyon St., Des Moines, Iowa, April 4.

Garrison church met in council March 20. Our elder, Bro. Harvey Gilliam, presided. We decided to hold our love feast at Garrison, May 13, at 6 P. M. Our church officers were elected. Sister Anna Allen is president; Sister Carrie Lentz, secretary. Our next council will be held at our love feast June 17, at 10 A. M.—Frank K. Allen, R. D. 2, Durnell, Iowa, April 3.

Muscatine.—March 27 Brother and Sister Hilton and little son, Lloyd, were with us. Bro. Hilton, our China missionary, after spending about two years with us, was with us also able to give an interesting account of their present needs. Bro. Hilton gave us a sermon in the evening, which many outside people came together for a prayer meeting. He spoke of the great responsibility resting upon the church in China, while hearing about Christ and salvation. Bro. Hilton and wife were with us much longer than we had hoped, but enjoyed their visit. Our China missionaries left us for Mount Morris, Ill., April 3, where they will spend a few months in preparation for need of foreign fields, will be an incentive to further usefulness in the work of the Lord at home and abroad.—T. J. Robinson, Box 463, Muscatine, Iowa, April 3.

South Waterloo church met in council March 28. Our elder, Bro. Hoff, presided. Eld. J. H. Hilton was present. Seven by letter and four letters were granted. Next Sunday our Sunday-school will be reorganized. Our elder will be succeeded by our last council. Bro. Hilton and Wife were with us, giving their experiences in China. They are very dear to our country churches. Collections were taken at all the services for the benefit of Bro. Hilton's work in China.—M. Lichty, 1911 Sycamore St., Waterloo, Iowa, April 3.

KANSAS.

Grenola church met in council April 1, at 2 P. M. Eld. S. E. Lantz presided. One letter was granted. Bro. W. C. Watkins was elected delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. Wm. Wise, alternate. Bro. S. E. Crumpacker, alternate. Bro. Solomon Garber will hold our love feast at Grenola, May 13, at 6 P. M. We have had a fine Sunday.—Bessie Wyant, Moline, Kans., April 3.

Lawrence church met in council March 25. One of one of the most spiritual and uplifting series of meetings conducted by Bro. and Sister H. Hilton, Lawrence, Kans. Bro. Hilton preached eighteen excellent sermons, and his earnest devotion to the work of the Lord in China won the hearts of the entire community. Five were received by baptism. Sister Hilton met in council. Our elder, Bro. A. J. Wertenberger, presided. Two letters were granted. Bro. Hilton organized a Christian Workers' Band, with Bro. Floyd Miller as president, and Sister Hilton, secretary. The Sunday-school continues to grow. Bro. Hilton is Secretary of Missions for the district, and has strengthened and encouraged our Sunday-school a great deal.—Elizabeth Miller, R. D. 4, Lawrence, Kans., April 4.

Scott Valley church met in council March 25. Our elder, Bro. A. Miller, presiding. We decided to have our love feast May 6, at 6 P. M. Bro. Jacob Wampler was chosen delegate to Annual Conference; Bro. R. F. Smith, alternate. Bro. C. A. Miller was also elected as our elder for another year. A paper was sent to the Mission Board. Our Sunday-school has increased within the last few Sundays.—Purvis Smith, Westphalia, Kans., April 6.

Wichita church met in council March 25, our elder, S. E. Lantz, presiding. Three letters were granted. On account of the church at Madison not yet being finished, we did not set a definite time for a meeting. However, we hope that we will be held after a two weeks' series of meetings conducted by Bro. N. E. Bakyr. Any minister wishing to locate in a little town close to the church, is invited to this place.—Ellen Quakenbush, R. D. 1, Opie, Kans., April 5.

MARYLAND.

Middletown Valley congregation met in council April 1. Eld. Geo. S. Harp was elected elder, to serve for five years. We decided to hold our love feast May 20, at 2 P. M. Bro. C. F. Auchenbaugh and the writer were elected delegates to District Meeting. The writer was elected delegate to Annual Meeting.—C. E. Frantum, Myersville, Md., April 8.

New Windsor.—The members here held their council March 25. Our elder, Eld. D. L. Miller, had charge of the meeting. All expenses were canceled with a balance in the treasury. Bro. M. R. Blocher, of Chilhowie, Va., assists us in a series of meetings, beginning July 8. We ask the prayers of God's people in behalf of the work at this place.—Ota E. Moss, R. D. 1, Copemish, Mich., April 5.

Sams Creek has had the membership of thirty-nine, or will have as soon as Eld. John Bowman, of Tennessee, gets here. He is to be here April 6. Bro. John Horning, of Calvert, Md., has been purchasing a home here and will move within the next week. We have one minister, Bro. Ira G. Myers, in the church. We hold all-day meetings every Sunday at 10 A. M. We have two applicants for baptism. I think more could be baptized if we had a full house every Sunday and the best of attention. We aim to organize as soon as Bro. Bowman gets here, and will have preaching and Sunday-school. We will likely have a love feast here this spring. All in the bounds of this church are urged to attend.—W. F. Mason, R. D. 2, Prescott, Mich., April 1.

MISSOURI.

Carthage church met in council. Six letters were granted and two received. Our elder, Bro. Hendricks, and Sister Husband was baptized the following day.—Bro. F. Dunning is our Messenger correspondent. Correspondents will be appreciated for considerable more work during the coming summer, by the writer, who has been appointed to the office.—Correspondents at this place—three elders and two ministers in the first degree. We will likely have a full house present at our council.—N. Oren, 203 Main St., Carthage, Mo., April 4.

Clear Fork church met in council March 11, with our elder presiding. At our late meeting two letters were granted. We reorganized our Sunday-school at our last meeting in December, with Bro. Wm. Hendricks, superintendent. We decided to have our series of meetings some time in October. Bro. Will and Bro. Hendricks, of Carthage, will be present at the meetings. Our love feast is to be held some time during the summer.—Mrs. Ella Hall, R. D. 2, Box 24, Carthage, Mo., March 30.

Mound Station.—We met in council April 1, with Bro. J. B. Hylton presiding. We elected church officers as follows: Bro. J. B. Hylton, as our elder for the next year; Bro. Walter Hylton, writer; Bro. J. B. Hylton, treasurer; Bro. writer, Messenger correspondent and agent. We organized our Sunday-school with Bro. Walter Hylton, superintendent. Bro. J. B. Hylton preached for us on Sunday.—Arthur Akers, Norwood, Mo., April 3.

Oak Grove.—Our church met in council March 26. Bro. Wm. Hendricks presided. Our love feast will be held May 6, at 2 P. M. We decided to have a few meetings before the love feast. Bro. Leander Smith can be with us at that time. We also decided to hold a series of meetings, to begin Oct. 21, with Bro. Wyatt, of Joplin, to do the preaching, provided he can be with us.—Elizabeth J. H. Killingsworth, Collins, Mo., March 30.

MONTANA.

Medicine Lake.—We met in council March 25, at the Beverly schoolhouse, with Eld. Jacob E. Keller presiding. The work is moving along encouragingly in this way. We transferred the matter of holding a series of meetings at Medicine Lake, to the second Sunday in June. The meetings will begin June 18 and continue till July 1. The place for holding the love feast will be left with the elder. The matter of membership was granted. Our Sunday-school and church services were held all winter. Brethren and friends are now coming out of Sunday-school, on account of inclement weather. Our Sunday-school has selected a committee to prepare an Easter program for the children.—Katie Keller, Enterprise, Mont., March 31.

NEBRASKA.

Enders.—We organized our Christian Workers' Meeting in January. Sister Ethel Thomas was elected president, and myself, secretary. The Christian Workers gave a missionary program, on Sunday evening, March 26, which was enjoyed by all. It was taken for World-wide Missions. The writer has been chosen Church Correspondent and Messenger agent.—Orrilla E. Ogle, Enders, Nebr., April 4.

NEW MEXICO.

Miami church met in council April 1, with Bro. William Mahler, elder, presiding. Two letters of membership were granted and three were received, two being those of Eld. Jacob Wampler and wife. Bro. Wampler was elected an elder for the coming year; Sister Leona Gibson, missionary secretary and Bible class teacher. Bro. Chas. Bowers, Bro. Joseph Lapp, treasurer; the writer, church correspondent. Several have moved from our midst, and more are to come later. We have a flourishing union Sunday-school, with Bro. Frank Gibson as superintendent.—Mollie Bolinger, Miami, N. Mex., April 3.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Egeland church met for council at the Pleasant View house on Saturday, March 25, at 2 P. M. Communion will be obtained with us, and preached on Sunday morning. Bro. A. M. Hylton presided over the business meeting. The Sunday-school places are progressing nicely. The attendance has been somewhat irregular, on account of the very rough, wet weather, but more are to come later. We have a flourishing union Sunday-school, with Bro. Frank Gibson as superintendent.—Mollie Bolinger, Minot, N. Dak., April 3.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Egeland church met for council at the Pleasant View house on Saturday, March 25, at 2 P. M. Communion will be obtained with us, and preached on Sunday morning. Bro. A. M. Hylton presided over the business meeting. The Sunday-school places are progressing nicely. The attendance has been somewhat irregular, on account of the very rough, wet weather, but more are to come later. We have a flourishing union Sunday-school, with Bro. OHIO.

Bellefontaine.—April 1 Sister Blough, of India, arrived in Bellefontaine, Ohio, for a short visit with her sister, Mary Ellen Hoover. She met with the church at the Sunday morning, at the close of the Sunday-school session. Sister Mary Mow Hoover spoke to the congregation, and was enjoyed equally as well by the grown people. Bro. Blough arrived here on Monday, and in the evening gave an interesting address. Bro. and Sister Blough are the first of our returned missionaries to visit Bellefontaine, which makes their presence especially appreciated. A missionary offering of $12.90 was taken for World-wide Missions.—Mary L. Cook, 903 Water St., Bellefontaine, Ohio, April 3.

Canton.—Bro. Jacob M. Blough and wife, who have been missionaries to India for the past seven years, held a meeting at the Center house March 24. Bro. Blough gave us an outline of the different mission points established by the Brethren in India. After the meeting a collection was taken for the mission work in India. Bro. John F. Kahler, one of our home ministers, preached his farewell sermon March 26. He is moving to Alliance, Ohio, which is in the bounds of the Reading congregation. His preaching point will be at the Reading church.—Geo. S. Grim, Loysburg, Ohio, March 27.

Covington.—Since our last report three more have united with the church. We have tried hard for some years to keep our young people in the Sunday-school. Now we are trying to reach those who do not go to other Sunday-schools. We had 144 in attendance at Sunday-school on Sunday. The collection amounted to $23.—Ellsworth Hoover, Covington, Ohio, April 7.

Dickey.—C. J. M. Blough, our Indio missionary, was with the church at this place April 2 and gave us an excellent, instructive talk on the work in India. His talks were very much appreciated. An offering was given for the mission work.—Ida M. Helm, Ashland, Ohio, April 4.

Lick Creek.—Bro. Noah Hull is called to assist Bro. G. W. Sellers, presided. Brethren Clyde Miller and A. M. Moore were chosen as delegates to the Conference. We decided to have our love feast June 16, at 10 A. M. We also expect to have a series of meetings, to begin at Salt Lick, Vallie McDonald, Bryan, Ohio, April 5.

Pittsburg.—We have just closed a very interesting series of meetings, conducted by Bro. David Hollinger. The attendance and interest were good throughout the meetings. Bro. Hollinger preached the Word with much power. The church is much built up, and as a result thirteen were baptized. Bro. Hollinger was with us about two weeks and added much in the work.—Ruth Delk, R. D. 4, Arcanum, Ohio, April 3.

Ross church met in council April 1. Our elder, Bro. D. D. Thomas, presided. April 2 we organized a Sunday-school with Bro. Robert Kessling was elected as our superintendent. Bro. J. J. Metzger was elected delegate to Annual Meeting, and Bro. G. A. Snider is to be with us in a Sunday-school Meeting May 15 and 17. Bro. D. Thomas commenced his meetings over Sunday, and gave us three good sermons.—Katie Shellabarger, Mendon, Ohio, April 5.

Salem church met in council March 30, with Eld. William Minnich presiding. Visiting brethren present were, Jesse Stutsman, Aaron K. Brumbaugh and D. M. Garber. Routine business came before the meeting. Ten letters of membership were received, four were granted. Bro. Samuel Samuel Snell and William Minnich are to represent the church at Annual Meeting. Brethren Chas. Bright and Jesse Stutsman, delegates to District Meeting. We decided to have a love feast this spring.—Josephine M. Brumbaugh, Salem, Ohio, April 3.

Sidney.—This church has just passed through a glorious revival, conducted by Bro. J. W. Lear and wife, of Cerro Gordo, Ill. The seed sown will surely produce a great harvest. Over twenty-five have been very confirmed, and more will follow the beginning of the year, until the time Bro. Lear came, seven have been baptized. Our house, which seats about 400, of nearly four hundred, was filled almost every night. The best known people in the city were present at the meetings. Five confessed Christ in Christian baptism, and one was reclaimed. Three joined their people after living a better and more consecrated life in service for the Master.—Mrs. J. M. Breneman, Park St., Sidney, Ohio, March 29.

OKLAHOMA.

Big Creek church met in council March 16, our elder, N. S. Gripe, presiding. One letter of membership was received. Bro. Grigsby reported five interesting meetings held by him. Our love feast will be May 6, at 3:30 P. M.—Mrs. Mollie Fillmore, Tryon, Okla., March 24.

Mount Hope.—Our church met in council March 28. Our elder, Bro. J. C. Ninninger, presided. The meeting was a joyable one. We decided to have prayer by letter. It was decided that Bro. J. C. Ninninger is to conduct a series of meetings, beginning April 1. In connection with the meetings we will hold our love feast. Our work here is progressing very nicely, with increasing attendance. Bro. Ninninger is with us as assistant elder, our elder being located at Guthrie.—John D. Howell, Orlando, Okla., April 3.

Washita.—Our church met in council April 1. Our elder, Bro. A. L. Boyd, presided. We decided to hold a series of meetings in August, if we can secure a minister for that time. We also decided to hold a love feast June 25, at 3 P. M. A committee was appointed to investigate the song book proposition and to purchase the needed books. We expect to have a spelling school some time this summer.—Eld. elder, Bro. Boyd, was chosen as our delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. Pfaus, alternate. CORRESPONDENCE

THE MINNEAPOLIS MISSION, MINNESOTA.

One of the busiest and most arduous winter seasons in the history of the Mission here has drawn to a close, and we are glad to observe that the closing incidents have been marked also with the greatest blessings in the history of the work.

Though the winter season has not been as severe in temperature as usual here, yet there has been an unusual demand in the way of sickness, and our time and resources for benevolent purposes have been heavily drawn upon all through the winter. We are especially grateful for the liberal offerings from the churches of the District for the work here, during the heart of the winter, which enabled us to do much during the Thanksgiving and Holiday seasons in feeding and clothing the poor, which we could not otherwise have done. But we wish to call to mind that the offerings of the last half of the winter have not been sufficient to meet the demand that is upon us in the work here. To the churches of this District we wish to say that we are not privileged to solicit funds for this work outside of our own District, although any one outside of the District, of course that is desirous of making free-will offerings if he so choose. You see, therefore, that the responsibility for the support of this work rests principally with those of our own territory.

We are pleased to report, at this time, that, through the hearty interest and generous cooperation of the District Mission Board, there has been completed, during the past fall and winter, a very commendable and much needed improvement on the church property here. The building has been raised and a full basement has been constructed under the whole building. We have installed a hot air furnace and a baptistry. In the basement, as it now is, we have ample room for four class rooms, store room for relief supplies, fuel room and toilet rooms.

This gives room for ten classes, if necessary, in the entire building. Especially convenient is the installing of the baptistry, as has already been demonstrated. The special workers and members here are certainly glad for these added advantages, so generously provided by the Mission Board, and outside parties are very free and abundant in words of commendation for the same.

To the many hearts who are interested in the work here in this city, and whose prayers and offerings have kept the work going through many anxious months, and whose sympathy and words of cheer and hope have encouraged the workers here to go on in the good work, we are glad to report a season of great blessing in spiritual things, in the closing incident of the winter season in the Mission.

March 5 Eld. C. B. Smith, of Red Cloud, Nebr., came to us to begin a series of meetings, and continued with us till March 21. Bro. Smith preached the Word with power, and the manifestation of the Spirit was evident. Through his labor with us, the Mission has enjoyed the best series of meetings and the greatest season of blessing in its history. The attendance and interest were the best ever witnessed here. The work was greatly strengthened, the workers encouraged, and a deeper impress upon the mind and attention of the public give evidence that God was present with us. We were very glad for the presence of the foreman of our District Mission Board, Bro. Samuel Fike, of Waterloo, Iowa, who was with us during the last three days of the meetings. He gave us much help and encouragement and rejoiced with us in the final blessings poured out.

Sunday, March 19, and Monday following were days long to be remembered by the little band here. At that Sunday morning service two aged souls, a father and mother, who had been long out of fellowship with the church, and who had previously requested to be taken back, were again received into the fellowship of God's people, much to our joy and their blessing.

In the afternoon a special service in dedication of our new baptistry was held. It had been planned to administer baptism, but the unexpected sickness of the applicant prevented his presence. A sermon on baptism was given by the pastor, treating the subject from a scriptural and historic view. The house was well filled with attentive listeners, many of whom never heard the position of the Brethren on baptism explained before. At the evening service Bro. Smith gave us the most powerful sermon of the series. The clear souls surrendered to Christ, and I was evident that others were much troubled on account.

On the Monday evening following we met again, prepared for the baptismal service. After another forceful discourse by Bro. Smith, four souls were taken by the pastor into the baptismal waters and received the administration of the sacred ordinance. The house was well filled with attentive witnesses to a scene entirely new to many of them. This evening's service will long be held in sacred memory by the little band of believers who worship here.

In all three dear souls have been reclaimed and five baptized in the Mission. We praise God for his blessings, and that he has given his people strength and courage to sow and abide till the harvest time. We ask the prayers of the Lord's people and especially those of our District, who with us are mutually responsible for this work, continue to ascend to the Father's presence for blessings to rest upon us here.—Mrs. J. Barnhart.

1210 Twenty-fifth Avenue, N., March 29.

FROM PRAIRIE CITY, IOWA.

We met in council March 11. Our elder, Bro. W. V. Buckingham, had charge. We had a very pleasant council. Quite an amount of business came up for consideration. Others present were: Sister Nora Alexander, clerk; Bro. Walter Young, treasurer; Bro. John McCrey, trustee; the writer, church correspondent. Letters of membership were granted to Bro. D. A. Wolf and wife. He is a minister in the second degree. The moving away of Brethren Alexander and Chas. Hayden left the Sunday Workers without a secretary and president. Bro. Earl Brubaker was chosen as president; Sister M. McCreve, secretary. Bro. W. I. Buckingham is our delegate to Annual Meeting. Sister Kate Hayden, alternate.

We have decided to have Christian Workers' Meeting and preaching services every Sunday night, and prayer meeting every Wednesday night. Bro. S. B. Miller, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, will be with us the first Sunday in April. He will give us a temperance address at 11 A. M. and at 3 P. M. he will talk on "Child Rescue Work."

We discussed District Meeting plans at some length. We intend to have a special meeting soon for more thorough preparation. Our elder, Bro. W. I. Buckingham, is foreman. Bro. Walter Young, purchasing committee. Bro. B. F. Buckingham and wife, lodging committee. Brethren Earl and I. W. Brubaker, transportation committee. Other work will be attended to later.

We are praying for a glorious meeting, in conformity with the demands of the blessed Master, and tending to the upbuilding of the kingdom on earth.

R. D. 2, Monroe, Iowa, March 21. Jennie Alexander.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT

BY J. H. MOORE

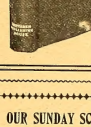
IN THE INTRODUCTION TO THIS BOOK THE AUTHOR SAYS:

The chapters composing this little volume were written at different times during a period of over twenty-five years of active editorial life." Some of them were composed on the spur of the moment, and thus are the best, having been born from a sudden inspiration and not made through long and forced effort.

EACH CHAPTER IS A POINTED LESSON

on some moral or religious topic, vividly illustrated by actual experiences from the author's life. Those who have read some or all of the chapters, which appeared from time to time in the various publications with which the author was connected, say that they are the cream of his writings along these lines. Everyone should read this book in order to have impressed upon the mind the valuable truths contained therein.

THE ONLY WAY IN WHICH THE BOOK CAN BE OBTAINED



is in connection with a subscription to the "Gospel Messenger." Subscribers who renew will get the book for 35c extra. The Gospel Messenger and book only $1.85.

This is a Great Bargain. Don't Miss It.

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL CALENDARS

Something Unique Much in Little

Each of the twelve calendar pages carries the Lesson Titles for the month, the references, the Golden Texts, Daily Home Readings. On each page, also, are found brief Bible Quotations, appropriate to the poets and other pithy sayings from eminent men and women.

The calendar is 5x8 inches in size, an eyelet in the top to hang by, and the date figures are of sufficient size to be seen at a distance of ten feet or more.

It is handsome, convenient, beautiful; one hang it in a conspicuous place and it will be a constant reminder and inspiration to you. Very appropriate as gifts to members of the Home Department of your Sunday-school.

Price, each, 10c; per dozen, $1.00; per hundred, $8.00

BRETHREN PUBLISHING HOUSE,
Elgin, Illinois.

THE LORD'S PRAYER and The Ten Commandments

A most appropriate and beautiful ornament for any home. The Lord's Prayer is printed artistically in figure, and the Ten Commandments, each aptly illustrated, and artistically arranged around this figure, three at the top, three at the bottom and two on either side.

Each of the illustrations is an object lesson that helps much to make the meaning clearer and more forceful. Especially will the picture appeal to children, to whom knowledge comes most readily through the eye-gate. As they read the words the pictures explain their meaning, and the impressions will be lasting.

The picture is not only beautiful, but useful as well. It is printed on heavy paper, in bright colors, beautifully blended. Size, 16x20 inches.

Price, single picture,	15c
Two pictures,	25c
Five Pictures,	50c

Notes from Our Correspondents.

Sunnyside church met in council Jan. 25, with Eld. S. H. Miller presiding. Two letters were granted, and two were received. We decided to hold our love feast April 22. Eld. S. H. Miller was chosen as our delegate to Annual Meeting. We have organized a Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting. Our Sunday-book church, with Bro. J. Q. Quesinberry as our superintendent. Bro. Geo. Portch is president of the Christian Workers' Meeting.—Mrs. M. E. Dawson, Sunnyside, Wash., April 1.

Tacoma.—We enjoyed a very pleasant members' meeting last evening. Several items of business came before the meeting and were disposed of in a spirit of love and union. It was decided to hold our communion on Saturday evening, April 22. We extend an invitation to the adjoining churches and to members, passing this way, to meet with us at that time. Last Sunday one was restored. Last Wednesday evening, at the close of the prayer meeting, a child of Sister Long died and buried with Christ in hope.—Our Sunday-school will give an Easter program on Easter Sunday, instead of the regular Sunday-school lesson. Our school is gradually growing in numbers and we are very much in need of room now. Especially to handle the classes.—Mrs. Sarah A. Silverson, 712 cesefully to handle the classes.—Mrs. Sarah A. Silverson, 712 South Fifty-second Street, Tacoma, Wash., April 1.

Wenatchee church met in council March 25, with our elder in charge. Considerable business came before the meeting. Seven letters of membership were granted and seven were granted. The church decided not to be represented by delegate at Annual Meeting. The two weeks' Bible term, conducted by Bro. Ed. Smith, closed on the evening of March 19.—Alice Peters, R. D. 2, Wenatchee, Wash., March 27.

Wenatchee.—Since our last report, we have had a very interesting study on the Book of Revelation, and find it full of rich provision for the children of God. Eld. A. E. Peters was with us Sunday morning, and Eld. J. J. Pilhrun in the evening. Our Sunday-school is progressing under the guidance of Bro. Bowers, and is growing in attendance and interest. Interest in the Master's work is good. Every Member passing through our city are cordially invited to attend our services.—Pearl Smith, Wenatchee, Wash., March 27.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Cliffy.—We met at the Pine Bluff schoolhouse for evening services March 25. Eld. James W. Rogers preached for us. We met again on Sunday morning and had a very good and excellent sermon by Bro. Rogers. These meetings were well attended and good interest was manifested, notwithstanding the great opposition the Brethren are having at Cliffy.—Mary Crist, Box 43, Cliffy, W. Va., March 28.

Sandy Creek.—We met in council April 1 at the Salem house. Our elder, Bro. Jeremiah Thomas, presided. Bro. H. S. Replogle is to hold a series of meetings at Greenbrier, beginning April 21.—James M. Thomas, R. D. 1, Box 60, Clifton Mills, W. Va., April 5.

Finger Posts on Life's Highway

Showing How to Succeed in Life

BY JOHN R. DALE.

A new book, full of pointers which point in the right direction. A book for the young, the middle aged and the old.

The purpose of the author, in gathering the material, during many years, was to assist those who are striving to gain character, intellectual power, business success, and merited esteem of their fellowmen. Out of a long and varied experience he has been able to collect into this volume more than one hundred articles on that many different subjects, touching human life from almost every possible angle. It is not a novel nor a story, nor yet a long and dry treatise upon some abstract subject, but a collection of articles on everyday topics, written in language and style easy to be understood, making the points so clear that the way of a truly successful and happy life is more easily found. The book abounds in words of wisdom, caution and warning.

We have great hopes for the sale of this book, knowing that it will appeal to all classes with equal force, and be the means of accomplishing good wherever it goes. Should any of our readers be interested in taking an agency for it, write us at once. We can offer liberal commission. The book contains 620 pages, bound in cloth. Illustrated. Will be sent to any address, postpaid, for $1.50.

FLASHLIGHTS FROM REAL LIFE

BY JOHN T. DALE.

Those who have read any of the author's other books will want to read this one. The sketches and incidents given are real flashlights thrown from life, and worth the worth revealing. The author in his preface says: "Some of the sketches are based on facts which have come within the personal knowledge of the author, others are founded on incidents which have come under the observation of others, but they are all typical of the ever-changing experiences and mutations of life, as the grand panorama of existence moves onward."

Following are a few subjects taken from the table of contents:

Advice to Young Men
The Boy Hero
Dangers of City Life
The Father's Example
The Drunkard's Son
The Professional Police
Single and Married
The Smoker's Peril
The Young Lawyer's Downfall

The Book contains 205 pages, Bound in cloth.

Price, postpaid, 75c

Minutes of Annual Meeting from 1778-1909

This volume contains every known minute of the proceedings of the general conferences held by the Church of the Brethren from 1778 to and Lord 1909. Many interesting things relative to the problem of the Church and the Brethren maintained through the years in reference to their opposition to war, intemperance, secretism, worldliness, etc. They also show the change and growth of sentiment in relation to the educational, missionary, and Sunday-school movement in the Brotherhood, and how these departments of work have grown. Taking it all in all, it is one of the books which has a right to a place in the library of every Brethren home. This is a $2.50 book, but in order to bring it within the reach of all the price is placed at $2, which is just the cost of manufacturing and postage.

AROUND THE WORLD

A Commendable Example.

Some time ago we referred to the proposed plan of the United States Steel Corporation to do away with Sunday labor in their various mills. It is gratifying to note that they are redeeming their promise, even to the extent of making no repairs on Sunday. Financially it is said to be a losing proposition, but the company realizes that there are things even better than money, and that in the end much will be gained by the moral effect of Sunday-observance upon their largè army of employés. We speak of this very laudable endeavor of a large corporation to impress anew the great importance of honoring the Lord by an appropriate and reverent observance of his day. "Enter into his courts with praise and bless his name."

Norway's Wonderful Record.

It is a matter of no small comfort that while foes of temperance may threaten and in places may even triumph, our cause is the Lord's and his truth "goes marching on." Fifty years ago Norway consumed twenty liters of strong drink per capita; today the consumption has fallen to 2 liters per capita. A remarkable advance in general health conditions is also an eloquent testimony to the value of temperance in that country of the North. Financially there has been a most gratifying increase of national and individual wealth. Anyone who is doubtful about the ultimate benefit of temperance,—looking at it from whatever standpoint he may please,—is urged to satisfy himself by an investigation of conditions in Norway and the prohibition States of this country.

Italy's Struggle with Secrecy.

Several weeks ago we mentioned the impending trial of the Camorrists, a most pernicious secret order, that has been troubling Italy for many years. At the investigations, now being conducted at Naples, the most amazing and far-reaching evidences of criminality and general depravity, on the part of the Camorrists, are being brought to light. So widely ramified and terrifying are the secret machinations of the order, that it is exceedingly doubtful whether sufficient evidence to convict the offenders can be secured. Nearly four hundred witnesses are still to be heard, and a year or more is to be given to the trial, but so widespread is the terror inspired by the Camorra, that there will be great reluctance on the part of the witnesses to state what they actually know. We have, in this remorseless and cruel order, a logical result of secrecy at its worst. It teaches a lesson well worth heeding.

Germany's Reluctance in the Peace Program.

That the proposed peace pact, already agreed upon by Great Britain and the United States, should not have met with an immediate and enthusiastic reception in the land of the Kaiser, is perhaps not to be greatly wondered at when it is so plainly apparent that British supremacy on the sea is to be maintained at all hazards. Before there can be a universal acceptance of the proposed peace plan, there must be evident sincerity on the part of all concerned in its promulgation, and that, unfortunately, has so far been lacking. Self-interest, to a large extent, seems to be the ruling motive of all nations, and as long as this is permitted to control and shape the policy of international dealings, there will be fruitful reasons for disagreements and consequent conflicts. The natigns in general need nothing so much as a thorough-going campaign of education in principles of fairness and equity, that they may deal justly with one another.

An Interesting Discovery in Abyssinia.

That the northeastern part of Africa was, at one time, populated by a class of people, intellectually far in advance of those now living there, seems to be demonstrated by the ruins of a city which, it is believed, flourished there more than 2,000 years before the Christian era. The remains of a vast "Temple of the Sun" have also been brought to light, and it is believed that this was the temple referred to by Herodotus as "standing in a green meadow near the ancient city of Meroe." The ruins just laid bare are but a small part of that mighty and renowned city of an early age. Once there were to be seen magnificent piles of masonry, the splendor of which has, probably, never since been surpassed. With growing wealth, there came a love of luxury and a life of ease, and then the inevitable decay that follows in the wake of effeminacy and dissipation. The city that once attracted its thousands, today is but a heap of ruins, and the memory of its magnificence is but a dream. What sermons there are in the uncouth heaps of debris of a once flourishing but corrupt and vice-ridden city! How they preach to us of the mutability of all earthly glory, how they portray the inevitable result of all sin, and how they impress the importance of seeking for abiding peace in the world beyond this vale of tears!

Our Boasted Civilization.

A writer who has given considerable thought to the vagaries of human nature recently said, "Civilization is only skin-deep; there's a good deal of the savage in the best of us if you get below the surface." In the light of recent events in the South, the remark would seem to be amply justified. In one town in the State of Georgia three negroes, not by any means proved guilty of crime, were taken by a mob and lynched. In another town a negro, whom the law would doubtless have duly punished, was taken by-a mob and summarily disposed of. It is encouraging, however, that, on the other hand, the Governor of Alabama does not propose to have mob violence prevail as it does in Georgia and other Southern States. He has laid down the ironclad rule that lynching must stop while he is in office, and that he is fully prepared to punish any infraction of the law. An executive with a backbone of that sort is likely to have an orderly and law-abiding commonwealth.

When Principles Are Tested.

Some of the converts at Hinghwa, China, are realizing that the road of the Christian pilgrim is not a "sailing to heaven on flowery beds of ease." By keeping the Sabbath, the Christian merchant in that district is probably surrendering to his nearest heathen competitor a considerable part of the trade he might well have had. And yet he never falters. He simply hangs out the sign "Worship Day." The Christian farmer is tested equally when, by ceasing work on the Sabbath, he observes the day reverently, while his neighbor gets the crop. Notwithstanding all this sacrifice, when it comes to the matter of giving, their liberality is most remarkable. Of a truth it is said that many of these Chinese have so liberally remembered their brethren in the famine region as to leave them a very scant support for themselves. To show such a spirit means consecration, and many Christians of the homeland might do well to measure up, in real sacrifice, to these devoted converts of the Orient.

Fruit in Old Age.

Nothing, perhaps, is so inspiring as to see the aged veterans of the cross preserving the vigor of their Christian activity to the very end of their pilgrimage, even like a Moses who, on Pisgah's height, looked into the glories of the Promised Land with "his natural strength still unabated." At Durham, Maine, recently, Mrs. Mary D. Goddard, the oldest Quaker preacher in the world, was permitted to celebrate her 101st birthday by delivering a half-hour sermon, in connection with other exercises held in her honor. Though, during the occasion, hundreds crowded around the aged pilgrim, offering their congratulations and best wishes, she was not, in the least, fatigued, but gave another short but touching address at the close. Hers has been a life of simplicity and devotion to her Master, as near as she understood his teachings. Now, after having been permitted to serve the Lord for more than a century, she says she can feel that he has indeed "renewed her strength" from day to day, and that his "goodness and mercy" have followed her in life's pilgrimage.

Buddhism in Europe.

Considering the fact that the doctrines of Buddha have been introduced in western countries only a few years ago, the progress of that cult has been most extraordinary. In England it is spreading so alarmingly as to create general alarm. Three years ago the Buddhist Society of Great Britain and Ireland was founded in Rangoon, and the noted authority on Buddhism, Prof. Rhys-Davids, was elected as its president. Already the society has vigorous organizations at Liverpool and Edinburgh, and publishes a paper, the "Buddhist Review," in defense of its doctrines. In Germany, also, the Buddhists are making remarkable advancement, though there, as in England, the work of proselytism is carried on mainly by those who were once active exponents of the Christian faith. Sad, indeed, that any one should turn from the worship of the living God to the promulgation of a most erroneous and debasing form of worship. Paul speaks of those "who believed not the truth but had pleasure in unrighteousness." It is assuredly verified in the lives of those who have adopted the teachings of Buddha.

The Bible on Hygiene.

It has become popular among certain "would-be scientists" to ridicule the hygienic and sanitary provisions of the Bible, especially those of the Pentateuch. And while some would like to relegate the Blessed Book to the obsolete literature of past ages because of this supposed defect, it is truly refreshing to note how others come to the rescue, and restore the Sacred Record to its place of undisputed authority. A recent scientific writer says, "The Book of Leviticus may well be termed the first handbook of hygiene and the basis of modern sanitary legislation. Measures relating to food, clothing, personal cleanliness, treatment of the sick, and contact with the dead, are given in minute detail. The value of these hygienic regulations, while, perhaps, greatly underrated in the past, is more and more being appreciated by the scientific world." This eloquent tribute to the accuracy and reliability of the Blessed Bible, coming, as it does, from a scientist who speaks with authority, should serve as a renewed evidence of its Divine origin. It is a book of all times, all ages.

Hard Times for Speculators.

Wall Street, New York, America's financial center, is experiencing a most distressing dullness in the stock market. Whether the patrons of the exchange have learned the much-needed lesson that there is no "get-rich-quick" route to financial prosperity, by way of speculation in stocks (especially for those unacquainted with the hooks and crooks of the financial world), or whether recent investigations of corporations and trusts have served to warn possible purchasers against investments in stocks,—one thing is sure, the brokerage firms are suffering for lack of business. This unwonted condition, while unfortunate for those directly concerned, will not cause general alarm throughout the country. Speculators, at best, have never added to the real prosperity of the country. It is the tiller of the soil and the promoter of the world's industries that constitute the real elements of lasting success in the community. A more general return to honest toil and greater simplicity of living, together with economy and industry, would speak a death-blow to speculation, as well as to many other evils that follow in its wake.

Preaching to Those Behind the Bars.

Christ has put his seal of approval upon gospel ministry to those in prison, and while, perhaps, it is not a pleasant work, nor even one attended by the most gratifying and immediate results, the Lord does not expect his children to seek the pleasant tasks or the most promising fields, as they appear to us. As an example of what may be done for the outcasts and derelicts of humanity, the gospel work of W. T. Stead, at the Harrison Street jail in Chicago, may well serve as an inspiration to others. Every Sunday, for a few years, he has visited the dreary jail corridors and, through the rusty bars of the cells, addressed words of comfort, encouragement and warning to the sin-scarred dregs of humanity, that "by all means he might save some." Himself a "brand plucked from the burning," McBride can talk to the "down-and-out" with convincing earnestness, and the message of love, we are told, is not without its gratifying results. What this earnest worker is doing in Chicago might be done by hundreds in other towns and cities throughout the land. It is the work that Christ would have us do. Who is ready to say, "Here am I"?

Famine in China Still Continuing.

Under date of April 13 conditions in the famine districts are reported as being most distressing. While, with the receipt of many liberal contributions, there has been an opportunity of saving thousands of lives, many are dying daily because of weakened bodily conditions, incident to the protracted famine. For the third time rains have partly refreshed the famine area, rendering the planting of grain for the relief of the starving thousands extremely difficult. In some cases the water is so high that it prevents the gathering of herbs in the fields,—the pitifully meager subsistence of thousands,—and also cutting off ready access to the relief stations. At one point sixty slave girls were offered for sale without a single purchaser,—the food required for them being more valuable than their lives. As we, in this relatively favored land of America sit down to our well-filled tables, let us not forget that on the other side of the globe thousands of famine sufferers would gladly feast on the scraps, and even the crumbs, we throw away. We owe a duty to China's needy ones, but only the Lord knows how faithfully our stewardship is being attended to. The time will come when the destiny of thousands will hinge upon their life-long application of the "inasmuch" of Matt. 25: 40.

ESSAYS

Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth

Sometime, Somewhere.

SELECTED BY MARTHA MARTIN.

Unanswered yet, the prayer your lips have pleaded
In agony of heart, these many years,
Does faith begin to fail, is hope declining;
And think you all in vain these falling tears?
Say not the Father hath not heard your prayer,
You shall have your desire sometime, somewhere.

Unanswered yet? Though when you first presented
This one petition at the Father's throne,
It seemed you could not wait the time of asking,
So anxious was your heart to have it done;
If years have passed since then, do not despair,
For God will answer you sometime, somewhere.

Unanswered yet? But you are not unheeded;
The promises of God forever stand;
To him our days and years alike are equal,
"Have faith in God!" It is your Lord's command.
Hold on to Jacob's angel and your prayer
Shall bring a blessing down sometime, somewhere.

Unanswered yet? Nay, do not say unanswered;
Perhaps your part is not yet wholly done.
The work began when first your prayer was uttered
And God shall finish what he has begun.
Keep incense burning at the shrine of prayer,
And glory shall descend sometime, somewhere.

Unanswered yet? Faith cannot be unanswered;
Her feet are firmly planted on the Rock.
Amid the wildest storms she stands undaunted,
Nor quails before the loudest thunder shock.
She knows Omnipotence has heard her prayer,
And cries, "It shall be done, sometime, somewhere!"

Going up to Jerusalem.

BY W. R. MILLER.

Siege and Looting of Kerak.—No. 8.

OUR guide found conditions in the city even worse than we imagined. Fighting, burning and looting, were the order of the day. Tuesday's and Wednesday's battles were waged with the same determination, on the part of the Arabs, to utterly destroy the Turks and the city, yet the killed and wounded did not number as many as on the first day because the Arabs were fighting from cover, and the soldiers were all shut up in the Castle. The Turkish school building was burned, and, not satisfied with the burning of the building, they began tearing down the walls. The hatred of the Arabs for the Turk, and everything Turkish, was so great that they were ready for anything which presented itself to them. This hatred was intensified by a thing, which I hesitate to put in print, and yet the Sheikhs were so outspoken in averring, time and again, that the thing was true, it would seem as though there was truth in their statement.

In addition to what the Government was asking of the Arabs, viz., the giving up of their arms and their young men for the army, the Governor at Kerak made a demand upon each of the clans of the sixteen tribes of the Kerak district for five girls, to be sent to Kerak for the use of the soldiers. This the Sheikhs told Mr. Forder in his first conference with them, and on this Thursday morning's visit to them, they again asserted the truth of the matter. Further, the common people were exercised over this thing, and talked to the guide about it. If this be true, one can not blame them for the rebellion. Virtue in women, perhaps, does not stand as high anywhere else in the world as among the Arabs, neither is a fall from virtue punished more quickly and severely, than among these wild people of the desert.

After the writing of a number of letters, finally one was dictated to which one of the Sheikhs was willing to attach his seal. This letter was then given to an escort of seven armed Arabs, who were to take us to a camp on the Dead Sea the first night. The next day, Friday, we were to proceed to the south end of the Sea and there they were to deliver us, with the letter, to the Sheikh of a friendly tribe. The letter directed the last-named Sheikh to put us over in the hills of Hebron, where we would be safe, and could proceed to Hebron and Jerusalem without an escort.

The Sheikhs asked Mr. Forder to go to Jerusalem, and ask English protection for them; also to send English soldiers to their country, as they were tired of Turkish rule, and were ready and willing to submit to England's rule. This statement was verified by what an old man, who had lived in Kerak all his life, said to me on the previous Sunday, while in Kerak. He asked, "Why does not England come here and do for this country what they have done for Egypt, for we hear so much about what has been done for that country in the last thirty years?"

Scarcely had the guide finished telling us of his experiences of the night in an Arab tent, and forenoon in town, when our armed escort arrived, and we were requested to move at once down to the Dead Sea. Then all was hurry and bustle, until we got on the way, for we had five or six hours of hard travel before us. I hurried over to the tent, where the wounded man lay and again dressed his limb. Finding his pulse running one hundred and twenty, temperature high, and suffering most intense, I did what I could for him, and bade him good-bye, not likely ever to see him again in this world.

When it was said of the Romans, "They were the greatest road builders in the world," it was no mistake. Many times, on this trip, we passed over sections of Roman roads, some fairly well preserved, and this afternoon, in our descent to the Sea, we followed the course of an old Roman road, which led from Jerusalem almost straight to Kerak. It may not be generally known that this road crossed the Dead Sea at the Peninsula, and within the life and memory of men still living in Kerak, some of the stepping-stones still standing. The Sea, at the point where the road was built across, is about five miles in width.

We said "Es-salam aleikum" ("Peace be to you") to our Bedouin friends, a bit sorry to leave them, for we had already learned to love these simple children of the land of Moab in their houses of hair. Then we hurried on to our next stopping place, and, because of the roughness of the country, it was dark when we came to the camp, hidden away among the bushes on the Peninsula in the Dead Sea. Here we found plenty of real wood for cooking and for warming ourselves, and they brought to us all we could use. Our reception here was quite as cordial as that of the camp we had just left. A tent was placed at our disposal, but not quite so large as our former home. When we were all adjusted for the night, Ralph declared that he was sleeping with both his feet and head out of doors, as he was lying diagonally across the corner of the tent, the only space left which was not filled with other occupied beds and luggage.

In living with the Bedouins, one must learn to put all portable articles in the middle of the tent, or, better still, under his mattress, for these people do not regard it as stealing to appropriate any article within reach, which they think they have need of. This we learned by bitter experience, long before we reached Jerusalem.

The ordinary routine of breakfasting, packing and getting under way, need not here be rehearsed to, as it was about the same in each case, and attended with the usual inquisitive visitors, even at very early hours. This morning we needed no urging to be ready, for the most of us were getting a little anxious to get home. We found our escort ready the moment we were in the saddle. I think they, too, were a little anxious to get back, as they were taken away from the looting in Kerak, when they were sent out on this mission.

Everything went well with us for a time, the morning was clear, cool and crisp. We were enjoying good health, and in good spirits at the thought of soon being free from danger and unpleasant environments. Thus half of the forenoon wore away, our pathway leading through canebrakes, and over small plains of the Peninsula southward. About this time an Arab horseman, from somewhere in the bushes, joined us, which we thought but little of. Later armed Arab footmen, two and three at a time, joined our party, until there were not less than twenty of them. At times we could hear them having vigorous arguments with our escorts. By a small stream of water we stopped for lunch, but during the luncheon we seemed to have a feeling that trouble and danger were brewing, and we did not wait long for a demonstration.

The Kiss of Peace at the Communion.

BY DANIEL HAYS.

I QUOTE from "Christian Antiquities," the product of the ripest scholarship of England, on the history of the primitive church, Volume I, pages 903-4:

"The holy kiss originally formed an element of every act of Christian worship. No sacrament, or sacramental function was deemed complete in its absence. Even common prayer without the kiss was considered to lack something essential to its true character. Tertullian calls it the 'seal of prayer,' and asks, 'What prayer is complete, from which the holy kiss is divorced? What kind of sacrifice is that from which men depart without the peace?'

"The Holy Eucharist is the Christian rite with which the kiss of peace was most essentially connected, and in which it was preserved the longest. It is found in all primitive liturgies, and is mentioned, or referred to, by the earliest writers who describe the administration of the Lord's supper. The primitive place of the holy kiss is that which it still maintains in the Oriental church,—between the dismissal of the non-communicants and the oblation. The earliest author who mentions it,—Justin Martyr,—thus writes: 'When we have ceased from prayer, we salute one another with a kiss. There is then brought to the president bread and a cup of wine.' (Apol. I, c. 65).

"Chrysostom, after describing the exclusion from the holy precincts of those who were unable to partake of the holy table, writes: 'When it behooveth us to give and receive peace, we all alike salute each other,' and then proceed to speak of the celebration of the most awful mysteries. The Apostolic Constitutions also introduce the holy kiss after the two prayers for the faithful before the oblation. The primitive liturgies are likewise unanimous in assigning to the kiss the same position in the Eucharistic ritual."

Then, on page 40, under the head, "AGAPE," the same authority makes the following significant statement:

"The true reading of 1 Peter 5: 14, (en philemate agapes) can not be disjoined from the fact that there was a feast known then, or very soon afterwards, by that name at which such a salutation was part of the accustomed ceremonials."

Then again, on page 1058, it says:

"Tertullian, in 198, describes the agape under the name of a supper: 'Our supper shows its nature by its name. It is called (agape) that which love is among the Greeks.'"

Webster defines agape to mean brotherly love. It is the word used by our Lord in John 13: 35, "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." This discourse, concerning the new commandment, as recorded in John 13: 31-35, is not given by Matthew, Mark, nor Luke. This commandment was given when the traitor "was gone out," and the salutation in the primitive church marks the period as well as the fact of the exclusion of the noncommunicants from the Lord's table. The period of this discourse is covered by the words, "And as they were eating," by Matthew and Mark, and the significant statement, "After the supper," by Luke.

Since the bread and cup were taken after the supper, they form no part of the supper, and we must interpret "and as they did eat" in harmony with Luke 22: 20, as well as the context which is as follows: "(And as they were eating) Jesus took bread and blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to the disciples."

Now, are we to understand, as some do, that the disciples were eating the supper when (while) Jesus took the bread, and while he was giving thanks, or blessing the bread? Think carefully here. See Jesus solemnly blessing the bread. Would the disciples be eating during any part of this solemn and impressive service? If the disciples were still eating the supper when Jesus took the bread, the context would force us to the conclusion that they were eating when our Lord was blessing the bread of communion; neither would we find any place for that beautiful discourse of our Lord, as given by John after Judas "was gone out."

We can not, by any act of Conference, change the primitive practice. That is a fact of history. Neither can we change the practice of the last two hundred years. That, also, is a matter of history. If we cease to observe the salutation before the communion, it may gratify a few, but will it please God and the holy angels? Are we able to measure its bearing and influence upon the civilization of the world, as well as upon our highest conception of Christianity itself? As the symbol of peace and unity and love, there is no more fitting time and place to observe it than at the communion service. Sad will it be for the church, —calamitous to the world, when this distinctive mark of primitive Christianity shall be dropped.

The Rebaptism Question.

BY QUINCY LECKRONE.

THE Church of Christ is a spiritual institution. Its membership is made up of those who have followed Christ in the regeneration (Matt. 19:28). This includes an inward work of grace, attested by an obedience to the literal requirements of the New Testament.

No amount of strictness in complying with the literal ordinances, without this inward work, will make any one a member of the spiritual body or church of Christ. Likewise no conviction or repentance, or inward work of grace, will, without the literal ordinances, secure the blessings of the kingdom (John 3:5). Both are essential.

Now the spiritual body has come down to us in an unbroken line of succession from the time of the apostles. In that succession the Church of the Brethren stands. How did it get in that line? To say that there was no representation of that body on earth, when the literal Church of the Brethren was organized in Germany, is to say that God had no church, literal or spiritual on the earth for many centuries prior to 1708, and that, therefore, the men who organized were not, prior to that organization, members of God's spiritual church, and God was totally without a people on the earth. This view we cannot accept. These Brethren were in line of apostolic succession, and being so, it was their duty to carry out the literal forms ordained of God. When they resolved to do so, and organized themselves for that purpose, they were now recognized also as the literal representative, or home, of God's spiritual church. They organized because they could not, or did not, find any organization carrying out the ordinances as they understood them.

If their work of organization was recognized as legitimate, why cannot other men do likewise? It is unreasonable for us to repudiate the entire work of all other organizations. It alienates all Christendom, outside of the Church of the Brethren, not only of the present age, but for centuries past, for there has not been an organization, since the very first centuries, the work of which we would now accept.

The gist of the matter is this, Whenever a people, having had wrought in them the inward work of grace, swing into line with the literal requirements of the Gospel, they are accepted as the people of God, irrespective of when, or how, or by whom, they were organized. To repudiate this thought, is to deny the right for the existence of the Church of the Brethren.

There are other bodies of believers, holding and practicing doctrines largely identical with the Brethren. As to baptism, especially, some denominations perform the rite for the same purpose and in the same way, and shall we presume to question their right or authority to do so, seeing that we possess our authority in the same way they possess theirs? True, we have alienated them from us, or, rather, they alienated themselves from us, but the founders of the church, when they organized in Germany, did the same thing.

The members of these bodies, that were once the Brethren church, are one today as much as they ever were one on the doctrine and practice of baptism.

When a member from one of these bodies seeks membership in the Church of the Brethren, for us to ask him to be rebaptized is to ask him to renounce his former baptism, which he, and we all believe was done according to the commission and literally correct; we ask him to renounce it and receive from us the same thing, for no reason other than that the administrator can not trace his literal succession back to the time of Mack.

I may be in error, but I have been told that in the past ministers have served in the Brethren church who were received into the church on their alien baptism, which baptism was even by single immersion. (We know at least that the Annual Meeting of 1832 acknowledged and permitted the receiving of persons who had been baptized by single immersion.) This being true, it may be that some of us would have trouble in tracing our line of succession properly.*

But it may be argued that, since the Conference sanctioned it, that made it legal. If it did, then, by all means, let the Conference now sanction the judgment of those sainted fathers of the church, and at least make it legal to receive those baptized by trine immersion.

There is a case of rebaptism mentioned in Acts 19:1-17, but there is nothing in this to lead us to believe that this baptism was according to the formula of Matt. 28:19, or that it was by trine immersion. On the other hand, it is evident they had not heard of Christ's baptism. Doubtlessly they had been baptized by some one of John's disciples who was totally ignorant of Christ's teaching on the subject of baptism, and knew nothing about the "Commission." Perhaps they had been baptized according to John's formula after the time Christ gave his "Commission," which made the baptism of John obsolete, and surely could not be accepted by the disciples of Christ.

Turning to Acts 8 we have another instance where the apostles found persons who had been baptized by some one who, apparently, had not full authority to baptize, but they knew the baptism of Christ, and had been baptized according to his formula, by trine immersion, so they were not rebaptized, but the twelve Ephesians had been baptized by another mode, for another purpose, by some one who was not a disciple of Christ, but of John, whose formula for baptism could no longer be used. When Christ gave his "commission," that ended the mission of John's baptism, and those baptized after this, unto John's baptism, were not legally baptized.

Bearing in mind, then, that literal baptism, though essential to our salvation, does not depend for its legality upon an unbroken line of descent from the apostolic time, but upon a strict compliance with the "Commission" of Christ, by men who are in the spiritual line of apostolic faith and practice, let us approach the great question in all sincerity, with much prayer for the guidance of the Holy Spirit, that the faithful in Christ may not be further separated by any injudicious clinging to ideas of exclusive self-sufficiency.

Royersford, Pa.

*While the action of the Conference of 1832, Art. 6, might seem to sanction single immersion, that was not the intention of the decision, so the next year, Annual Meeting placed itself properly on record by saying, Art. 1: "It was considered, that we can not deem any other baptism as valid, according to the Word of God, but a threefold immersion." —ED.

Going Uphill Empty.

BY JAMES M. NEFF.

I HAVE a pretty little spot of comparatively level ground here, between the hills. We call it "The Flat." I find that my meager strength renders advisable as little encounter as possible with the steep hillsides, hence my activities are largely confined to "The Flat." But, preparatory to planting some eucalyptus trees, I recently plowed up a little plot of hillside land. I had not plowed many rounds until I discovered that it was too hard work for the team to plow while ascending a steep hill, so I adopted the plan of throwing the plow out of the ground and going uphill empty. I did not like the idea of spending as much time and effort, every time I came around, as it required to go up the hill without getting any plowing done, as I went up, but it seemed to be the best I could do. I was literally doing "uphill business."

And you have seen people engaged in "uphill business" yourself, haven't you? They put forth effort enough, but they are laboring under some difficulty that makes us feel like characterizing their task as "uphill business." And when I remind you, doubtless you will recall that "uphill business" usually means going uphill empty,—putting forth plenty of effort without accomplishing anything in line with the purpose of that effort. You see people going empty, sometimes, and you perhaps feel inclined to criticize them for accomplishing so little. The chances are you have seen their effort, but have not seen their hill. You have overlooked the difficulties under which they toil. It is more than likely that they are going empty because they are going uphill.

I am sorry for him whose Christian life is "uphill business." He is perhaps trying to carry the world with him, and in such a case true progress in the Christian life is impossible. Perhaps some thoughtless fellow-pilgrim is piling his pathway full of obstacles and hindrances.

And that church that is loaded down with a number of lukewarm, worldly members, while she strives to make progress in soul-winning, is engaged in "uphill business," and I'm sorry for her, too.

Now, I have plowed on the hillside for eucalyptus and I have plowed on "The Flat" for oats, and if my experience is worth anything, as applying to the Christian life, let me advise you that if you would make the best progress with the gospel plow, keep away from the hillsides. Plow on "The Flat." And don't push your brother up into the hills while he is trying to plow.

The Paper on Child Saving.

BY D. E. CRIPE.

THE Oklahoma District has asked for a reconsideration of the decision that Annual Meeting made last year on the child-saving problem. It asks this because it is well assured that the decision, as it now stands, is not for the greatest good of the cause of caring for homeless and neglected children.

This sentiment is very strong in the Oklahoma District, which was the first State District to take up the child-saving work on purely family-placing lines. The paper in question was first passed through one of the strongest of our local churches, in which none of the officers of the Board live. Then it was brought to the District Meeting, which was one of the largest ever held in Oklahoma, and was passed to Annual Meeting by a unanimous vote of the delegates.

Objections to Last Year's Decision.

The first objection to the decision made last year is this: Heretofore, Annual Meeting made it the duty of every State District to take up the child-saving work (see Minutes 1812, Art. 3; 1905, Art. 2) but the decision made last year releases every District from this duty except those where the sentiment strongly favors it. The District where the sentiment strongly favors it will take up the work without any encouragement from Annual Meeting. It is the Districts where this sentiment is lacking,—those who are indifferent about the homeless children,—that need to be urged and encouraged.

The second objection to this decision is that it makes it the duty of all members to give a "hearty support to institutions that are already in operation." As this is not modified, it may be understood to mean all Orphans' Homes. The explanation of one of the committee was that his intention, as a committee man, was to coöperate with Brethren Orphans' Homes, but he would go farther and, "to a certain degree," would coöperate with other Orphans' Homes. But it must be remembered that all we have on the Minutes is the report of the committee, and that the modifying speeches that were made, in no way change or modify the decision as it stands on the Minutes.

The Plan Proposed.

The plan suggested in the paper which is now to come before Annual Meeting, is that a Board be appointed by Annual Meeting, consisting of three brethren who have had experience and are interested in the work. This Board is to be the head, or unifying force, to encourage, help and direct the child-saving work of the General Brotherhood. This is in harmony with the practice of the Church of the Brethren. We have our General Mission Board, our Educational Board, our Sunday-school Committee, our Temperance Committee, and our Committee on Colonization.

This Board is to prepare and outline a general plan of work, and is to obtain a charter, similar to that of the General Mission Board. This will enable the Board to do business legally, to acquire and to hold property. If it becomes necessary, this Board can then erect temporary receiving homes and homes for the feeble-minded and incurable children, that can not be placed into families.

This Board shall be empowered to secure a medium of reaching the people, at least once a month. In this age of much reading no business can be carried on successfully without advertising. The General Mission Board found this necessary, and now we have the Missionary Visitor. Such a medium will be the best means of reaching the people, creating sentiment favorable to the neglected children, encouraging and directing the work of saving them.

The method proposed is to be the one of placing children into carefully-selected families. Annual Meeting authorized this plan ninety-nine years ago, and endorsed it several times since then. It is the only plan Annual Meeting ever endorsed, unless last year's decision be understood to endorse the Orphans' Home. God instituted the family for the purpose of rearing the human offspring, and it is the most perfect organization in the world. Of late the leading philanthropists of the land have all recognized the fact that the family is a far better home for the bringing up of children than any man-made institution can be.

This Board is not to do any radical work, nor to interfere with Districts which already have an Orphans' Home in operation. They are only to encourage such Districts to place their children into good family homes as soon as they can be procured, and thus gradually change their institution into a receiving home.

The Board is to work in peace and harmony with all the Districts, to awaken more interest in the poor, homeless, forsaken little ones, and bring about the greatest good to the greatest number of them, that they may be given the opportunities of a happy and useful life, and may be saved from want, from untimely death, from sin, from crime; that they may be saved for the nation, for the church, for the kingdom of Christ.

"Before" and "After" Treatment.

BY A. G. CROSSWHITE.

WHEN the National Cash Register Company, of Dayton, Ohio, obtained control of a certain tract of land in the suburban portion of that city, where their immense manufactory now stands, they were by no means pleased with their surroundings, and yet, they had no control beyond their direct holdings and options. Much of this territory was held by wealthy capitalists, and occupied by tenant workmen who cared but little for the appearance of things.

This was an eye-sore to this enterprising firm, and they resolved upon a "make or break" proposition. It was simply this,—to offer landlord and tenant trees, plants, or bulbs and seeds, as well as necessary tools with which to work, absolutely free, upon condition that they be allowed to photograph their backyards both "before" and "after" treatment.

Consent was given in most cases and it was indeed remarkable to note the change; and still more so to learn that such a large per cent of the people had taken advantage of this generous offer. In addition to this the company asked the privilege of submitting these photographs to competent judges who should award valuable premiums to those who had made the greatest improvements.

One was made to wonder why the few did not pattern after the majority, when results had been so gratifying. But is it not true in everything—perhaps more so in religious matters than anything else? When one sees such photographs of "before" and "after" treatment in medical sheets, they at once attract attention and especially when the case is similar to our own. An investigation is started and when satisfied that such is the case, money is no consideration.

There are many problems that confront us, and we are forced, often, to stop and consider a few of them; at least the practical ones; such as, "What am I?" "Where am I going?" "Where shall I spend eternity?"

Time is the span between two eternities, and life is a sensitized plate upon which is photographed our part in life's drama. How important that we pose well, for our part in life's record will be reviewed after we are gone; and, especially, at the judgment. Has God's grace and the application of Jesus' blood effected as great a change as physical remedies in which we have been interested?

The transformed life and transfigured countenance speak most eloquently of communion with the Christ; and yet thousands prefer to linger in the disgraceful backyard or stumble over the "crooked sticks" with whom, God has decreed, they shall spend an awful eternity!

Under the Juniper Tree.

BY ELEANOR J. BRUMBAUGH.

As we study the life of Elijah, we think it strange, indeed, that he should be so frightened at the threat of a wicked woman as to take such a journey, then sit down and ask that he might die. Did he forget, for a while, the God, who so wonderfully proved himself to be sufficient for all of his needs? It really seems so. How could Jezebel harm him, if he clung to God, claiming protection? This incident proves that those who are strong in the Lord, do sometimes forget, and when they do so, they are weak as the weakest, and fearful when there is nothing in reality to fear. "If God be for us, who can be against us?"

When Elijah heard that Jezebel threatened to kill him, it seems he thought only of the wicked woman and forgot God. To us it seems a strange circumstance. A man like Elijah fleeing from the woman who said she would kill him, when God had sent ravens to feed him, when he had given to him so many proofs of his protection, and loving care! He went, tired and discouraged, into the shade of the juniper tree, and requested that he might die. He could not endure the thought of that woman taking his life.

No wonder! But it was suffering he might have avoided if he had kept in mind the words of the Lord, instead of the words of Jezebel. He suffered in imagination what he never experienced. He was not killed. He did not have a loathsome disease, did not have any disease, did not even die. He went to heaven in a whirlwind, which would scare some of us as badly as if we were pursued by an enemy intent on killing.

Have you ever been under the juniper tree? Perhaps you have more than once come to places in life when the future looked so discouraging that you really wished you could die. At such a time you forgot all the good things God ever did for you, forgot all of his promises. You just wanted to leave all, and go to Him. But the mercy and goodness of God came to you in some remembered promise: "They that wait on the Lord shall renew their strength." "When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee." "My help cometh from the Lord." You breathed an earnest prayer for strength and help. You claimed the offered help, and this we need to do. God is always the same. His strength and help are ours continually, but we sometimes fail to appropriate them.

At such times we sink down in the shade of a juniper tree and ask to die. God does not grant our request. Then we turn to him, lay hold on some blessed promise, find some new work to do for him, and by and by thank him that he did not take us when we asked to go.

O how good God is, to give us new strength, and to give us these blessed promises and comforting words! He shows us how to use them, too. One day we read over something, that another day comes to us with new and beautiful meaning. He gives us the help we need. He raises us up from the shade of the tree, and sends us on to some new and blessed work for him. We should keep on reading God's Word, lest we miss some precious blessings.

I believe we often suffer because we do not try to find help in God through his Word. People think they have no time to study the Bible. Shame! God had yet many things for Elijah to do. A long journey to Horeb. There he crept into a cave. God called him out, as he does us, when we do so. He sent him to another mount to stand before Jehovah. Here he saw the strong wind rend the mountains and break in pieces the rocks. After the wind came an earthquake, then a fire, and then a still, small voice. All this was a symbol of the strange experiences we must meet. On and on God led him, to anoint Hazael to be king over Syria. Still other kings and prophets he anointed. Then he was sent to Elisha, to cast upon him his mantle. In many strange ways God led him, showing him many proofs of his presence. The last and most wonderful scene is his translation.

So long as God leaves us in this world, he has something for us to do. We may sometimes think we are of no use, but let us not think so, nor say so, for God is using us in many ways to help his work, and further his kingdom, if we have fully surrendered to him. No matter how old or helpless, there is yet something for us to do or to bear that makes us of use to him. It may be only waiting. If we wait patiently on the Lord, it is blessed service. True, we can not understand now, but we shall know hereafter. Read Rev. 21: 4, and be glad.

We have so many precious things awaiting us, and we may enjoy some of them now,—some that we are holding off for the future. We may not always succeed in keeping away thoughts that discourage. They steal in upon us, at times, but we may be able, in God's strength, to overcome so far that we can rejoice in him, and wait for the passing of the cloud, knowing that sunshine will come by and by. Just so we endure, and even enjoy, the few winter days that will surely come to us in the early months of the year, knowing that the beautiful spring days are not far away. When we remember that we are Christ's, and that he is sufficient for us, whatever comes, we will toil on in glad service for him.

Sereph Maltbie Dean, of New York City, expresses our thought beautifully in a little poem entitled, "For Ye Are Christ's."

"Dear comrades, are you wearied with the strife
Of daily life,
And tried until both flesh and soul are worn
With griefs long borne,
Then rise on wings of faith and swiftly fly
Unto that Love which sits entroned on high:—
For ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's.

"Even though the powers of darkness shall assail,
Right must prevail;
For we are told the battle is the Lord's,
And he awards
The victory, in his own good time, and way.
Then watch and wait, but labor on each day.
For ye are Christ's and Christ is God's."

The Signboard—A Preacher.

BY WILLIAM MULLEN.

I WAS once riding along the road, in company with an Englishman. He had not been in this country very long. When we came to the crossroad, he exclaimed: "Hallo! There is the preacher." I looked around, but I saw no one. Then I said to the Englishman: "Where is the preacher?" He answered: "There he is," pointing to the signboard. Then I saw how it told its story faithfully and clearly.

This, to me, is an ideal illustration. Would a signboard be positive proof, as to the right course to take, unless it had been placed there through accurate knowledge of the locality, and the destination to which the road leads? Then, too, it has a spiritual significance.

We are all traveling along the road of time. There are many signboards to direct us, as we pass down the journey of life. The way we should choose, and the signboard we should follow, depends upon the destination we hope to reach. If we are seeking the heavenly Canaan, we must choose the narrow way and be guided by the Word of Truth. This will lead us to eternal life.

Jesus, the Savior of the world, said: "I am the way, the truth and the life, and no one cometh to the Father but by me." He left the glories of heaven and brought to us a saving Gospel, that whosoever

"believeth him shall have everlasting life." He has ascended to heaven again, to prepare a place for us, that where he is there we may be also. He traveled the rough and rugged pathway of this earthly life for thirty-three and a half years, he inspected the road, and he is acquainted with all the dangers, highways and byways of sin. He spent three and one-half years in preparing his disciples to be leaders (signboards), so that they might be the means of directing all nations to observe all things whatsoever he has commanded them to do, and thereby be led to continue in the right path.

When Jesus was baptized of John in Jordan, and came up out of the water, the Holy Spirit descended in the form of a dove, and sat upon him. There was a voice from heaven, saying: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." It was a literal sign from heaven, indisputably showing that Jesus is the Son of God, the long-promised Messiah, who would take away the sin of the world. That day John and Jesus, at the command of an Allwise Ruler, put up a signboard at the crossroad, which should be the turning point in every man's life. All who will honestly and intelligently investigate the signboard, need not be in doubt nor consult man's opinions about it any further, as there can then be no mistake concerning the sure road to heaven.

In Rom. 6: 4 Paul says that when we reach that point we begin to walk in newness of life; for God has publicly declared Jesus to be his beloved Son, and if we have repented, made a public confession, and have been buried with Christ in baptism, it is evident that we are following the signboard, which the Savior put up for the guidance of all those who will obey his instructions. Following his footprints, they will surely be led in the right direction.

The signboard will unfailingly guide the individual into the house of God. It will not take any one long to become a child of God, but it will take his entire earthly career to establish his identity as a true heir to the Heavenly King, even if he should live to be as old as Methuselah. Be sure that you follow the right signboard. The way is narrow, but there is room upon it for all true Christians. Start right now! Do not delay! Read! Ponder! Apply!

Rebaptism by Trine Immersion.

BY D. B. GIBSON.

REBAPTISM by trine immersion, for the remission of sins, is not consistent: (1) Because trine immersion is the command of Christ in the commission (Matt. 28: 19). (2) Because baptism need not be repeated (Eph. 4: 5),—"one baptism." (3) It is the baptism of the ages. All historians agree that it is the oldest recorded baptism. (4) When persons who have been members of other churches profess faith in God, and want to unite with the Brethren, we readily accept their faith. If they have repented of their sins, we accept their repentance. If their walk is in harmony with the Christian profession, we accept their walk and conversation. Surely, if we accept all their antecedents,—which course is in direct harmony with the Gospel and the order of the Church of the Brethren, then I ask: "Why should we reject their baptism when it is identical with ours, and, in most cases, drawn from the same source?"

But the objector says, "Alexander Mack was baptized by the church." I wonder if there was a "Church of the Brethren" before baptism. If so, baptism is not the door into the church, and these eight were in Christ without baptism, which does not harmonize with the teaching of the apostles, nor the practice of the Church of the Brethren (Rom. 6: 3). "Baptized into Christ Jesus" (Col. 3: 1); "Risen with Christ," "Baptized into Christ" (Gal. 3: 27).

Apollos was not rebaptized (Acts 18: 24-28), but we are told, "This man was instructed in the way of the Lord; and being fervent in the spirit, he spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord, knowing only the baptism of John," etc. "Aquila and Priscilla took him unto them, and expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly." They did not rebaptize him.

So it looks to me that, when we find people believing what we believe, and baptized with the same baptism that we have been, and that, too, by those whose baptism came from the same source that ours came, and are willing to live by the same rule that we follow, we should be glad to receive them.

Church union is to be desired and prayed for. Christ prayed for this union (John 17: 21). If a reunion of the church shall ever be accomplished, it will be as soon as we are willing to accept the trine immersion of those who have withdrawn from us a generation ago. It is scarcely to be expected that fifteen or twenty thousand people, who have been baptized as we were, for the same purpose, and upon whom hands have been laid, should submit in faith to such rebaptism. To reject trine immersion thus administered puts the Church of the Brethren in a compromising attitude before the world. It is equal to saying that trine immersion is not Christian baptism unless it is performed by us.

Congregational Versus Choir Singing.

BY JOSEPH STUDEBAKER.

"Fill your churches with music and they will be filled with people," was a common expression of the departed Mr. C. E. Leslie. This is surely a motto we need to apply in seeking to improve the music of the Church of the Brethren. Often the most quarrelsome members of any congregation are those who cling together, and, because they are gifted in music and have better opportunities than other members, form themselves into a choir, a quartette, or a double quartette, to "show off" and offend the true, steady and earnest members of the church organization.

It is the great regret of our popular churches today, that they have ever left the good hymns, which used to be sung "with the spirit and with the understanding also."

Music for worship should always be rendered by the whole congregation, as far as possible, so that all can be inspired by the beautiful thoughts of the hymns, harmonized to an appropriate melody. When a few only engage in the song service, it casts a gloom over the audience. Nearly every Christian can sing to some extent, if given the opportunity and proper encouragement. While only a few are gifted to preach the Gospel in its primitive purity and power, and not all are gifted to pray in public, it is surprising and encouraging to know how great a number can lift their voices in singing "glory to God in the highest" from our Church Hymnal, if properly directed.

There is no better way to welcome a stranger to our church service than to place a Hymnal in his hands, so that he can join in the singing. As we sing "The Half Has Never Yet Been Told,"—especially after a good, soul-inspiring sermon,—our souls are ready to soar higher and higher. There is nothing like the good old songs of Zion to inspire real religious fervor.

I fear there is too much drifting off to the entertaining side of music, at our regular preaching services. Too often the aged members are forced to attempt the catchy songs which do not appeal to their spiritual desires. Why not give them the old songs while they are with us for a short time? The aged veterans are rapidly falling on every side, and I should like to help in making their latter days their best days. This can never be done by choir singing. No Christians want to be deprived of doing at least some singing at our services, even if they can not preach or pray.

I have tried, in my work among the churches, to encourage general song service, so that all can take a part. This is the only way we can fill our churches with music. By congregational singing there is so great an inclination, in a few of us, who are gifted in song, to depart from the good old songs, so spiritual in their make-up, that I fear it will cause regret in the good, faithful members of Zion, who have borne the heat and burden of the church for, lo, these many years, and will soon join the "redeemed singers."

It would not be best to discourage the young members by the continual repetition of old songs. But this is impossible with our good standard hymns and tunes, that have lasted so long. It is not so much what we sing as how we sing what we sing. Love inspires a song. If our purpose is to worship, then all will be willing to sacrifice a little along this line of introducing the new music of catchy songs. At least we will refrain from doing so in regular services and prayer meetings.

I believe the Hymnal is next to the Bible in our worship. I am very loath to give up the good work of our brother, Geo. B. Holsinger and many other good hymn writers, who stand so high in the esteem of so many. Let us ever contend for congregational singing and discourage the introduction of singing merely for entertainment.

Before I united with the Church of the Brethren, I assisted the choirs of other denominations, but I became disgusted with the lives and conduct of the members of the choir during choir practice. I felt condemned when obliged to appear on the Lord's Day with such people. Though they appeared with a saintly look before the congregation, their conduct was otherwise.

Music for worship and music for entertainment is different in nature and purpose. I will not endeavor to explain the difference in this article. Suffice it to say that music for worship is for the Christian churches,—congregational,—while music for entertainment is for literary societies, etc. It consists of bands, choirs, quartettes, duets, solos, and the like.

WASHINGTON CITY, D. C.

In the absence of the elder, the pastor, Bro. W. D. Keller, presided at the regular council held on Monday evening, April 3. One letter of membership was granted. Report of the annual visit of the deacons showed a membership of one hundred and sixty-four. Election of delegates to the District Meeting resulted in the choice of Brethren J. H. Hollinger and Martin C. Flohr; alternates, Brethren Garber and Keller. Five solicitors were appointed to secure funds toward the purchase of a parsonage which now belongs to the General Mission Board. Four papers were sent to the District Meeting, having to do with the work in Washington, as well as matters affecting the general Brotherhood. One of the papers asks the privilege of soliciting the District for the parsonage purchasing fund, above referred to. Bro. D. E. Miller was chosen church treasurer.

On Sunday, April 2, Eld. Bonsack was with us in the morning, delivering one of his characteristic, good sermons, which was followed in the evening by one from Bro. Engler, the Sunday-school Secretary for this District, which was much appreciated by all. Bro. Virgil C. Finnell gave us a call the last Sunday of March, and opened the eyes of some of us regarding the publishing interests of the church. The interest in the Sunday-school continues, as appears from the following figures, taken from the report of the secretary for the quarter just ended: Total collection for same quarter last year $47.07, as compared to $60-72 this year. Average attendance for 1910, 108, while, for 1911, the average is 124, an increase of sixteen. The enrollment, at the present time, is 213. MRS. D. E. MILLER.

DAHANU, INDIA.

These are the Hindu Holidays, and there is much feasting, drinking and fighting among the people. Our cartman, who has been attending our services and has been much inclined to turn to Christ, got into a quarrel with his uncle. By and by, to take out revenge, the uncle and his son came to the cartman's house with heavy clubs and beat him. They doubtless would have killed him, but for the police who were near by. They put the three in jail, awaiting the trial. Some of the money, so much needed at home, will be spent, and the hatred and quarrel will go on. Only the Spirit of Christ in the heart will fully settle these family quarrels. God speed the day when these heathen holidays, with all their attending evils, will be changed to days of prayer and praise to the true God!

We have been greatly blessed by the soul-cheering visits of Brother and Sister Wieand and Brother Souders. They sailed from Bombay yesterday, but they left us richer in spirit because of their uplifting conversation and their whole-hearted prayers. May the Lord give them a safe return to the homeland!

We are trying to keep up four village Sunday-schools among the heathen neighbors. In some of these villages the people are very much interested in the picture rolls and listen well to the explanation. Some of the people try to help us sing songs.

The study of God's Word is always new, fresh and interesting. Even our illiterate Christian women are taking interest in the study of Acts. We meet together every Thursday for this study. The Old Testament lessons, concerning Elijah and Elisha, have been a source of great interest and surprise to those who have never heard these stories before. "The entrance of thy word giveth light" (Psa. 119: 130). ALICE K. EBEY.

THE ROUND TABLE

Sunday Newspapers.

BY MINERVA ROOP.

WHEN the MESSENGER of Feb. 4 arrived, containing so many good articles, "The Sunday Newspaper," by Eld. Jas. A. Sell, especially held my attention. The article is pointed, and gives much food for serious reflection.

That the influence of the Sunday papers is baneful upon the minds of the young is clear to all. A few personal observations will be helpful to keep the subject before our people, with the thought of impressing Bro. Sell's excellent truths upon the minds of parents and all others who have the love of the cause and the saving of young souls at heart.

The caricatures in the Sunday paper are not refined, hence the unfortunate effect upon the tender mind,—like picture, like child. We have all noticed that children who, unfortunately, have access to the Sunday paper, are affected thereby. Some children, when drawing, can make beautiful landscapes and flowers, but when they attempt to draw a human being, their efforts are a complete failure,—in appearance much like those in Sunday newspapers.

In Gen. 1: 26 we read that God said, "Let us make man in our own image." In 1 Tim. 2: 2 we are told for whom we should pray. Instead the suggestion to the young is, "Put the image of man into the newspaper for criticism and ridicule, in the most dishonorable way." And this is becoming a respectable(?) occupation.

When humanity perverts its God-given powers to the distortion of their Maker's image, then and there they prostitute their noblest power to evil ends. We should do all things to the Lord's glory, having before us this image. We should stop, look, and listen!

Some Experiences.

BY LEONORA YATES.

TODAY I went to the depot to take a train. I had scarcely taken my seat when a middle-aged, well-dressed lady sat down beside me. After exchanging a few words she said: "I observed, by your manner of dress, that you are a Christian, and I just wanted to talk with you. My heart is so hungry for good things, as one sees and hears so much that is not good, and so little that is good, in this day and age of the world." How our hearts burned within us as we talked of God's great love and goodness! The time passed rapidly and the parting time came all too soon, but there was a firm hand-clasp, and a hearty "God bless you" rang in my ear long after the train had passed out of sight.

Dear sisters, are you ashamed, or the least bit timid about wearing the bonnet? It is surely a help to us wherever we go. It insures for us a recognition any place. We will be respected and honored by all intelligent and sensible people, if we are true to our profession. I once did some canvassing. I soon found out that I needed some tracts. I believe I had better success in explaining our religion than I had in canvassing. I have had many rich experiences that I should otherwise not have had, if I would not have worn my bonnet. May we strive every day to live true lives, so that we may be worthy of the good opinions and confidence bestowed upon us!

The Dog Catcher.

BY GEO. F. CHEMBERLEN.

I REMEMBER, when a boy, of chasing around after the "dog catchers." My companions and I followed them because of the "things that would be doing" when they got hold of some Irish woman's stray goat, innocently browsing upon the commons. The "catchers" always carried a wire noose, with which to take the invader, whether it be canine or capra. They did so because they had learned, in the beginning of their unpleasant task, that it would not do to take a dog, however gentle he might be, by the ears or tail.

Now, here is one of my golden texts. It is good advice for any one,—especially the itinerant, for whom it has a clear sound. In such capacity, I have myself employed it a number of times,—always with good results. Prov. 26: 17, "He that passeth by, and meddleth with strife belonging not to him, is like a man that taketh a dog by the ears."

Now, if you have not seen the point yet, and care to get a full trial benefit, just take some homely and apparently homeless street canine by the auditory appendages and note the result. There will be a tremendous howl; you will lose some of your blood, and a good deal of your temper. Likely there will be violent opposition by the owner of the dog, unless he happened to be a Christian. In that instance you will be told to mind your own business, or else take a dog of your own to raise.

An Unhappy Experience.

BY I. J. ROSENBERGER.

A NUMBER of years ago, one quiet Sunday, as the day was closing, an aged brother, John B., and his son, knocked at my door. I opened the door and welcomed them, wondering, all the while, as to their mission, for their appearance showed them to be in trouble. Brother John broke the silence and said: "Brother Isaac, I have become very much dissatisfied with my baptism, and I have come to have you rebaptize me. I was baptized by trine immersion before I came to the Brethren. When I made application to be received into the Brethren church, they told me that they would recognize my baptism, and they received me into the church by the right hand of fellowship. Now I see that the Scriptures teach that baptism is the door into the church, and not the right hand of fellowship."

Brother John had been a member for about thirty-five years. Twenty-five of these he had been a most faithful deacon. His son had been a deacon for years. The solution of this perplexed condition was no little task. It might all, all have been evaded had those elders done just as Paul did,—retaught Bro. John B., and rebaptized him as Paul did in Acts 19, or had done. I thank God that we are so well furnished in the Scriptures for our Master's work.

Picture of the Grandmother.

BY H. J. HARNLY.

THE picture of "the loveliest grandmother" in No. 12 reminds me of what the Methodist minister of Palo Alto said, a few weeks ago, in a Sunday evening sermon. He was discussing the influence of the life upon the countenance, and said that, during the previous week, in company with the Presbyterian minister, he visited a family. They were shown the pictures of the grandparents who had been Quakers, and were both impressed by the singular beauty of the aged couple. The Presbyterian minister remarked: "I would travel a thousand miles any day to behold such beautiful faces."

I quote from No. 10, page 149: "The whole business of the whole church is to preach the whole Gospel to the whole world." That is good, but I suggest the following: "The whole business of the whole church is to live the whole Gospel before the whole world."

Anointing the Sick.

BY LEANDER SMITH.

THIS, while one of the fundamental doctrines of our church, is much neglected. Many of our church members have been afflicted for years and yet have never felt the necessity of being anointed. Why? Because they have never been taught the importance of the service. The sick send for the family physician. Why not send for their spiritual advisers that they may be able to place themselves in the hands of the Great Physician? The promise of being saved and raised up and forgiven, is most precious to the sick.

I have never engaged in any service by which I realized more of the power of the Holy Spirit. Surely, it is the duty of all our ministers to teach the importance of this service, so that our afflicted ones may be able to avail themselves of this special means of grace. "If he have committed sins they shall be forgiven him." Oh, the blessed promise, "If thou put the brethren in remembrance of these things thou shalt be a good minister of Jesus Christ, nourished up in the words of faith and of good doctrine; whereunto thou hast attained." (1 Tim. 4: 6).

THE Founder of Christianity urged his people to pray for a particular object. "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest." Oh! isn't it strange, that the only special subject of prayer that he named, as far as I can recollect, at least, is so seldom heard in our pulpits?—J. A. Broadus.

PRAYER MEETING

The Worth-While Life.

Prov. 10: 1-7; 22-29.

For Week Beginning April 30, 1911.

1. The Worth-While Life Depends upon a Bountiful Heart.—The man whose heart is rich,—who loves truly, and therefore is truly loved,—how rich he is! He has friends and neighbors and family to enjoy, and they enjoy him! Such heart-millionaires are rich in sympathy. Their very handclasp is like a healing balm to a wounded soul. Just to meet them does one good like a medicine. One need never go about with fear, lest some unintentional slight may offend them. How rich they are in friendship, too, so that one can rely on their love as something safe and secure against both the opposition of traducers and the honeyed flattery of deceit (Prov. 17: 17; 18: 24).

2. The Riches of Integrity.—The glory and crown of life is character,—the integrity that never fails. It is the noblest possession any of us can have, constituting a rank in itself. There is a rich estate in conscious integrity and the general good-will of our fellowmen. It dignifies every station, exalts every position in society and exercises a far greater power than wealth ever does. Character has an influence which always tells (Prov. 11: 3; 20: 7).

3. Character Is Power.—This is true in a much higher sense than that knowledge is power. Everywhere, at all times, for all classes and conditions of men, there is but the one essential fact that character gives strength to do and to dare all that is pure and noble in the sight of God and of man. It was Daniel's unimpeachable integrity that made him a man of sterling character and unbounded power. The "excellent spirit" that was within him manifested itself as the "worth-while life" to all with whom he came in contact (Dan. 6: 3, 10, 25-28).

HOME AND FAMILY

Be Swift.

Be swift, dear heart, in loving,
For time is brief,
And thou may'st along life's highway
Keep step with grief.

Be swift, dear heart, in saying
The kindly word;
When ears are sealed, thy passionate pleading
Will not be heard.

Be swift, dear heart, in doing
The gracious deed,
Lest soon they whom thou holdest dearest
Be past the need.

Dear heart, be swift in loving—
Time speedeth on;
And all thy chance of blessed service
Will soon be gone.

The Woods in Winter.

BY ELIZABETH D. ROSENBERGER.

It is reasonable to suppose that most of the poetry about winter has been written by the cheerful fireside. But we are not among those who cower at home, sighing over faded woodlands and meadows brown and sere. The winter atmosphere has a sting to it but what of that? Slip away, up the road to the woods, and look about you. But first listen to a voice, or is it an echo of summer? No, it is the music of the winter woods. On a stormy day you can almost distinguish the bass as the solemn roar of the giant oak trees, and you love the sound of the wind in the tree tops.

If you have thought that there is life and color only in the green trees and blossoms of the summer, you should look carefully at the different hues the woods display in winter. If you happen to walk there when a snowstorm is brooding you find all the trees in a Quaker shade,—a steel gray. Some days later, when the warm south wind is blowing and you see the gray mists trail across the meadows, the steel turns to almost black. As you slowly walk along and look through the long avenues ahead, the waving boughs appear black as a raven's wing. Perhaps you never noticed before the intricate framework of the trees; the short twigs, the long saplings, stiff, blunt stems and great, gaunt branches grow side by side in the friendliest fashion. It is a joy to see the evergreens, when the hills are covered with a white carpet, their green sprays are most beautiful. But we have seen enough to feel that all the glory and beauty are not confined to the summer months alone, that winter winds, and fields covered with snow and ice, have a charm distinctively their own. It is growing late, the sun is sinking lower and lower in the hills behind us, the trees whisper weirdly. It is inexpressibly lonely, all of a sudden, and the sun is gone from the western horizon. The afterglow lingers on the hills as we go home.

"Waiting for spring! Ah me, all nature tarries
As motionless and cold she lies asleep,
Wrapt in her green pine robe that never varies
Wearing out winter by this southern deep.

"Waiting for spring! Poor hearts! how oft ye weary,
Looking for better things and grieving much!
Earth lieth still, though all her bowers be dreary
She trusts her God, nor thrills but at her touch."

Is that one of the things we have learned this afternoon? That winter is like the waiting time in our lives when we are anxiously looking forward to some event which shall change our plans or our work? The woods, so bare in winter, give us another view of life's largeness. We think of it as all in one piece. Even as it takes the frosts of winter, the snows and storms, as well as the sunny days and flowing fountains of summer to complete a year, so the duties, trials and struggles, the joy and cheer make up the sum of human life. Looked at as a whole there is something almost appalling in the thought of our responsibility in living. But we never have more than one day's battles to fight at a time, or more than one day's work to do in any one day. Jesus would have us fence each day off by itself, and never look over the fence to think about tomorrow's cares. The snows of winter conceal warm, pulsing life underground, and the spring will show the light green shoots and the fair blossoms. Do not become impatient, waiting for the spring. You want something that is out of your reach. You are longing for it and dreaming of the time when it shall be in your possession. That is the first step towards achievement. Artists and poets, blacksmiths and farmers,—all who ever win anything worth winning in this world,—must wish and hope and dream. Afterward come the will and power to achieve. So the world's best work has ever been done.

We count as important the seedtime and harvest. We think less of the time when the fields are lying idle, brown and neglected; the cold winds sweeping over them as over a barren waste. Let us take to heart the lesson that we can never live any better than we inwardly think. And unless we dream about and hope for a more enriching sort of life than we are now living our steps shall trail down the easy way to indecision and failure. On these wintry days let us have clear ideals and our vision hours shall give us gleams of what we shall be when time and God's resources have wrought their purpose of strength and beauty in the human soul. If we live in close communion with Jesus he will reveal to us the secret we must know, if today shall be better than yesterday. Now is the time to be discontented with our past. Let us look forward, knowing that we can win greater victories. These days should be luminous with the light of God; they should guide us to our heavenly home, they should give us that courage which chooses the hard duty that others are trying to avoid. Let us keep the days, as they pass, all pure and lovely with the loveliness of holy, useful living!

Character Building.

BY MARY BARNHART.

When the builder takes the contract to erect a dwelling, he digs deep till he reaches solid ground. Then, using rocks or concrete, he makes a solid foundation. Then, little by little, he rears the structure upon it. What care he uses that every stone or timber may be of the best material and properly placed!

If we watch his workmen for a few days or weeks, we see it grow into a beautiful cottage. Though it seems that the work progresses slowly sometimes, yet at last all is finished and the family removes from the old to the new home.

While they are enjoying its comforts, we are led to meditate. We think how much, like the erecting of a dwelling, is the forming of our lives, the building of our characters.

A well dwelling grows little by little till, at length, the complete structure stands before us, so, little by little, every day we are forming character. Whether we realize it or not, we are constructing a building,—a temple,—that is either to stand through all eternity or to perish in wreck and ruin when the waves of God's wrath shall sweep to destruction every building not founded upon the Rock of Ages.

The Father has given to us the choice between two ways of building. We may build upon sand or upon the solid rock.

Each thought that we think, each word that we say and the deeds that spring from the thoughts of our hearts, are the materials with which we are building. The small things as well as the great ones are noticed by the Great Architect, and however insignificant they may seem to us, he will place them into the building. Whether they will serve for usefulness and ornament, or only to weaken the structure, depends upon ourselves, for we, and we only, must supply the materials. If the contractor, in constructing the material dwelling, misplaces a timber, or uses an ill-fitting stone, he mars the beauty and symmetry of the building. So sin in the heart produces evil thoughts and words and deeds, that weaken the "spiritual house," and mar its beauty.

When, for the first time, a little babe is laid in its mother's arms, she thinks how sweetly innocent it is, and she wishes that it might always be pure. But what a change even only a few years may bring.

If the child comes into a Christian home, it may, as soon as it can talk, be taught to lisp a little prayer, and to love the sweet story of Jesus. Thus it will grow up in the service of the Master. If otherwise, and the surroundings are not such as tend to develop the spiritual nature of the child, the child that, when first laid in its mother's arms was so innocent and pure, grows up to learn and know nothing of God or of his responsibility to him.

He consequently learns to walk the downward way, going farther and farther into the paths of sin, caring nothing for the good and true, perhaps becoming a vagabond and a wanderer, clothed in rags and seeking his bread from door to door. He who was once some mother's pride and joy, will, if you ask his story, tell you that not all at once was he plunged so deeply into iniquity and vagabondage, but just as the house was built, little by little, each day his habits were formed, and little by little they grew upon him, till, like a dilapidated dwelling, he stands as a warning to all beholders.

O Christian fathers and mothers, are you as careful with the children whom God has entrusted to you, as is the contractor in building a dwelling? Are you careful, in its earliest years, to develop its spiritual nature, upon which, as a foundation, its character must be builded?

It is natural for a child to love the things that its parents teach it to love. If not only by precept, but by example also, the parent shows to the child that he loves spiritual things, the child will love them also.

Children are natural imitators, and every word and act of the parent is copied by the child or treasured in memory, to copy when occasion offers. Do not, then, leave the selection of the material for the "living temple" unto others, but bring up the children in the "nurture and admonition of the Lord."

You can not leave this training to the teacher of the day school, for while there is so much controversy as to whether or not the Bible should be allowed in the day school, the character of the children is forming, and while the discussion is being waged, the parent must see to it that it is not neglected in the home.

It can not be left to the teacher of the Sunday-school altogether, for here, too often, the Bible is crowded out for material which is intended to hold the child's attention, and if it were always otherwise, a half hour, once a week, given to the study of God's Word, gives the child small opportunity to know much about it.

Give, then, the proper home teaching and the proper example. It will form such a character as Christ, the Master Builder, shall approve.

SISTERS' AID SOCIETIES

MUSCATINE MISSION, IOWA.—We reorganized our Sisters' Aid Society March 13, with Sister Emily Cottrel as president; Sister Swanson, vice-president; Sister Robinson, secretary; Sister Amy Townson, treasurer. During the past year our society met ten times, with an average attendance of four. We are few in number and very much scattered, but we are trying to do what we can. We have helped some and still have $15 in the treasury.—Mrs. Addie Robinson, Muscatine, Iowa, March 29.

SABETHA, KANS.—Our Sisters' Aid Society met March 16, 1911, and reorganized with Sister Sarah Cook as president; Sister Lucy Hoover, vice-president; the writer, secretary-treasurer. During the year we met forty times, with an average attendance of six. Our work, so far, has been quilting. Within the year we have made twelve quilts, and donated nine half-days' work. We received for work done, and fees for the first year, $38.25; for a carpet for the church, $13.50; donated a quilt top and $1 to finish same, to a sister that was burned out; also $5 to a minister's wife; leaving in the treasury, at this time, $13.48. We have on hand two comfort tops that have been donated to the society. We gathered up and sent eleven sacks of clothing to the Kansas City and St. Joseph Missions, valued at $26.—Clara Christenson, Secretary, Sabetha, Kans., April 4.

LEWISTOWN, PA.—Our Sisters' Aid Society from Jan. 1, 1910, to Jan. 1, 1911, held twenty-two meetings. We have thirty members enrolled, with an average attendance of eight. We met every two weeks. Our sewing consists of piecing quilts, making aprons of different kind, belts, bonnets, clothes-pin bags, holders, etc. In December we sent a box and barrel of groceries and clothing to the Brooklyn Mission; gave to charity, $5; for the support of an orphan in India, $20; received for articles sold, $67.65; dues collected, $21.01; donations received, $6.65; paid out for material, $28.36. We have pledged $100 toward the building of a Sunday-school room, which we need very much. We have the amount in bank, to be used when it is needed, which will likely be this summer. Sister Sarah Brininger is our president; Sister Caroline Ruble, vice-president; Sister Catharine Spangle, treasurer; Sister Anna Spangle, assistant; the writer, secretary.—Ella Rothrock, Secretary, Lewistown, Pa., March 29.

ON page 251 will be found the report of the committee on the anointing question. It reached us a few hours too late to appear in the issue mailed last week.

MANY of our Sunday-schools are using the "birthday offerings" to send the MESSENGER to those who are not members. The very gratifying results already reported would indicate that method to be a most commendable one.

THE monthly members' meeting at Elgin, on the second Tuesday evening of April, passed off very pleasantly. Bro. Graybill Royer was chosen to represent our congregation at the St. Joseph Conference, with Sister Adaline H. Beery as alternate.

BRO. D. L. MILLER offers a wise suggestion in regard to making Winona Lake the permanent place for the Annual Meeting, whenever it comes to the Middle States. We are quite sure that Ohio, Indiana and Illinois can unite on a proposition of this sort.

ASSISTED by Brethren J. M. Lair and J. E. Ulery, the little band of members in and around Long Lake, Mich., have been organized into a congregation. They start out with encouraging prospects and will likely develop into a strong and efficient center of influence.

COMMENTING on the recent bankruptcy of the Pain Fireworks Manufacturing Company, because of the crusade for a safe and sane Fourth of July, one of our exchanges pertinently asks, "When will we hear that the Krupp gun works have shared the same fate?"

SOMETIMES little hands must beckon the parents to seek a refuge in the loving arms of Christ. A correspondent tells of the parents of a dear little child that was taken to the paradise of God when scarcely two years had passed away. Through their tears the dear parents saw more clearly what they had only dimly seen before,—they made their peace with the Lord, and are now rejoicing in the blessed hope of some day meeting the loved one gone before.

Do not neglect the aged and infirm members who are confined to their homes, and unable to meet with the saints in the public assembly. Remember them in their loneliness and, whenever possible, arrange for a prayer service in their homes. A little thoughtfulness along this line will do a world of good.

WHILE sin should be rebuked wherever found, there is danger lest we become chronic faultfinders, "busybodies in other men's matters," as the apostle puts it. As members of the church we must be tender and winning. "The nail of reproof," says an old writer, "must be well oiled in kindness before it is driven home."

THE many local Bible Institutes, held in the various churches, indicate a growing desire for a better knowledge of Bible topics and matters of doctrine. Such a tendency is most encouraging. Knowledge is power, and a thorough knowledge of the Word will undoubtedly result in many well-prepared workers for the future.

WE notice that not a few of the churches have decided not to be represented by delegates at the St. Joseph Conference. This, undoubtedly, is a great mistake. Important questions are coming up for the disposal of the Conference and every church should have a share in the proper consideration of these questions.

BRO. C. G. LINT, elder of the Meyersdale, Pa., congregation, who recently celebrated the fifty-sixth anniversary of his marriage, is well stricken in years, and his eyesight is practically gone. Though somewhat feeble in body, his mental and spiritual faculties are still quite vigorous, and he is as zealous as ever in the work of the Lord.

WE notice that many of our congregations are giving special attention to the improvement of their song service, calling to their assistance those who are gifted in the art of singing, and able to instruct others. This is a most commendable move. Good congregational singing is the life of any meeting, and we should not be satisfied with anything but the very best.

HAS the thought ever impressed you that we, as a church, do not talk enough about missions? We do not make the missionary cause the burden of our thoughts, the topic of our conversation, the central thought of our sermons and prayer meeting talks. If we did, there would be such an enthusiasm that our contributions would be doubled and our forces in the foreign field largely increased.

THE union meeting of the Chicago, Naperville, Batavia and Elgin Christian Workers was held last Sunday in the recently-dedicated building of the Ogden Avenue Mission, Chicago. A large representation from the four churches was present. An interesting Sunday-school Meeting was held in the afternoon, while an enthusiastic Christian Workers' Meeting occupied the evening hours. The speakers did their best, and all in attendance enjoyed a most profitable gathering.

THE following paper from the late District Meeting of the First District of Virginia is intended for the Annual Meeting:

Burks Fork church asks District Meeting to define whether or not Art. 3 and Art. 19 of Minutes of Annual Meeting of 1855 prohibit parties from becoming members of the Church of the Brethren who belong to Farmers' Clubs or Farmers' Unions. If so, what must be done with brethren who join those unions or clubs? And what must be done with brethren who receive into the church parties belonging to those unions? Answered by District Meeting.—Sent to Annual Meeting.

AN infidel workman in Bulgaria recently bought a Bible, not knowing what it was until closer examination showed its character. At once he proceeded to tear it up and to scatter the fragments. The other workmen gathered up some of the torn leaves, and were so charmed with the words that many bought copies of the Bible for themselves. If even stray pieces of the Blessed Book will arouse the keenest of interest, what may we not expect from a rational and intelligent distribution of the Word of God to those in the darkness of sin?

BRO. S. S. BLOUGH, of Batavia, Ill., has been chosen head of the Bible Department of North Manchester College, and will enter upon his special duties at the beginning of the coming school year. He is planning to spend a part of the summer among the churches in the Districts represented by the school. Northern Illinois will regret to lose Bro. Blough, but we certainly wish him success in his new work, and at the same time congratulate the friends of Manchester College.

WE were present at a council meeting when the elder in charge did a very prudent thing just before the vote was taken for a delegate to represent the church at the Annual Meeting. He commented on the importance of the delegate, to be selected, being a very spiritual member, and an active church worker. He then read the qualifications which the Conference requires of such delegates, and requested the members to select some one who possesses the qualifications named. What was said put the members to thinking along right lines, and the voting was done with proper consideration.

NEXT week we shall publish the Annual Meeting program for the main auditorium. Later programs will be published for the other auditoriums. We suggest that those having programs to be published send them to Bro. J. S. Kline, Chairman of the Committee of Arrangements, 2919 St. Joseph Ave., St. Joseph, Mo. This they should do immediately, for the time is short. Do not send programs to us, for they may conflict with some of the arrangements that Bro. Kline is announcing. It is well for all such matter to pass through the hands of one man, and the Foreman of the Committee of Arrangements is the one to handle it.

WE suggest that those wishing printing done favor the House with their orders. We are prepared to print Minutes of District Meetings, programs for meetings, catalogues of every description, tracts, pamphlets and books. In fact, we are prepared for most anything in the printing line. We turn out books by the thousands for large firms, and do an immense amount of catalogue work for schools and business firms. The House belongs to the Brotherhood. All the profits are turned over to the mission cause, and the more our people do, in the way of letting us have their printing, the more they will be doing for themselves and the cause we represent.

THERE is a religious body that requires all applicants for membership to answer affirmatively the following questions: "As you consecrate yourself to God, you also consecrate your substance; and being his steward, do you promise to contribute of that substance, as he may prosper you, to the support of the Gospel?" Ought it not to be understood that when people consecrate themselves to God that they also consecrate their means as well as their talents? This means that they are to serve God with all their strength, as well as with all their soul and mind. When there is something to do they should be ready to help do it; and when money is needed to carry forward the Lord's work, they should be willing to assist in raising it. There is nothing unreasonable about this.

WE have just returned from St. Joseph, Mo., but must defer the report of our trip until next issue. We, however, state at this time that the arrangements for the Conference are splendid, and the buildings secured for the different services are probably as well adapted to our purposes as any that we have yet had. The Auditorium, for the General Conference, will likely give splendid satisfaction, while the rooms for the Bible work and the evangelistic services could hardly be any better, or more conveniently located. The Auditorium for special Sunday-school work, for the Sisters' Aid Societies, and some other departments of work will answer every purpose. Then, it looks as though the enterprising citizens of the city are going to be able to take care of all who may feel like attending the Conference. They wish us to assure them that they will receive a hearty welcome, and be permitted to enjoy some Missouri hospitality that will not be soon forgotten. But more next week.

THE School Board of Washington City has undertaken to solve a dress problem of its own. They have established what is known as "The Simple Dress Committee," with a view of suppressing extravagant dressing in the high schools, and it is thought that some good results may follow. Of course, the action of the Board is causing a good deal of comment, but the policy has the general approval of the public. The fact of the matter is, most sensible people are getting tired of the ever-changing fashions. They realize that not only is there no sense in the custom of changing the fashions every six months, but that it is an enormously expensive piece of business. If the schoolgirls can be induced to dress plainly, there might be a possibility of starting a reformation in some of the churches.

STATISTICS, so far as the facts can be secured, show that at the end of 1910 there were 6,637 ordained white missionaries of all denominations, on the various mission fields of the world, but the actual white force consisted of 21,248 workers. In addition there were 91,513 native helpers, thus making a total force of 112,761. There were 30,215 mission schools with 1,562,039 pupils; communicants, 2,222,892; converts, 139,899. The total receipts amounted to $26,890,104, and in addition $5,249,405 was raised on the field. The Baptist Missionary Union raised $1,020,552; the Presbyterians, $1,393,402; the Wesleyan Methodist Society of England, $1,026,324; the Methodist Episcopal church, $2,147,666; the Church Missionary Society of England, $2,045,290; Congregationalists, $989,409; Protestant Episcopals, $737,161; Disciples of Christ, $520,000; to which might yet be added what the Brethren and several other small bodies have done.

A MINISTER of fine ability says that he never preaches a sermon in which he does not, at some point of his discourse, tell the stranger who may be present, what the Lord would have him do in order to be saved. He seems to think, and rightly so, that it is the preacher's business to tell the people what they must do that they may have eternal life. But there are other preachers,—and they may be numbered by the score,—who can preach a dozen sermons without naming the Gospel conditions of pardon even once. We can not say that the former method is the ideal method, but we are sure that there is no excuse for a man preaching for months without telling his people what the Lord would have them do that they may be saved from their sins. We have known men to deliver lectures in the interest of emigrating to the Pacific Slope, but they never failed to tell the people how to get there. Preachers, as well as Sunday-school teachers, might profit by their example.

The Mohammedan University.

AT Cairo, Egypt, there is a Mohammedan university where ten thousand young men are studying the Koran, and everyone expects to go out and help build up the religion of the prophet. These young men do not wait for salaries; they depend on no mission board, but go wherever they can find something to do at which to make a living. They will work in the field, clerk in stores, serve as cooks, or teach in schools. But all the spare time they have is devoted to talking religion to somebody. They are not concerned about audiences. They take the people one at a time, and it is astonishing how much they accomplish in this way of teaching. They may not know much about science and literature, but they understand the Koran, and, with the few languages they readily pick up, never tire in their work of making Mohammedan converts. Not only so, but they can be depended upon to remain true to their religion, and are not likely to be influenced by the teachings of others. What would be the result, in this or in any other countries, if the Christian universities could send forth such an earnest body of workers—men and women who would make it their business to talk religion wherever they chanced to be? Such people might fill positions at the desks, in the school-room, in professional departments and in business circles, but their leisure hours would be devoted to religious work in some manner. That is the kind of a spirit we need in all of our schools, as well as in our homes, and when we once get this spirit, something marvelous is going to be done. This is the spirit that characterized the early converts to Christianity. They went everywhere preaching the Gospel.

Who Is the More Fashionable?

AN INTELLIGENT sister writes us that she and some others are very much worked up over the course pursued by certain brethren, who are making it decidedly unpleasant for a few young members, who do not dress just as plainly as they might. The brethren referred to not only chew tobacco, she says, but some of them may be seen on public streets smoking cigars. Now this sister wishes to know who is the more fashionable, the brethren who chew tobacco and smoke cigars, or the young people who wear some articles of attire that the Annual Meeting forbids. Then she wishes to know whether these tobacco-users have a right to assist in calling these young people to account. We should think that about the first thing the Lord Jesus would do, were he to happen into the congregation where these people hold their membership, would be to straighten out the members who use tobacco. He would tell them to first remove the "beam" from their mouths before attempting to help set others right. He might further tell them that consistency should teach people that men ought to be converted from the tobacco habit before being permitted to criticise others for doing wrong. He might also tell them that except their righteousness, regarding the habit of tobacco, exceed the righteousness of the worldly chewers and smokers, they will, in the day of judgment, stand no better chance than the members who try to dress just like the world. Possibly the elder of the church, having the Spirit of Christ, might do some of this kind of talking himself. It strikes us that a course of this kind would come wonderfully near producing a decided revolution among the young people whose manner of attire may not be just what would be pleasing to the Master.

Shall We Have a Permanent Location for Our Conference?

SOME years ago it was strongly urged that we should select a place, centrally located for convenience, at which all our Conferences should be held. The proposition met with considerable favor at the time, but was allowed to pass into a state of semi-forgetfulness without results. The different sections of our Brotherhood did not appear willing to forego the pleasure of having the Conference in their localities.

The experiences at Burlington Park and Springfield, Illinois, and Des Moines, Iowa,—the first because of inadequate buildings and the last two because of the very poor acoustic conditions of the buildings in which the meetings were held,—gave us something to think and talk about. At Springfield, as well as at Des Moines, it was impossible for many to hear a word spoken. On this account the meetings were not as successful as they otherwise would have been. Pleasant surroundings, good accommodations and an auditorium with good acoustic properties, so that all who desire may hear, are important factors in the success of a meeting.

Our last Conference, held at Winona Lake, Indiana, gave us a forcible illustration of what a meeting may be with the very best surroundings and accommodations. The only objection heard was, that the Tabernacle was too small for the large crowd in attendance. This has been remedied by the construction of a large Auditorium, which will accommodate twice as many listeners as did the old one. With this improvement Winona Lake now affords the very best possible facilities for holding our Annual Meetings.

It is not suggested that all our Conferences be held at that place, although that might be a wise move, for the East and West have a right to the "Great Meeting," but would it not be a wise move if the State Districts in the territory between the Ohio and Mississippi rivers were to decide that, when the meeting comes to them, in regular order, it shall be held at Winona Lake? Ohio has three State Districts, Indiana, three, and Illinois, two. By agreement Winona Lake could be chosen as the permanent place for the Conference in this territory. One of our prominent elders made the suggestion to the writer, hence these words of approval. Let the State Districts in interest take the matter up and consider the advantages of such a move. The place is, without doubt, one of the very best at which we have ever held our Conference. It is centrally located, not only for the territory named but for the entire Brotherhood, the facilities are the very best, the surroundings are calculated to inspire devotional feelings,—how different from the ordinary fair grounds,—and the railroad accommodations are all that could be desired. The roads in interest always make a special rate. Really the location leaves nothing to be desired. The State Districts in interest are respectfully invited to give this careful consideration.

Soul Proportion.

THIS is a world of proportionate values. All things that we see, do and expect, we measure and gauge by their proportionate values. Our efforts and labors are made, as nearly as possible, in proportion to the results we naturally expect to receive therefrom. It is a habit into which we fall, and we bring into play our standard of values as naturally as we eat and as we sleep. To waste our energy is always more or less distasteful to us.

As we go out to our fields to farm, and to sow and plant, the first thing we do is to look at our field, the condition in which it is, as to fertility; how much it will, under favorable circumstances, produce per acre; how much it will cost to cultivate and plant, to harvest and to market. Then, after deducting all the necessary expenses, after the crop is sold, the balance is drawn and the gain or loss is determined. If the gain is satisfactory, we say, "It pays," and we continue our efforts along the same lines. But, should we come out on the losing side, we say: "This does not pay," and we look around for more promising fields in which to labor. It is right and reasonable that we should do so, because our effort and labor represent value. They are our stock in trade. They are our physical possibilities, and why should we labor for that which is not bread? Every laborer is worthy of a living hire, and with less we should not be satisfied.

The question with humankind is to determine the standard of value, and how much it requires to make us satisfied. The Scriptural standard in amount is: "Having food and raiment let us be therewith content." But in our estimate we have lost sight of the soul value, and have been driven into a very much lower plane. We would really be surprised were we to see how low an estimate we place on the worth of a soul—what amount we think we ought to spend to save a soul.

While we have no way of determining the money cost of saving a soul, we do know that both mental and physical effort must be used to do the work, on our part, that the Lord expects of us when he says: "Go, work in my vineyard." And the question with us should be: What proportion of our available effort are we willing to devote, directly or indirectly, to this work? It should be in proportion to the importance and value of the end to be accomplished. Should we feel that it were possible, in a given time, to make or save a million dollars, we would at once drop all thought of proportion and give all the possibilities, which have been given us, to this one great purpose and end. There would be no reservation, had we such an opportunity. No, indeed, we would do more,—we would overreach ourselves. We would, in some way, exceed our limitations. We would even defraud others, in our greed to gain the end.

Now let us see what we would do to save a soul. How much would we willingly and voluntarily give to save just one soul? We suppose, if we count ourselves as being in the service, we would feel it our duty to give our estimated proportionate value. And would it not be interesting to know just what that would be? Too many of us have lost sight of the value of the soul, and what it means to save a soul from being eternally lost. Jesus, the Christ, who gave his all —his life—to save my soul, to save your soul, says that the soul is worth more than the whole world.

There is no other good or value with which it can be compared. To be saved from the curse and power of sin, and made an heir of God and a joint heir with Jesus Christ, and made a fellow-citizen in the kingdom of grace, will be an incomputable value and an inexpressible joy. There are no values in this world with which to compare it, and no words in human language to express it.

This may seem to be an extravagant way of expressing it, but it is because we have never weighed the value of a soul with the earnestness that the subject demands, or as we would, did we see the salvation of the soul imperiled and in imminent danger of being cast away into outer darkness, with the wicked and ungodly, where there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

How often do we hear it said, when just a little portion of our energies is asked for, to help save the lost, or those who are lacking the true light—the whole Gospel: "O it is no use. It is only throwing away money. They don't want the truth."

No, people are sometimes careless about accepting things that we only half believe in ourselves. At least, it seems so to them when they see the very slight estimate we ourselves place on our own salvation. We heard a brother say the other day: "I preach the doctrine that no one can be saved unless he saves some one else." The thought is, "If we don't appreciate our own salvation enough to cause us to labor to save others, we will not be concerned about it to save ourselves." All who are savingly converted and born again can not and will not be indifferent to the salvation of others. This is God's plan of saving the world. Spirit-filled souls are filled with a burning desire to save others. They can not help it. It is the active principle of the new life. "Give me souls or I die," is the cry of saved souls. And if it is not your cry, my brother, my sister, you should feel alarmed. There is danger that your love for Jesus is growing cold. Your walking with him is not as close, as intimate, and as enjoyable, as it should be. Your estimate of soul value is faulty—is wrong.

What would we think of a man, who, finding his neighbor or friend down in a pit, starving and ready to perish, would refuse to help him out? We would call him a hard-hearted wretch, devoid of all human feelings. No; there are few persons, indeed, whose hearts are so hard that they are not touched by human suffering, nor gladly respond to the appeal of the suffering and dying.

And yet there are so many around us every day that are in greater danger than physical death. They may not realize it. Neither may they call for our help. But we must know it, and their lost condition should appeal to us as Christians, and as Christ died to save sinners, we should live to save them. Oh, my brethren and sisters, let us get ourselves in greater earnest in soul-winning and soul-saving! Pray the Father for a deeper work of grace in our hearts, and let this grace cause us to labor more earnestly to save sinners.

The Lutherans and Sunday Desecration.

The Religious Telescope, organ of the United Brethren, minces no words, when dealing with weak-kneed preachers and the Sunday baseball business. Referring to certain petitions presented to the Senate Committee of Ohio, to legalize Sunday baseball, the editor says:

> Strange to say, we see the name of a Lutheran preacher, Morhart, among those favoring the bill, with the statement attributed to him that members of the Lutheran Church generally approve Sunday baseball. "He declares," says the dispatch, "that baseball is not a desecration of the Lord's Day, telling of a ball team supported by each Lutheran church in Cleveland, which plays every Sunday afternoon, with the pastors on the bleachers to look on." Shades of Martin Luther! If the report is correct and the speaker's statement true, we are getting ready for another reformation. What sort of spiritual influence can a church have when no one can see any difference between it and the world? What good can a preacher do who forgets all about his God and his Bible and everything else that is of divine appointment, and lines up with the worst gangs on earth to break the Sabbath? But we fancy that this preacher, whose name and connection doubtless are paraded for influence, is a misrepresentative of the great Lutheran Church. We take his language, if reported correctly, to be a vile slander on an honored religious body. Sunday baseball should go the way of every other evil. It will, when professedly Christian men cease to be traitors to the One whom they profess to follow.

It remains for the Lutheran papers to say whether the minister referred to represents the sentiment of that large and influential body. If he does, then it is time for a second Luther to make America tremble. It is time for Godly men to rise up and let the world and the devil know that there are even more than seven thousand converted men in Israel, who will not stand for desecrating the Lord's Day with Sunday baseball, or any other sin.

The Orphan Children.

A WRITER in the Christian Evangelist thinks the Protestant churches are committing a great error by failing to look after the orphan children of the land and training them in the way they should go. He calls attention to the fact that the Catholics for generations have made a specialty of this line of work, and that no small amount of their growth may be attributed to the attention given to the training of orphans. He looks upon this as the most promising mission work in which any church can engage, holding that the church that will give it the necessary attention is sure to realize a bountiful harvest in the way of converts, to say nothing of the good that may be done to common humanity. It is more than likely that our people have not entered into this work as fully as they should have done. We have rather given attention to the poor and aged, and neglected the orphans. We are not saying that we should do less for the former, but we certainly ought to be doing a great deal more for the latter. As we view it, we need orphans' homes where children may be received, cared for, trained and even educated, until places can be found for them in good Christian homes. Here is a splendid field,—a field too large to be fully occupied by any one religious body,—and the sooner we enter it in full force, the better it will be for the cause we represent, as well as for suffering humanity.

Geo. Wolf in 1825.

BRO. OSCAR B. REDENBO, who is teaching school at Pierron, Ill., calls our attention to what is said in Elbert Waller's "Brief History of Illinois," page 47, paragraph 78, about Eld. Geo. Wolf. There it is said, "In 1825 Rev. Geo. Wolf organized a church not far from the hill known as Bald Knob in Union County. It was dedicated to 'Religious Liberty,' but was composed mostly of Dunkards and Universalists." He wishes to know whether this is correct. We should think that the historian is certainly mistaken about the "Universalist" feature of the organization, for while Eld. Wolf, in a conservative way, may have believed in the final restoration doctrine, he did some telling preaching against the claims of the Universalists. In order to salvation he taught faith in Christ Jesus, and a strict obedience to the Written Word. Universalism could not thrive under such preaching as he did. In 1825 Wolf was forty-five years old, had been preaching twelve years, and was even then known as a minister of fine ability. He preached extensively in Union County, where he had lived since 1803, collected a large body of members, but when he moved to Adams County, in 1831, nearly all the members followed him.

In the Upper Room.

AN EARNEST sister, who believes in always keeping the New Testament religion to the front, says that since Jesus held his love feast in an upper room, she is wondering whether the basement under the church is the most appropriate place to hold our feasts. She also refers to the breaking of bread in the upper room at Troas. It is thought that the communion should be celebrated in the very best room in the house of the Lord, and that to relegate a sacred service like this to the basement, is to show to the world a lack of respect for the ordinances instituted by our Master. We presume that this depends largely upon how we fit up the rooms set apart for love feast occasions. We shall not, at this time, discuss the question raised by our sister, but call attention to the fact that, in the feet-washing service, as well as while eating the Lord's supper, we are reminded of the time when Jesus shall gird himself and serve his people, and also of the time, when we shall be guests at the marriage supper of the Lamb. It is always presumed that for a marriage the very best and most fitting preparations should be made. If, in the setting apart and in the preparation of the rooms in which to hold our feasts, we shall keep this thought of fitness in view, there is little danger of holding our communion services in rooms unbecoming the sacred occasion.

Where Send Your Offering.

THE GENERAL MISSION BOARD, at its last meeting, did a wise thing in deciding that all money collected by authority of the Board must be sent direct to the treasurer of the Board in Elgin, instead of being sent to the parties calling for the money. This means that if a church or a mission point calls for help, by the authority of the Board, said church or mission can not have the money sent direct to its treasurer. It must be sent to Elgin, and will then be turned over to the church or mission for which it is intended. Should any of the churches receive letters calling for money, purporting to be sent by permission of the General Board, and said letters direct that the money be sent to any one else besides the Treasurer of the Board at Elgin, they will understand that such calls are not legal. The object of the action of the Board is to protect the churches of the Brotherhood, and to enable the Board to know just what is being done through its authority. It is also a help to the churches or missions calling for money, as it tends to give our people confidence in such calls. This action of the Board goes into immediate effect.

How Tempted.

THESE are times when Christians are most severely tempted. Step by step they are led into questionable acts that reflect on the church, and in order to help them overcome the influences of sins to which they are exposed we must be constantly reminding them of the things that should be avoided. We are told of a wedding serenade in a city, where the noise produced by bells, guns, rattling balls, etc., was so great that it could be heard two miles. Then we are told that a few members were mixed up in the noisy demonstration. It does not seem to us that members should permit themselves to be drawn into a performance of this sort. The ordinary rules of culture and common propriety, without any Gospel, should teach a Christian people that they cannot afford to become a party to conduct of this nature. It is not even a mark of civilization, let alone commendable Christianity. Young men and women, who profess to have the Spirit of Christ, should live on a higher plane. If young people wish to offer demonstrations of joy on wedding occasions, let them do it in a Christian way,—in a civil way, at least.

The Call for Help.

THE editor of the Brethren Teachers' Monthly, as expressed in the April issue, thinks if there were less calling for Sunday-school lesson helps and more careful study of the Bible, we might have much better work done in most of our Sunday-schools. The custom of having everything made ready for immediate use has led some people of this generation to think that every detail of their Sunday-school lesson must be worked out and arranged for them. Rather than do some digging for their own benefit they insist on some one else doing it for them. In a measure this habit of looking for material, practically arranged, and made ready for use, is spoiling a number of preachers. They can tell what some one has collected and arranged for them, but they do not appear to have the time, disposition or training to go to the Word of God and work out their own sermon material. The sermons they preach may seem polished, entertaining and at times helpful, but they do not have the clear Bible ring that should characterize the preaching of the whole Gospel.

ANOINTING.

Report of Committee on.

On investigation we find no evidence that Christ or the apostles anointed persons indiscriminately,—saint and sinner. The apostles evidently understood the teachings of Christ on this subject, and are the best interpreters of his doctrines. James 5: 12-15 confines the anointing to believers, or Brethren. (See verse 12.) This has been the practice of the Church of the Brethren, as well as the primitive church.

We know of no scriptural grounds to warrant a change in this practice. Therefore we cannot grant the request of the foregoing petition.

Committee, L. W. Teeter, A. Hutchison, S. F. Sanger.

OUR SUNDAY-SCHOOL ENROLLMENT EXCEEDS OUR CHURCH MEMBERSHIP.

According to our annual Statistical Reports, which are collected by forty-six District Secretaries, the enrollment of our Sunday-schools is increasing, and now exceeds our church membership, as the following comparison indicates:

	Sunday-schools	Enrollment
1906	1,063	98,660
1907	1,131	73,661
1908	1,132	86,164
1909	1,224	94,347
1910 (forecast)	1,360	100,000

Our church membership now is about 90,000. A similar increase is noted in other items of the Sunday-school report. Many of the State District reports for 1910 have been received; others are being withheld because of the delay of some superintendents to give a report of their schools. If every Sunday-school in the Brotherhood will submit its statistical report, there is no question that the above forecast will be reached.

No doubt there are readers of the Gospel Messenger-representatives in every one of our Sunday-schools. The necessary blanks were mailed to Superintendents early in 1910, on which to send a report of your school to your District Secretary. Should your former superintendent have moved away, or should you have any other reason to believe that your school has not been reported, you will kindly speak of this message to your present superintendent and tell him we are very anxious to have your school included in the report.

The Sunday-school Advisory Committee,
Per Levi Minnich, Secretary.

FROM BLOOM, KANS.

My brother, S. P. Hylton and family, my wife, two boys, and myself left Troutville, Va., March 21 and arrived at this place on the 23d at midnight, after making a continuous run of 1,530 miles. We are now in our hired house in the little, hustling town of Bloom. We are enjoying our environments.

I realize the fact that we have left one among the best churches of the Brotherhood in leaving the Botetourt (Virginia) church, and we have left many friends behind second to none in the world. We were not required to leave in order to secure a livelihood, but we have made the change at our own volition.

We expect to enjoy the association of a working body of brethren and sisters in our new home. We expect to make friends and neighbors here. We have prospects of a pleasant home, and we have come to like the country.

Last Sunday the Brethren's new church here was dedicated to the service of God. Bro. J. B. Crist, assisted by Brethren O. O. John and E. S. Fox, conducted the services.

The house is a plain, neat, substantial building, suited to the surrounding country. The services were well attended by attentive people, and this bids fair to be a good, lively church home for the Brethren. We expect to organize a Brethren Sunday-school at our coming council meeting.

Eld. Crist will conduct a series of meetings for the next two weeks, and a love feast will be held on the 31st inst.

C. D. Hylton.

SPRING CREEK CONGREGATION, PA.

This congregation has six Sunday-schools within her bounds. They are as follows: Annville, with Bro. Cyrus Winters as superintendent; South Annville, with Bro. B. H. Gingrich as superintendent; Palmyra, with Bro. A. B. Carper as superintendent; Spring Creek, with Bro. Milton Bashore as superintendent; Bachmansville, with Bro. Aaron H. Hoffer as superintendent; Canowago, with Bro. Jacob W. Brandt as superintendent. Bro. Hoffer is also one of our ministers.

Bro. H. K. Ober, of Elizabethtown, Pa., the efficient Sunday-school Secretary of Eastern Pennsylvania, visited the Palmyra and Bachmansville Sunday-schools recently, and gave very beneficial talks. Bro. Ober is full of the Sunday-school spirit, and is doing a noble work. If all would follow his wholesome advice, there would be everywhere Sunday-schools everywhere.

Our congregation has had Sunday-schools for many years. Eld. William Hertzler, of sacred memory, who passed away years ago, was an active Sunday-school worker, for as early as 1865 there was a Sunday-school at the Canowago house, near Eld. Hertzler's home. This was perhaps the first Sunday-school held in a Brethren's meetinghouse in Eastern Pennsylvania.

Eld. Hertzler lived at Bachmansville, at once where we will erect a meetinghouse this spring. One was received by baptism recently, at Spring Creek. Two were baptized at South Annville March 19. One was baptized at Annville March 26 by Eld. Samuel Z. Witmer.

Our love feast will begin at 3 P. M. instead of 3:30 P. M., as previously stated. The first love feast will be held May 9 and 10, at the Spring Creek house, and the Annville love feast will be held June 14 and 15.

Eld. Jacob Hertzler, aged elder, attended services at the Canowago house May 19. We were all glad to see his smiling face once more. These faithful veterans always give good advice.

Edgar M. Hoffer.

Notes from Correspondents.

The Following Notes, Crowded Out of Last Issue, Are Given Space on this Page.

INDIANA.

Logansport.—March 30 we met in council at the Adamsboro house. Our elder, Bro. J. W. Norris, presided, assisted by Bro. Chas. D. Oberlin, pastor of that place. We decided to have our love feast May 13, at 2 P. M., at the Adamsboro house. Sister Thos. Oberlin was elected church clerk. Sister Mohler, solicitor for the country division of the church; the writer, church correspondent. The following were chosen as trustees of the Logansport church: Brethren Jesse Hartzler, Joseph Martin and Chas. Patton. April 2 one dear sister, a Sunday-school scholar, was received into the church by baptism.—Lottie A. Oberlin, 910 Michigan Ave., Logansport, Ind., April 5.

IOWA.

Panora church met in council April 1, at 1 P. M. Our elder, Bro. Abraham Wolf, was again served this church as elder for a number of years and is now in his seventy-fourth year. Sister Mary Hylton was elected church clerk in his request, having two other elders, Brethren Orlando Ogden and J. H. Ogden. The council was granted one more year, two years. Our elder was chosen as delegate to Annual Meeting. Bro. J. H. Ogden was elected writing committee to the entire service. Our love feast was appointed for May 27, at 6 P. M. Our series of meetings will begin Sept. 1 to be conducted by Bro. John Hear, of Panora, assisted by John H. Price, R. D. 3, Urbandville, Iowa, April 5.

Salem.—Our church in council April 1. Eld. J. M. Follis presided. Eld. D. P. Sink was chosen to represent us at the Annual Conference. Sister Follis, alternate. Our love feast will be held June 10 in the Salem house. A love feast will also be held in the Lewis house at some future time, but the date is not yet decided upon. We arranged to have two of our brethren, Brethren Wilson and Leslie Cowan and John Brower, to hold our series of meetings this fall, at the Salem house. A committee was appointed to assist in the revival effort to be held in Salem under the auspices of the Sunday-school. Since our last report twelve new members have moved into our midst, one being our new pastor, Bro. Jesse Cover and wife, formerly of Canton, Ill. We are glad for the new workers. Bro. Cover comes to us highly recommended, coming with a membership of fifteen. Sister Minnie Sink is our leader.—Edna Wray, Prescott, Iowa, April 1.

KANSAS.

Kansas City.—Last evening the church met in council in the Central Avenue house. We had a very pleasant meeting. The time was spent in the election of officers. Bro. W. F. Stroup was elected as our delegate to Annual Meeting. A local missionary committee was appointed. The work at our South Side Mission is very good, but we do not have sufficient room to supply the demand. We have considerable sickness and some deaths. We are pressed hard to give room to all the unfortunate people who call. Sister Mohler has been confined to his room four months with dropsy. He and his wife and a little boy are entirely dependent on Eld. Crist, 13 North Berree Street, Kansas City, Kans., April 6.

McPherson.—Our church met in council April 3. Our elder, Bro. D. B. Jones, presided. Four letters were received and two were granted. Bro. J. J. Yoder, our pastor, was re-elected for the third year. Bro. W. H. Crist, assisting Overton, Ohio, has been secured to hold our series of meetings next November. Brethren Harry Hutchison and Peter Dotzer were elected to the ministry. Brethren E. E. Johns and S. J. Miller are the delegates to the Annual Meeting. Bro. J. W. Dresher and Raymond Flory, alternates. The church decided to advance Brethren Wm. Dumpster, Jesse Vanimon and Ira Arnold to the second degree of the ministry. Our love feast will be held May 14.—Sarah Witmore Harnley, McPherson, Kans., April 4.

MICHIGAN

Beaverton church met in council April 1. Our elder, Bro. William Speicher, presided. The time for the activity of the church it was decided to send a delegate to the next Annual Conference. Bro. Lewis McKinnon was chosen. Eld. John Killian, alternate. Our church debt of $200 has lately been paid. Three letters of membership were received. Our week's series of meetings, this spring, is to be followed by a love feast. We now have six ministers in our congregation. Brethren William McKimmey, Nathan McKimmey and John Killian are holding services at three different previously neglected places. Many members have moved into our midst during the winter and spring.—Katie Patterson, Beaverton, Mich., April 4.

Grand Rapids.—We have just closed a very busy and interesting week's work. There was an average attendance of thirty-eight in our Sunday-school. In the last eight weeks we have not had less than forty present. This is the largest number for fifty-four, which was last Sunday. During the past three months our school has paid for all supplies. We bought two dozen song books, three new blackboards, and donated $1 toward the Chinese Famine Fund. A total offering of $13 was sent from our mission. We now have five regular Sunday-school classes, two primary rooms being organized by curtains.—Lelia M. Culler, 829 Elm Avenue, Grand Rapids, Mich., April 3.

OHIO.

Hickory Grove.—March 6 Sister Hettie Stauffer began a series of Bible lessons in the Charleston house, lasting until March 16. The lessons were interesting, entertaining and spiritually helpful. April 3 Bro. L. A. Bodwalder gave us a temperance lecture in the Grove house; in the evening, one in the Mississinawa house. These meetings proved very beneficial to us. He gave us a brief history of the stand taken by the Church of the Brethren on temperance, and then dealt very forcibly on the topics, "Don't Chance the Boy" and "Don't Handicap Jesus in the Boy and Girl." Brethren Peters, Tipp City, Ohio, April 8.

Lexington church met in council March 25. Eld. Allen Ockerman conducted the services. A great deal of business was brought before us, among such as regulating the property, trying to encourage the members and preparing for our love feast, which is to be at 6 P. M. Eld. Allen Ockerman was elected as our delegate to District Meeting. The church decided not to send a delegate to Annual Meeting. Our dear young minister, Van B. Wright, is at present under affliction, and we are glad to say he chosen as our delegate. We need his earnest labors to help in the Master's cause. We have a day-school and preaching services every Sabbath and prayer-meeting each Wednesday evening. We are asking the readers of the Gospel Messenger, and they are numerous, to remember us.—Bertha A. Ockerman, R. D. 1, Hillsboro, Ohio, April 8.

Trotwood congregation met in council March 29. Our elder, Bro. D. M. Garver, presided. Eld. D. B. Fillbrun and Brethren Oren Hollinger and Emmert Bowers were with us. Seven members were received by letter and seven letters were granted. Eld. D. B. Fillbrun was chosen as our delegate to Annual Meeting; Eld. C. M. Basts and Bro. Wm. Swinger, delegates to District Meeting. Bro. D. F. Hockman, of Bethany Bible School, will help us in a series of meetings, commencing in September. Our Sunday-school Meeting, March 26, was inspiring and uplifting.—Herman A. Conover, R. D. 1, Trotwood, Ohio, April 6.

PENNSYLVANIA

Johnstown church met in council March 30. Eld. Abram Frank presided. Our delegate to Annual Meeting is Bro. John W. Mills, with Samuel W. Pastor as alternate. Our delegate to District Meeting are Bro. Cornelius Harshbarger and Sister Mary Ann Rowe, with Bro. David Shumaker and Sister Sarah Pearson as alternates. Our love feast is to be held at the Mountain Chapel, beginning May 13 at 2 P. M. An examination sermon will be preached at each one of our five houses of worship at 10 A. M. on May 14. Our series will be services each evening for one week before the feast. It has for years been the custom for all of our elders to work in our large congregation is quite too much for any one pastor to care for. Eld. D. P. Hockman, a retired elder and pastor, Bro. W. M. Howe, should, after April 30, conduct the efforts in the Walnut Grove part. We are hoping for good results from this arrangement.—Ada M. Howe, 1013 Second Avenue, Johnstown, Pa., April 6.

Lewistown church Sunday evening, March 26, Bro. Isaac Frantz, of Pleasant Hill, Ohio, closed a series of meetings here. He was with us one week and preached each evening. The meetings were well attended, and the interest was good. Seven additions were made the result of services. While Bro. Frantz was here, five members of our congregation moved away, leaving us still. Some of the friends, this is not an unusual occurrence with us, we mention it that the Secretary may note and act according to James 5: 14, 15.—Emma C. E. Landis, R. D. 3, Lewistown, Pa., April 6.

Lewistown.—Our church met in council March 25. We decided to have our love feast in the Brethren's Lewistown house, for Sunday-school classes, as the main room is too small for one. Brethren Benjamin F. Haines, Isaac Fisher and John Brubaker were elected as our delegates to District Meeting. Bro. Isaac Fisher, alternate. Sister Minnie Fisher, the writer, alternate. Our love feast will be May 18, at 2 P. M., at the Valley house.—S. J. Swigart, Lewistown, Pa., April 6.

Mapleton.—We met in council on the evening of March 25. Sister Wareham and the writer were elected delegates to District Meeting Sunday, May 14, is the date for our love feast. Monday, 15 and 16 Sister J. M. Blough gave us very interesting mission talks. Rev. W. J. McKnight, of Penman, B. C., has been brought present from the Reformed Presbyterian church to our Winona Conference, recently held in Mapleton, and delivered lectures. He is especially strong on his lecture "The Bible and the Lodge." Bro. C. C. Swanson, the writer's pastor, Sister Mollie Wareham, reports the latest additions to our band of workers. After May 1 they may be addressed Corner Greenfield and Mont Clair. We are preparing some special features for the various services on Easter Sunday.—M. J. Weaver, 1120 Greenfield Avenue, Pittsburg, Pa., April 6.

VIRGINIA.

Green Mount congregation met in council at Mount Zion March 25, at 10 A. M. Eld. Jacob Hertzler presided. Four were received by letter, and seven letters were granted. Delegates to Annual Meeting and District Meeting were chosen. Our spring love feast will be May 20, at 3 P. M. Our series of meetings will begin May 21, at 7:30 P. M., with Eld. J. G. Rosenberger doing the preaching. Our Sunday-school is moving along nicely.—Katie Kline, R. D. 2, Broadway, Va., April 6.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Nicklow.—Bro. C. W. Guthrie, of Los Angeles, has just returned to us from Chicago, where he has been attending the Moody Bible Institute. He preached for us on Sunday evening on the "Holy Spirit," as found in Acts 2. This was the first time that many present had heard a sermon from that text, and it was greatly appreciated by an unusually large audience. He also preached for us a number of seven lectures on his trip around the world. To these we are looking forward with much interest.—Orpha Shobe, Moatsville, W. Va., April 3.

Smith Creek.—Bro. Newton Eller presided over our council meeting April 1. This closes his year. He was chosen as our elder for another year. He gave us two excellent sermons. Bro. W. M. Kahle delivered two helpful sermons in February and March, giving us two good talks.—Cynthia J. Kahle, Lahmansville, W. Va., April 3.

Wiles-Hill.—We met in council March 23, with Eld. Jasper Barnhart presiding. Bro. W. H. Crist was elected to attend District Meeting, with Bro. Arthur Bailey as alternate. Eld. M. Amore and family have moved into the congregation. We are in hope of a good work now. We have four ministers here, and one deacon and sister, Bro. W. H. Crist left us for a couple of weeks, to hold a series of meetings in Pennsylvania. Our free-will offering was $12.00.—Mary A. Wolfe, 364 Beechurst Avenue, Morgantown, W. Va., April 3.

WISCONSIN.

Maple Grove church met in council April 1. Bro. W. H. Dyer presided. A committee was appointed to secure an evangelist to conduct a series of meetings this spring, and to set the time. Sister Ida Hoover was appointed solicitor to start a teacher-training class. Bro. Greenawalt preached every two weeks in the afternoon at a schoolhouse, about four and one-half miles from the church.—Mollie Verbeck, Stanley, Wis., April 2.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIFORNIA.

Covina.—Bro. Ebersole, our Sunday-school superintendent, his wife and Brother and Sister McVey, both teachers, have moved to Imperial Valley. Bro. H. M. Brubaker was chosen president of the Christian Workers' Meeting. Bro. Harvey Snell will represent us at Annual Meeting. The Ministerial and District Meetings convened in this church March 22 and 23, with a large attendance. Bro. W. Q. Calvert will represent our District on the Standing Committee. April 2 the Christian Workers of Lordsburg, Claremont, Glendora and Covina had a joint meeting here at Covina. We are in the midst of a series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Wampler.—Sulvia Overholtzer, R. D. 1, Box 4, Covina, Cal., April 9.

Glendora.—We have just closed a very interesting series of meetings, held in the Glendora church by Bro. Wm. Lampio, of Illinois. He gave us twenty-seven soul-thrilling sermons, which resulted in twenty-seven confessions, ranging in age from nine to sixty years. This increases our membership to 175. We were favored with good weather and attentive audiences.—Mary White, Glendora, Cal., April 9.

Lordsburg.—Church in council April 7, with Bro. J. B. Deterdorf presiding. Five letters of membership were received. Bro. Ebbersmeyer will be our elder in charge for the present year. He will give us a series of meetings prior to our love feast, April 29, at 2 P. M.—Clara Wells, Kerman, Cal., April 8.

Patterson.—Bro. Andrew Blickenstaff, of Lordsburg, Cal., preached an acceptable sermon for us last evening. Our little building was full of people. We rejoice that Bro. Gilbert and his family moved here last week. Two of them are members. We will commence holding a Sunday-school here next week. We also expect to secure a minister to hold a series of meetings for us. We expect to have a Bible class who are thinking of changing location should see this fine country, a part of the great San Joaquin Valley.—Mrs. Ida M. Lock Box 167, Patterson, Cal., April 14.

Sanger.—Our congregation met in council April 1. As our elder was absent, Eld. J. J. Brower had charge of the meeting. It was decided by unanimous vote that we have the feet washing, bread and pass the cup at our love feast services hereafter. We also appointed a committee to arrange for a Fourth of July outing for our Sunday-school. Since our last report we have granted seven letters of membership and received nine.—Lena Minnick, Reedley, Cal., April 10.

Sacramento Valley church met in council March 28. Our elder, Bro. Jacob Hoff, of this valley, was with us. We have decided to restore Bro. Feighner to the first degree of the ministry. Bro. W. Q. Calvert, of Covina, Cal., will hold a series of meetings for us beginning May 8. A committee was appointed to submit plans at our next council for our new churchhouse.—Anna Overholtzer, Princeton, Cal., April 9.

South Los Angeles.—A number of the young people of the Lordsburg College Christian League rendered an excellent missionary program at our congregational prayer-meeting April 9. The speakers were very enthusiastic, and we were not only impressed with the great need of the mission field, but also the necessity of our prayers and financial support. An offering of $7.00 was taken up for the Near East Christian sufferers.—Clara B. Custer, 1236 East Forty-sixth Street, Los Angeles, Cal., April 10.

CANADA.

Pleasant Ridge church met in council March 25. Eld. L. Shultz presiding. Two letters were received by request and by. The ministering brethren will supply another appointment, about eighteen miles southwest, when the same brethren are living.—F. E. Pobst, Liberty, Alts., Can., April 9.

COLORADO.

Denver.—Our little band has been awakened to India's needs. Our dear Bro. Berkebile began lecturing on India April 6 and closed on Sunday evening, giving us four soul-stirring sermons. Due to the conditions of the weather the last Sunday morning Sister Berkebile talked to the Sunday-school about "Workers for India." Sister Berkebile was much enjoyed by all. During the lectures we raised $25 for World-wide Missions.—Blanche A. Long, 2450 Lafayette Street.

McClave church met in council April 8, with Eld. W. D. Harris presiding. Eld. Silas Hertzler was with us from Annual Conference. One letter was granted. We decided to hold our love feast at the close of our series of meetings, which will begin May 14 and continue indefinitely.—Mrs. Ida Hoover, McClave, Colo., April 16.

Lewellen church met in council April 1. Our elder, Bro. D. D. Hamm, presided. Three letters were received and three were granted. Our love feast will be held May 6, at 2 P. M. Our day-school is getting along nicely. Two departments,—the home department and the cradle roll, were added. Since our last report one has been baptized.—Clara Walker Miller, Rockyford, Colo.

Sterling church met in council March 25, with Eld. D. B. Miller presiding. A local temperance committee was appointed as follows: Brethren Turner, North and Stutzman. We decided to hold our love feast May 12. Brother and Sister Berkebile are here with us April 2, and have given us lectures both morning and evening, which were greatly appreciated by all in attendance. Sister Berkebile will fill our place, in the interest of the missionary cause.—Stella Turner Hoff, Colo., April 11.

IDAHO.

Maddox.—Our church met in council March 31 with our elder, Bro. J. B. Grayhill, presiding. We decided to hold our love feast at Bro. Parkenson's home. Bro. Williams expects to preach for us in connection with the Sabbath-school every two weeks. One brother was appointed to see after securing a house to hold protracted meetings for us next fall. Our union Sunday-school is increasing in number. Our average attendance is twenty-six.—Emma I. Wine, Newell, Idaho, April 8.

Nampa church met in council March 29. The membership matters of the departments reported very encouragingly. The church decided to send $25 to the Near East Relief Fund. We expect to hold our love feast June 10.—Wm. H. Lichty, Nampa, Idaho, April 9.

Payette Valley.—The meetings in the Fruitland church-house closed March 26, having continued three weeks. One came out on the Lord's side, since our last report, making nine in all during the meetings, all of them have been baptized.—S. J. Kenepp, Payette, Idaho, March 31.

Weiser.—We met in council April 1. Our elder not being present, Bro. Jesse Walker, our pastor, presided. We elected officers for our Sunday-school March 25, with the writer as superintendent. Sister Rena Lehman, treasurer. We have only thirteen members. Correcting a misstatement in a previous letter. Lend say that Bro. Lehman is not our treasurer; Bro. Jake Lehman, trustee, instead of Bro. Harry Mohr. We have two deacons, one newly elected.—Amanda E. Flory, Winchester, Idaho, April 1.

ILLINOIS.

Batavia.—Marian Lehman, one of our little ones on the cradle roll, passed out of this world April 1. She was an only child, but in the short stay of two years was not without a mission, for that afternoon the parents were brought, through the Word of Jesus Christ by baptism. This will be an incident long to be remembered. Many prayers went up for the little one that she might be spared, but God's ways are not ours. Bro. S. S. Blo~gh had charge of the services held at the home, four miles from here. The body was laid away at West Chicago. April 8 we held our council. Eld. James M. Moore presided. One letter of membership was read and another was mentioned as having been read in March. We decided to have a protracted meeting beginning May 7, to be followed by a love feast May 27. Bro. R. H. Nicodemus will conduct our meetings. We elected Christian Worker officers for another six months. We also chose Bro. Moore as our elder for another year. Our Sisters' Aid Society reported progress and a balance on hand. Our Sunday-school is getting on well here, every other Wednesday evening, a Bible class, led by our pastor, Bro. Moore, is held at the home of Brother and Sister Ruth Hawbecker, 238 North Park St., Batavia, Ill., April 14.

Cerro Gordo church met in council April 1. Eld. W. H. Lear in charge. Eld. John Arnold was also with us. Four letters of membership were received. Our delegate to Annual Meeting, W. Lear was chosen to represent us at Annual Meeting. Bro. A. Heitz, alternate.—Iva M. Heckman, Cerro Gordo, Ill., April 11.

Hudson church met in council April 6. Eld. J. E. Neher was chosen elder in charge. Bro. Wm. Ebey, Bro. W. D. Hoover, alternate. We decided to hold our love feast May 7, at 7 P. M., consecration services at 10 A. M.—Mrs. Ida Hoover, Hudson, Ill., April 12.

Liberty.—This church met in council April 1, with our elder, Bro. J. W. Harshbarger, in charge. A local temperance committee of three men was appointed. Sister Eva Wagoner was our delegate to Annual Meeting.—Lillian Walker, Liberty, Ill., April 8.

Okaw.—Our two Sunday-schools, La Place and Centennial, met in a joint teachers' meeting April 5. The first hour was spent in a review of the quarterly lesson, taught by Eld. J. H. Eikenberry; the remaining time in a discussion of round table questions, handed in by the teachers, and ably conducted by Bro. J. Elmer Wagoner. It was decided that these meetings be held quarterly, the next one to be held the first of the new quarter.—Mrs. Elizabeth Eikenberry, Lovington, Ill., April 10.

Palestine.—Eld. J. C. Stoner, of Palestine, Ill., was operated on at Dixon Springs, April 4. The family ask an interest in the prayers of God's children that he may soon recover. We will be glad to hear from any one. Address him at Danville, Ill., Eld. Elihu Fahnestock's, 1 Gaty Ave.—Mary Bright, Palestine, Ill.—April 14.

Sterling.—April 3 we met in council. Eld. John Heckman presided. The visiting brethren reported the church to be in love and union. Eld. Heckman was chosen to assist Sister Dutcher, of Bethany Bible School, to assist us in our work during the coming year. Bro. Samuel Myer was elected delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. Samuel Myer, alternate. Five letters of membership were granted. We intend to hold a Bible Institute meeting in the fall. We may secure a minister from the near future. Our love feast will be May 21, at 6:30 P. M. Our Sunday-school has one of the best Christian Workers to supply Messengers this year.—Lillie Frantz, 3104½ Ninth Avenue, Sterling, Ill., April 10.

INDIANA.

Ft. Wayne.—Our church met in council April 7. Our pastor, Eld. J. E. Miller, presided. One letter was granted. It was decided to place a baptistry in the church. A committee was chosen to arrange a program for the Sunday-school Convention to be held in this church May 7. Our treasurer's report was read and accepted. It shows the church to be in good financial condition.—Ida Bender, 2702 Lafayette St., Ft. Wayne, Ind., April 8.

Four Mile.—Otho Winger, of North Manchester, Ind., gave us two good sermons April 9. We are expecting Bro. J. F. Zeller, of Missouri, to be with us in a series of meetings, beginning Aug. 6. Bro. C. C. Petry is our delegate to Annual Meeting.—Mrs. Ida M. Bowser, Eldred, Ind., April 14.

Lower Fall Creek.—Bro. Wm. Warble, of Indianapolis, Ind., came to this place March 25. He held an interesting two weeks' meeting. Our congregation is in love and union since was not so large, on account of bad weather, but the interest was good. We had a basket dinner the last Sunday evening, which was very instructive and inspiring to those who were attending their first basket dinner.—Wretha Kruk, R. D. 42, Pendleton, Ind., April 10.

Mississinewa church met in council March 30. Our elder, Bro. A. C. Young, presided. Three letters of membership were granted. Bro. L. J. Hook was elected church treasurer. Brethren D. P. Hively and Bro. Jesse Studebaker were chosen to solicit Mission Board, met with us. We have not yet secured a minister to hold a series of meetings.—Mrs. A. Blessing, of West Milton, Ohio, was with us on Saturday night, Sunday morning and evening, and gave us spiritual food. Eld. Joseph Holder, of Hagerstown, Ind., is still assisting us here in the work. Our Sunday-school was increasing since our last report.—N. J. Paul, 117 South Court St., Muncie, Ind., April 11.

Nettie Creek.—Our church met in council April 8. We granted two letters of membership. Our congregation is in charge of Eld. Bro. L. J. Hook was elected church treasurer. Brethren D. P. Hively and Bro. Jesse Studebaker were chosen to solicit Mission Board, met with us. We have not yet secured a minister to hold a series of meetings.—Mrs. A. Blessing, of West Milton, Ohio, was with us on Saturday night, Sunday morning and evening, and gave us spiritual food. Eld. Joseph Holder, of Hagerstown, Ind., is still assisting us here in the work. Our Sunday-school was increasing since our last report.—N. J. Paul, 117 South Court St., Muncie, Ind., April 11.

Nettie Creek.—Our church met in council April 8. We granted two letters of membership. Our congregation is in charge of Eld. Elders L. W. Teeter and D. E. Bowman to represent us at Annual Meeting. Bro. Jesse Studebaker, alternate. Our love feast will be held April 16, at the Brick church.—Chas. W. Miller, New Lisbon, Ind., April 11.

Pleasant Hill.—Our inspiring series of meetings, which began March 26, with Bro. Jesse Studebaker in charge, closed April 2. Three young men accepted Christ and were baptized April 1. Our Sunday-school Convention was held at Pleasant Hill April 9, with Bro. Jesse Studebaker in charge.—Lotto Ind., April 13.

Ridge Farm.—Immediately after Sunday-school Bro. Jacob Heistand, of near Walkerton, Ind., preached for us. Text: Jonah 3:1-5. Bro. Jacob is one of our old time preachers. He will be with us again in four weeks.—Hattie Carbiener, Ridge Farm, Ind.

Solomon's Creek church decided to renew her efforts at the next house after a discontinuance of several years. Sunday, April 9, at 3 P. M., the Sunday-school Convention was held at Pleasant Hill April 9, with Bro. Jesse Studebaker in charge.—Lotto, Ind., April 13.

Ridge Farm.—Immediately after Sunday-school Bro. Jacob Heistand, of near Walkerton, Ind., preached for us. Text: Jonah 3:1-5. Bro. Jacob is one of our old time preachers. He will be with us again in four weeks.—Hattie Carbiener, Ridge Farm, Ind.

Spring Creek.—The joint Sunday-school Meeting of Sugar Creek, Spring Creek and Eel River churches will be held May 6, at 2 P. M., at the Spring Creek church.—Nora A. Rose, Sidney, Ind., April 14.

dividing of our District into three Districts was considered, and all were in favor of the division. Bro. A. J. Weddle was chosen to represent us at the Annual Meeting; Sister Mary Payne, clerk for this year; Bro. James Richardson, Sunday-school superintendent. Brethren W. J. Payne, James Richardson and John Letrwecks were reelected on the local insurance committee.

On Sunday morning an able sermon was delivered by Bro. Austin Hylton. After services they were called to the home of Bro. A. M. Payne, to anoint his wife, who was very sick. After spending the night there, she seemed to be some better. They arrived home on Monday evening, after another hard day's ride. Maggie Hylton.

R. D. 2, Box 36, Floyd, Va., April 3.

The greater part of his life was spent in Iowa, principally in the bounds of the Dallas Center church. Nine years ago he removed with his family to Princeton, Knox, where he has since resided till removed by death. His remains were brought back to Dallas Center for burial. Services at the country home by the writer, assisted by other brethren. He was united in marriage to Emma Bowman in 1875. To this union were born three sons and two daughters. One daughter preceded him in death about fourteen years ago. He leaves a wife, four children, two brothers and one sister.—Eld. C. B. Rowe, Dallas Center, Iowa.

First Steps for Little Feet

By Charles Foster.

This book has been prepared to give children their first lessons in the Bible. It is printed in such clear, easy words, and illustrated with such clearness and simplicity that the youngest of Christian faith, the little ones of five and six years of age, can understand and learn from it. Bible stories are presented and the little learners are carried step by step through the Gospels—being made familiar with the chief incidents of CHRIST'S LIFE ON EARTH. A list of questions is printed at the close of each chapter or lesson, which will be of great assistance in driving home the lesson. The book contains 128 pages, over 70 colored frontispieces and 148 illustrations. Printed from large clear type. Substantially bound in cloth.

The Lost Brothers of the Alleghanies

By Eld. Jas. A. Sell

On the morning of April 24, 1856, Joseph and George Cox, aged respectively 4 and 6 years, wandered from their home in the mountains of Western Pennsylvania.

Thousands of men, women and children searched for the little boys, on the fourteenth day their whereabouts was discovered by Indian guide of Jacob Dibert.

Eld. Sell, who conducted Memorial services on the Fiftieth Anniversary of the occasion, tells the story in all its details. The illustrations consist of the portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Dibert, their home, the scene of the rescue, and true story of life in the mountains. Intensely interesting and instructive.

DAYBREAK IN THE DARK CONTINENT

By WILSON S. NAYLOR.

As a mission field, ripe for the harvest, Africa is now attracting unusual attention. This fact makes this book a timely one. No one is better fitted than the author of this volume to furnish a comprehensive treatment of the theme. His travels in Africa have been quite extensive. It is an excellent book for mission study classes. It contains many illustrations, pen sketches, chronological and statistical tables, charts and suggestions, a two-page map, with key and a concise index. It will do any one good to read it. We all ought to know more about the conditions of our fellow beings in heathen lands. This book is a great eye opener. 260 pages, cloth 57c.

MORE AGENTS Wanted

We want an agent in each congregation to sell "Onesimus" and "The Life of Eld. R. H. Miller." These books are ready sellers and should be found in each home. Agents are sending in favorable reports concerning the sale of these. Is there an agent in your congregation? If not, write us, we can give you something interesting.

If you can't put in full time write anyway; you can make good wages during spare time. Try it out this winter.

Mr.World and Miss Church-Member

Mr. World and Miss Church-Member

A Twentieth Century Allegory.

By Rev. W. S. Harris.

It is a forcible allegory, somewhat after the style of Pilgrim's Progress, and in no sense an imitation of it. Brothers and mothers, it is the book that you should get for your son and daughter, and at the same time read it yourself. You will be stronger for the church after having read it. It illustrates vividly how Satan lures the church member, step by step, from the true Gospel, till finally he is lost forever.

Illustrated by 18 full-page drawings, the work of Paul J. Carter, of Elgin.

highly appreciated by all. We are the only Brethren family located within this part of the state and any Brethren preach for over a year. This is a new country. We have a union Sunday-school, but no regular preaching services. Any brethren visiting here will locate here or anywhere in the country, will be given a hearty welcome. Any ministers, coming this way, are invited to stop off and preach for us. This section is also a healthy section of Southern Texas, and a good place to start a church.—Harry Hertzler, Jr., Texas, April 13.

Linden.—Bro. J. A. Miller has been with us six days and preached seven sermons. We have had a splendid time and a good attendance.—O. E. Hartman, Linden, Texas, April 11.

VIRGINIA.

Fairfax church met in council April 1. Our elder, Bro. I. M. Neff, presided. Two letters of membership have been received since our last report, and four were granted. Eld. I. M. Neff is our delegate to Annual Meeting. Bro. Lewis B. Fridley, alternate. Our love feast will be May 27, at 6 P. M. May 28 we will render a "Peace" program. There is a Sunday-school at two mission points in our congregation—one at Legato, with Sherman A. P. A. Myers as superintendent, and attendeslja, and one at Bull Run, the superintendent to be supplied by the Volunteer Mission Board.—Maggie Miller, Oakton, Va., April 9.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Crab Orchard.—Bro. James Riner, of Bragryille, W. Va., came to this place April 8 and preached for us on Sunday morning and evening. On account of the rain we had no services on Saturday evening. We are thankful for Bro. Riner's coming and we feel that he is favored to preach anywhere he place. March 28 we organized our Sunday-school, with Bro. Samuel Sanger as superintendent; Sister Laura Shuffer, secretary. We have a good attendance.—Mrs. Crystal Sutphin, Sutphin, W. Va., April 10.

Spruce Run.—April 1 our dear mother, Eld. G. W. Hutchinson, was able to preach for us. His talks were inspiring. We expect to have a love feast May 14, at 5:30 P. M.—Lena E. Fleshman, Lindside, W. Va., April 11.

WISCONSIN.

Maple Grove.—The Christian Workers gave a temperance program April 2, followed by a temperance lecture by Bro. Greenawalt.—Mollie Verbeck, Stanley, Wis., April 4.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER
AND
OUR SATURDAY NIGHT

For $1.85 we will send you the Messenger for one year and a copy of Our Saturday Night. This is only 35c for the book which contains 192 pages.

The Gospel Messenger

is a religious paper of superior merit. Our Saturday Night is a book that will interest and help you. The Messenger, being the official organ of the Church of the Brethren, is of special value to members of the church, though many not identified with the Brotherhood find it helpful and appreciation. The things of most vital interest to the church are communicated through the columns of this paper only. Its work is being appreciated more and more, as the increase of the list of subscribers indicates. The Messenger is indispensable as a religious educator and spiritual counselor. Quote brother says: "It has been a forerunner to conversion and church unity in city and rural districts."

Our Saturday Night

is a collection of the ripe fruit of a master mind. Following are a few phrases from those who have read the book: "Interesting and instructive." "Food for various moods." "Good reading and will do good." "Good from beginning to end." "I am charmed with it." "Replete with warnings, editorials, examples and good counsel." What more need be said? You must read it to learn its real merits. Get it now. It is going rapidly.

But Do Not Forget

it is not for sale. A subscription to the Gospel Messenger is the only means of obtaining this charming little volume.

The Messenger one year, $1.50; the book, 35 cents; both, $1.85.

AROUND THE WORLD

Bringing Suit for Prayers Offered.

When Simon, the sorcerer, in the days of the apostles, desired to purchase the power of the Spirit, Peter quickly told him, "Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money." Not so the Christian Scientist of today. In a recent suit before a Springfield, Mass., court, a representative of the cult laid claim to $300 for prayers offered, claiming that the one thus favored had been correspondingly benefited. Just how the judge will determine the matter is not yet known. Of one thing, however, we are quite sure,—no Christian is justified in appealing to the civil courts in the settlement of any such claim against a fellow-believer.

The Real Joy of the Christian.

While there is much in the world to discourage even the best of us, there is, after all, a great deal to be thankful for, and he who can, in some way, extract the honey of real joy, has solved the secret of a happy life. Here is an extract from a letter by an aged saint that tells its own story: "Everybody is my friend or wants to be, it seems. I am at peace with God, through the merit of my Savior's blood, and at peace with man through that same Savior's transforming grace. Once in a while I catch a glimpse of the place the Lord is preparing for all those that love him. I hear the flow of the river which we must all cross, sounding no longer like a deep and sullen stream, too dangerous to cross, but like a cool and sweet and shallow brook, bordering the green fields of the Promised Land." Such a life is "hid with Christ in God."

A Difficult Mission Field.

While most of the various parts of Asia are open to missionary endeavor, and afford comparative safety to the gospel heralds, very little progress has been made in Afghanistan, Central Asia. This is the home of the Sunnite Mohammedans, a people intensely bloodthirsty. Their bitter hatred of all Christians finds expression in their tenet that future bliss is the lot of all who have killed a Christian. This peculiar belief renders the development of missionary work in that country extremely difficult, for the Afghans will not readily yield their intense opposition to anything that is not Mohammedan. And yet even in this place of danger some effort has recently been put forth by several earnest Bible distributors. A number of Bibles and Testaments have been sold to the people and doubtless there will be at least some results in the Lord's own good time.

Appalling Loss of Immigrant Girls.

According to a recent report of Miss Grace Abbott, of Hull House, Chicago, director of the Immigrants' Protective League, more than 1,800 young immigrant girls disappeared from trains between New York and Chicago in one year. They were known to have boarded the trains in New York with passage paid to Chicago, but never reached their destination. It is now planned to place Federal immigration Inspectors on all trains between the two cities, in order to protect the girls while en route, and to deliver them to the Protective League upon their arrival in Chicago. Such an endeavor is most praiseworthy. Too often the agents of organized vice are enabled to carry on their nefarious work unhindered, simply because there is a lack of vigilance on the part of those in charge. Too often these poor immigrant girls may well say, "No man cared for my soul."

A Missionary Hero.

Deep impressions have been made upon the Chinese of Manchuria by the self-sacrifice of Dr. A. F. Jackson, a medical missionary of the Scotch Presbyterian Mission, who gladly gave his life for the stricken peasantry of that country. The annals of missionary endeavor and arduous labor, rich as they are with instances of heroism, have no higher example of devotion, including even martyrdom itself, than that of this earnest worker. Hsi Liang, the Viceroy of Manchuria, paid this tribute at the memorial services: "With the heart of Christ, who died to save the world, he came to help our country in its hour of distress. Where the plague was thickest, he struggled to help the stricken, to find medicine and stay the dreadful disease. Finally the pest seized him and took him away from us long before his time. Our grief is too deep for words." Such a life is a power for righteousness "Though dead, he yet speaketh."

"The People of the Shining Face."

We can not think of anything more beautiful than the tribute of the Hindus of the Mysore District who refer to the native Christian converts as "the people of the shining face." Such was Moses when, after being in the holy mount, in the presence of the Most High, he returned to his people with God's glory still upon him. If, in some way, we could enter into closer communion with the great Father above, and more fully participate in the profound experiences of the higher life, there would doubtless be more "shining faces" among us. Too many of us, alas, are living in the narrow confines of the dark valley, when we might bask in the glory of the mount of God.

England's Encouraging Increase of Temperance.

Some time ago we referred to the greatly-improved conditions in England, so far as indicated by a falling off in the consumption of alcoholic liquors. Now another phase of the question is brought to our notice,—the decreased number of deaths due to alcoholism and diseases incident thereto. In 1900 the expenditure for alcohol per capita was $22.59, and the deaths due to alcoholism, 257 per million. In 1910, with a considerably increased cost of liquors, due to taxation, the expenditures per capita had fallen to $17.24, and the deaths from alcoholism were practically reduced by half. That means good progress for Great Britain, and eventually still more substantial gains will doubtless be realized.

A Commendable Example.

Some years ago Japan faced China on the gory field of battle. Those days, however, are forgotten, in the presence of China's great struggle with the awful famine. Most noteworthy it is to see how the Japanese, everywhere, are coming to the aid of their former foes. The 10,000 Japanese in and around Seattle resolved, some weeks ago, to deny themselves of all but the merest subsistence, to help their Chinese brethren, and their laudable example has touched others of their countrymen in America and the homeland, until a most gratifying response has rewarded their labors. Such efforts in behalf of suffering humanity are worthy of highest praise, and may well be emulated by those who lay claim to a much-vaunted Christian civilization.

The Bible and Social Reform.

The Tercentenary of the King James Version of the Bible has seemingly directed renewed attention to the important part played by it, not only in the life of the church, but also in the elevation of social and civic ideals. The influence of the Bible in the shaping of events in England, as well as of the United States, is not to be doubted. Beyond all question France might have reformed herself in a far less violent and bloody manner, had her people been given free access to the Bible some years prior to the French Revolution. A deplorable lack of self-restraint has for years been conspicuously prominent in France. The people were swept onward in the turbulent stream of unreasoning rationalism. There was little individual sense of responsibility, such as a study of the Old Book tends to produce. It may be safely asserted, therefore, that France today is spiritually barren, largely because of its failure to be in touch with the Bible, while in the English-speaking nations owe much of their moral and and social supremacy to the blessed influence of the Book of books.

Prohibition Africa's Hope.

By order of the Brussels Conference, representing the entire aggregation of the world's nations, a Prohibition Zone was established for the protection of the native races of Africa. Some idea of the extent of this territory may be gathered from the fact that its length is about 3,000 miles from north to south, with an extreme breadth, from east to west of 4,600 miles, thus representing about one-fourteenth of the entire area of Africa. While it is to be regretted that not all the powers in control of African colonies are as careful in enforcing the prohibition stipulations as they ought to be, immense benefits have already resulted during the years wherever the law has been enforced. Be it remembered, also, that almost invariably it is not the African native who is guilty of illegal liquor selling, but the representative of a so-called civilized and Christian nation,—one who is determined to enrich himself by selling the body-and-soul-destroying liquor to Africa's natives, in open defiance of the law. Somehow,—whether in Africa or America,—the same Judas-like, God-defying disposition characterizes the dispenser of alcoholic stimulants.

Excuses Are Not Reasons.

Some one who has a good head for figures, and plenty of time to work out the totals, claims that in more than half of nearly two thousand cases that came under his observation, the persons in question remained outside of church relationship because of the alleged lukewarmness of the church membership. Now, while the writer may be justified in administering a well-merited reproof to dilatory church members, he should also remember that a mere excuse to evade a plain duty is by no means a reason that will justify anyone in remaining outside of church affiliation. Not all, who were favored witnesses of the matchless ministry of Jesus, were won to discipleship, nor was the zeal and energy of Paul an irresistible argument to the hearers of his day. It is to be regretted that so many today are unwilling to hear, despite our best efforts, but all responsibility should not be laid upon the shoulders of professing Christians.

Judge Landis on Nickel Theaters.

At Chicago, April 22, Alduvino Mazzone, an Italian, found guilty of white slave traffic, was sentenced to ten years in the Fort Leavenworth Penitentiary by Judge Kenesaw M. Landis. In passing sentence upon the offender, the judge delivered the following bitter, though all too true, diatribe against the popular nickel theaters, as giving opportunity to the "slavers" in their schemes of ensnaring the girls attending these places: "This girl, for whose sake the sentence is now being imposed upon her abductor, frequently visited five-cent theaters. There has been a good deal of scandal written about them, but from what has appeared here in this court, on two or three recent occasions, even the wildest stuff that has been written has not touched the fringe of the actual facts, as far as danger to young girls is concerned." This opinion by a judge of experience,—a man who knows whereof he speaks,—should receive more than ordinary attention. There is no escaping from the place of questionable amusement to the seductive snare of the wily tempter who "lieth in wait to deceive and destroy."

Opium Reform Halted by Great Britain.

At present we are confronted by the pitiful spectacle of a large and densely-populated country again pleading with a strong but merciless nation, humbly asking to be relieved from the stipulations of a treaty that is ruining its people. It is the plea of China that it be freed from the further operation of the cruel edict which insists that opium must be grown and imported into China from India. When it is remembered that China was made an unwilling party to the agreement which, at the point of the bayonet, stipulated the importation of a certain large amount of opium each year, it arouses the sympathy of every lover of truth and righteousness. That a nation, laying claim to Christianity, should force such an infamous treaty upon a weaker nation, at a time of distress, when it could not possibly help itself, is a disgrace and shame. That, in these enlightened days of the twentieth century, Great Britain should seek to perpetuate a concession at once destructive and blighting to those brought under the influence of the death-dealing drug, is a crime of so deep a dye that the wrath of Heaven will doubtless be visited upon its promoters.

War's Enormous Waste.

There was a time when the Church of the Brethren, the Quakers, and perhaps a few other small churches were the only religious bodies openly espousing the cause of peace. Now the ministers of many cities and towns are boldly coming out with petitions in favor of peace and arbitration. Baron de Constant, the distinguished Frenchman, who recently toured this country in the interests of peace, gave some startling information as to the real destructiveness of war. He openly charges that the Governments conceal from the people the enormous cost of war preparation, as well as the great criminal slaughter of human lives on the battlefield. France's Napoleonic wars cost her from four to five millions of men, and left her physically depleted for many years. He avers that if the battlefields of modern times were balanced in the scale against the results, it could be shown that every so-called victory made the whole world poorer and that even the victor himself was but a loser in the end. It would serve a most excellent purpose if there could be a systematic diffusion of striking facts, concerning the evils of war, throughout the United States. People must be aroused on this matter, for not until they can be made to think seriously will they be ready to espouse the cause of peace and arbitration.

Our Earthly Course to Endless Life.

BY GEORGE D. ZOLLERS.

[The following poem by our departed brother,—the last from his gifted pen,—was already in type when the notice of his death reached us.—Ed.]

A vital frame in tenant form,
This earthly life of man—
A being wrought by matchless skill,
In God's amazing plan.

Like vessel's wake in heaving sea,
Some life-trails vanish soon;
While others glare with lucid sheen,
Like brightest sun at noon.

Like rivers in the rapid flow,
Are wending towards the sea,
So down the stream of time we go
To vast eternity.

From youth to age, in changeful ways,
A long and weary trend,
Through sunlight gleams and shadows low
We reach the mundane end.

No Christian yearns to live this life
In varied mood again;
But would the loftier sphere obtain,
In blessedness to reign.

Beyond these threat'ning clouds and storms,
There is a cloudless sky,—
A home of joy, serene and fair,
Where friends will never die.

Qualifications of a Good Presiding Officer.

BY DAVID M. ADAMS.

THE observance of order and decorum, by the members of a religious assembly, who have met together to deliberate on matters of common interest and importance, is not only essential to the regular and satisfactory proceeding of such a deliberative body, but absolutely necessary, in order that peace, harmony and prosperity may reign within the Christian church.

The dominant spirit of a church council is far-reaching in its effects, be said spirit good or bad. I have frequently been present at councils in which personal thrusts were made during the discussion of some question then under consideration. Of course, they did, as they always do, have a bad effect. If a member of any deliberative body be permitted, while engaged in debate, to indulge in personalities, or resort to harsh, vindictive or vituperative remarks, a spirit which shall inevitably find its culmination in factions and schisms, will be created and fostered within the body.

Such expressions, however, are not tolerated in an assembly, presided over by a chairman who has sufficient executive ability properly to enforce those parliamentary rules and usages necessary for the adequate government of all deliberative bodies. He fully realizes that the promotion of harmony and coherency among the various members of the assembly demand that each speaker carefully observe the well-established rules of order and decorum. He appreciates the fact that the great purpose of the rules and precedents, by which all well-regulated deliberative assemblies govern their procedure, is to subserve the will of the assembly, and facilitate the expression of their deliberative sense by maintaining order, and securing that which is justly due each member throughout their deliberations.

Knowing that parliamentary rules or laws are said to be based on good common sense, and are designed to promote justice and fairness in deliberative bodies, whether these bodies be large or small, political, or religious, he regards their observance very highly.

It requires a great deal of skill to be a good chairman, and if there is any assembly in which a wise and efficient presiding officer is desirable, it is certainly in the councils of the Christian church. Observation has taught many of us that in the past history of the church there have been a number of weak and inefficient presiding officers in the local churches who, on account of their lack of acquaintance with the rules and usages by which deliberative assemblies govern their procedure, have shown a serious lack of executive ability. In cases where council meetings were conducted by them, these gatherings were noted principally for their proixity and animated discussions. In view of these facts it will not be deemed out of place briefly to consider some of the essential qualifications of a good moderator:

1. He should be a parliamentarian. Without a knowledge of the rules and usages, commonly observed by deliberative bodies, or, at least, of those rules of procedure which have been adopted by the particular body over which he presides, to say the least, he is bound to prove incompetent as a chairman. He should be thoroughly acquainted with the business before the meeting, so as to be able intelligently to present or announce it in the order to be acted upon. In short, he should be thoroughly conversant with all the duties devolving on the chair, so as to be fully prepared properly to dispatch whatever business may come before the house.

2. A presiding officer should not only know when to entertain a motion, but, while putting the question he should have the power of concise and lucid statement. In my past experience in church work I have heard certain moderators state motions in a manner that absolutely failed to convey the wish expressed by the mover. This, of course, can not be done when the motion is presented in writing, which, after all, is the proper way to present a proposition. If the moderator fails to present a motion clearly, confusion will inevitably follow; and if he is verbose, he will consume valuable time in making explanations which prey upon the patience of the members of the assembly. It is, indeed, a pleasure to attend a council where the chairman knows how to economize time, putting motions, and clearing up parliamentary points.

3. A presiding officer must not be loquacious. A chairman who thinks he must discuss every question, and who remains in the chair while doing so, is surely a great trial to a public assembly.

It is the duty of the chairman to state matters of fact within his knowledge; to inform the assembly on points of order or the course of proceeding, when called upon for that purpose, or when he considers it necessary to do so. If he wishes to speak, he should surrender the chair, and obtain the floor in the same manner as the other members of the assembly. He has no right to take advantage of his position as chairman in preëmpting the floor to discuss a proposition before the house.

4. He should be absolutely impartial. He may have decided convictions with reference to the question under debate, but he should, by no means, fail to give those who maintain opposite views from those of his own the same opportunity for discussion as is granted to those who represent the side of the question for which he would willingly contend: Partiality, on the part of the moderator, once detected, will cause him to lose the confidence of the entire assembly.

5. He should have those qualities which will enable him to restrain every member, when engaged in debate, within the rules of order. He must insist on having the chair properly recognized by those who wish to speak. Otherwise, confusion will ensue, and much valuable time will be spent in making speeches that are not germane to the subject under consideration. I have known congregations to spend a whole day in council, in which all the business transacted could have been judiciously transacted in two hours, had the moderator possessed adequate executive ability, and enforced the common rules of order and decorum. I know whereof I speak when I say there are people who absent themselves from council, not because of the distance they have to travel, but on account of the great length of time usually spent in disposing of the limited amount of business brought before the meeting. You cannot get busy parishioners to postpone important duties in order to attend a meeting where their precious time is practically wasted, because of the need of a chairman who is qualified to expedite business.

Turning Points.

BY A. G. CROSSWHITE.

[Note.—The writer most cheerfully acknowledges help received from the "Well Spring of Truth," in the preparation of these notes.]

"Once to every man and nation
Comes the moment to decide,
In the strife of truth and falsehood
For the good or evil side."

THAT there are turning points in the lives of men is fully attested by observation, history and personal experience. They are seldom or never as marked as in the cases of Saul of Tarsus, the Philippian jailer, or Peter, as he received the reproving look from the Savior after his denial, but they are turning points, nevertheless. Sometimes they come early in life. It is said of Voltaire that at the age of five years he committed to memory an infidel poem, and was never, after that, able to free his mind from its pernicious influence.

On the other hand, William Wilberforce was turned the other way by receiving early religious training from a pious aunt; and although much was done in his early manhood to erase the impressions thus made, his whole life was moulded and colored by that Christian training.

Hume was quite young when he took the wrong side in a debate, yet he embraced and defended through life the position taken at that time.

Scott, the commentator, in a despairing mood, read a hymn of Dr. Watts on the all-seeing God, and was turned from his sin and idleness to a life of usefulness.

The rebuke of his teacher and the taunt of a schoolmate aroused Clarke, the distinguished divine, who, up to that time, was very slow in attaining knowledge.

The turning point in Doddridge's life was when Clarke took him under his care.

Aaron Burr sought spiritual advice in a revival at college, but his counselor told him that the work was not genuine. His anxieties were dissipated, and from that time his downward career has been dated.

Robert Moffat, the distinguished missionary, as he read a placard announcing a missionary meeting, was led to devote his life to the redeeming of the heathen.

Thus it is that character and years of usefulness often depend upon one little event or circumstance. The sudden darkness occasioned by the extinguishing of a lamp in a lady's room, was the means of her conversion in Switzerland, recently. She had long lived only for the world, and the thought of her sins had never given her uneasiness. One night, while alone in her room, she saw the lamp suddenly go out. Although she was alone, she said aloud (thinking only of the accident which left her in the dark), "There is no oil in the lamp!" The words thus spoken sounded in her ears with a new sense. She recalled the parable of the five "foolish virgins," who had no oil, and whose lamps had gone out at the coming of the bridegroom, and from that moment, day and night, that word of God remained in her soul. It occurred to her constantly: "No, I have no oil in my lamp! My God! what will become of me? I have not thy grace in my heart!" She was filled with fear, began to pray, and continued in prayer until God gave her peace through faith on his Son.

Dr. Peddie says, "Never till a man feels the fires of individuality will he write his name up among living forces." And Charnock tells us, "He that hath many things to trust to is in suspense which he should take hold of; but where there is but one left, with what greediness will he clasp hold of that!"

God cuts down worldly props that we may make him our stay. "Moments spent with God are pearls strung for eternity." God comes near in every soul crisis to shed the light of his face upon us. Be not ashamed to confess that you have been in the wrong. It is but owning what you need not be ashamed of,—that you have more sense than you had before, to see your error, and more grace to forsake it. Worship can better wait than reconciliation. Apology and restitution are sweeter offerings to God than either sacrifice or promise, for the former are essential elements of practical religion while the latter work no reforms. Says Dr. Cuyler, "The actual working period of a life of threescore years and ten is very short. He who has not learned the value of an hour is doomed to failure. On an hour often swings the destiny for eternity."

"There is a tide in the affairs of men,
Which taken at the flood leads on to fortune.
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows and in miseries."

Next Sunday's Sermon.

BY JESSE D. MOHLER.

THOSE who write to the MESSENGER, frequently mention the number of ministers that may be living in some congregations. Isolated ministers might reasonably look upon such conditions as giving an easy time to those who preach only as their turn may come. It should be so, and an extra good sermon should be expected from each man when he preaches, owing to his opportunities to gather material.

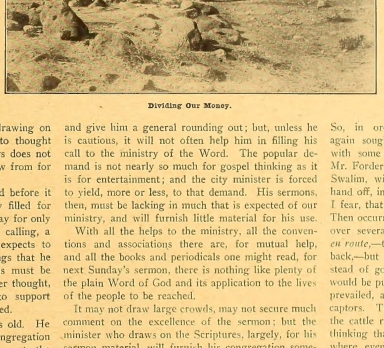
But how about the minister who must preach to the same congregation regularly for a number of years, furnishing two, three or more new sermons each month, and rarely having the privilege of hearing another of our ministers speak? The writer knows of one district where more than half of the congregations are being served that way; and the minister takes care of home affairs the same as do the lay members.

The question of next Sunday's sermon is a regular repetition; and is sometimes as great a problem as the day laborer meets in providing the next meal for his family when work is scarce. But preaching time is coming, and something must be found. This needs to be something that not only will pass; but that will strengthen and edify, and will come fairly up to the standard that the minister has set and that the congregation expects.

Sermons can not be gathered from an empty mind, any more than crops can be grown on poor land. Our farmers know that impoverished land can be made fertile, not only for the present crop each year, but to both yield the crop and gain in ability to produce results. The very necessity of a minister drawing on all his resources, furnishes an incentive to thought and study that the one among many others does not have; and he can find several fields to draw from for sermon material.

As stated above, the mind must be filled before it can produce; and it ought not be merely filled for present use any more than we labor each day for only that day's necessities. To succeed in his calling, a minister must read much that he never expects to put in a sermon, must think much of things that he may never tell to his congregation. This must be done in order to have broader views, clearer thought, and positive convictions, with grounds to support them, and that his mind may be disciplined.

The man who does not read soon grows old. He may be satisfied with himself, and his congregation may be satisfied for a time; but it will wake up to the knowledge that the minister is not doing as well as he might. While one is inclined to think his hearers do not remember very much of what he tells them, it is surprising to know how well the people gauge the minister's efforts.



But his reading should not be to fill him as we do a cistern, expecting to draw out the same amount. It should make him more like the living well that may never have much more than is needed at one time, but has unseen sources of supply that can be drawn on as needed. Don't be tanks or cisterns; be springs.

In his efforts to advance his efficiency, one naturally feels that the sermons to be heard in other churches will greatly help him. Surely those specially prepared for the ministry would have what we need for our use. This is reasonable; but, somehow it is disappointing in practice. He naturally wants to hear what is called the best preachers. He finds a man whose ambition has been to fill a town or city church, —one who has turned from the demands of the country congregation, with its life among the natural, to the superficial needs of a city congregation.

To fill this demand, the city man has gotten out of touch with the people our country minister must serve. In addition to that, convenience of assembling has given opportunity for a Bible class one evening each week, where those who desire may study and be instructed in the Word. This leaves the regular preaching service more free to please a general congregation than is helpful to the man who wants a gospel sermon to help him preach to a congregation whose needs are such as our ministers usually find.

He may learn much that is useful to him in thought, in expression, and in giving power to his own work; but for material for next Sunday's sermon, he might find more suitable lessons if he will go to the fields. There he may gather lessons that will appeal to his hearers as did the Savior's lessons of the vine to those acquainted with its cultivator, of the lost sheep to a shepherd people, or of the sower to the growers of grain. Each congregation needs sermons peculiar to its environments, and attending other services will be found helpful only in a general way.

It may improve the minister's style of preaching, and give him a general rounding out; but, unless he is cautious, it will not often help him in filling his call to the ministry of the Word. The popular demand is not nearly so much for gospel thinking as it is for entertainment; and the city minister is forced to yield, more or less, to that demand. His sermons, then, must be lacking in much that is expected of our ministry, and will furnish little material for his use.

Dividing Our Money.

With all the helps to the ministry, all the conventions and associations there are, for mutual help, and all the books and periodicals one might read, for next Sunday's sermon, there is nothing like plenty of the plain Word of God and its application to the lives of the people to be reached.

It may not draw large crowds, may not secure much comment on the excellence of the sermon; but the minister who draws on the Scriptures, largely, for his sermon material, will furnish his congregation something to think over and digest for their use that will be a quiet influence in their lives. There is a power in Bible preaching that can not be gained from any other source.

The minister who is puzzled over next Sunday's sermon can find no resource to compare with an acquaintance with the Bible, and the more of its contents he can command and apply for his congregation, the more assurance he may have that God will take care of the results of his preaching.

Going up to Jerusalem.

BY W. R. MILLER.

Siege and Looting of Kerak.—No. 9.

We had mounted our horses after luncheon, ready for the start, when there occurred a stormy time among the Arabs. The guide was called for, and, going among the wild fellows, each party holding frequent consultations with him, much time was consumed. They did a great deal of threatening, amidst the greatest amount of confusion, yelling and gesticulating. Finally we were informed that the Arab on horseback, who had joined us, was none other, than Swalim-ibn-aly, a notorious robber sheikh of the Atowney tribe of Arabs, and that these other armed fellows, who had also joined themselves to us, were his tribesmen.

The Atownies are a tribe of real, wandering Bedouins (Nomads), and very strong in numbers. This tribe has no certain locality where they may always be found, as have the sixteen tribes in the Kerak district, but they move from one district to another, or wherever it suits them. At one time they may be found down at Akaba on the Red Sea; again up near Damascus, and at still another time where we found them, near the south end of the Dead Sea. They come and go at their pleasure, seeking permission from no one. It is said that they know every water-hole from Sinai to Damascus. For the most party they live by plundering. They may commit any amount of depredations. Their possessions being largely camels, horses and flocks, they can put their tents under the saddles, on their camels' backs, and in twenty-four hours be so far away, that no one would know where to look for them.

Swalim-ibn-aly, with a band of his cutthroats, was no doubt lying in ambush for just such a job as he was now putting into effect, and in all probability was informed of our coming, and of the letter which our escort carried, for at the first he appeared to know of it, and later took possession of it. Then he demanded pay for our escort, whom he intended to turn back at this point. They first asked forty Napoleons (about $160); then came down to fourteen Napoleons (about $64). This amount was then raised between us and the guide for them. Somehow it got into Swalim's hands, who deliberately tied it up in the corner of his mendiel, and said to our escort, "Now get your money; I will take this for my pay." So, in order to satisfy the other fellows, we again sought what little gold we had left, and, with some silver added, raised another $40. This Mr. Forder attempted to pass over to our escort, but Swalim, with his imps, almost twisted our guide's hand off, in their greed for this also, with the result, I fear, that very little of it went to the proper place. Then occurred another long convention amongst them, over several cows, which the Atownies had stolen en route,—the owner of the cattle trying to take them back,—but this time the pulling was over cows, instead of gold, and it seemed as if the poor things would be pulled to pieces. Finally the stronger party prevailed, and the animals accompanied us and our captors. The disappointed escort and the owner of the cattle returned, while we drew a sigh of relief; thinking that we were at least moving on to somewhere, even though we knew not where.

After we had proceeded for some time,—far enough away from our former escort that they could be of no help to us,—we were halted, and a further demand for money was made of us. This time they went through our pockets, searching all the men and some of the ladies. I believe Bro. Sanders had his shoes taken off in their zeal to find more gold. After they got what small change and silver they could find, they withdrew a short distance, deliberately sitting down and dividing our money between them. (See illustration with Arabs to the left of the horses), entitled, "Dividing Our Money."

Again we heard, "Yalla," which means in the Arabic, "Quick, or proceed." Our party now consisted of our twenty captors, our own party of fifteen; including the muleteers, two refugees from Kerak, and a man with two women and a donkey. Sometime during the afternoon this last-named party passed on, of which, at the time, we scarcely took any notice, having had so much to contend with that the separation of a company of three persons was, at the time, hardly worth making note of, yet God used this very insignificant event to our salvation.

Night was approaching rapidly, and so far as we could see, there was no camp at hand, when, just as the sun was touching the mountain tops, Swalim insisted that his men demanded more money, and that he could not control them. Here, at this late hour, I believe it was their purpose to take us into the mountain on our left, only a short distance away, and to rob us of everything we had, including our clothing, baggage, animals, and possibly kill us in order to accomplish and conceal their villainous deed. Their demonstration led me to believe that this was their purpose, however God ruled otherwise in their hearts, and by much persuasion, on the part of our guide, we again advanced after the sun had fully gone down, reaching their camp between seven and eight o'clock.

I may further say that, in addition to going through our pockets during the afternoon, they also went through our saddle-pockets, appropriating whatever they chose to take, among which were two very valuable guns with ammunition.

It was a cold reception we received in their camp on that desolate night. A herd of goats were driven out of what stood for a tent,—an exceedingly poor one,—and amidst the dirt and filth, with but a bit of cold food, we sat down to eat and sleep, for we did not dare to open our bedding. Because of sheer exhaustion, the most of us did sleep some, but our faithful guide was on the alert. The Arabs made a fire in the other end of this tent, around which a large number of them sat, talking until a late hour. Our guide sat with them, until they urged him to sleep, which he pretended to do. Then, because of his pretended snoring, they thought him to be asleep, and deliberately made plans for the next morning.

This is what they intended to do in the morning, viz., take us out into the desert at the south end of the Dead Sea, there kill us and take our baggage and animals; leaving our bones to whiten the desert. This was all carefully planned,—Swalim calling for such of his men as he needed, and delivering to each one his part in the tragedy to be enacted.

"And God Repented."

BY JAMES M. MOORE.

THE above expression appears a number of times in the Sacred Record. There are persons who are puzzled over it, not being able to reconcile the idea of repenting with their conception of Jehovah.

There are, however, not over thirty or forty references of this kind, and a careful reading of them will easily explain the whole problem. This is the method the writer has used in preparing to help persons over the difficulty. I shall not, in this article, mention all of these cases, but only a few of those that proved especially helpful on the point.

For example, we read in Jer. 18: 8 as follows: "If that nation, against whom I have pronounced, turn from their evil, I will repent of the evil that I had thought to do unto them." Here God himself, through his prophet, says he will repent, and states the condition upon which he will do so.

This repentance, on God's part, is, that he refrains from the judgment he had planned to bring upon the nation, and that is all based upon the fact that the nation turns from the sin of which it was guilty, and because of which God had pronounced the judgment. This is all in perfect accord with God's working in general.

In Jer. 18: 9, 10 we have the other side: "And at what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, to build and to plant it; and if it do evil in my sight, that it obey not my voice, then I will repent of the good, wherewith I said I would benefit them." Here is a case where God will refrain from good he had planned for a people. And this is all based upon the fact that the people turned away from God unto sin.

Hence we reach this conclusion: God changes in his attitude toward a people or nation when that people or nation changes in its attitude toward sin. This is true in regard to individuals as well as nations.

This principle is expressed in the same way in Jer. 26: 3, 13, 19. It is the principle according to which the king of Nineveh worked when he received the word through Jonah that judgment had been pronounced against that great city. The king put on sackcloth, sat in ashes, and the whole city joined in eating no food, drinking no water, turning from their evil and crying mightily unto God (Jonah 3: 5-9). Here was a change in the attitude of the city toward sin. And on that basis they hoped for a change in God's attitude toward them. And God did change.

This principle applies to every case we have, where God repented. The conditions are not usually so clearly linked with the change, but a little broader look into the conditions will always bring out the two sides of the principle.

And so it is today, as it always was. God is in his attitude toward us inversely as we are toward sin.

The Dream of World-Peace.

BY J. EDWIN JONES.

NOT the vision of world-peace, for a vision is something that illuminates and makes clear; but the dream of world-peace because, like dreams, the theories and plans, for the realization of the hope, are as vague and devoid of illumination and inspiration by the Prince of Peace as ordinary dreams are devoid of all law or rule in their formation. "For I bear them witness that they have a zeal for God, but not according to knowledge. For, being ignorant of God's righteousness, and seeking to establish their own, they did not subject themselves to the righteousness of God" (Rom. 10: 2, 3, A. R. V.). We bear witness that great and good men, having absorbed ideas concerning universal peace, have given and are giving their talent and their energies to the furtherance of a propaganda that has, for its ultimate aim, the accomplishment of this ideal, but whose methods and hopes have no foundation in the teaching of Christ or in the revelation of the Spirit of God. "When they (the world) are saying, 'Peace and safety,' then sudden destruction cometh upon them" (1 Thess. 5: 3, A. R. V.). Human propositions and agreements, independent of God's Word and will, are valueless as indications of the true status of world peace.

It is true that God is a God of peace, and that the angels sang at the incarnation of the Prince of Peace, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men," yet the Holy Spirit speaks, through Paul, of the devil as the God and Prince of this world, and so long as that is true, and the purpose of Christ, to destroy the work of the devil, has not been consummated, we have no reason to expect peace outside of the heart and ranks of believers. Not always is it true that the peace of God rules in the hearts and councils of believers; how, then, may we expect peace to obtain in a world of men who do not acknowledge him? So long as the devil is loose, so long shall his children "conceive mischief and bring forth iniquity."

The failure to "rightly divide" the Word of Truth has led many to expect, in this present dispensation of grace, a number of things which clearly have their fulfillment in the Kingdom Age, when the devil will be bound, and our Lord, the Prince of Peace, shall reign. Even then, when a nominal peace shall have obtained for a millennium, the devil shall again be loosed. Scripture teaches that he will have apparently little difficulty in bringing a multitude into a state of rebellion against the loyal saints (Rev. 20: 7-10). But Divine Intervention destroys every one of them and delivers the saints. Then follows an eternity of uninterrupted peace. But before our Lord comes, and closes this dispensation by taking the church out of the world to reign with him (1 Thess. 4: 13-18), world-peace is but the enthusiastic dream of those who are zealous, but not according to knowledge.

Isa. 9: 6 presents to us the Prince of Peace, meaning Christ, and verse 7 follows with the declaration that "of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to establish it, and to uphold it with justice and with righteousness from henceforth even forever." With such a declaration by the Spirit of God one would, with reason, expect an explanation as to how this increase of peace is to be brought about by the Prince. And in this we are not disappointed.

Not to the world but to the disciples, did Jesus say, "My peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you." The peace of God, which passeth all understanding is undiscoverable by the world. It comes only through submission to the spirit of God. Its development, then, is not through human philosophy, but the result of a definite acceptance of Christ Jesus as Lord of the life. It logically follows that the era of world-peace, that is longed for by God-fearing and moral men, will find its fulfillment when Christ becomes the actual Lord of each individual life. Peace through any other channel exists in name only and is without foundation in fact and without a superstructure of stability. "There is no peace to the wicked, saith Jehovah." "The wicked are like the troubled sea that can not rest, that casteth up mire and dirt." Collectively, wicked men must express the characteristics of the individual. Therefore the peace of the world is conditioned upon the individuals, who compose the world, having peace in their hearts. The church, as the body of which the Prince of Peace is the Head, is responsible to promote the peace of the world along these lines, not becoming enamored or agitated by the glamour of fair speeches and munificent donations of millions of money to inaugurate and carry forward peace propaganda that has aspirations and ideals contrary to the teaching of the Scriptures.

It is a notable fact, that, while peace sentiment and money for peace propaganda has increased, the preparation and talk for war has also greatly multiplied. And not only so, but actual warfare and revolutionary uprisings have been on the increase. These facts doubtlessly emphasize the need of and desire for peace, on the part of righteous people, but to obtain results that have a semblance of stability, it is required that we forego our vain reasonings and speculation in the matter and accept the teaching of the Prince of Peace, that world-peace can come only when "the kingdom of the world is become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ" (Rev. 11: 15). Then shall men cry, "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." Then shall swords be beaten into plowshares and spears into pruning-hooks. Then shall the nature of the very beasts of the field yield to the all-pervasive influence of the Prince of Peace and "they shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain."

To read concerning the glory and beauty of the kingdom age is to become enamored of it. To this, in part, may be attributed the vain efforts of well-meaning men to bring to pass, by human means and through human philosophy, the stupendous ends that are to be attained only through the outworking of the plan of an infinite Father of Love.

World-peace will come with world-conversion. This, however, is not the work of the church; neither is it the consummation of this present age. This age is witnessing the calling out, from among the Gentiles, a people for his name. Our hope is not world-peace or world-conversion, but to be caught up out of the world at the coming of Christ. "And every man that hath this hope set on him purifieth himself."

It would seem, from a careful study of the Scriptures, that our business, as individual members of the body of Christ, is not to sway nations into line, but to bring individuals to submission to the Prince of Peace, that he might be the Lord of their life, purifying their hearts by obedience to the Truth, that they might have part in that glorious church, without spot or wrinkle or any such thing, that shall be the bride, the Lamb's wife. May we turn our feet to his testimony and beware of the philosophy of the world!

Rebaptism.

BY W. R. GUTHRIE.

THE Gospel teaches that faith, repentance and baptism are conditions of salvation from sin. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." This compliance with necessary conditions does not include the Lord's supper, feet-washing, communion, holy kiss and the anointing. These are works that are required of the saved, not of the unsaved; otherwise no one could be saved from his sins until he had engaged in all these duties. True, one who refuses to obey this part of the Gospel may fail to receive the crown, not because his baptism was illegal, but because of a lack of the Spirit of Christ and love of the Master, who said: "If ye love me, keep my commandments." Hence love to God and our fellow-men is the only true evidence of the spiritual birth. John says, "We know we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren." If a man says he loves God and hateth his brother, he is a liar and lacks the spiritual birth; for we have no way of measuring our love to our Creator, except by the love we manifest toward our fellow-creatures.

Who, then, should be rebaptized? We reply by saying, Those who have not received Christian baptism, which consists in a threefold action, for the remission of sins. That is Gospel baptism. I care not who performs it. It is not right simply because some denomination performs it, and wrong because another did. Its validity does not, necessarily, depend on the faith of the denomination, but on the faith of the penitent. My salvation does not depend on the faith of others, but on my own faith. "He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him."

There is not a line in the Bible that teaches rebaptism of those who have received Christian baptism. The very fact that Paul baptized some at Ephesus is an evidence that they had not received Christian baptism. Some teach that because they received the miraculous gift of the Holy Ghost, their former baptism was wrong. Is there any evidence of that kind of following in this day? Yes, the Bible teaches that by one Spirit we are all baptized into one body. Is that body,—the church,—the visible kingdom here? If that is true, tell me what body Alexander Mack was baptized into, as the Church of the Brethren did not exist. But he was baptized into Christ,—into that faith that was once delivered unto the saints.

The Bible does not teach to examine yourself to see whether you are in the right church, but whether you are in the faith. We are in favor of receiving all converted, baptized persons who desire to be with us. If they have received a gospel baptism, you can not give to such persons a baptism which they have already. Every church that has trine immersion of believers for the remission of sin, has Gospel baptism. You can not give a man something he already has. We could give some churches some good things they do not have, and ought to be anxious to do it when they ask to go with us. Why not?

The Golden Rule.

BY D. C. REBER.

IN our relation to our fellow-men, our lives may be said to be governed by one of four rules.

First, the wooden rule or the rule of Cain. This rule asks, "Am I my brother's keeper?" meaning thereby that we are not. This assumes an attitude of indifference to our neighbor.

Second, the brazen rule, or the rule of Judas. The one governed by this rule inquires: "What will ye give me and I will betray him to you?" He who exploits others for the sake of self acts according to the second rule.

Third, the golden rule, or the rule of self, "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise" (Luke 6: 31). Self and its desires are taken as the standard and basis of action toward others. This rule is vastly better than the first and second rules mentioned. It will make the community and the world, in which men's lives are guided by this rule, a glad place. It is the royal law of love given in James 2: 8, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." But excellent as this rule is, or may be, is it, after all, the highest principle according to which our lives should conform? Was it the rule which governed Jesus Christ's earthly life?

Fourth, the diamond rule, or the rule of Christ. "I am among you as he that serveth" (Luke 22: 27). This is the rule of service, not for self but for others. Self is no longer the standard, but the soul looks to God, to find his will, and then, having found it, does it.

The author of the Golden Rule is Jesus Christ. In the Sermon on the Mount,—that great charter of God's kingdom,—the Savior said: "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets" (Matt. 7: 12). We see from this language that the Golden Rule is the essence of the law of Moses and the teachings of the prophets.

What is the setting of this rule in that great sermon? The Savior's theme in that masterful discourse is the righteousness of the kingdom. In Matt. 5: 1-16, we have the introduction. In verses 17-44 of the same chapter he treats of morality, or the righteousness that should exist between man and man. In Matt. 6: 1-18, he discusses religion, or righteousness before God alone. In the same chapter, verses 19 to 34, and in Matt. 7: 1-12, he presents unto us righteousness as spirituality or the right living of the children of the kingdom and the world about them.

First, as regards the good things of the world, he warns us against two extremes, viz.: Greed and care, which are respectively the Scylla and Charybdis of the Christian life. The danger in greed is not in having but in seeking too much of the good things of this world. Care or anxious thought is blameworthy because we are in danger of fearing that we have too little of these same good things.

Second, as regards the evils in the world, there is danger of two extremes also, viz., the faults of censoriousness and connivance. The saint is constantly in danger of making too much of the devil in others, not recognizing there is so much evil in himself. The Savior's teaching here is that severity is to be applied to ourselves, and charity to others' faults. The opposite extreme of fault-finding or censoriousness is connivance, by which is meant making too little of evil in men. It is an intentional overlooking of the gross wrongs in others' lives.

The Great Teacher, after pointing out these four dangers,—greed, undue care, censoriousness, and connivance, concludes this section of his discourse by giving the Christian two remedies: First, prayer, which is the means of keeping right with God, and, second, the Golden Rule which is to keep the heart right with man. In view of these dangers on every hand, we may come to God in prayer. Hence, why faint or fear? The child of God sustains a filial relation to him. Prayer before was regarded as a religious duty. Christ here presented prayer as a privilege which is to bring us into possession of the power, yes, the sure and only means of avoiding these terrible evils everywhere.

But prayer is closely connected with our behavior toward men. "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors." We expect God to act in a fatherly way toward us with the good things of life; therefore we ought to act in a brotherly way to our neighbor, which reminds us that we also sustain a fraternal relation in life.

Before considering the application of this rule, let us see how it may be misapplied when it is separated from the context. The modern interpretation of the Golden Rule, by some, is: "Do others or else they will do you." The "all things" means all really good things and not the supposedly good things. The person who drinks strong drink says that he would like to be treated to a number of glasses of liquor by his friend; therefore, according to the Golden Rule, he ought to treat his friend to the same thing first. The saloon-keeper says that he would like to be left alone in his business of selling intoxicating drinks; hence, according to the Golden Rule, citizens ought to be left alone by himself. The student, cheating in examination, wants to be treated according to the Golden Rule.

What may be accomplished by the proper applications of the Golden Rule? First, let it be remembered that this rule is for ourselves. We have no right to apply it selfishly to others, as in the above misapplications. The word therefore connects it with all of Christ's teaching beforehand, in this same discourse. Again; to keep this rule, the Holy Spirit must assist. It may be a good plan, always to put ourselves in our neighbor's place before dealing with him and to ask ourselves, "How would I like to be treated if I were in his place?" And before acting upon the principle involved in the Golden Rule, see that you do to your fellow-man only that which your best judgment acknowledges fit and reasonable.

The best illustration of the Golden Rule in practice, known to the writer, is the conduct of the good Samaritan, recorded in Luke 10: 25-37. It is confidently believed that by the use of the Golden Rule, society may solve all her problems, especially those pertaining to social evils. We hear much in recent times of the doctrine of the square deal, namely, "Equal rights for all and special privileges for none." But would this be an adequate substitute for the Golden Rule?

What evils would disappear if this rule found universal application? All quarrels between individuals, all law difficulties, all international conflicts, known as wars, would be banished from the face of the earth. In short, we would enjoy universal peace at home and abroad. This would bring down heaven on earth. Even the temperance question would find here the key for its solution. Men would not need to be appealed to on the ground of the injurious effects of alcoholic drinks on the body, nor on the plea for prevention of ruin to happy homes, body and soul, but simply on the ground of fairness to the other man, all dealers in this pernicious business would have to close up their establishments.

But the Golden Rule is not the highest peak in the ethical teachings of Jesus. Jesus' life far transcended the Golden Rule. The principle of his teaching and living was: Gain through loss. Let there be vicarious sacrifice or service for others. The law of service is the law of the cross, namely, self-sacrifice for the sake of others, even though they be your worst enemies. Why, then, did Christ not demand obedience to the diamond rule? He does, as soon as men can be appealed to on that high plane. But at the time of his declaration of the Golden Rule, the ideal of Christ was too high for humanity, so, in its stead, as a step toward the ideal rule of life, he gave a rule that would appeal to all, viz., Treat the other fellow as one in his place would like to be treated.

I HAVE long since ceased to pray, "Lord Jesus, have compassion on a lost world." I remember the day and the hour when I seemed to hear the Lord rebuking me for making such a prayer. He seemed to say to me, "I have had compassion upon a lost world and now it is time for you to have compassion. I have left you to fill up that which is wanting in mine afflictions of the flesh for the body's sake, which is the church. I have given my heart; now give your hearts."—A. J. Gordon.

THE ROUND TABLE

My Revelation.

BY LULU C. PENTECOST.

ONE evening, while sitting by the cozy fireside, I was slowly reading the Word of God. Sometimes, you know, God sits with us, and speaks to us.

I read that passage in Paul's letter to the Corinthians: "The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?"

For a moment my spiritual eyes were opened. I saw as never before, the part that I, as well as each individual, should have, when altogether we rise, as the minister who presides asks the Divine blessing on the bread and wine of the sacrament in the communion service.

The Catholic church official invests himself alone with the sole right to this part of asking for God's blessing on this sacred service. Among other believers each one has, and should do, his part, in the humble petition to God to bless, to a holy use, these otherwise common elements.

Usually, when the prayer is being offered, the communicants are following, in mind, with respectful reverence. But why does not each one have his prayers go up to the Father, asking in his own behalf, for a blessing on the sacrament for himself and his brethren? Paul wrote: "For we being many are one bread and one body: for we are all partakers of that one bread" (1 Cor. 10: 17).

Surely there is more power when all are working together with one mind: because Jesus said: "For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." That does not mean for one to ask God's blessing on all assembled; but for all to work together, united in worship. Then is the Spirit's presence more strongly exerted and felt.

What a marvelously sacred service would be the communion, if each soul would be doing his part in each rite! How blessed if every mind and heart were concentrated on the Father's promises, each one petitioning his blessing, his strength, his comfort, his presence!

"In union is strength." Each one, in his living, must meet his own issues. Then should one depend so fully on some mediator with our God, when we must each one do for himself, as well as work together unitedly, that our prayers to the Heavenly Father may be more effectual?

More About the Apostles.

BY A. CHAMBERS.

"He was added to the eleven apostles" (Acts 1: 26).

"Then Peter surrounded by the other eleven apostles" (Acts 2: 14).

"The Twelve, therefore, called together the general body of disciples and said to them: We, for our part, will devote ourselves to prayer and to the delivery of the message" (Acts 6: 2, 4).

THE above is quoted from the "Twentieth Century New Testament." According to St. Luke, Matthias was numbered as one of the twelve apostles and Judas' successor. To prove that this is incorrect is to destroy Luke's value as a true historian (Acts 14: 14).

The apostles Barnabas and Paul are named. Paul says of himself, that he is "the apostle of the Gentiles" (Rom. 11: 13). He lays no claims whatever to be Judas' successor or to be one of the twelve, neither does Holy Writ record like claims for Barnabas. All believe Barnabas and Paul to be apostles, but many do not believe them to be numbered with the twelve, for the lack of scriptural proof.

Cruden's definition of apostle is "a messenger sent," etc. Christ, the Apostle (Heb. 3: 1), was the "Messenger sent from heaven," but not numbered as one of the Twelve. Let us accept the testimony of all the sacred writers, for "all scripture is given by inspiration of God and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction" (2 Tim. 3: 16).

Bird Feathers and Women's Hats.

BY JAS. A. SELL.

IT is stated upon good authority that the farmers of this country are losing annually two hundred million dollars on cereal crops alone, on vegetables fifty-three million, on fruits twenty-seven million and on other crops enough to make the grand total $580,000,000, just because women insist on wearing plumes and feathers of birds on their hats. As the birds are killed, the insects and seeds of weeds which they destroy, increase at such an enormous rate that the farmer is powerless to protect his crops against them. The allwise Creator provided the birds to counteract the insects and weeds—the effects of the curse that was pronounced upon the world, and if we, in our folly and vanity, destroy our protectors we must suffer the penalty. This is not a matter of sentiment. It is a cold and stubborn fact. Instead of making a profitable business out of killing birds it should be made a crime punishable by law, and our ladies, instead of clamoring for the right of suffrage, will find a good field to work a reform among their own sex in turning their attention, in matters of dress, to something that is more humane than the killing of the feathered songsters that cheer us with their music, and protect our crop by destroying our destructive enemies.

Hollidaysburg, Pa.

A Foolish Conqueror.

BY IDA M. HELM.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT is a deplorable example of the power of strong drink over strong men, when they yield to its deceptive influence. It is said of the conquered conqueror: "He was in Babylon, and there was banquet after banquet, entertainment after entertainment. Having spent a whole night in carousing, a second entertainment was proposed. There were twenty guests at the table. He drank to the health of every guest at the table and then pledged them severally. After this, calling for Hercules' cup, which held six bottles, it was filled, when he poured it all down, drinking to Proteus, and afterwards pledged him again in the same enormous bumper. He had no sooner swallowed it, when he fell upon the floor."

That was not the first time he drank strong drink, but it was the last time. The first drink started him on the way to ruin. Satan cunningly rivets his chains so firmly that the strongest man is powerless to break them, but, through the power of God, men, enslaved and chained by strong drink, have been rescued. Only the power of the Almighty can break the chain of the demon,—strong drink.

The One Book.

SELECTED BY J. E. YOUNG.

Do you know of a book in all the world that you shall wish to pillow your soul on when the body is dying? Very well! That is the one for you to cultivate and feed your mind on now.

There is but one such, I repeat, in all the wide world. It is the book that has made, and yet makes, more noble men and women than any or all other books and things combined, the book from whence comes all other excellence. It is the only book that can make your life and mine a complete success. That book is the Bible.

While not neglecting the many other good and valuable books of the world, you should, above all others, read this. Study it! Transmit it into deeds! Become obedient to its truths! Follow its directions, and you shall, at length, become the perfect man. It gives and develops power as no other does, and it alone prepares man for the tremendous possibilities of this life, and those of the life that is to come. This book keeps pace in the life current of the soul.

Psalm to the Trinity.

BY A. I. MOW.

O INFINITE Jehovah, thou art our God; thou art the living One. Where could we go and not thy being see? What, great or small, does not thy majesty portray? Heaven reveals thy throne and earth thy love to man. We would abide in thee: thy love and life to share.

O Jesus, Savior dear, thou art the Christ. In suffering thou didst give thyself, our sins to bear. In labor great thou didst ally thyself to us and us to thee. In agony supreme thou didst overcome our foe, and madest us, like thyself, the sons of God. We cling to thee; we would thy subjects be, in life, in glory.

Thou Holy Spirit, Messenger of heaven; thou dost thy vigils keep over all our ways. Thou dost us teach, our evil deeds reprove. Thou rearest us up in love of him who died to save. Hold thou our hands, and lead us on the way, by night, by day, nor let us stray. Thou Comforter, our comfort be through all our joys and griefs.

Through all life's bitter woes, abide with us!

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

Temptation.

James 1: 12-15.

For Sunday Evening, May 7, 1911.

I. The Source.—(a) "More subtle" (Gen. 3: 1); (b) "We are not ignorant of his devices" (2 Cor. 2: 11); (c) "As the serpent beguiled Eve," etc. (11: 3); (d) "Fall into temptation" (1 Tim. 6: 9; James 1: 14; 2 Peter 2: 18).

II. Entering Temptation.—(a) "When the woman saw . . . she did eat" (Gen. 3: 6); (b) Pitched his tent toward Sodom (Gen. 13: 12); (c) "Watch and pray that ye enter not" (Matt. 26: 41).

III. Yielding to Temptation.—(a) "Then Lot chose" (Gen. 13: 11); (b) "And he sold his birthright" (Gen. 25: 33); (c) "I coveted and took" (Joshua 7: 21); (d) "He told her" (Judges 14: 17; 2 Peter 2: 20).

IV. Resistance.—(a) "Consent thou not" (Prov. 1: 10); (b) "enter not into the path" (Prov. 4: 14); (c) "Take heed" (Luke 21: 34); "Neither yield" (Rom. 6: 13); (d) "Take unto you the whole armour" (Eph. 6: 13; 2 Peter 3: 17).

V. Encouragement.—(a) "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man" (1 Cor. 10: 13); (b) "He is able to succour"—aid and deliver (Heb. 2: 18; Rev. 3: 10).

(1) Define "temptation." (2) Why is temptation allowed? (3) Let some young Worker tell what three temptations once came to Jesus. (4) Let another tell how Jesus resisted temptations. (5) Which is better, to face temptation or turn away from it? Why? (6) Have a boy or girl prepare a two-minute paper on some of the temptations we have to meet every day.

PRAYER MEETING

Good Cheer in Dark Days.

Acts 27: 20-36.

For Week Beginning May 7, 1911.

1. God Deals With Us in Love.—We cannot always understand God's dealings with us, but this we know, that all love-prompted and love-wrought, for "God is love." "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him." He tells us, "As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort thee." What blessed results would come if everywhere, the world over, the people would realize this one supreme glad fact that God is love! How it would soften the hearts of all the sinning, bring cheer to the lonely, comfort to the sorrowing, strength to the weak, and fill us all with joy and peace in believing (Isa. 40: 1-11; 61: 1-7).

2. God's Infinite Wisdom.—Adding to the thought of God's love that of his infinite wisdom, and how great is the comfort we get! We are often like little children, crying in our ignorance for what would harm us. Then God, like an all-loving and wise parent, withholds the thing that would destroy, but bestows upon us the unsearchable riches of his grace (John 14: 1-13).

3. God's Infinite Power.—But God is not only loving and wise but, best of all,—he is all-powerful. A friend might be loving, sympathetic, willing to help us, wise enough to know just what ought to be done, and yet be absolutely unable,—lacking in the power to help us. Not so with God. Nothing is too hard for him. He is infinitely strong. He can put underneath us his everlasting arms and bear us up. He is able to make all grace abound toward us. He is able to fulfill his promise to make all things work together for our good (Rom. 8: 28).

4. Paul's Glorious Assurance.—In the midst of the storm Paul said, "Be of good cheer, for I believe God that it shall be as it was told me." In accordance with Paul's sublime faith all came safely to land. God gives the victory to his saints (Rev. 7: 9-17).

HOME AND FAMILY

The Robin's Song.

BY JOHN GEORGE DUTTON.

Hark! The robin redbreast sings
On the tree tops high,
He is glad because 'tis spring
With its sunny sky.

In the meadow, by the brookside,
And over the wooded hill,
With all the joy of springtide
Rises and falls his merry trill.

What sweet melody he makes
Now the winter's done,
The stillness of the woods he breaks
To tell that spring's begun.

He sings of a budding springtime,
Of birds and sweet flowers today,
He sings of a happy Eastertide
A glad and joyous lay.

"Spring has come, spring has come,"
Hark! as he sings away,
Winter's dreary days are gone
And now it is Easter day.

The Bradys' Garden.

BY ELIZABETH D. ROSENBERGER.

THE Bradys were poor. There was no doubt of that. They would have moved into a better house if they had been able to pay a higher rent. And they would never have moved into Tully Street if they could have seen their way clear to paying a few dollars more for a house on May Street. So here they were, on the first of March, on Tully Street, in a house that had not been painted for a number of years. But mother, as usual, was hopeful. "When Clifford gets through school, we shall have things in better shape."

"Yes, but that is too far off to be any comfort," complained Alice. She was the only girl and somewhat privileged to say discouraging things that mother and the two boys never said; no matter how discouraged they were.

"Only three years until I leave high school, and I can earn some money as I go!" replied Clifford, instantly on the defensive. His mother must be shielded and spared every unpleasant reminder of their poverty when he was around. He resented his sister's pessimistic attitude. "We are getting along fine!" he concluded.

"It's not so bad for you boys," continued his sister, "but I hate to ask some of my friends to come here; it is so unlike what they have."

"Do you mean that you are ashamed of our home?" began Clifford, scandalized at the very idea of such a thing.

It was Alice's turn to hesitate. "No, I don't mean that. But the house here is small,—"

"It is large enough to be comfortable," interrupted Clifford.

"I was going to say," resumed Alice, as if nothing had been said to interrupt her, "that the yard is the worst. If there were any way to clean it up and get some green things growing there, as they grew in the yard where we used to live, I could stand it."

"Yes," assented the mother, "the yard is bad. I wonder what we could do with it."

If mother and sister were brave enough to send Clifford to the door to see what the yard looked like. It was not a thing of beauty, by any means. "If I could get Tom to help, we might do something, but it's in a bad way," was Clifford's conclusion. When he went into the house he said, "I'll see what Tom thinks about it before I make any promises."

When Tom was approached about the matter, he said, "Too much hard work for nothing. What will it all amount to?"

Then Clifford told him that mother and sister were anxious to have a decent yard, and with a little persuasion, Tom gave his word,—pledged himself to be first assistant.

There was no grass. In the backyard there was a miscellaneous assortment of old bones, tin cans and other refuse that might appear attractive to the junk dealer, but to the Bradys it was a most unattractive collection. However it must be cleared away, first of all. Several days later, the trash had disappeared and Tom was doing his best not to grumble at the hours it seemed necessary to spend in the yard. As Tom had been spending too much time down town, this objection of his had but little weight with Clifford.

The next thing those boys did was to spade the lawn. It was hard work, but mother and Alice administered encouragement in judicious doses, and the boys kept at it until the earth was in a good condition for the grass seed. Clifford went to a seedstore, got the best kind of seed and plenty of it. The lawn was small and it did not require much to seed it thoroughly. In the backyard they were going to make a vegetable garden and so no grass seed was needed there. Instead, the boys bought some onions and lettuce seed and had an early bed of lettuce and onions as a reward for their labor.

The small porch had no shade, there were no trees on that street. Mother suggested morning glory vines. And so the seed was sown thickly, close to the porch and how the vines grew! By the middle of the summer the sun could not penetrate the mass of foliage, and from then until fall, the flowers and foliage almost hid the unpainted front part of the little cottage.

The vegetable garden interested Tom most. If he had to stay home evenings to work in a garden, he preferred to see things growing that were good for use. He argued that a good supply of lettuce and onions, radishes and beets, to say nothing of cabbage and beans, made it possible to save some money. And the entire family so enjoyed the fresh vegetables, that they agreed that a garden must always be found wherever they lived.

The pansy bed was Alice's idea. There was nothing lovelier in the entire yard than the pansy bed. Even Tom admitted it, and when mother used to look at them, a little of the weariness passed from her face as she praised their beauty. The boys had brought some left-over lumber from the yards for this bed, and the pansies grew as if this were the one opportunity of their lives. The petals were like velvet, and so large. But the verbenas and the nasturtiums also came in for their share of appreciation. And it was wonderful how this garden improved the appearance of the cottage. And it did more than that,—there was a marked improvement in Tom's character. He had so little time for the boys that, after while, the gang ceased to look for him. And this was a great weight off Clifford's mind. Mother, too, was happier and they found joy and peace in the little cottage.

We have told you about the Bradys' garden because at this time of the year you should let your children have the benefit of it, provided if there is one attached to your domain. Garden work, excepting the digging, is not harder than what most of us are doing. Raking, planting, and weeding are not harder to do than cooking, washing and ironing. It will make us happier and healthier to do some work in God's out-of-doors than to put in all our time in sweeping, dusting and other housework.

Your backyard may be full of weeds. If you want to get rid of the weeds give it something better to do by sowing good seed. Grapple with the forces which make it produce something, and keep them busy with the thing you want them to do. And this is a valuable thing in gardening and harvesting than those which belong to fields fenced in by rails or walls. A boy is inclined to be idle, and get into bad company. Keep him interested and surrounded by friends who are a help to him. It is common sense backed by experience. Nature is ceaselessly active. The land must grow something; there is nature's law for it. It will run to weeds unless you give it something better to do. Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands and idle soil. Much of the luxuriance of weeds is simply misdirected or unemployed activity. There are no vegetables or flowers to grow, so the weeds flourish. And this is the sane, healthy way of looking at this problem. Get rid of your evil thoughts, idleness and bad habits, not by scolding and making everybody miserable by constantly calling attention to them, but by filling the mind with better thoughts and keeping busy with good deeds,—so busy that the evil has no chance to grow. Take hold of these laws of nature, which make the production of something necessary; and compel them to produce something which is worth while by sowing good seed. That is what Paul meant, thousands of years ago, when he said, "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."

SISTERS' AID SOCIETIES

RIDGELY, MD.—Our Sisters' Aid Society was organized April 6, 1910, with Sister Elisa Frost as president; Sister Sadie E. Potter, vice-president; Sister Deborah King, secretary; Sister Leah Feldinger, treasurer. During the year we held eight all-day meetings and twenty-eight half-day meetings. The total attendance was 293; average attendance about eight. We quilted ten quilts, finished seventeen comforts; made sun-bonnets, broom-covers, wall-pockets and clothes-pin bags. We received $12.94 for articles sold; for work done, $18.75; paid out for material, $4.88; leaving $46.01 in the treasury.—Deborah King, Ridgely, Md., April 14.

SCALP LEVEL, PA.—During the year ending April 1 our Aid Society had fifty-three meetings, with an average attendance of ten. We received for quilting, $29.52; for making bonnets, $13.30; for prayer coverlets, etc., $1.65; donations and monthly dues amounted to $14.40; balance in the treasury from last year, $16.82; total, $86.82; paid for hymnals for the church, $20; expenses for goods, $8.53; balance in the treasury, $57.29. Our Society is organized with Sister Nellie Hoffman, president; Sister Ellen Spencer, assistant president; Sister Mary Spencer, secretary-treasurer; Sister Matie Kindig, assistant.—Ellen Spencer, Secretary.—Scalp Level, Pa., April 11.

JUNIATA, NEBR.—During the year ending March 31, 1911, our Sisters' Aid Society had twenty-five times, with an average attendance of eight. Our work consisted mostly of quilting, tying comforts and making clothing. We had in the treasury, at the beginning of the year, $22.11; earned during the year, $25.61; sent two sacks of clothing to Kansas; gave to two little boys each a suit of clothing, so that they could attend Sunday-school. We also painted and papered our home church. We reorganized our society by electing Sister Mary Flora Barnes-Ingraham as president; Sister Mollie Kindig, vice-president; the writer, secretary-treasurer. Our meetings are closed with devotional exercises.—Sarah D. Lemon, Juniata, Nebr., April 10.

MINERAL CREEK.—Our Sisters' Aid Society for the year 1910 reports as follows: We met the first Thursday of each month at the home of the members. Sister Jennie Neher is our president; Sister Cora Wenrick, vice-president; the writer, secretary-treasurer. During the year we had twelve regular and two special meetings, with an average attendance of fifteen. We received from collections and donations, $13.76; for work done, $26.49; balance on hand from Jan. 1, 1910, $11.09; total, $51.34. We sent $10 to Mission Board, Kansas City, Mo., $10.45; to the parsonage at the same place, $10; to need presented by missionary assisted in India, $11; sick for our elder, $8. We sent 279 garments to the Kansas City Mission, four comforts and children's clothing and fruit. We made eleven quilts and comforts, 103 garments, four bonnets and fifty-four pairs of socks. We have $12.59 in treasury.—Maggie Jones, Leeton, Mo., April 13.

SPOKANE, WASH.—Our Sisters' Sewing Mission Band was organized in the fall of 1908, and up to March 20, 1911, we had twenty-nine meetings, with an average attendance of five. We paid out for material which we made into articles of different kinds, clothes-pin bags, prayer coverings, comforters, a quilt, some crochet work, and pillow cases, amounting to $44.39 when sold. We gave a Thanksgiving dinner for which we collected $16.16; donated in cash $10.75, one day's work, several garments and a comforter. At the present time we have $24.65 in the treasury. Our regular meetings were to be every Thursday, but on account of bad weather and other hindrances we were unable to meet every week. Our officers now in charge are: Sister Anna Archenbronner, treasurer; Sister Rose Archenbronner, secretary; the writer, president; Sister Miller, vice-president.—Mrs. Ida Baker, 1710 Walnut Avenue, Spokane, Wash., April 10.

WAYNESBORO, PA.—Our report for the Sisters' Aid Society for the year beginning April 1, 1910, is as follows: Balance on hand from last year, $60.32; made and sold three coverlets, $15; made and sold one quilt, $5; made and sold four teen quilts, $17.01; quilted seven comforts, $8.85; knotted twenty-four comforts, $12.55; made two bonnets and three; received donations and collections, $11.54; total, $122.97. Expenses for lining, cotton and thread, $9.84; carfare, etc., and day nursery, $5; rake for the church yard, $1c; laundry and tablecloths for supper, $2.45; Woman's Home Missions, $5; for baptistry, $23.68; mats for tables at love feast, $1.41; for quilting frames used at two fests, $1.50; paid for coal, $4.38; coal for the sexton, $4.50; donation to a brother, $5; special work for a Dunkard sister, $1.40; total, $123.45; balance on hand April 1, 1911, $57.52. Besides the above we have collected and distributed to the poor thirty pieces of second clothing, and also shoes. We have collected from our congregation one bedstead and bedding, a rocking chair, dishes, cooking goods, dried fruit, potatoes and many other things for a brother and his wife who lost all their household effects by fire. They were very grateful.—Nora Sauma, Hagerstown, Md., April 14.

WAYNESBORO, PA.—The report of the Sisters' missionary sewing circle for the year ending, for the year ending 1910 is as follows: Fifty-two meetings were held, with an average attendance of ten. Twelve of these were business meetings, which are held the first Wednesday of each month. The treasurer's report shows a balance of $25.20 on hand Jan. 1, 1910; offerings for the year, $78.68; received for work done, $42.74; expenses for the year, $126.80; leaving a balance of $20.82 in the treasury. During the year we quilted four com quilts, made eight comforts, ten broom hangs, five clothes-pin aprons and enough bed clothing, etc., to furnish what is known as the Nursery room in the Brooklyn Mission Home, Brooklyn, N. Y. The circle supports two India orphans, yearly. A new church was built in their territory. We gave for pulpit chairs for the new elder, who was sick and has since passed to his reward, $40; to minister's wife, who was sick and unable to help themselves, $17; to the mission in Washington, D. C., $5; to the industrial work in India, $10. A telephone was put into the home of our present elder in charge. Donations of clothing, provisions, etc., were sent to Washington, D. C., and Brooklyn, N. Y., on Thanksgiving Day. We distributed $22.50 to worthy ones on Christmas day. Our officers for 1911 are: Mrs. M. Bonner, president; Mrs. Samuel Pouts, vice-president; Mrs. Susan Shank, superintendent; Mrs. Emanuel Hershberger, assistant; Mrs. H. J. Rare, treasurer; Mrs. Harry Rinehart, assistant; Mrs. Geo. Heffner, treasurer; the writer, secretary.—Florence Hess, Secretary, Waynesboro, Pa., April 9.

IT has been decided to build a new churchhouse at Pleasant View, Ohio, changing the location a short distance.

BRO. CHAS. D. BONSACK is booked for a series of meetings in the Painter Creek church, Ohio, beginning May 11.

BRO. D. E. BRUBAKER and wife, after a winter's sojourn in California, have returned to their home at Mount Morris, Ill.

BRO. J. M. BLOUGH, of India, a brother of Bro. S. S. Blough, was at Batavia last Lord's Day, and is to be with us next Sunday.

At the close of the Easter morning services at Hartman, Colo., six applied for admission into the church, and were baptized the next day.

BRO. JOSEPH STUDEBAKER, of Flora, Ind., is planning to devote considerable time to the teaching of sacred music among the churches.

BRO. GALEN B. ROYER attended the late District Meeting of Northwestern Ohio, and promises a write-up of the meeting for our next issue.

BRO. ISRAEL GRAYBILL, an aged elder of the White Oak congregation, Pa., died April 6. He served the church in the ministry nearly thirty years.

NINE were recently added to the Geiger Memorial church, Philadelphia, Pa., by confession and baptism, and others may receive the rite later.

THE late District Meeting of Middle Maryland, a meeting full of harmony, made choice of Bro. J. C. Garland as a member of the Standing Committee.

BRO. J. V. FELTHOUSE and wife, after spending some months at Seminole, Fla., have returned to Logansport, Ind., where they may now be addressed.

BRO. L. R. PEIFER, of Springfield, Ohio, a member of the Auditing Board, favored the Elgin congregation with a good, practical talk last Sunday evening.

THERE are now nearly thirty members at Hartman, Colo., and they are to organize in the near future. The outlook for this point seems to be quite encouraging.

THE late revival in the Chico church, Cal., proved to be a fruitful meeting for a new point. Ten were brought into the fold, nearly all of them being from the Sunday-school department.

THE spirit prevailing at the District Meeting of Middle Pennsylvania is said to have been highly commendable. Bro. John Bennett will represent the District on the Standing Committee.

THE District Meeting of Eastern Maryland is reported to have passed off very pleasantly. Two papers that are to be published next week, go to the Annual Meeting. Bro. Geo. A. Harp was chosen to represent the District on the Standing Committee.

BRO. M. M. ESHELMAN, of Tropico, Cal., writes that he expects to leave May 24 for Wichita and Ottawa, Kans., hoping to reach the Annual Conference not later than June 2.

A CARD from India tells us that while Bro. J. M. Blough is to represent his District on the Standing Committee, his wife has been chosen to represent the Bulsar congregation in the open Conference.

THE Brethren have opened up mission work in Fresno, Cal., and the outlook for a church in that thriving city is encouraging. There is a move on foot to have the Annual Meeting held there in 1912.

DURING some recent revival meetings in Brooklyn, N. Y., conducted by Bro. G. S. Rairigh, of Denton, Md., ten were received into the church by confession and baptism, while eight others await the initiatory rite.

BRO. JAMES M. NEFF is requesting us to say that the Postoffice Department has changed the name of his postoffice from Daunt, Cal., to Springfield, the latter, all the while, having been the name of the town.

THE commencement exercises of Bethany Bible School, Chicago, began last Sunday and close on Friday of this week. The program is said to be full of interest, and concludes with, "Blest be the tie that binds."

THE Auditing Committee, composed of Brethren L. R. Peifer, R. E. Burger and Calvin Ulrey are with us this week. The latter, a son of Bro. S. S. Ulrey, North Manchester, Ind., is serving in place of Bro. A. L. Clair.

FOLLOWING the Billy Sunday revival at Lima, Ohio, the Brethren held a series of meetings at the Pleasant View house, and thirty persons were added to the church by confession and baptism. Two were restored to fellowship.

NEXT week there will be something said about applying for lodging at the St. Joseph Conference. All those desiring to secure lodging in advance will hold themselves in readiness to make application with as little delay as possible.

ALL of our people who are planning to attend the St. Joseph Conference, should bear in mind that Sunday, June 4, is a fast day with us, and not a feast day. On that day there should be much fasting and praying and just as little eating as possible.

THE Rogue River congregation, Oregon, has been divided, and a new congregation formed, to be known as the Williams Creek church, located in Josephine County. The new congregation starts out with bright prospects, and arrangements will soon be made to build a meetinghouse.

By turning to the Annual Meeting program, page 270, it will be observed that Bro. A. C. Wieand is listed for a talk on Bible Lands. Being in India at the time the program was arranged, he could not be consulted regarding this talk. But having reached his home, he now writes that it will be better for him not to undertake the address, so the time set apart for him will be occupied by Bro. I. B. Trout with his address on "Conversion and Regeneration," announced for June 7. The information regarding this change did not reach us until the part of the paper containing the program was printed.

BRO. I. CRIPE, of Herndon, Pasco Co., Fla., writes us that there are five members at that place, and they are greatly interested in the work of the church. Bro. J. V. Felthouse, accompanied by his wife, recently visited the vicinity and preached three sermons. The people heard him gladly and seemed delighted with the old-time religion that was brought to their attention by the services, as well as by the members present on the occasion. In this letter Bro. Cripe names a number of points where members are located. He is distributing a number of tracts, and in that way hopes to interest the people until a minister can be secured.

UNDER date of March 22 Bro. J. F. Souders writes us from Colombo, Ceylon, saying that Ceylon is very pretty and that he enjoys its "spicy breezes." He was due at Hongkong, China, April 5.

BRO. A. C. WIEAND and wife have returned from abroad and may now be addressed at their home, 3435 W. VanBuren Street, Chicago. Bro. Wieand says that the extended trip did him good, and that he will be able, he thinks, to resume his work in Bethany Bible School the coming fall.

WE are receiving some splendid articles on the Dress Question, but they can not be published, for the reason that the Dress Question is not yet an open question for discussion in our columns, but it may possibly be an open question, to be regulated by a committee, after the St. Joseph Conference.

BRO. GEORGE W. HILTON, missionary from China, gave the Elgin congregation a splendid address last Sunday morning on mission work and the outlook in China. We have listened to a number of mission talks in the Elgin house, but Bro. Hilton's was one of the very best. Talks of that kind will do good.

SISTER W. D. KELLER, of Washington, D. C., president of the Sisters' Aid Societies, wishes us to say that all the Aid Societies which have not yet sent a report to the General Secretary, should do so. Allow us to urge that you give this immediate attention, so that she can complete her report by May 15. Send all reports to Mrs. T. S. Moherman, Ashland, Ohio.

WE are wondering if all the State Districts are paying up their Annual Meeting assessments. If they are not, it simply means that these delinquent Districts can not be represented on the Standing Committee. It might be well for the members of the Committee to look into this matter. They do not want to go to Conference and then be refused a seat with the Standing Committee.

WE call special attention to the Annual Meeting program found on page 270. It will be observed that while the Conference proper opens on Tuesday morning, June 6, the regular services begin on Wednesday evening, May 31. At this meeting Bro. D. L. Miller is to deliver an address that should be heard by all the members of the Standing Committee, as well as by all the elders and ministers. As many of our people as possible should reach St. Joseph in time to hear this initial address and then be prepared to enjoy the other services that are to follow.

INSIDE of a week or two all the congregations should take up a collection for the Annual Meeting offering. It is usual to awaken a missionary interest among our people and have them prepared for a very liberal offering. We suggest that all the elders take this matter under advisement, have a good missionary sermon preached on the importance of spreading the Gospel, and then receive the offering from the members and others who may feel like aiding in the good work. The money collected may be sent here to Elgin, as an Annual Meeting offering, or it may be placed in the collection at the Conference.

AFTER reading what we have to say on next page about St. Joseph, the place for the Annual Meeting, thousands of our patrons may feel like beginning to plan for the trip. So far as we could ascertain, the accommodations offered are going to be very satisfactory. There can be no question about the suitability of the building in which the Conference and other meetings are to be held. They will measure up with what was enjoyed at Winona, in this particular. At first we feared that there might be some difficulty about lodging and feeding the vast throngs that generally attend our Conferences, but those having these matters in charge seem to fully understand their business, and tell us that they are accustomed to handling large crowds, and that they feel confident of their ability to take care of all the people who may visit their city during our meeting. When it comes to big undertakings there is something about the pluck and frankness of these western business men that is to be commended.

MOUNT MORRIS COLLEGE was recently reincorporated under the laws of the State of Illinois, and is now the bona fide property of the church, run wholly in the interest of education, without any profit to any one. No dividends can be declared. All profit must go towards maintaining the institution.

Railway Arrangement.

THE Central Passenger Association has granted a rate of two cents a mile for our Conference at St. Joseph, as the following letter from the Chairman indicates:

Chicago, April 19, 1911.

Elder D. L. Miller, Chairman,
Com. on Transp., Nat'l. Conf., Church of Brethren,
Mt. Morris, Ill.

Dear Sir:—Responding to your letter of 19th instant. Central Passenger Association lines, in session on 12th instant, decided to institute, for above occasion, rate of two cents per mile from all points in Central Passenger Association territory to gateways of the Western Passenger Association, added to the fares tendered therefrom; selling dates, return limit and other conditions to conform with the proffer of the Western lines, including arrangement proposed by Western lines for sales of tickets via diverse routes. It is expected that a joint tariff will be issued by the undersigned, as agent in behalf of Central Passenger Association lines, showing the fares and arrangements in detail from the territory of this Association, and when promulgated I shall be pleased to provide you with a copy.

Yours truly,
F. C. Donald, Commissioner.

Further announcements will be made as received.

Death of Eld. George D. Zollers.

THE next morning after going to press with our last issue we received a telegram announcing the death of Bro. George D. Zollers, which occurred in the afternoon of April 18. He had gone to the roof of his house to repair the chimney. When through with that, he proceeded to repair a few places on the roof, and in some manner slipped and fell, striking his head on the cement pavement. Sister Zollers, who happened to be at the back door at the time, saw her husband fall and was the first one to reach him. He lived only thirteen minutes after the fatal accident. This will be sad news to his many friends, for he was a good man, and much loved and highly respected wherever known.

Bro. Zollers had some remarkable experiences. He was born in Pennsylvania in 1841, secured a good education, mainly by his own efforts, enlisted in the army at the age of twenty, and two years later entered upon a whaling expedition that kept him on the ocean three years. He doubled Cape Horn twice, crossed the equator six times, and entered the Arctic Ocean twice. Those who have read his charming book, "Thrilling Incidents on Sea and Land," know something about his remarkable experiences on the great deep.

After returning from his whaling expedition he lived for a while in Pennsylvania, where he united with the Brethren church, and in 1867 settled in the Hickory Grove congregation, Carroll County, Ill. Here he was called to the ministry two years later, and entered upon his work with a zeal and ability that made of him a most interesting, spiritual preacher. By occupation he was a plasterer, followed his trade during the summer, and gave special attention to evangelistic work during the winter months. He was also a poet of no mean ability, and for more than thirty years favored our readers and those of other journals with many of his excellent compositions. The last one he sent us will be found on page 258, this issue. It was already in type at the time of his death, and seems to be admirably suited to his departure from the scenes of earth to those of the unseen world.

Sixteen years ago Bro. Zollers left Northern Illinois and located in South Bend, Ind., where he has since resided. Several years since he laid aside his plasterer's trowel and gave his time largely to the work of the ministry, proving to be a most successful evangelist. He was the author of two interesting books, one entitled "Thrilling Incidents on Sea and Land," and the other, "Poetic Musings on Sea and Land." He was one of the most lovable and spiritual preachers we had among us. He dearly loved his Savior, the church, and every good work in which the Brotherhood was engaged. No man among us was more concerned about the mission cause. He was known as a close friend of Bro. Hope, and always cheered him in his labors on the mission field. As a conversationalist his varied experiences and ready wit made him a most interesting companion. He will long be remembered, the Brotherhood over, as a devout, faithful and cheerful minister of the Gospel. Few men among us were more dearly loved by his friends, and for everybody, both old and young, he always had a warm greeting.

A Trip to St. Joseph.

OUR trip to the place of the Annual Meeting was a little later in the season this year than usual, and yet it seems to have been early enough. The distance from Elgin to St. Joseph, Mo., is not far from 400 miles, and while the place may be reached over a number of good roads, we found it convenient to make the trip over the C. B. and Q. A run of twenty-five miles brought us to Aurora on the evening of April 14, and at 7: 10 in the evening your Office Editor found himself pleasantly located in one of the most comfortable of modern coaches. To reach St. Joseph was then a matter of only twelve hours and a few minutes.

At the large, commodious Union Depot we were met by Bro. J. S. Kline, who is Foreman of the Committee of Arrangements, and he proceeded to give us a real good introduction to his city. And, by the way, St. Joseph, situated on the east bank of the Missouri River, is a most interesting place. It is not only noted for its great packing-houses, manufacturing establishments and large wholesale houses, but it is one of the finest railroad centers in the West. This is much in its favor as a convention city.

The history of St. Joseph, though at first under another name, dates back to 1840, when the postoffice was established, but nothing was done with a view of establishing a city until three years later. In 1849 it became the chief outfitting point for parties preparing to cross the plains. It early became a railroad point, and though brought to a standstill by the war, it has since made a rapid growth, and today has a population of about 80,000 souls. It is a clean city, and the citizens are of the enterprising western type, and a more accommodating class of people may not easily be found.

Our purpose in visiting St. Joseph was to look over the Annual Meeting situation and tell our readers what we found. We need not comment on the railroad conveniences, for they are all that could be desired. The street car service in every way is ample, and little difficulty will likely be found in handling our people in the city. The Conference proper, and a number of the most important meetings, are to be held in the large, modern, fireproof Convention Hall, that will easily seat 6,000 people. The plan of the building is splendid, and is arranged to accommodate at least 2,000 persons outside of the auditorium proper. An ample platform will be at the service of the Standing Committee, while the delegates will be splendidly located just in front, and a little below. Elevated seats, on either side of the delegates, as well as all around the spacious enclosure, will enable a number to locate themselves very pleasantly. In this respect we have never had a better audience room for the open Conference.

A large and well-located room in the building, and near the platform, will be fitted up for the Standing Committee. At another point in the building a large lunch counter will accommodate fully 500 people. The Publishing House has its headquarters in the building, and we do not remember that we ever had better accommodations.

Near the Convention Hall is an ideal auditorium, fitted up in a most tasty and comfortable manner, holding 2,000 people, where the Bible Institute work is to be done and where the evangelistic services will be held. Our people will be delighted with the accommodations that may be enjoyed in this room. Here hundreds will spend hours studying the Bible and listening to the evangelistic addresses.

Another auditorium, one block away, has been secured for the Sisters' Aid Societies and also for some lines of Sunday-school work. This is also a delightful room, that will be highly appreciated. There is nothing ordinary about any of these buildings. They are simply first-class in every respect, and are situated in the very best part of the city, near the center of the wholesale district.

For the first building named there is a cost of $100 a day, and for the other two $75 each for every day that they are occupied by our people. This simply means $250 a day, and this expense is met in full by the business men of the city. It is certainly very kind in them to thus favor us, and for such favors, and many others that can not be enumerated here, we should show marked appreciation.

The lodging is practically in the hands of a committee of business men, who have had considerable experience in handling largely-attended conventions. Our people are to be lodged in private residences and hotels, at prices which should be regarded as reasonable and fair, considering the accommodations furnished. This committee feels confident that they can find lodging for all the people who may feel like attending the meeting. It is their purpose to have a hundred or more boys at their disposal to direct visitors to their lodging places. We regard this as quite a convenience.

As for meals, possibly a number will take breakfast at their lodging places; others will find accommodations at restaurants, temporary eating places and ample lunch counters. So, taking the situation as a whole, it seems to us that our people, from all parts of the country, will find St. Joseph a most excellent place to hold our Annual Conference.

We had the pleasure of meeting a number of the business men, and found them to be most intensely interested in the meeting, and willing to do all in their power to see that our people, while in their city, are well provided for and are well taken care of. Bro. Kline is not known to most of our readers, but he knows how to arrange a great meeting like this, and has matters well in hand. He is Foreman of the Committee of Arrangements, and says that he has a splendid body of members to assist him, with Bro. M. R. Murray as Secretary.

We remained in the city until Sunday evening, and worshiped with the Brethren in the South St. Joseph church on Saturday evening, and in the North St. Joseph church on Sunday morning. At the former place, where the mission work is in charge of Bro. E. N. Huffman, we met a small, but very attentive congregation. Bro. Kline has charge of the other church, and here we met a most interesting body of listeners. While in the city we lodged with Bro. Kline, and found his a most delightful home. And, by the way, Bro. Kline hails from Rockingham County, Va., and is a relative of the lamented Eld. John Kline, who was assassinated during the war. He is a man of varied experiences along business, educational and religious lines.

We returned home over the same route we went and might have something of interest to say of the fine country through which we passed, but it may be convenient to do this on our trip to the Conference, which opens June 6; the Standing Committee, however, meets on the morning of June 1.

First Things First.

IN every engagement, pursuit and purpose in life there are first things that are especially essential to success. They are first not only in importance, but in time. This is true in housekeeping, in homemaking, in farming, in business, in the professions and in all of the different callings in life, and it is more than equally true in religion.

Of some men it is often said: "They always begin at the wrong end," or "hitch the horse to the wrong end of the cart," and many other similar sayings, going to show that people are generally expected to succeed when they do things at the right time, or do first things first.

It would require the writing of a book to name some of the first things that stand at the entrance of the different callings and pursuits in life, and we had not thought of doing a thing of this kind. It is the first things in religion, the essentials of a religious life, that have given us some special thought, and it is to this subject that we will now give our attention.

Of course, one of the first things, in a general way, to the seeker after the kingdom of God, is plainly set forth by the Master, both in importance and in time.—"Seek ye first the kingdom of God." But in the seeking the question is: What is the first thing to do?

The Christ himself, at his going away, says: "But, if I depart, I will send him [the Holy Spirit] unto you; and when he is come, he will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment." This is the part that Jesus will do; and he will do it well. Following this comes our part,—the things we, as his ministers, are to do. And what is it? It seems to me that the first thing the sinner needs to know, and that we should teach him is, that he is a sinner and why he is a sinner. The Holy Spirit causes him to feel that he is a sinner, but he needs some one to teach him why and how he is such. To have the soul impressed with the profound thought that because of our sins it was necessary that Jesus should die the death of the cross, in order to save the soul from the death of sin, and that God, the Father, so loved the sinner that he was willing that his Son might die to save or redeem the sinner, is the nearest and quickest way to the sinner's heart. It enables him to feel the depth, the fullness and power of that love. It is such a feeling alone that will bring him to repentance and to the foot of the cross.

It is no use for us to tell the sinner that he must repent, because the feeling of wrongdoing must come first. It is this feeling that touches and tenders the heart, and the hate that did the wrong is changed to love for the wronged. Thus we have repentance that is true and heartfelt.

Faith follows as a resultant. It changes the mind, as to purpose, and he becomes a new creature in Christ Jesus, through holy baptism, as the symbol of death and burial of the old man of sin, and the coming forth of the new man in Christ Jesus.

Then, as first things, we have the quickening of the Holy Spirit; repentance, because of love through Gospel teaching; faith in Jesus Christ and the new birth, as symbolized in holy baptism.

The next thing is the teaching and caring for the new child of God. He is now born into the kingdom of God; not as a full-grown, mature man, but as a child. As a mother cares for and nourishes the newly-born child that it may live and grow, so should the church, as a spiritual mother, care for, feed and nourish the newly-born child for the kingdom of Jesus Christ.

So says the King of the kingdom: "Teaching them all things whatsoever I have commanded you." We emphasize the kind of teaching that is to be taught, because it is the first teaching to be done after souls are brought into the kingdom. Peter, who understood what the Master meant, also emphasizes the same thought when he says: "As newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the Word, that ye may grow thereby." He understood the cravings of childhood. He knew the kind of food that babes want and need to make them grow. There has never been found, mixed, or invented, a child food that is as good or equal to the pure milk of a healthy mother. And so there has never been mixed, ground together, and invented, a food for newly-born souls that is equal to or as good as the simple, pure and sweet milk of the words of Jesus. We must not lose sight of the fact that the Gospel of Jesus Christ can never be, in preciousness and spiritual nourishment, to the unregenerated sinner what it is to the new-born child in Jesus Christ; so that the real teaching and the spiritual life feeding must be done after the child is born.

This is a truth so evident that there should be no question. And yet it too often happens that we try to do the major part of the teaching and feeding before the subjects are born and then leave them to hunger and starve after they are born. What we want to learn—and learn it more thoroughly than we have done before—is, to do first things first.

You may ask: What are some of the first things to be done for those who are lately born into the kingdom of Christ? I would try, as nearly as possible, to follow the instructions of Jesus. I would teach them the things which Jesus taught, having reference to the spiritual condition and age of those to be taught. I would not give strong meat to a very young or weakly child, but give such food as would be best adapted to their several conditions. In other words, Study carefully your cases, and then give the milk, the meat, and the strong food, as may be best for the spiritual development and growth of the respective cases.

Give the Lord a Part.

We have some well-to-do and even rich members who are not getting their temporal affairs in good shape to meet the Judge of all the earth at the judgment bar of God. Some of them have been wonderfully blessed in the way of accumulating property, but they are showing no appreciation for what the Lord has done for them. Not a few of them are without direct heirs, and they propose to die and leave all their property to distant relatives. Others give the Lord credit for their large farms, bonds and bank accounts. They have raised children who have no regard whatever for the religion of their parents. Now these parents propose to leave all their property to their unconverted children and not leave a dollar to the Lord. All of this looks ungrateful. Why should not well-to-do parents leave at least a part of their property to the Lord's cause, and divide the rest up among their children? Especially is this important when the children are unconverted. The Lord is certainly not pleased with the idea of blessing his people with an abundance of means, and then have them transfer the property to the world. We would suggest that those having no direct heirs leave the bulk of their property to some good work of the church. This would be treating the Lord fairly, and, so far as the disposition of property is concerned, would place the testator in a good attitude to meet the Lord at the judgment. But how about the members who permit all their property to go to the world? Does it really pay the Lord to help such people acquire property? Candidly, what excuse can they offer at the judgment?

Ignoring the Word.

One of our exchanges says there is an improved tone in the evangelistic meetings, of late years, for the reason that more attention is given to the influence and guidance of the Holy Spirit. This may be true, and, in a sense, it is encouraging, but we discover that no emphasis is placed on the importance of preaching the Word. In fact, the tendency is to trust so fully to the guidance of the Spirit as practically to ignore what is said in the New Testament. The way to be led by the Spirit is to be directed by the Written Word. Holy men of old spoke as they were moved by the Spirit, and if we would follow the dictates of the Holy Ghost, we must do what these holy men of old said the Lord demands of his people. If we would be led by the Spirit, we must be led by the Word. To reject the Word simply means to reject the Spirit. No dependence can be placed in the man who claims to be governed by the Spirit when he purposely sets aside some of the plain requirements of the New Testament. What the Spirit had people to do, in the time of the apostles, will be required by the Spirit today. This thing of men claiming to be wholly under the influence of the Spirit, while they pay no attention whatever to the commandments set forth in the NewTestament, is a deception. It is an attempt to deceive the people, but God can not be deceived.

The Sunday-School Baseball.

Regarding Sunday-school baseball teams for boys in the Brethren schools, we have advised against it from the start, and the more we learn of the tendency of this form of diversion, the more thoroughly have we become convinced that our Sunday-school workers should not have anything to do with it. It does not blend with the spirit of the New Testament religion, for the reason that it is decidedly worldly and detracts from, rather than adds, to the religious tone of what the Sunday-school should be. It may be classed with the Boy Scout movement and other similar attractions. The semi-gospel churches are being carried away by such sensational methods of holding boys, and there is no telling to what limit they may yet go. Boys may be held just as long as they can be attracted by such methods, but no longer. Being trained for the sensational, they will soon be looking for something more attractive. Our people, having discarded in their services everything having the appearance of evil, ought not to be expected to fall into the way of other churches, in this particular. So far as possible we should adopt the very best methods of holding young people, but these methods should be in keeping with the profession we make. As for the Boy Scouts, that has too much of the military feature about it, while the Sunday-school baseball games inspire the boys more along baseball lines than along religious lines. Practically all of our members want their boys to go to Sunday-school and study the Bible, but most of them will object to their sons being encouraged to join a Sunday-school baseball team. They will not object to them playing baseball in a proper way, but they are decidedly opposed to supporting a Sunday-school that carries on that kind of business in the name of the religion for which the Brethren church stands.

Lack of Permanency.

Years ago, when our people began settling in new localities, with a view of securing homes and building up churches, they did not pull up and move to the next new place that happened to open up for settlers. They stayed by their new farms, built good homes and did what they could to establish strong, prosperous churches, as well as prosperous communities. They were quite willing to let somebody else have a chance in the other good localities. In this way some of the strongest churches we have, west of the Ohio River, were built up. We can not speak so well of hundreds who make it a rule to move about every time they hear of a good opening for settlers. They may emigrate to a new locality, open up farms, establish a church, build a house of worship, urge others to settle among them, and a few years later move elsewhere, and leave behind them a run-down or a dead church. This has been done time and again, in different parts of the great West. Some people may call this mission work by emigration, but we do not. There is plenty of emigration, but it is all to little profit in the way of establishing churches and converting people. The old way of members settling in communities and staying by their work is far better, and produces more permanent results.

Words of Wisdom.

Buster Brown, the little boy of cartoon notoriety, who, with his dog, Tige, is known the world over, occasionally utters words of wisdom. Some time ago he said: "Grandpa Grouch doesn't understand little boys, because he doesn't love them." There may be a great deal of philosophy in the cute saying. Grandpa might understand little boys better if he loved them more. No one understands the babe like the mother, for she loves her babe. The boy who loves his mother is going to have no trouble about understanding her. Burbank, of California, can accomplish wonders with plants because he loves them. The man who loves trees will soon find out that the trees like him, and it is remarkable how such a man will learn to understand trees. The teacher who loves her pupils soon impresses them with the thought that she fully understands them. This principle will apply to the preacher of the Gospel who, by the Holy Spirit, has been made overseer of the Lord's flock. He understands his flock because he loves his charge and delights in his work. We may carry the principle still farther, and say, that the man who loves God will understand him. Men fail to understand God because they do not love him. Love is the key that unlocks the storehouse of true knowledge.

CHRIST AND WAR.

The above is the title of a well prepared tract by our late Bro. Daniel Vaniman, which should be distributed in all our Sunday-schools May 28, when we are to have the lesson on "Universal Peace." As we are responsible for practical thoughts on the Sunday-school lesson, we desire to urge every superintendent to send to the Brethren Publishing House for one hundred or more of these splendid tracts. The price is only ten cents per hundred. Don't debate the question! Don't wonder why! Don't wait! Send now and give the Home a chance to print another edition of the tract rather than fail at the last minute to fill orders in time for the lesson. Will not the reader please bring this to the attention of his Sunday-school superintendent?

OLYMPIA, WASHINGTON.

March 23 Bro. E. M. Studebaker, wife and children, of Bethany Bible School, Chicago, Ill., came to us to conduct a two weeks' Bible Institute. We had three hours of study each day at 10 A. M., 11 A. M., and at 7 P. M. At 8 P. M. we had preaching each evening, making in all seventeen sermons. Eleven came out on the Lord's side and were baptized. One was reclaimed. The attendance and interest were good. We have an enrollment of seventy, and an average attendance of fifty. The members of the class all reside at Olympia, except two brethren of Centralia. A number that attended regularly, but who are not members of the Brethren church, became very much interested in the work, saying it was too good to miss. We feel this school has been a great uplift to the church at this place.

About half of our membership are young in years, and are quite active in the work of the church. Although we organized not quite four years ago, with but a few members, our membership now has grown to almost a hundred. We have outgrown our little chapel, and are greatly in need of a larger house, which, we trust, the Lord will give us.

Bro. Studebaker preached the Word with such power as to convince the sinner and enthuse the Christian. He is now laboring with the Centralia church,—the mother church of the Northwest.

OMAHA, NEBRASKA.

Bro. A. J. and Sister Nickey, of Kearney, Nebr., came to us April 8. We went to the home of our aged Sister Helvie, and held services on Saturday night. Bro. Nickey preached twice for us on Sunday, and on Monday night conducted the members' meeting. Considerable business came beome the meeting. Six letters of membership were received and one was granted. We decided to hold our love feast June 11. We hope to have with us at that time brethren and sisters from Annual Meeting. Please take note of this and arrange to be with us. Bro. Weaver was elected as our delegate to Annual Meeting; Sister Alice Garber, alternate.

Bro. Ira Wagoner, of Red Cloud, Nebr., our District Sunday-school Secretary, preached one sermon for us April 1, which was very helpful and much appreciated.

A wonderful revelation of God's power was manifested recently. Bro. Arthur Lewis, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, was recently stricken with typhoid-pneumonia, and the doctor had little hopes for his recovery. His temperature ran from 103 to 104 degrees. He called for the anointing. In a few minutes later, when the nurse took his temperature, it was normal. He has not had a trace of fever since. In a few days he was able to come home from the hospital, to the utter amazement of the doctor and nurses. Our faith has been strengthened and we feel that God's name has been glorified.

SOME CONDITIONS EXISTING IN OUR LARGE CITIES.

When we see the sad condition of mankind in the large cities, we are made to think that something needs to be done. We wonder how we might better the situation. Many people, who live in smaller cities or in the country, do not realize what is going on in the large cities. While country visitors may walk the streets, sometimes, they are looking at everything else but the conditions of man. They are impressed by bargain sales and the large buildings.

When we come in close touch with these people we see a dark picture. Think of the boys that are not being cared for! They merely exist. They do not know what a happy home is, nor do they have a good bed to sleep on. Some have to walk the streets all night, for they do not have money to get a bed. They do not know how to put their money to good use. Their fathers and mothers are probably degraded by sin, and everything seems to work against them. Life is only a dark picture before them. Some of these men feel that they have gone so deep in sin that there is no hope for them of being saved. If they are unattended to, what will turn them from this awful way? Some say, when you talk to them about Jesus, that he would not look upon such persons as themselves.

Then think of some wives who know of a better way, but have to suffer from their sinful husband! Think of women going out on the street in the cold, looking for their husbands! Not knowing whether they are alive or not, they continue to look for them. Think of some women going along the street intoxicated. Is it any wonder that their children are down in the gutter also?

Then we think of the innocent young girls who are brought in from the various countries of the world and even our own country, and sold body and soul to the evil one. After having been ruined they merely exist. They are ashamed to go to their homes, even though they might be able to escape by some means, which is not always possible. Does it not look as though something needed to be done? The longer this is left unattended to, the more souls are going to destruction.

Let us look upon the faces of those who were once down in the gutter, but have been taught the better way and have received Christ into their lives! How much difference it makes upon their lives! Does it pay to work among these people? We certainly think it does! Not but one soul, even, to accept Christ, it is worth the time and expense. One soul brought to Christ is worth more than all the money in the world. What a shame to think that so many people value money more than they do precious souls!

There is work for all. If we think there is nothing to do, let us look around us. Not all have a desire for the same work. Means are needed to carry on the various kinds of mission work, and some can supply these, while others are needed to do the work.

In winning souls to Christ all can have a part. But too often we say, "Let the other person do that." We see the need of earnest mission work when we are working among these people. By making the proper effort we can reach them, so that they may receive what it means to be saved. When we get these people to see the light, we secure some good workers. Think of the Chinese who have received the light, and how earnestly they work for their Master! Just look at the expression of their faces. Their zeal puts the Americans to shame. Many of those, who have been brought from the gutter to accept Christ, get out and work with others who are as degraded as they were once and seem so happy. When a person lays his life upon the altar of sacrifice he is willing to work wherever he is needed.

EXTENSION No. 2, CHICAGO, ILL.

We are just entering a new epoch of our work. The new building is completed and dedicated to the work of the Lord. It is very simple and plain, for which we are glad, as we have many people suggested with the large, expensive churches. It has three floors, namely basement, first floor and second floor. In the basement are a small flat and two large rooms for mission classes. On the first floor are the auditorium, and five Sunday-school rooms, and on the second floor are two seven-room flats. It is the object of the building to make the work as near self-supporting as possible. How I wish that the day may come, when many of such buildings may be dotted over the city!

April 9, was the beginning of dedication week. Eld. J. G. Royer was with us in the morning, and Eld. I. Bennett Trout in the evening. Both gave us soul-inspiring messages. There were preaching services each night the following week conducted by different ones.

On Sunday afternoon and evening, April 16, the four Christian Workers' Societies of Elgin, Chicago, Batavia and Naperville met at the mission and a well-prepared program was rendered.

All these services made a week of spiritual feasting for this place, and much good has been done. Those of us who have been with the work from the beginning, can scarcely realize that these blessings are ours.

March 26 there were added to us in baptism,—a father, mother and daughter. Three years ago their son joined the church and through his consecrated life his parents found their Savior. The father feels mortified that the child had to lead his parents, instead of their leading the son, but the like often occurs. We wish that more of our Sunday-school boys and girls would do as much for Christ, if their parents are not Christians.

Spring is with us and that means that summer will follow in the course of time. Already the children are talking of going to the country. Are you planning for them in your summer program? If not, don't fail to do so, for you have played a large part in the success of our work. Will you not respond this summer, without so much effort on our part? Our moments are precious and you can save us much unnecessary work.

In the city, around us, are young girls, who work every day, in helping to support a family, and do not know what it is to take a vacation, because they have no place to go. I have thought that it would be a good work if some one would open their homes and take them for at least two weeks. They can easily pay their car-fare, but to go to a summer resort would be too expensive for them; hence, all they can do is to stay at home, and the girls would rather work. You people, who have such a variety of work, do not realize what it means to work steadily at the same kind of work, day in and day out.

HOMES WE VISIT IN CHINA.

Visiting in the homes is one of the best means of mission work in China, for young women are not allowed to leave the courts of their houses, and the older ones can only go when the weather is good. There are many methods of entering these homes. Most often it is through sickness. After some sick one has been cured, they are usually our lasting friends. Other times they are simply curious to see the foreigner and ask us to come and see them.

The innkeeper and his family, next door to our chapel, are among our best friends. This is how they came to know us: A little girl in the inn had it very badly, very badly. He came to Bro. Crumpacker, who dressed it a number of days, till it was healed. During this time his ten-year-old daughter often came with him, and began to think a great deal of Sister Crumpacker, and the baby. She came to services each Sunday and brought a number of other girls with her. Now she comes each day to learn to read, and often brings other girls with her, but none come regularly but this little girl. The parents of the others do not, as yet, fully trust us. But she is learning very rapidly, and seems to have a passionate thirst for knowledge. She seems to be the pride and pet of the neighborhood. The hymns and Bible stories that we have taught her she has taught to many of the children around her. We hope she is the beginning of our girls' school.

The other day she came hurriedly to our place with tears in her eyes, and asked if we had medicine for a wound. Her father had gotten mixed up in a fight of some kind, and was badly wounded in the head. We went to dress the wound. A more sympathetic scene you never saw. It was evening. The daughter held the candle, the wife tenderly held his head, while a number of men stood around, watching each move we made with intense interest. The wound is now healing nicely and they are better friends than ever.

The mother is usually busy cooking food for the many men who stop at the inn, or sewing garments for the family, as she sits on the warm kong by the open door. After services we often stop and sit on the kong with her, and talk a few minutes. In the court are the horses and mules, busily eating and we think of the Christ-child who could find no room in the inn, but slept in a manger like this. We hope that soon may find a place in the hearts of the people of this inn.

The painter's home is another place we visit several times a week. We became acquainted with them because he did painting and papering for us. He had been to the coast and had heard something of foreigners and the Gospel there, so was not afraid of us. He has a fine baby boy, a few months old, of whom they are very proud. His little wife has not been very well, so Sister Crumpacker has been treating her, and she is much better now. He is very anxious that she get well, and he helps her a great deal. She is very quick to learn and will soon be able to read in the Bible. The husband and wife seem to be very agreeable. We gave him a Gospel and he seems quite interested. She says he reads to her in the evenings. His neighbors do not speak well of him, for he is an opium smoker. But such the Lord has come to save, and who knows but that he may yet be a gem for the kingdom of heaven? Who knows what your prayers and our daily labors may help the Lord to accomplish in such men?

His brother is also a painter and lives in the same court. At first, when we came to the court his wife was too busy to pay much attention, and never asked us in to her rooms. But by and by she and her daughter were not feeling well, and asked for some medicine. We gladly gave them what they wanted, and sat on the kong and talked with them a long time. They asked all kinds of questions as to why we came here, our homes, etc., and seemed to be quite satisfied with our answers, and we have been welcome ever since. Her husband has had several attacks of temporary insanity. An attack came on again some time ago. They wanted us to give him some medicine to cure him, but we told them we did not have any. He seems all right again now, and is with us the same as usual. They have a boy and a girl whom we hope to have in our schools in the near future."

We can do nothing without your prayers. George Elbe, Trio
"power that transforms the dust of the earth into gold."
We will tell about more homes another time.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

ARKANSAS.

Black Fish.—Yesterday we had a glorious Easter Day. Our brother, J. L. Woodall, gave us two soul-cheering sermons. The interest is still increasing. We spent the day with our good neighbor, and Mrs. Hobbs. It would surely be a blessing if some good minister were to make a visit to this excellent place and give us a few days' meetings. I believe there could be a glorious work done here for the Lord.—Dora Stoiker, Box 10, Wideens, Ark., April 17.

CALIFORNIA.

Live Oak.—Several members have located at this place, with encouraging prospects for others in the near future. A large hall has been secured in Live Oak for holding our services. We now have three ministers. Others have bought property and will move to this place in the fall. The land company promises us a churchhouse as soon as practicable. This is a very healthy with a fine climate.—W. R. Brubaker, Live Oak, Cal., April 17.

Lordsburg.—Bro. D. M. Fike, of Los Angeles, Cal., preached at the Bible and Tent Mission last Sunday morning, and here at Lordsburg in the evening. We lifted an offering for the China sufferers, and in the morning and evening services also gave the Sunday-school and birthday money, collected last Sunday, to the amount of $105.—Cora Hileman Miller, Lordsburg, Cal., April 18.

CANADA.

Irricana.—Since we reorganized our Sunday-school we have noticed a vast difference in our attendance. Where we had only one class last winter, we now have three well-attended classes. Our new officers and teachers have taken hold of the work most energetically, and with the help of God we hope still to increase our number and to build up a strong church here, far in the North, where the Church of the Brethren is now new to many of the people. Bro. Cowley and family moved here this spring from Illinois. We hope and pray that he and all the members of the congregation will locate where they can all take hold of the Master's work. Canada is certainly in need of workers. Bro. Weaver preached a most powerful and interesting Easter sermon to a well-filled house. All seem to have the perfection of a glad Easter on their faces.—Ethel Thomas, Irricana, Canada, April 19.

Lunnford.—I am a reader of the Gospel Messenger and read all it contains. While I can read about the good meetings that some are enjoying I am sometimes sorry to wonder why these ministers can not bring us poor homesteaders, in the far North, some of their good meetings. And, since some localities have an abundance of ministerial help, there is a field open here for you to come and reap the good seed. There are no members in our country that we know of, but we would love to have them come in here.—Mrs. J. P. Williams, Lunnford, Alta., Can., April 9.

COLORADO.

Arriba.—April 4 Bro. Kesler, of River Bend, Colo., came among us and gave us some encouraging words and sermons. Six were baptized and one is to be received by baptism next Sunday. We have a small lingering interest. This interest is taken in our Sunday-school work, which, we are pleased to say, is growing in number.—Nellie Stambaugh, Arriba, Colo., April 17.

Bethany church met in council April 12. Our elder, Bro. R. E. Arnold, was with us. Two letters were granted and read. Our building committee is pushing the work on our new church as rapidly as possible, and the work is moving nicely. We rejoice to know we shall soon have a churchhouse of our own in which we may worship. We invite members, contemplating a change of location, to visit us, and see our country before locating. Our Sunday-school work is moving along nicely. Two of our members were appointed at order to do better work.—Pearl Kesler, River Bend, Colo., April 14.

Grand Junction Mission.—We were glad to see so many bright and happy little faces gathered into our little mission on Easter morning. We tried to make the occasion pleasant and enjoyable for them. These little ones will some day make the future church, and we must make the impressions upon them while they are young. As each one went away we hope they felt the love of Christ. Bryant gave a short address from 1 Cor. 12: 23. He also delivered a good discourse in the evening on "Christ being" For the Church." Preparations are being made in order to do better work.—Pearl Kesler, River Bend, Colo., April 16

Juniata church met in council March 20. Our elder, Bro. C. P. Harpierod, presided. He was also chosen as our delegate to Annual Meeting; his wife, alternate. April 8 Bro. Ira Wagoner, our State Sunday-school Secretary, came to us, and while here preached two good, inspiring sermons. April 13 Sister Miller, our missionary from India, gave us a lecture on India, describing some of the oppositions with which they have to contend.—Mary Liveringhouse, Juniata, Nebr., April 17.

Red Cloud.—We met in special council April 12. Our elder, Bro. C. B. Smith, presided. Bro. Alfred Phillips was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. Ira Ellis, alternate. We selected a temperance committee and solicitors for foreign mission work. We decided to have the Sunday-school lesson lectured on India. We will hold our love feast May 6, 7:30 P. M.: our pastor, Bro. Edwin Jarboe, and wife are in Kansas, holding protracted meetings. During their absence our elder, Bro. C. B. Smith, is with us. We have Sunday-school and preaching services every Sunday morning. Our Christian Workers' Meeting and preaching each Sunday evening. We also have an aid society which meets every Thursday. Since we are rusied with work we meet every week. We have had 441 visits. We need more workers.—Ella I. Ehret-man, Red Cloud, Nebr., April 14.

NEW YORK.

Brooklyn.—We closed a very interesting series of meetings on Easter. Eighteen made the good confession. Thus far ten have been baptized; others hope to be as near their Lord as they may, and to be baptized soon. Bro. J. S. Raleigh, of Baltimore, Md., did the preaching. Our love feast, on Easter evening, was well attended and was made a time of rejoicing by all present. The Lord is adding to the church such as are being saved, and since "the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand" (Isa. 53: 19), we take new courage to press on.—J. Kurtz Miller, 358 Stuyvesant Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., April 17.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Carrington.—We met in members' meeting April 8. It was to have been the last Saturday in March, but as our church was undergoing a general cleaning, we, our council and two regular services were postponed. As the time of our elder, Bro. D. W. Shock, is all taken up in other fields of labor, he has tendered his resignation. Eld. William McCann presided over the meeting, assisted by Bro. Kreps. Bro. McCann was elected as delegate to Conference, Bro. Bell, alternate. Date of meetings will begin June 10, to close with a love feast. Bro. Kreps, of Chicago, will be with us. Bro. and Sister Bro. Smith, with his wife and daughter, has located at Englevale, and will take charge of the work there.—Mrs. Mary Young, Carrington, N. Dak., April 17.

Minot.—The workers at this place were visited by Bro. Koolhoff, of Cando, April 14. He preached for us morning and evening. We are glad to have him with us, and we want others stop over with us when passing through! Easter evening we had a fine and appropriate program, and appropriate Easter program. The children were made to feel happy to have an opportunity to recite Scripture memorizes.—J. Risen Christ. A number of our attendants moved out of town since spring to break up, others have moved in, so our number of places are supplied. There are two applicants to be received by baptism in the near future.—D. W. Shock, Box 878, Minot, N. Dak., April 17.

Ray church met in council April 1, with our elder, Bro. J. G. Wagoner, in the chair. Our delegate to Annual Meeting is with Bro. O. W. Gordon as superintendent. We decided to hold our love feast June 24, at 10 A. M. Eld. J. Y. Bruhaker, two and one-half miles west of Ray. Brethren P. W. Sherman and C. H. Myers were advanced to the second degree of the ministry. Brethren Hicks, Sherland and Myers were chosen as a committee to canvass and solicit donations. A temperance committee was also appointed. The following Sunday Bro. John Hartsough preached an interesting sermon, after which Bro. Hartsough confessed Christ in baptism. We have five applicants awaiting baptism, as soon as the proper arrangements can be made.—T. C. Swan, Wheelock, N. Dak., April 11.

Turtle Mountain church has a membership of about twenty. Bro. William H. Eller preached for us at different times. The first fall of 1910 we had a series of meetings conducted by Bro. D. W. Shock, of Minot, N. Dak. After that Bro. Amos Blocher, of York, Pa., preached for us for a short time different Sundays. Bro. Eli Forney, of Surrey, N. Dak., came to us to teach school this summer; also to preach for us. We are willing and anxious that a great work is to be done here in the mountains. At our council meeting we decided to have a love feast May 6.—Ella M. Keivin, N. Dak.—Pred Schroeder, Kelvin, N. Dak., April 17.

OHIO.

East Dayton.—We enjoyed a very interesting program given by the Sunday-school on the occasion of Easter morning. Bro. Chas. Flory, of Union, Ohio, gave us a very excellent sermon in the evening on the subject, "Christ's Resurrection." Bro. J. A. H. Couser, of Peebles, Ohio, was also with us on Sunday morning, and assisted in the communion.—Elizabeth Greve, 251 Maple St., Dayton, Ohio, April 19.

Fort McKinley.—On Easter morning we had with us Bro. Jesse Ogden, who gave us a very interesting and beneficial talk, taking for his text Acts 26: 8. Bro. Walter Hollett, who has been duly installed into the ministry, is also present.—Jesse F. Coy, 330 W. Third Street, Dayton, Ohio, April 29.

Rose church met in council April 4. Our elder, Bro. Jacob H. Detrick was chosen as president; Bro. Orville P. Jacobs, secretary. The meeting was held the following evening. Bro. G. A. Snider, of near Lima, will be with us the first Saturday evening and Sunday.—Ida May—Mrs. Pearl Bartles, R. D. 8, Spencerville, Ohio, April 21.

Sugar Creek.—The Billy Sunday revival at Lima, Ohio, having just closed, during which time 8,000 were converted, several of whom expressed a desire to unite with our church, the members thought it would be better to hold a short series of meetings and reap the harvest that was seemingly ripe and ready to be gleaned, rather than, many of Oregon, late of Bethany Bible School, to hold the meetings as he is taking a Bible View home. He preached two very inspiring sermons, and gave one illustrated talk to the children. As an immediate result, thirty souls were received into the church by baptism, seven by letter. At a recent council meeting the church decided to build a new house at Pleasant View (centrally located between the two mile). A building committee and solicitors were appointed and a plan adopted. We expect to have the house completed by fall.—I. W. Byerly, Lima, Ohio, April 19.

West Dayton church met in council April 1, our elder, D. S. Fihrpin, presiding. Two letters were received and one granted. Two petitions were presented for baptism. The church extended a call to Brother and Sister Fihrpun for another year, beginning Sept. 1, 1911. A local temperance committee was appointed, consisting of Brethren Jesse Harman, I. L. Erbaugh and D. W. Knisley. Bro. D. S. Fihrpun is our delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. O. P. Haines, alternate. Delegates to District Meeting are Brethren D. S. Fihrpun and O. P. Haines. Easter morning we had an interesting Sunday-school, with an attendance of 173. The offering was the largest this year. Our pastor gave an interesting sermon. In the morning, and in the evening an Easter program, rendered mostly by the children, was given. Services in the afternoon and evening were received by baptism. Beginning March 12, a meeting has been held every Sunday morning, thirty minutes prior to the Sunday-school, on the lesson of the lesson. This, we think, will prove very helpful to our teachers.—Cordie Murray, 2020 W. Third Street, Dayton, Ohio, April 18.

OKLAHOMA.

Hoyle.—The Brethren at this place enjoyed an all-day meeting on Easter Sunday. We had our usual services in the morning, Sunday-school and preaching, and at 2:30 P. M. some of our brethren and sisters gave us some interesting talks on "The Resurrection of Christ." The church is in very good working order now. We have only one minister, but he preaches only one sermon each Lord's Day. We have decided to change location, are invited to come here, especially ministers. Anyone wishing information may address Jesse Hoyle, R. F. D. No. 1, Box 1, Boot, Ames, Okla., April 19.

New Hope church met in council April 8. Brethren G. W. Landis and A. W. Austin had charge. A good deal of business came before the council. We feel that the Lord has wonderfully blessed us in our work for the past year, and determined to do better work in the future.—John Carr, R. D. No. 2, Bowden, Okla., April 17.

North Star (Oklahoma) church held an enjoyable love feast April 15. Twenty-three members participated in the Lord's tables. One has recently been received by letter. On Easter morning we had a very interesting Sunday-school program to a large and attentive audience. About 250 were present. Although our membership is small, since spring opened up our house has been about full most every evening and day night. It would be appreciated if members would move into our midst and help in the work.—S. F. Nisewander, Caldwell, Kans., April 17.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Antietam.—At the council, held in the Waynesboro church April 15, Eld. C. R. Oellig was elected delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. Jacob M. Bingaman and Eld. Michael Oellig to District Meeting. A local temperance committee was appointed in connection with the Union Bible Study Committee. April 16 seven were received into the church by baptism.—Edgar M. Wenger, Broad and Third Streets, Waynesboro, Pa., April 19.

Bethel Ridge.—We met in council April 14, with Eld. S. H. Walker presiding. Our brother was again chosen as our elder; Bro. W. G. Schrock, delegate to Annual Meeting; Brethren Ezra Hoover and Jacob Hoover, delegates to District Meeting. One query was sent to District Meeting. We decided to hold our love feast May 20, at 2 P. M., at the Pike house. We will have a series of meetings at the Pike house by Eld. H. W. Fogelsonger, to begin on the day previous to the love feast. We will hold our council meeting April 4, at 2 P. M.—Mrs. Ella Hoover, Pike, Pa., April 17.

Codorus church met in council April 17. Eld. D. Y. Brillhart presided. One letter of membership was received, and one was granted. Our elder will hold an all-day meeting in this church May 8 and 10, at 10 A. M. Eld. D. Y. Brillhart was elected as our delegate to Annual Meeting; Sister Emma Myers, first, and J. L. Myers, to District Meeting. We collected $32.55 for Home Missions.—Mrs. J. L. Myers, Spring Grove, Pa., April 18.

Lancaster.—Our council was held April 12. Bro. H. B. Walker was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting; Brethren J. W. Myers and G. W. Beelman, delegates to District Meeting. We decided to hold our love feast May 24. Four letters were granted and one received by letter. Sister Elizabeth Hess, our missionary, reported that during the last quarter she visited 139 homes and 48 sewing circles. She has personally had distributed seventy-five garments and twenty-one pairs of shoes (new and second-hand). Sister Hess gives her time and labor gratuitously. Through her efforts many children are brought to Sunday-school and church. We are heartily grateful to this noble and self-sacrificing sister. The church was also informed that steps be made among the members to assist Sister Mary Shaffer to get an education. Sister Shaffer, who was a member of the Lancaster church, is attending the Bible Institute at Chicago, and is a worker of mission work. The church granted the desired permission.—Annie M. Landis, 1911 Fremont Street, Lancaster, Pa., April 21.

Philadelphia (First Church of the Brethren, Dauphin Street, above Broad Street).—April 2 two more young married people accepted Christ as the only Saviour, and were received into holy baptism. April 3 we held our council meeting. Our elder, Bro. J. T. Myers, presided, assisted by our pastor, Bro. H. Webster Kurtz. Our pastor was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. Kurtz and Sister Eva Groff, our pastor's aid, to District Meeting. Our pastor's wife was appointed delegate to the Conference that is to be held in Philadelphia. Sister Groff's letter was granted. We sent one query to District Meeting, on account of the interest in the temperance movement to meet again on Wednesday evening, when the unfinished business may be taken up. At the close of our business meeting Mrs. Sallie B. Schnell, 1906 North Park Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., April 19.

Philadelphia (Bethany Mission, 3255 Kensington Avenue).—We held our love feast on Holy Thursday evening. This made the most more impressive, and we enjoyed it a blessed feast. Bro. D. Webster Kurtz officiated. Ministering brethren present were Eld. J. T. Myers, Bro. David D. Webster Kurtz and Paul H. Bowman.—Mrs. Sallie B. Schnell, 1906 North Park Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., April 19.

Ridge church met in council April 15 with our elder, Bro. Samuel Hilbert, of Gettysburg, presiding. Two letters of clinates were received. Three were granted. Brethren N. M. Fogelsonger and James Slyder are our delegates to District Meeting. Our love feast will be held May 6, at 2 P. M. Bro. Fogelsonger house.—Joseph Burkhart, Shippensburg, Pa., April 19.

Spring Creek.—Easter services were held at Canowago and in South Annville. At the latter house we had a glorious service. Eld. H. B. Hollinger, of Lebanon County, Pa., delivered a practical sermon. Sunday-school was conducted by Eld. S. Z. Witmer and Bro. Aaron Hoffer gave short talks in the German language. They impressed us with the joy of the resurrection morn when we shall meet again beyond the river. There are three prayer meetings held in our congregation. The Sunday-school will be held after prayer meeting, recently, in Palmyra, at the home of Bro. John G. Gerber, for young people. July 1 we hope to have a basket meeting at church work.—Edgar M. Hoffer, Elizabethtown, Pa., April 16.

TEXAS.

Pleasant Grove.—April 16 Eld. J. A. Miller preached two sermons for us. Bro. J. H. Hutchison and wife, of Ennis, were with us at the home of Bro. B. C. Bonds. One letter of membership was received. July 1 we hope to have a love feast, to be preceded by a series of meetings lasting one week.—Nannie Bonds, R. D. 3, Sprite, Texas, April 19.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Shrewsbury.—Bro. E. L. Clower, of Gatewood, W. Va., met with us on the evening of April 1. He preached three very interesting sermons. His wife and daughter were also with us. The attendance and attention were good. We expect to have a series of meetings in May. We will have our love feast sometime during the meetings.—Ella Miller, Shrewsbury, W. Va., April 17.

WISCONSIN.

Maple Grove.—Our Sunday-school decided to give an offering on Easter Sunday to World-wide Missions. So we made preparation by securing Easter envelopes and handing them out. We received $12.50 for our offering. This is a small people, but we feel blessed in giving this amount. We expect Bro. D. L. Miller, of Milledgeville, Ill., to begin a few Sunday-morning and revival meetings April 30.—W. H. Greenawalt, R. D. 1, Stanley, Wis., April 17.

CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

MIDDLE PENNSYLVANIA.

The District Meeting of Middle Pennsylvania convened at Roaring Spring, April 18. All the churches of the District except three were represented by delegates. Reports were heard from the various lines of church work, including the Home for the Aged and Infirm, Home and Foreign Mission work, Temperance work, Sunday-school work, and the Home for Orphan and Friendless Children, and were discussed with much enthusiasm, occupying the greater part of the day.

Only two papers from churches came to the meeting, and no papers are to appear in the Annual Meeting.

Bro. John Bennett, from the Artemas church, is our representative on the Standing Committee.

The Elders' Meeting, held at the same place, was attended by thirty-two of our fifty-one elders in the District.

A marked degree of good feeling and harmony was manifest through the sessions of both meetings, and we believe that the delegates and all workers will return to their posts with greater desires to forward the great cause in which we should all be interested.

J. C. Swigart, Secretary.

Mattawana, Pa., April 21.

BLANCHARD, OKLAHOMA.

We are now located at Blanchard, Okla., about thirty-five miles from the nearest organization of the Church of the Brethren. My wife, my daughter and myself are the only members in Oklahoma County, to our knowledge. Any one knowing of others, or even those who are favorably toward the Brethren, would confer a favor to the undersigned by sending me their addresses. I shall be glad to call upon them.

We find the people to be kindly disposed and they seem to be anxious for Sunday-school and preaching, but at present we find the way blocked by a school board of unbelievers. We are hoping and praying that the blessed savior, in whom we trust, will soon open the way. For the time being we are trying to content ourselves by distributing tracts and other literature, such as the Messenger and Young People, hoping that, by so doing, the good Lord will break down the walls now hindering the work of spreading the Gospel.

Here, as well as elsewhere, the people have never been taught the whole Gospel, and they seem to be surprised that there are those who believe and teach feet-washing, the salutation, nonconformity, etc.

Two other families of members have bought land here, and will locate this coming fall or winter, including an elder. This will give us a working force of seven members; two in the ministry. We would be glad to have others locate with us. We have a good climate, and land is cheap; though the country is new and somewhat undeveloped. Such opportunity makes good openings for our people, and we should be ready to take advantage of them as they came to us.

D. E. Enanis.

Blanchard, Okla., April 15.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

A week ago on Sunday night the writer baptized eight adults, four being pupils of the Geiger Memorial Church of the Brethren; also baptized the father of a family last Sunday night. Some others are to be baptized soon. The good Spirit is working. Brethren A. L. B. Martin, now of Long Beach, Cal., Bro. Jesse Swigart and D. Webster Kurtz gave us valuable assistance in a short series of meetings during the last two weeks of March. Several of the converts are the result of said meetings.

Our Sunday-school now numbers considerably over four hundred, with an average attendance of over nearly three hundred, and the attendance is still increasing. Prospects are encouraging in both church and Sunday-school.

The First Brethren church and also the Bethany Mission (so called as yet, though organized now) are both in a prosperous condition. D. Webster Kurtz is pastor of the First Church of the Brethren, and Bro. Paul Bowman pastor of the Bethany church. Both are efficient pastors and are doing good work.

After the first of September the writer will be succeeded in the pastoral work of the Geiger Memorial church by Bro. A. J. Culler, who will be graduated from the Columbia University this summer. Bro. Culler will come to the Geiger Memorial well equipped for the work. We hope and pray that God may richly bless and prosper him. Bro. Culler in the work of saving souls and building up the Geiger Memorial Church of the Brethren into a strong and influential church.

Surely, with such men as Bro. Kurtz of the First Church of the Brethren, Bro. Swigart of Germantown, Bro. Bowman of the Bethany Mission, and Bro. Culler of the Geiger Memorial, a good and great work ought to be done in Philadelphia, the City of Brotherly Love. God grant it!

DEATH OF SARAH HOWE.

It has been said, "The righteous are immortal till their work is done." However this may be, God alone knows the days of our pilgrimage and "precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints" (Psa. 116:15).

More than once, during the last years of mother's life, was she heard saying, "I do not know how long the Lord wants me here." And during the last six weeks she lived, while she bore her suffering patiently, she could be heard saying frequently, "I am only waiting. I am only waiting to go to a better home. The Lord is good. He does all things well." Finally, the last day, the last hour came. At 7:35 P. M., March 30, the spirit quietly took its flight. And while we could say, "Precious in our sight is the life of a saint," yet we could not wish her back.

Mother was born Oct. 9, 1831, in Cumberland County, Pa. She was the daughter of John and Sarah Mohler, whose wife was Sarah Rothrock. She is survived by a brother, Eld. J. M. Mohler, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., a sister, Mrs. Susan Miller, of McPherson, Kans., four sons and three daughters.

Her children are J. N. Howe, of Lewistown, Pa., W. M. Howe, of Johnstown, Pa., E. M. Howe, of Maitland, Pa., R. L. Howe, of Philadelphia, Pa., Mrs. C. S. Van Dyke, of Almont, N. Dak., Mrs. William Kinsey, of Huntingdon, Pa., and the writer. Joseph Howe and Mrs. Sarah Hoyt died some years ago, while three children died in infancy.

Mother spent the greater part of last summer in our Virden home, and visited other relatives and friends in Illinois and Kansas, traveling part of the way alone. Since last October she had her home with her daughter Minnie Howe Kinsey, of Huntingdon, Pa., where she died.

The funeral services in Huntingdon, were conducted by Eld. W. J. Swigart, at 10:45, on Saturday, April 1. From here we went to our old church home at Maitland, where mother held her membership for over sixty years. Services here were conducted by Eld. S. J. Swigart. Her life was one of kind ministry to others. She lived not to be served but to serve. Some one has said, "I do not know much, therefore I ought to be very kind and very good."

Virden, Ill., April 13. Elizabeth Howe Brubaker.

SCALP LEVEL, Pa.

The church at this place met in council April 1. Our pastor, Bro. D. M. Adams, presided. We were glad to have Bro. D. S. Clapper, who spent the latter part of the winter in Colorado, with us again. Our deacon, Bro. Samuel Knavel, who died of pneumonia, March 16, was greatly missed at our meeting.

Bro. Abram Fryck, of Johnstown, was with us, and assisted in the election of a minister. The brother who was elected could not, for the time being, see his way clear to be installed. Bro. O. F. Fryck, who was elected at a previous meeting, was installed in the deacon's office.

The Sunday-school Convention and Ministerial Meeting of Western Pennsylvania, will be held here August 23 and 24. Bro. L. T. Holsinger, of Rossville, Ind., will begin a series of meeting in the Scalp Level house June 13. Our love feast will be held in the Berkey House, at 6 o'clock on Sunday evening, June 25. Preparatory services will be at 4 o'clock. Our council meeting prior to our love feast will be held June 20.

Bro. W. J. Swigart, of Juniata College, will deliver a temperance lecture in the Scalp Level house on Sunday morning, April 30. He will also speak in the Windber house during the evening of the same day. Bro. A. B. Miller will also speak on temperance in the Rummel church on the afternoon of the same day.

By a strong vote the church decided in favor of building an Old Folks' Home in the Western District. Brethren Geo. Fryck, C. Weaver and A. G. Faust were appointed by the church as a local temperance committee. Bro. D. M. Adams was chosen a delegate to Annual Meeting; with Bro. William Fry as alternaate. Brethren Josiah Weaver and Jesse Trout were chosen delegates to District Meeting, with Bro. Peter Knavel as alternate.

According to our pastor's written report, our church has had a prosperous year. As compared with the preceding year, there has been a marked increase in Sunday-school and Church. Three Christian Workers' Meetings and three Teachers' Meetings are maintained throughout the year. J. H. Lehman.

Scalp Level, Pa., April 5.

FLOWELLA, TEXAS.

My wife, my son and myself have been here since Dec. 1. Our grandson is afflicted with asthma, but he has been greatly benefited in this climate. His mother, Irene B. Rupp, came yesterday and will stay with him until June, perhaps. This is a delightful climate, and persons suffering with rheumatism, asthma, catarrh and heart trouble are greatly benefited. It is a fine country, with good soil and artesian water. There are, at present, six members here, and others have bought who will come later. This is a good opening for some brother who wishes to do mission work on the frontier. Eld. Jacob Witmore, wife and son were with us three weeks ago. He gave us two sermons—one in the morning and one in the afternoon. These sermons were much appreciated. Bro. Witmore is now located at Portland, Texas, thirty-five miles northeast of here. This is a new community, with a good opportunity for cheap homes. This is a corn, cotton, truck and citrus fruit country. We would welcome brethren that are looking for a mild climate to come and help build up the cause of Christ. D. S. Bowman.

Samuel Wampler, preceded her in death thirty-four years ago. Two of her sons also preceded her a few years ago. They were both active members of the Mill Creek congregation. The one was a minister and the other a deacon. Seven children survive her. Sister Wampler was a faithful member of the Church of the Brethren for many years. Interment in the Mill Creek cemetery. Services by Brethren C. E. Long, H. C. Early and Joseph Pence.—Pearl M. Snowalter, North River, Va.

MISSIONARIES WANTED

You don't have to go to India or China or Africa and endure privation and suffer hardship to be a missionary. You can do the best kind of missionary work right at home, and you won't need any preparation or previous training either. All you need to do is to use a little of your spare time and a little of your surplus cash.

One of the best missionaries to the home that we know of is the Gospel Messenger. It preaches several sermons each week to each and every person that reads it, besides containing interesting bits of news and timely articles on up-to-date subjects.

This paper does not have the circulation that its worth deserves; possibly the reason for this is that a good many people do not know of its value, and thus are not aware of the benefit they are missing.

OUR PROPOSITION IS THIS

We will offer the Gospel Messenger for only 50 cents a year if sent into homes where there are no members of the Church of the Brethren. This fact of course is to be mentioned when sending in your orders. The General Mission Board will pay the deficiency.

Why not take advantage of this special offer and BE A MISSIONARY? If each present subscriber would send in but ONE subscription we would double our list, and the good derived could not be estimated.

Will You Be a Missionary?

Life and Sermons of Elder James Quinter

We have just completed the Second Edition of this book and are filling orders every day. We feel certain that several of our customers neglected to place an order in advance, and have printed a few hundred copies besides those needed to fill the advance orders.

The work should prove helpful to thousands of our readers who know little of Bro. Quinter. In his day he was one of the most scholarly and devout men among us, and it will do the younger generation of members good to learn more of his life and experiences. His sermons will prove especially interesting.

The book contains 426 pages, large, clear print, on excellent book paper. The frontispiece is a splendid likeness of Elder Quinter and adds much to the appearance and value of the publication. The introduction is written by Eld. H. B. Brumbaugh. Besides the interesting sketch of Bro. Quinter's life and labors there is a full account of the funeral services and numerous tributes of respect from his co-workers.

Part Two contains some forty of Brother Quinter's choicest sermons, delivered here and there throughout the Brotherhood.

The binding is an artistic cloth, on which back and side titles are stamped in white foil. If you are interested, order today.

THE CURSE of DRINK

BY ELTON R. SHAW

THE curse of drink is the liquor traffic in its true light, as portrayed in story, incidents, illustrations, pointed paragraphs, poetry and song by more than twenty men and women in various walks and professions in life, read this book and it will make clear to you, as no other book yet written or compiled can do, the economic, political and social ills growing out of the sale and use of intoxicants. It contains many true stories of drink's awful tragedies and gives in brief and pointed paragraphs the pithy utterances of many men and women who have put their lives into the struggle for the overthrow of a giant wrong. The matter in the book is conveniently classified, making it easy to refer to any phase of the subject desired. It is a book that will appeal to all classes of people. A copy of it should find a place in every home.

The size of the book is 6-½x9-¾ inches. It contains 344 pages besides the halftone illustrations and is printed on good paper.

Price per copy, cloth, $1.75; half morocco, $2.50.

Minutes of Annual Meeting from 1778-1909

This volume contains every known minute of the proceedings of the general conferences held by the Church of the Brethren to the Year of our Lord 1909. Many interesting things relative to the problems of church government and decisions upon methods of serving them, somewhere else published, are here recorded. These Minutes also reveal to the reader the firm stand the Brethren maintained through the years in reference to their opposition to war, intemperance, secretism, worldliness, etc. They also show the change and growth of sentiment in relation to the educational, missionary, and Sunday-school movement in the Brotherhood, and how these departments of work have grown. Taken it all in all, it is one of the books which have a right to a place in the library of every Brethren home. This is a $2.50 book, but in order to bring it within the reach of all the price is placed at $1.75, which is just the cost of manufacturing and postage.

NOTES NOT CLASSIFIED

Painter Creek.—Recently our Christian Workers' Society gave a special temperance program, in which several workers discussed the effects of alcohol upon the various organs of the body, as well as upon character, the will power and society. The program had been well learned and a large and appreciative audience was present. We have organized a teacher-training class of about twenty people, using the book, "Training the Teacher," Brethren edition. The greater part of these young people are recent converts. Instead of the usual preaching services on Sunday evening, April 16, Sister Hettie Stouffer of Roann District, was recently removed from the Orient, gave an hour's talk on her thrilling experiences in Moab. Eld. Chas. D. Bonsack, of Union Bridge, Md., is expected to begin a series of meetings here May 11.—Levi Minnich, Greenville, Ohio, April 21.

Licking Creek.—The Middle District Meeting assembled in council April 19 and 20 at the Pleasant Ridge house, with Eld. Asa Hamilton as moderator. Eld. John Rowland, assistant moderator; Bro. Ben E. Otto, writing clerk; Bro. J. C. Gilbert, reading clerk. The meeting was a pleasant and an edifying one. During our meetings two doctrinal sermons were preached, and Bro. Rowland gave us two interesting talks on his travels in the Bible Lands. No papers go to the Annual Meeting from our District. Eld. J. H. Garland will represent us on the Standing Committee.—John E. Otto, Sharpsburg, Md., April 22.

Burlington Route Rates to Annual Meeting.

For the accommodation of those who will attend the conference of 1911 at St. Joseph, the Burlington Route, in addition to its regular train service, has arranged to run three Special Trains—the first Special will leave Aurora at 7:00 a. m., June 2d and arrive St. Joseph at 7:10 p. m. the same day; the second Special will leave Chicago at 6:45 p. m., June 2d and arrive St. Joseph at 7:30 a. m. June 3d; the third Special will leave St. Louis early on the morning of June 3d and arrive St. Joseph during the afternoon.

The following round trip fares have been authorized for this conference, that is:

From Chicago	$18.40
From Peoria	13.50
From St. Louis	13.05

Fares from intermediate points will be two cents per mile for the distance traveled. Tickets at these rates will be sold May 30th to June 5th, inclusive, and will bear return limit of June 30th, permitting stopover at any point en route in either direction within final limit.

The Burlington has issued a very attractive 18-page illustrated folder containing much information which will be of value to anyone who contemplates attending the conference. A copy may be obtained, free of charge, upon application to Mr. B. Hanna, Passenger Traffic Manager, Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, 226 Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

FIGHTING THE TRAFFIC IN YOUNG GIRLS

BY ERNEST A. BELL

DOUBTLESS the reading of this book will be a revelation to many. The fact that young girls have been and are being sold into the slaves for immoral purposes is not as yet generally known. This book has been but recently fully exposed. In this book the facts and horrors of it have been compiled. It tells also of the fight that is being waged against this iniquitous business. Many a young girl who has in times past disappeared never to return became the victim of such a trade it their business to buy and sell innocent girls.

ARE YOU INTERESTED?

If you have boys and girls you want to know about the pitfalls that are set for them and be able to prevent their being entrapped. Everyone who is interested in the welfare of the rising generations should read this book. To be forewarned is to be forearmed. This book of 320 pp. 12 plates contains much helpful advice to fathers, mothers, sons and daughters.

The book contains over 500 pages, also 32 half-tone engravings, and can be had in either cloth binding, $1.50, or half morocco, $2.00.

WE WANT AGENTS EVERYWHERE

to sell this book. It is a ready seller, and we have a special proposition to make to you. Write us for terms. There is money in it for you and great good to be accomplished in behalf of the girls and boys in our country.

AROUND THE WORLD

The Women and the Cigaret.

When, some time ago, the women of Colorado introduced a bill into the Legislature of that State, making it a misdemeanor to buy, sell, give away, or have in one's possession cigarets or cigaret papers, the old-time politicians were inclined to look at the matter as a joke. Now, however, the bill has already passed the lower house and is likely to pass the Senate. The Colorado women are in earnest when it comes to getting rid of a known evil. They hate the cigaret because of its specifically evil effect upon the growing generation of boys, and they are not slow to give a practical turn to their convictions when the opportunity presents itself.

Prohibition in Maine.

For some years Maine, with its far-famed prohibition law, has posed as a shining example of reform legislation of the right sort. That it is, however, a "thorn in the flesh" to the advocates of "personal liberty," is also true, and this accounts for the present attempt of the liquor forces to work for the repeal of the law if, by fair or foul means, this end can be achieved. The temperance workers of the State, however, are by no means idle. Supplemented by the earnest and prayerful efforts of sympathizing friends in various parts of the Union and even in Europe, preparations are being made for a determined struggle to hold the fort and repulse the enemy. The valiant forces feel that in this they are not alone, but that the Lord of Hosts is with them, as he is with every righteous cause.

Mormon Ban on Plural Marriages.

According to a recent statement of President Smith, of the Mormon Church, polygamous relations will be dealt with, hereafter, more rigorously. He asserts that "no man in the church has authority to solemnize plural marriages." It seems to be his belief that polygamous marriages have practically ceased and he claims that the church authorities are doing all in their power to prevent them, though he admits that "it is difficult to trace them." The Salt Lake Tribune, anti-Mormon in its sympathies, pointedly says: "This disclaimer has been repeatedly made in the past, but the evil keeps right on. What is wanted is 'works meet for repentance.' It behooves the Mormon Church, therefore, not only to disclaim such plural marriages, but to punish the offenders, and to do so in such a thorough and public manner as will stamp out this vicious immorality, and extirpate it altogether."

Missionary Progress in Egypt.

For some years the American United Presbyterians have been doing a most commendable work in various parts of Egypt. Though a body of but 100,000 members, they have achieved more far-reaching results in Egypt than any other church except the Roman Catholics. One of their most fruitful endeavors has been the revivifying of the ancient Coptic Church,—a movement that is likely to mean much in the future activities of Christianity in the Land of the Nile. The United Presbyterian mission schools teach both Christians and Moslems, and its graduates are to be found in almost every walk of life,—living exponents of American scholarship and training. The Copts have also established a large, modern school in Alexandria, with 680 pupils, and of its twenty-four teachers ten are graduates of the American mission schools, above referred to. These forces will make themselves strongly felt, ere long, in the ancient land of Egypt.

A $50,000 Bible.

Bibles, nowadays, are cheap, but when it comes to some of the rare, early editions, men are willing to pay almost any price. This accounts for the fact that Henry E. Huntington, of Los Angeles, Cal., recently paid the record price of $50,000 for a "Gutenberg" Bible, supposed to be the first book printed from movable types. It is thought that as early as 1450, or a few years later, this noted edition of the Sacred Volume was completed, a task which, considering the rude implements then available, was a most formidable one. In this connection it is well to remember that the Church of the Brethren can point with justifiable pride to the noble record in Bible publication, achieved by the elder Christopher Sower in the early days of the church in America. Determined that his countrymen should have the benefit of a Bible in their mother tongue, he secured the needed materials at great expense, and issued the Bible from his own publishing house at Germantown, Pa., in 1739. Not until forty years later was it considered advisable to print the first English Bible in America, and even then special legislative provisions safeguarded the publisher's risk. Thus it is seen that the Bible was closely interwoven with the history and progress of the art of printing, up to the present, and, most significantly, it is still "the best seller."

How Sobriety Is Helping the Negro.

One of the most signal instances of real gain by means of the prohibition law is seen in its effects upon the colored people of Atlanta, Ga. It was expected that there would be a noticeable decrease of lawlessness among the negro population pursuant to the closing of the saloons, but hardly any one thought that there would be a saving of $50,000 in fines alone, during a single year, as compared with other years when liquor dens were in full blast. Besides the conservation of this substantial amount, there is the still larger sum, now saved, that was previously spent for liquor. All in all, the turn of events has brought unwonted prosperity to the negroes of Atlanta, and it is manifesting itself in the increasing number of real estate purchases,—in some cases whole blocks are passing into the hands of the colored men. Prohibition is obviously a long stride forward in the solution of the race question, by helping to make the negro a respectable and prosperous citizen.

Why Africans Prefer Islam.

The present activity of Mohammedan zealots in all parts of Africa is making the problem of Christian missionaries extremely difficult. Like humanity everywhere, African natives are prone to follow the line of least resistance, and since the Koran does not interfere with slavery and polygamy, and offers no ideals above the sensual and material, they follow the promptings of carnality, rather than the leading of the Spirit. The native reasons like this: "I believe much of the Christian teaching, but our Mohammed promises as much reward as your Christ, and for far less self-denial and sacrifice. Your Bible requires truthfulness, not so the Koran; and we Africans often find the lie convenient. No; since the two paths lead alike to heaven I choose the easier way." The reasoning of the untutored native reminds one strongly of a like conduct on the part of many Christian peoples of the homeland who would rather consult convenience and carnal indulgence than to yield a faithful and prayerful obedience to all that Christ has commanded.

Is Interest in Missions Declining?

Of the four great missionary societies which have just closed their fiscal year, three end the year with deficits, while the other, with an apparent gain, must credit the larger part of it to legacies. The Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions had receipts of $1,589,000 last year, an advance of 150,000 over 1910, but of this $100,000 was due to legacies. The Presbyterian Board of Home Missions received $1,053,000, a falling off of $55,000. Its expenditures were $1,191,000, so there is a shortage of $138,000. The two Baptist Boards, Home and Foreign, expending approximately $2,000,000, show no increase. The home society ends the year with a shortage of $25,000, while the foreign society is $62,000 in debt. Compared with the unsatisfactory conditions exhibited in the above, our own carefully managed mission interests make a commendable showing. And yet we might all do much more in the great mission fields of the world, both in the sending of well-equipped workers as well as in increased giving to the work of the Lord.

What Will the Harvest Be?

One is really made to wonder if Christian people will ever stop doing foolish things simply to curry favor with the masses. It is stated that a church in the suburbs of Chicago has decided to build a $40,000 annex, with club rooms, a small theater, and other things added,—all to be under the personal management of the pastor. It is planned, by this means, so to extend the usefulness and influence of the church that it will be a social attraction every day of the week. We have heard before of some who would fish in evil and muddy waters, but they did not scorn to use the devil's implements to carry on the Lord's (?) work. Such methods have been tried again and again in time past, but always to the great loss of spiritual life in the church, and a corresponding increase of worldliness. "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness," says Paul, "but rather reprove them." His warning words should be given special emphasis in these days of many highly questionable plans and devices to attract the worldly-minded to the house of the Lord.

Israel's Return to Palestine.

It has long been the dream of the Zionists that the land of their fathers might some day be repeopled by the chosen seed of Abraham, and they spare neither money nor effort to bring about the realization of what they have so long anticipated. In only a few decades the Jewish population of the Holy Land has increased from 20,000 to nearly 100,000 residents, mostly emigrants or children of emigrants from Russia, Roumania, America and other countries. The Palestine Land Development Company is now making it possible for the poorest Jew to secure a sufficient amount of land for a livelihood. Once trodden under foot, persecuted, and hampered in every way by his Ottoman oppressor, the Jew is now entering into his own. Once more, as he treads the hills and dales of the Promised Land, can he dwell in perfect security. Only one thing disturbs his peace of mind,—the followers of Mohammed are still in control of administrative affairs, and even the site of the once glorious temple on Mt. Moriah is covered by a Mohammedan mosque, a silent reminder of Islam's dominion.

When Members Move Away.

One of our exchanges suggests a plan so practical and useful that we feel like passing it on for the benefit of others. In this world of changes, people are continually moving, and the question is how to retain in church fellowship the members who move to other points. In the case of the church alluded to above, the minister at the new home of the departing members is informed as to those who are moving in or near the place where he resides, and he is requested to look after their needs. The plan is an eminently sensible one. By it the church is enabled to keep a close watch upon those who, by faithful efforts, have been won to the faith and who should be developed to the highest degree of usefulness. In our own Fraternity there have been instances, time and again, when members who moved away were practically lost to the church, because no one was informed of their arrival in city or town. A little care and forethought in this matter would go far in preserving the spiritual integrity of the membership, especially those who are, unfortunately, weak in the faith, and easily led astray.

Further Gains for Pres. Taft's Peace Plan.

Political differences of all sorts were forgotten, when April 28, at a great mass meeting in Guildhall, London, resolutions were passed, urging that the treaty of arbitration, proposed by President Taft, be accepted by Great Britain. The British people seem to be enthusiastic to further the interests of universal peace in every possible way, and many deeply regret that the authorities do not as yet, see their way clear to decrease war preparations and naval expenditures. The main significance, however, of the present peace pact, as proposed by President Taft, rests in the absolute assurance that with its adoption all possibility of war between the two great English-speaking nations will be forever removed. Any possible differences will be adjusted by means of equitable methods of arbitration. There will thus be given to the world an object lesson of unquestioned value,—a practical demonstration of the great fact that war is incompatible with the progress and advancement of the twentieth century,—especially so since Christian nations claim to follow the teachings of him who, above all else, is essentially the "Prince of Peace," the embodiment of brotherly love.

Grenfell's Work in Labrador.

When Wilfred Grenfell began his work on the frigid shores of the northern country in 1892, he found a scattered and poverty-stricken population of about 4,000, reinforced, during eight months of the year, by some 30,000 fishermen from Newfoundland. Dr. Grenfell soon saw that the people were not only without medical aid, but on the verge of destitution, exploited as they were, by unscrupulous traders. They had no religious privileges and were inexperienced in worldly affairs. At once he provided for their spiritual needs and their bodily ills. Cooperative stores freed them from the tyranny of the traders. To employ more than the entire native population, Dr. Grenfell started several industrial enterprises which now substantially add to the meager resources of the people. A number of small hospitals have also been built. Nowhere, perhaps, is there a more interesting achievement in real help to a people, than the one made possible by Dr. Grenfell. This greatest achievement, however, is found in the fact that he has put the people in the way of self-help in mental, moral and industrial progress. That is the key-note of real and permanent advancement.

ESSAYS

Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth

Let it Pass.

Has it been a weary day?
Let it pass;
Lots of others on the way—
They will pass.

Soon the skies will start to lighten,
All around begin to brighten—
And misfortune cease to frighten—
Let it pass.

Does the world the wrong way rub you?
Let it pass.
Did your best friend seem to snub you?
Let it pass.

Chances are you were mistaken,
None are ever quite forsaken,
All for naught your faith was shaken—
Let it pass.

Some Sunday-School Ideals.

BY ADALINE HOHF BEERY.

An ideal is something not merely to admire, in a dignified way, but to hustle after. A Sunday-school without ideals is on the toboggan to disgrace and oblivion. There must be ideal working parts, "fitly joined together," to make the ideal machine—a successful Sunday-school. Do you know what success is? It's "getting there." Getting where? On the upper levels of happiness, usefulness and holiness. Oil the cogs of the Sunday-school,—all its departments,—get up steam in the teachers' meetings, spread the coal evenly over the fire, and bring the whole school to a boil. Then it will not be long until you get talked about in the papers. "What's going on in that little church every Sunday?"

This brings me to my first ideal,—the one every open-eyed business man thinks of first,—advertise. Announce the sessions of the school in the paper every week, but not in such cut-and-dried fashion as this: "Sunday-school at 9:30 A. M. Everybody invited." Try to say something new and different every time, something that will bring the people in to find out what's doing. Then have something doing. When the superintendent says, in a perfunctory monotone, "Preaching at 10: 30; Sunday-school next Sunday at the usual hour; all come back again; we are dismissed," I am generally looking out of the window or at somebody's bonnet. I will not give a sample announcement, for fear you will copy it, but every superintendent with brains—and you do not want one without any—ought to make it a point to think up something fresh to say every Sunday.

The second ideal is punctuality. If the hour set is 9: 15, do not begin at 9: 16. It seems to me that in religious matters especially we have such a slovenly fashion of conducting business. If we are at our post of duty at 7 o'clock, in our own interests or the interests of our employer, what do you suppose the Lord thinks of the way we keep our appointments with him? Be not only punctual to begin, but punctual to stop. Many a good impression has been spoiled by talking too long. Never let the pupils' eyes get off your face onto the clock's face. It isn't a complimentary comparison. And let all officers and teachers work by the same inflexible rule—so that, though there are "wheels within a wheel," there shall be no noise or friction.

This brings me to my third ideal,—quietness and reverence. I feel very strongly on this point. Of course little children are lively and restless, but they can be taught that the atmosphere of God's house is holy, and must not be disturbed by rude and boisterous behavior. When it comes to half-grown youngsters, it seems to me almost unpardonable that they should be allowed to whisper, snicker, nudge elbows, slide around in the seat, and twist their necks to stare at every newcomer. I could almost wish for a little more Puritanism in these latter days. "This is the day of the child," is the popular cry of the educators now. The children are in front, and I might add, often they are on top. This may account for much of the irreverence in the holy place. A little more strict teaching in the home and the Sunday-school, on this vital point, would have a salutary influence.

My fourth ideal is, religious music. You may wonder what I mean. Much of the claptrap, lickety-split jingle, sung in some Sunday-schools, is a disgrace to the name music. It is a mistaken notion that the rhymes must go "on a tear" to make them interesting to children. A jolly song is all right in its place,—on the playground or at a party,—but I feel that God ought to be worshiped in a more stately and reverential manner. Where are the sacred old tunes that our fathers lived on? Teach them to the children, and they will learn and love them just as easily as the "hippety-hop" kind. And then I think sacred words should not be adapted to secular tunes. You can not rid yourself of the former association, and it interferes with devout praise. There are some in our Hymnal which I never like to sing for that reason.

The fifth ideal is, organization. I spoke of "wheels within a wheel." Besides the main body, the school, there should be sub-organizations of each of the classes above the primary. Choose a president, secretary and treasurer, and let these officers perform their duties in an exact and faithful manner. Let there be "look-out committees" to drum up delinquents, and social committees to arrange for pleasant evenings together. The closer we get together, the better we will understand each other, and the better we will work in harness. Let all business, such as disposing of funds, plans for enlargement and improvement, be attended to at these social-meetings. Do not have them too often, and amid all the neighborhood pleasantries and dainty refreshments, let the "King's business" be uppermost. Let it not happen that we are more anxious to be at these little parties than we are to be in our class every Sunday. If we do not find something delectable for our souls in the Word of God, we shall indeed be a lean set.

A sixth ideal is, learning the Scriptures. Do you think this is a superfluous recommendation? But how many Sunday-school scholars, for or little, can recite a single whole chapter from the Bible without tripping? I feel sorry that the old-fashioned custom of "learning verses" has grown almost obsolete. I know of no valid objection to the practice, but many things in its favor. You may say it is useless for children to commit verses, parrot-like, without understanding their meaning. But we all know that what is learned in childhood sticks, and though, in afteryears, some may drift far away from decency, yet the Scripture texts will flash out at unexpected times, and often bring about a wanderer's home-coming. And among the grown-ups, it ought to be a disgrace not to be familiar with the most popular book in the world, the "best seller," and the finest literature in the world. I do not mean to know about the Bible,—how many sections it contains, how many chapters, which is the longest, which is the middle, etc. That is mere arithmetical pastime. But I do insist that we ought to know the very words of God. And I have little excuse for the person who mangles the Holy Scriptures by miscalling and twisting the simplest words,—saying "and" for "the," "is" for "to," "can" for "may," etc. Some words are dropped, and others put in. If the verses were read over often enough to commit them, the sense would become apparent, and this difficulty would largely disappear. If a pupil were to stand before the assembled Sunday-school and recite one of the dramatic scenes from the historical chapters of the Old Testament, with as much expression as is put into a declamation for a literary society, it would be intensely interesting.

A seventh ideal is, a teachers' supply class. "Miss Blank, will you take charge of the class in the corner today? I see the teacher is absent, and he didn't send me any word." "O, I'm not prepared; please excuse me." "Mr. Blank, will you take it?" "O, I don't think I could manage it; please excuse me." "Mrs. Blank, will you?" "O, I'd rather not leave my own class; please excuse me." Did you ever have such an experience? I have seen the application of an excellent remedy, and its happy results. Let all those who are not teachers, but have the stuff in them of which teachers are made, be gathered into a class, with a competent instructor, and recite the lessons one week ahead. Then, some unlucky morning, when the superintendent finds an unexpected gap in his ranks, he simply walks over to the supply class, asks for a teacher, and gets one, with the lesson already prepared. Put your promising material into this class, and show them the dignity of the office to which they may be called any Sunday. Select the ones best adapted to the class to be taught, and let each be given as much experience as possible. The "reserve class," interested and consecrated, should be one of the mainstays of the school.

Incidentally, I think a beautiful and appropriate way of beginning the study of the lesson in every class is to breathe a little audible prayer, straight up, for the Holy Ghost. A dozen words will do. It is conducive to reverence and an humble, teachable spirit.

These are some ideals, but not all. But if these are followed after, with courage and an open mind, others will appear above the horizon, and beckon you, and lift you, and you will grow broader, and your school will grow broader, in numbers, efficiency, and results. Give every one something specific to do, which is the key to interest and enthusiasm. Christian, make regular attendance at Sunday-school a part of your religious curriculum, and then we shall have the inspiring spectacle of the whole church sitting at the feet of Jesus, to learn.

The District Meeting of Northwestern Ohio.

BY GALEN B. ROYER.

The Silver Creek congregation, in which this meeting was held, is in Williams County, in the extreme northwestern part of the District, and has a membership of about 140 members. The meeting was held in the commodious country house, about two miles from Pioneer. A traction line from Toledo passes the church property, with a station at the front of the church. The congregation knows how to entertain a District Meeting, and make visiting members comfortable and at home, even during a rainy season like last week. A splendid representation of the District was in attendance, not only of delegates but of others interested.

The District Meeting proper was held April 21, but the spiritual feast began on Wednesday evening by a missionary address on "Saved to Save." Thursday morning, at eight, the elders convened in the home of Bro. M. D. Throne, and were in session during the entire forenoon and part of the afternoon. However they adjourned to attend the Missionary Meeting in the afternoon. The consideration of ordinations and other duties that rightly fall under their supervision showed clearly that they had warm and sympathetic hearts, as well as a good survey of the labor entrusted to them. While due care is exercised, there was a spirit of reaching out, most commendable.

Thursday forenoon, at ten, another Missionary Meeting was held, when the subject "Why Evangelize the World?" was discussed. In the afternoon, at one o'clock, the annual missionary organization was effected by appointing Bro. D. G. Berkebile, Moderator, and B. F. Snyder, Clerk. The District Mission Board made its report to this meeting, and the meeting by motion passed the report on to the District Meeting, the following day. All matters of a missionary nature were discussed, and the sentiment of the meeting on each subject was passed on to the District Meeting. At the close of these deliberations there was an address on "Our Volunteer Movement and its Aim." In the evening, the song service was followed by an Educational Meeting, at which Bro. B. F. Snyder, trustee of Manchester College in the District, and Bro. Geo. L. Studebaker, one of the directors of the College from North Manchester, presented the progress, problems and needs of the College in a very interesting way. This was followed by another missionary address on "Six Bible Facts Concerning the Heathen." A deep impression was made on the minds and hearts of the audience as, all day long, they considered the needs and opportunities of the congregation, the District, and the wide world, and at the close of the evening service an offering of over $100 was laid on the altar towards supporting Brother and Sister Berkebile, which support the District has been bearing ever since these dear ones went to India, some years ago.

Friday morning, at 8 o'clock, the District Meeting convened. Bro. G. A. Snider was chosen Moderator; Bro. D. G. Berkebile, Reading Clerk, and Bro. Edward Kintner, assisted by Bro. E. P. Yoder, Writing Clerk.

The first business considered, after the roll call, was the report of the District Mission Board, through its secretary, Bro. J. I. Kaylor. This was quite complete, not only as to stations supported, and to what extent, but it also stated how much each congregation gave, and named the ones giving nothing. Some interesting comparisons were drawn, which again showed how the wide-awake, in every District, are doing the work and getting the blessing of growth and interest in return. The most serious phase of the report was the statement that from four congregations, within the last year, the minister had moved and left the members without a preacher, and it was stated that these ministers moved into congregations where their services were not needed. Unless some minister moves into these congregations, it means disorganization in a short while.

Reports of the Old People's Home and the District Annual Meeting Treasurer were considered. Manchester College, through Bro. B. F. Snyder, made a splendid report. The year has been good and the outlook is bright. A movement is on foot to raise a much-needed endowment.

The election of District officers for the ensuing year was done by ballot on the plurality basis and resulted as follows: Bro. Noah Long reelected on District Mission Board; Brethren J. B. Bashor and B. F. Snyder reelected as Trustees of Old People's Home; Auditors, Brethren J. I. Lindower and C. S. Lahman; District Treasurer, Bro. Dukes; Sunday-school Secretary, Sister Mary L. Cook; Foreign Missionary Treasurer, Bro. D. N. Shubert; Sunday-school Normal Treasurer, Bro. I. W. Byerly. Bro. B. F. Snyder, of Bellefontaine, Ohio, is to represent the District on Standing Committee at St. Joseph, Mo.

A number of queries, pertaining to District work, were considered and disposed of in good order. Indeed, the spirit of the meeting was one of joy, peace and gladness, and while some questions involved finance,—and that nearly always put some people's teeth on edge,—these were considered in the best of spirit. "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for Brethren to dwell together in unity!" And the District Meeting of 1911 has gone upon record in the minds of all those who attended it as a spiritual blessing and a step forward in the advancement of the kingdom in the hearts of men.

Going Up to Jerusalem.

Siege and Looting of Kerak.—No. 10.

FOR the glory of God it was far better that we nine Americans did not know what was occurring at that midnight hour, when our destruction was being planned; otherwise there might have been some action taken to which we, in a measure at least, could have attributed our escape, but as it was we knew full well from whence our salvation came.

In this camp everything was stolen within their reach. The Arabs would creep along on the ground, outside of the tent, and, by reaching underneath it, extract not a few of our belongings. We found the Arab women, as well as the men, adepts in this sort of thing.

Very glad were we when the morning light dawned and we were up. Then, after a scanty breakfast, we were on the way. Our way led due west, across the mud flats at the south end of the Dead Sea. Once over these, we turned north for some hours, following the shore, before we went into the hills. Swalim, who acted as our leader this morning, insisted on going south and, when asked why he went that way, said it was much nearer. We protested because, though having been given no barley for the animals, we had yet three days' ride before us. His answer was that he knew of barley pits in the wilderness, where we could help ourselves to all we needed. Notwithstanding, Mr. Forder protested again and again. Bearing off to the west as much as he could, Swalim was thrown out of the course which he desired to take. We were now passing through groves of stunted timber of some sort, resembling a thorn tree. After an hour or more on the way, we came into an opening, where some plowing and sowing had been done, and, after crossing a number of these small fields, noticed two black tents to our right, about half a mile in the distance, and a man plowing half way between us and the tents.

At this blessed moment, there came a man riding from the tents at full speed, and as soon as he was within hearing distance, he called to Swalim, "Where is that letter, and where are you taking these people? Don't you know, that they belong to us?" Swalim denied having a letter, and before we knew what was happening, there came, riding and running, not less than fifty Arabs, armed with clubs and guns. At once our guide passed the word along to us that we had been recaptured by the tribe to whom we were originally consigned. Despite all the protests which Swalim and his villains could put up, he, with us, was taken to the camp of this friendly tribe, some five minutes distant, yet so completely hidden away in the trees and brush that we were in it before we knew there was a camp near us.

The warm reception given us here, the friendliness manifested, and the assurance that we were as safe among them, as though we were in Jerusalem, caused us to rejoice greatly. We were given a very large tent, which had just been set up on a grassy plot, and our horses were staked where they could eat grass. Almost immediately a lamb was brought in to make a feast for us. This was courteously declined. Next a council was held. There were three Sheikhs at the head of this friendly tribe, and they, with Swalim, the robber and would-be murderer, sat in front of our tent on the ground, together with a number of other prominent men of the tribe. Around and back of these, were perhaps one hundred and twenty-five Arabs standing and sitting.

The first thing which occurred was a demand made on the robber Sheikh for the letter, which he again denied having, but when the pressure became too great, he reached into his shirt, drew out the letter and handed it to the Chief Sheikh who, in turn, passed it on to a man near by, who could read Arabic. The letter was then read in the hearing of all present. Then questions were asked, as to how we came into the hands of this band of Arabs. The facts of this they already knew, for the man and the two women, before referred to, as having left us on Friday, went on to this friendly camp and reported that we had been captured by the Atownies, and also referred to the letter. Our report thus verified the news they had already received the evening before.

At this time our guide took occasion to denounce Swalim and his band of robbers in such a pronounced way that the Arabs standing around actually hissed at the villain. The next thing to be considered was our getting on into safe territory. The Arabs were to have a big feast on Monday, and this seemed to interfere with our going away at once, for the men whom they would have to send with us would want to attend this feast, and they thought they would not be able to return in time for it. Then, again, we had been robbed of all our money, and when they learned of this, they seemed a little slow to offer assistance. Swalim was profuse in making all sorts of offers. He said he would take us over, and bring back a letter to the effect, that we had been delivered to the friendly tribes near Hebron. This was declined, after which he offered to furnish half the men of our escort, and the friendly camp would furnish the other half. He was informed that we would sit there a month, before we would move on with him. Finally, after nearly the entire forenoon was spent in conference, Swalim left with the understanding that we were to remain until Tuesday morning.

We were quite ready for the splendid dinner which our ladies had prepared for us at an early hour, for there had been some forced fasting done, as the strenuous life, we had been leading for some days, had quite taken much of our appetite.

During the afternoon many little side conferences were held with the Sheikhs, and towards evening we hit upon a plan, which seemed to meet the approval of the Arabs, as far as remuneration for an armed escort, strong enough safely to put us into the hills of Hebron was concerned, and this was all we asked for now. The afternoon wore away and all was quiet, except for the many visitors we constantly had around our quarters. We had a quiet little supper, and as soon as darkness came, Mr. Forder suggested we had better try and get a little sleep as early as possible. This signified a great deal, for it meant that, more than likely, we would not have all the night to sleep in. I believe all had enjoyed their first nap when a quiet little call came a little before ten o'clock, "Get up, for we will be off at once.

At exactly ten we were in the saddle, with our luggage on the pack animals. With us were fourteen of the tribe's best armed horsemen and three footmen. One of the younger Sheikhs led the party, and single file, through the bushes and brush, we followed the Sheikh towards the new moon, not over an hour high in the West. We soon left the cover of the brush, and moved out on the mud flats, across which our course led. In crossing these flats, there were some very boggy places to pass over, and in one of these places, a great, husky muleteer attempted to ride a donkey, which had already been heavily loaded with food for the animals. There was only one thing which could happen in such a case,—the donkey that rode and the one being ridden both sank into the mud.

Covetousness.

BY J. G. STINEBAUGH.

THIS is one of the oldest sins to which humanity has been addicted, and one which was often warned against by both Moses and the prophets, and yet was so prominent in Jesus' time that he also warned his followers to take heed and beware of covetousness (Luke 12: 15).

Now, covetousness is a wrong or unlawful desire for that which belongs to another. Men and women, as social beings, must, of necessity, give and receive from one another and, of course, have desires for those things which they have not, but which another has. But it depends upon the nature of this desire, as to whether it is right or wrong.

If we are willing to make an exchange to the satisfaction of the other party, and proceed in a legitimate manner, according to the Divine law, designated as the Golden Rule, it is right. But if we resort to trickery, deception, or dishonesty, in order to gain our desire, it is wrong,—we are covetous; it is a SIN.

This is one of the sins in which people have always taken great risks, and tempted God, and the Bible is filled with examples and the consequences.

Eve coveted the forbidden fruit and the knowledge therewith to be gained. She got them, but lost Paradise.

Achan coveted gold and a Babylonish garment, and got them, but caused the defeat of Israel's army, lost his life and property, and brought about the death of his kindred.

Eli's sons coveted part of the sacrificial offerings and got them, but lost the priesthood, and caused sorrow to their father.

Saul coveted the praise of the people and the spoil taken from the Amalekites, and got them, but lost his kingdom.

David coveted his neighbor's wife and got her, but suffered bitter remorse and humiliation.

Ahab coveted a neighbor's vineyard for a pleasure garden and got it, but lost his kingdom.

Judas coveted silver and was willing to sell his Savior to get it. When he had it he was not satisfied, but cast it down in the temple, before the priests and elders, and went and hanged himself.

Brethren and sisters, what are we doing today, in the face of all these witnesses, with the same God to deal with, and with the same warning from the Blessed Master? Are we guiltless? I fear not. If guilty, how shall we cleanse ourselves from this besetting sin? Simply by conforming ourselves to the Divine law.

The ideal in possessions, as Solomon says in Prov. 30: 8, is "neither poverty nor wealth, but food such as is convenient for me." Paul, in 1 Tim. 6: 8, says, "Having food and raiment, let us be therewith content." Jesus says in John 10: 10, "I am come that ye might have life and that ye might have it more abundantly." But he further says that "a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." "Take heed and beware of covetousness." "Lay not up for yourselves treasures on earth but in heaven."

Now, it is not wrong to possess earthly things, nor to labor to secure them, but let us (1) examine our purpose in desiring them; (2) the method of obtaining them; (3) the use of them.

If our purpose in obtaining is for the support of ourselves and our families, and that we may have to give to the poor and needy, and the support of the church, and we are working according to this motto, that, "whatsoever we do in word or deed is done to the honor and glory of God," we are "seeking first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and these things will be added unto us." This will cause us, first of all, to engage in a legitimate business,—that which is characterized by honesty, industry, and meets with general approval. Then we should pursue that business industriously and uprightly, recognizing the Lord as our partner. Thus we bar all covetousness, deception, trickery, sharp bargaining, speculation and dishonesty, and we have the promise of plenty. The Psalmist says, "Once I was young but now I am old, yet have I never seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread."

"Lord, create within us clean hearts and renew a right spirit within us," that we may make thee our Shepherd, and put our trust fully in thee.

In Chinese Homes.

BY EMMA HORNING.

Several months ago a woman near our chapel sprained her wrist very badly. She plastered on all kinds of their healing balms but it constantly grew worse. Then one of her friends invited us to come and see what we could do for her. She was, indeed, in a bad condition and some of us have gone every day since, to dress the wrist. We have, therefore, become somewhat acquainted with their home life.

We would scarcely call their residence a home according to our American ideas, but yet 400,000,000 of the world's population all live in much the same way and still exist. Their everyday food is made in one kettle,—all together,—just the substantials of life. No table is spread except at feasts. Each person has a bowl and a pair of chopsticks and eats his food at any place his fancy chooses, often on the front doorstep where he can see all the passers. See what a saving of work,—no table linen to wash, and few dishes to keep clean. Usually they have but a couple rooms to keep clean. These have no carpets. The floor being brick, all they need is a sprinkle of water and a little brushing with the broom, which never has a handle. The bedding is so simple that they just give it a roll and it is disposed of at the back of the kong. The sewing is all done by hand and if they have many children it takes some time to make their clothing.

Their work is so simple, in general, that they usually have plenty of spare time, and how do you suppose it is spent? These women are we went,—and they were counted very respectable people,—spent their time, playing cards, gambling, smoking tobacco, opium and cigarets; also attending theatrical performances at the temples.

Several times when we came they were playing with their cash about them. We asked one woman how much she had lost that day and laughing she said, "Only five cash." This same old woman is a heavy user of opium and wishes to break away from the habit. We hope to take her in our home for a month and teach her the Gospel during that time so she can teach others the "better way."

Often, as one of the first things, the people want to show us their hospitality. They want us to drink some tea and have a smoke. But they soon learn to know our principles. One old lady at first smoked during services, very much to our discomfort, but that soon ceased. She still continues to come every Sunday.

Girls from the time they are fourteen till thirty or forty years of age are seldom allowed outside the door, but after that they are quite free to move about the streets, and those are the only ones that can come to services. These also are the ones who attend the theatricals at the temples, of which there are a good many here and they all seem to have the "craze" to go. While there is one going on, everybody you meet on the street asks, "Have you been to the play?" The plays are much the same and they have seen them perhaps hundreds of times. It is the only place they have of meeting together, so, perhaps, they go more to see each other than for anything else. The plays and offerings are to please the gods, but the people only look on.

We can truly say, "Their prayers are vain repetitions. They worship not God but demons. They are blind and in the power of Satan. They have no hope and are without God."

Who needs the Gospel worse than these poor lost women, and yet they do not know they are lost. All they are seeking is pleasure and an exceedingly small amount of that do they find. We must not only show the way of salvation but must open their eyes to the fact that they are lost.

We use pictures a great deal to attract their attention to the Gospel. Then we are able to tell the "Sweet Old Story." Thus every home we enter, and each woman who comes to see us, gets some part of the Gospel. Pray that the seed sown may spring up and bear fruit, so that the dark hearts of these millions of women may be opened to the Light.

Recently thirteen of the women and children from this court came to services, for which we praise the Lord.

The Passing of Eld. Geo. D. Zollers.

BY A. H. RITTENHOUSE.

The passing of Elder George DeHaven Zollers has removed from the Church of the Brethren a most loyal and willing worker, who gave freely of his time and talents to the cause he loved so well. He came to the writer's home in Pennsylvania more than a score of years ago, and the impressions of kindness and gentleness he made on my youthful mind grew, with the passing of the years, into a pronounced regard and respect for his uniform Christian character. His life was practically given to the service of the church, and his best monument is the one he has erected in the minds and hearts of his many brethren and sisters.

Left fatherless at the tender age of four years, Bro. Zollers was matriculated into the school of hardship and adversity. His early years of struggle, followed by the army and nautical careers of his young manhood, are familiar to the majority of the Messenger readers. It was while on a whaling cruise in the Pacific Ocean, in the midst of an ungodly crew, and the most unfavorable environment, that the Holy Spirit touched his life, and quickened him to a sense of a Savior's love and care. With this experience came a feeling of responsibility for the salvation of his shipmates. Although an open confession meant ridicule and even personal danger, he did not shrink from the path of duty. His humble efforts, put forth in weakness and apparent futility, bore fruit in the conversion of one of his shipmates, George H. Wallace. The reunion of these two men, after forty years, reads like a romance. This evidence of good wrought by his humble efforts on the rolling deep, though kept from him for nearly half a century, brought joy to Bro. Zollers' later years.

After his return from his ocean voyage, Bro. Zollers united with the Church of the Brethren in Eastern Pennsylvania. In May, 1867, he came to Mount Carroll, Illinois, and handed his letter of membership to the church at Hickory Grove. In January, 1869, he was united in marriage to Sarah M. Rittenhouse, of Montgomery County, Pa. March 6, of the same year, he was elected to the ministry by the Hickory Grove congregation, serving under the direction of Elder David Rittenhouse, and later under Elder Michael Sisler. He was advanced to the second degree of the ministry, and later to the eldership of the Hickory Grove congregation.

He passed twenty-six years of his ministry in the Hickory Grove congregation, and gave his services to the church without money and without price. He supported his family by working at the trade of plastering, and there are many houses in Northern Illinois and Indiana that were plastered by him and his sons. Bro. Zollers traveled considerable distances to work at his trade, and it was a common experience with him to work hard all day and then preach in the evening. At the close of the week's secular work at some distant point, he would walk home to preach on Sunday to his home congregation and then walk back on Monday morning and again take up his daily occupation.

The necessity of earning his living, increased by the rearing of a growing family, prevented any extensive book study or prolonged preparation in his ministerial work. However, his wide experience in travel gave him a practical knowledge of humanity, and being gifted with natural facility in language, he was able to preach the Word acceptably. Oftentimes, during the noontime lunch hour, while at his trade of plastering, a thought or text would come to him and he would take a shingle and write it down. In later years he often referred to his improvised "note-books."

It was while located at Hickory Grove that Christian Hope, in his search after truth, was introduced into the home of Bro. Zollers. The admission of Bro. Hope into the church at Hickory Grove, and the starting of the Danish Mission,—the first foreign missionary work of the Church of the Brethren,—were events that were ever cherished by Bro. Zollers.

In 1895 Bro. Zollers removed with his family to South Bend, Ind., to take charge of the Portage congregation, located near the city, then a mission point of the District. Later a church building was erected near his home on North Cushing Street, called the Second Church of the Brethren of South Bend. Bro. Zollers built the foundation walls of this church with his own hands, contributing his time and labor. In this congregation he passed the rest of his life, spending considerable of his time in the field, holding series of meetings. It was his custom to open his meetings with several marine lectures, which would awaken interest to the message of salvation. In his ministerial work he drew largely from his army and seafaring experiences to illustrate the Christian warfare.

Bro. Zollers served three times on Standing Committee and was a member of the school visiting committee to Mount Morris College for a number of years, when he resided in Illinois. He served often as delegate to Annual Meeting, usually paying his own expenses. He never sought public honor, being of a retiring disposition. Especially of late years, he desired to be relieved of detail work that he could be free to pass his declining days visiting among the churches and doing good to his many old-time friends and acquaintances. It was his wish that he might die in armor.

Bro. Zollers wrote considerably. His book "Thrilling Incidents on Sea and Land," enjoyed a wide circulation for a volume of its kind. Another volume, "Poetical Musings on Sea and Land," was brought out recently. The two volumes were combined in the last edition and but few copies remain for sale. He also contributed many selections of prose and verse to the Gospel Messenger and other papers. He had a natural gift of language, and education would have made him a power with his pen. His last sermon was preached on Sunday morning, April 16, Easter morning, and his text was, "I am the resurrection and the life."

Bro. Zollers' life was marked by several well-defined traits of character. First, his deep conviction and sincerity. His life rang true to his convictions. His religious experiences were genuine, and although cautious in accepting new truth, once convinced that he was on the right course, he followed it without wavering. His own words follow, taken from page 337 of "Thrilling Incidents on Sea and Land": "Truth has made me what I am, and my willingness to conform to its purging influence and not a mere external preference to the denomination with which I am identified, for other sects with which I came in contact, in my checkered life, had more opportunities to mould my sentiments and arrest the decision of my mind than the sect to which I belong. It was truth, however, that I endeavored to reach in my humble researches, rather than sectarianism, and my lonely and retired investigations of the Bible have led me into the body with which I am connected, and my choice, as yet, has known no regrets." These words were penned nearly twenty years ago, and his love for the church of his choice grew warmer with the passing of the years. He was a veritable landmark for many weaker ones, for his preaching and his life were in harmony.

Second, his optimism. While his early life knew sorrow and hardship, instead of being embittered, he saw the Divine purpose and his faith gave him buoyancy of spirit. It was this quality that ever made him a welcome visitor in countless homes throughout the Brotherhood. Coupled with his optimism was a sense of humor that was contagious to all associated with him. His wit was keen and original, but never harmful. He thoroughly enjoyed the telling of some personal experiences to illustrate a point. He enjoyed the company of young and old, and delighted in seeing young converts come to the church and take hold of the work.

Third, his sympathy and friendship. Having passed through periods of storm and stress, he was able to understand affliction in the lives of others. He was a welcome visitor to the sick room, to the prison, the asylum, old people's, orphans' and soldiers' homes. While he was lying in death, a letter came, asking him to attend the coming love feast at his old congregation of Hickory Grove, Illinois, and later conduct a series of meetings at the same place. Another letter came from a friend of years with a request to visit him in his home for a period of social enjoyment. Bro. Zollers was a tower of strength in this quiet and sympathetic work and his departure will be sadly mourned by many who found in him a wise and loving friend.

Bro. Zollers lived to see his three sons and three daughters grow to maturity and unite with the Church of the Brethren. The children are: Mrs. Lizzie Grater, South Bend, Ind.; Mrs. Naomi Shaw, Des Moines, Iowa; Marie, residing at home; John, of Racine, Wis.; Reuben, of LaPorte, Ind.; and George, of Decatur, Ill. The death of the father is the first to break the family circle. In passing, a word of tribute is due the widow, who, with her husband, made many sacrifices in the church work. Only those acquainted with the facts can know the economies that were necessary in the household of a minister who labored without compensation,—sometimes not even being assured of expenses.

The manner of Bro. Zollers' death was tragic, and the facts have been related in these columns. His sufferings were brief, however, only thirty minutes elapsing until he was at rest. In his casket he looked as though he had fallen into a refreshing sleep. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder Frank Kreider on Saturday, April 22, at 2 P. M., from the text, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." Elder Lemuel Hillery followed with some reminiscences of his travels with Bro. Zollers in their early ministerial labors, and no one who was present will forget the tribute paid to the memory of Bro. Zollers by his old-time companion in the ministry, Elder H. W. Krieghbaum concluded with a few brief remarks. Not more than half of the many friends who gathered from South Bend and nearby points, could get into the church building. The body was laid to rest in the Riverview Cemetery, on the outskirts of South Bend.

Our Educational Meeting at Annual Meeting.

BY S. N. M'CANN.

THIS gathering should be one of the best and most interesting meetings at our Conference. It should be the one meeting where sitting room would be at a premium.

Our schools are largely the property of the church. They are under the general supervision of the church, and should come with a message full of interest for the church.

The men who speak are, as a rule, among the best qualified men in the church. They are the men whom we should be anxious to hear because they are the men who have our boys and girls in training. They are the men who are moulding the lives of our future ministers and workers for the church.

This meeting should be well attended, because the school question is one of the live questions of this day and age, not only with us, but with all intelligent people. These meetings should be well attended because our schoolmen are among our most self-sacrificing men in the church. They, as a rule, work for a bare living, with no privileges of laying by as those in other callings do. There is not a well-qualified man in our schools but what is working at a great sacrifice financially. There is not one but what could do better, in dollars and cents, elsewhere. Their sacrifice calls for a respectful hearing at our Annual Conference Educational Session. They demand a hearing because of the careful preparation of the work they are called upon to give at our Conference. We have no more carefully-prepared work than is given by our educators.

It strikes intelligent observers strange to find surging crowds, not able to find room in our tabernacles at Annual Meeting, until the Educational Meeting is called, when a full tabernacle is scarcely ever in evidence. This was especially noticeable at a number of our recent Conferences.

The Educational Meeting, as heretofore arranged, comes at an unfortunate hour, when every one is tired. [This has now been corrected by putting the meeting at 8 o'clock on Monday morning, as per program in last MESSENGER.—Ed.] Our brethren who represent such an important work as the school work should be heard.

It looks wrong for us to show indifference here. It is discouraging to those who are sacrificing so much for the cause they represent.

May we take note and give our brethren who speak in the Educational Meeting a respectful hearing. It is impossible to interest us if we give these brethren no hearing. It is certainly worth our while to hear.

How to Solve the Ministerial Problem.

BY PAUL MOHLER.

I HAVE seen some splendid articles in recent numbers of the MESSENGER, dealing with this vital subject. I am glad for the boldness with which it is discussed. Some articles point out clearly, and urge powerfully, the duty of the minister; others of the laity. I am thankful for these articles, and I hope there will be more and more of them until both laity and ministry will catch fire and burn in their zeal for the cause of Christ.

But something more than good articles is needed. The Brethren are a very practical people; they can not be talked into every new thing that comes along, so that, even when you recommend something that is very much needed in the church, you must do more than talk,—you must show a sample of what it will do. It is of but little use for a minister to say that the church should support pastors unless he himself is willing to serve the church as a pastor; and yet some of the strongest articles in favor of pastoral work are written by men that are not willing to serve as pastors. If ministers really want to help to solve this problem, let them come forward and offer themselves for service, and be willing to make the sacrifice that the true and faithful pastor must surely make. I say again, Don't say that pastors are needed,—and, above all, do not abuse the church for not using them, —unless you yourself are willing to give up your well-paid employment, or your profitable farming operations and take up pastoral work for the Lord and his church.

But perhaps you are a laymember that wants better ministerial service. You, too, must do more than talk. If you want a minister to leave a good position and give all his time to the ministry, you must show him that you, too, are interested in the church and willing to make a sacrifice of both time and money for the cause. If some of the Brethren are slow about doing their share, you must do the more. Perhaps the thing they need to be shown is that a man can do much for the Lord without losing either his faith or his joy in the Lord. It may be that the Lord wishes to prove to them, through you, that a man can do much for him without being any poorer thereby.

Then, if you are blessed with a good pastor, help him to succeed by responding to his teaching. Don't be satisfied with praising his sermons, put them into practice,—live them out. When your brethren see that the pastor has made a better man of you, they will know that he is doing some good without your telling them.

If, however, you are one of those who object to the proposed changes in our ministerial system; if you think the old system is the best, you, too, must do more than talk. If you are a volunteer minister and object to employing a pastor, it is up to you to show that your church does not need one. You must so manage as to keep your congregation up to the gospel standard of spiritual life and activity. If you are a laymember, you must at least live so that all can see that you do not need a pastor's care, and do so much of the work of the church that, if all were like you, a pastor would not be necessary even for enlarging the work of the church.

Let me say again that if you are a minister of is too busy to look after and to push the work of the church, your objection to the pastorate doesn't count. Your life is the best argument for getting a live man into the leadership of your church. If you are a laymember who does not get out to church, and will not do his part of the work of the church, your objection doesn't count; your life proves that something is needed in your congregation to wake up the sleepy churchmembers. You prove that you yourself need a pastor to look after you and follow you up to keep you from falling entirely out of touch with the Lord and his church. If you have failed, so far, to support the minister that have served you without charge, your objection to the "salaried minister" does not count, for you have proved that you can not be depended on to do your part unless you are forced to do it by a contract.

Once more let me plead with our strong and able ministers. Don't compel the churches that now are calling for pastors, to take the men of small ability, who cannot do the work as you know it should be done. This is a time of great developments. Should not our strong men show us the way? Should not our strongest, ablest men make the greatest sacrifices? If not, why not?

GREENSBURG MISSION, PA.

In November, 1908, two brethren who were living here began work for the Master, by calling in some of the ministers of nearby congregations to preach for them. Services were held in the Union Mission Chapel every two weeks, whenever a minister could be secured.

With much self-sacrifice and earnestness on the part of the laborers, the work prospered, until, when they left the Union Mission, in the fall of 1910, having built a small chapel of their own, they had a membership of thirty. A Sunday-school was then organized. At the time of its organization, November, 1910, the school had a total enrollment of twenty. At the date of this writing the total enrollment is sixty-seven.

Jan. 1 the writer was called to take charge of the Greensburg Mission as pastor. He did not locate at once, but preached morning and evening of each Lord's Day until April 1, when he located at Greensburg and entered fully upon his work as pastor.

We enjoyed a very good series of meetings, conducted by Eld. H. S. Replogle. He preached eleven sermons, closing the meetings April 12. As a result twelve were added to the church by baptism April 11. We all feel very much stronger because of the work during these meetings.

Some of the subjects used in the meetings were as follows: "Holiest Utterance," "The Value of a Soul," "Use What You Have," "Faith," "Repentance," "Design of Christian Baptism," "Why Am I a Member of the Church of the Brethren?" and "The Christian Armor."

We were very thankful for the work done by the Mission Board of this District. The work here is under their advisement. Elders D. H. Walker and Wm. Howe will be with us on Monday evening, May 1, to organize the church at this place.

THE ROUND TABLE

The Touch of Faith.—Matt. 9: 20-22.

BY EZRA FLORY.

THIS woman had not only been ill for twelve years, but the efforts of the physicians for her recovery had left her more hopeless and dependent. According to the custom of the Jews she was not allowed to associate with her neighbors. "If any woman have an issue of blood many days, . . . all the days of the issue of her uncleanness . . . she is unclean. Every bed whereon she lieth, everything whereon she sitteth, shall be unclean. And whosoever toucheth those things shall be unclean." (Lev. 15: 25-27).

She realized that Jesus had power to heal her, but she showed her consideration for him by not coming into direct contact with him,—simply touching the hem of his garment as the unmannerly throng pressed onward, eager to know what he would do in the home of Jairus.

Here is a modesty associated with faith that we may well imitate. However, the real value of the touch was not in the garment but in the mind of the woman,—what she thought about Jesus; what she tried to do to help herself. Simply admiring Jesus was not enough. Coming to him without doing some one thing for herself was not enough.

The hem here is doubtless better understood by reading Num. 15: 38, 39, where the fringe of blue upon the borders of the garments was a token to God's children that they might be reminded of their duty to keep his commandments.

It is really touching to behold the woman in that needy condition, as she approaches the Great Physician! What utter ignorance of his character and way of working! What superstition! Withal what a hungering desire, what assurance of confidence that one touch of his robe was enough! Her error was great, but her faith was unbounded. To this day the error of attaching undue import to the external means of grace, rites, ordinances and sacraments is rife. Nevertheless this woman comes in a very real trust, which might shame some who profess to hold to a less sensuous form of faith.

The true means of contact between us and him is not our outward contact with external means of grace, but the touch of our spirits by faith. We must touch not the hem of the clothes but the heart of the wearer. Her confession was full. Her reward was complete. She received more than a physical healing. She was healed that we might be healed.

Let us make use of our opportunities and he, too, will give us a return for our faith and endeavors.

Baptism of Alexander Mack.

BY SAMUEL WEIMER.

WAS Bro. Mack's baptism an alien one or not? Investigation proves it not to have been an alien one, as there were eight composing the one body of the same one faith and spirit of the Gospel of the reviving and renewing of the church of God.

Bro. Mack did not receive nor seek his baptism from any one outside of that body,—the church, or which was to compose the revived church,—but the church, or that body of the one faith and spirit, authorized one of their number to administer the ordinance of baptism to Bro. Mack.

So we see that Mack was baptized by an authorized administrator of the church. His, therefore, was no alien baptism but a genuine baptism of the church and in full harmony with the later decision of Annual Meeting, Art. 3, 1883, "Revised Minutes," page 22, which requires that none be received into the church without being baptized by a legally-authorized administrator of the Church of the Brethren. (I use the present name of the church instead of the former.)

This decision does not require that he must have been a baptized administrator but one who is authorized by the proper authority.—the church into which the party is to be received for membership.

There is, therefore, a manifest difference between the baptism of Bro. Mack and that of those seeking for membership in the church who have been baptized by unauthorized administrators of the Church of the Brethren,—theirs being a baptism by those outside of the Church of the Brethren, while Bro. Mack's was from one inside the ranks.

A Vision of the Christ.

BY A. G. CROSSWHITE.

IT is related of a certain great artist that, after working for years at irregular intervals on his masterpiece, "The Man of Nazareth," he called one day, into his studio, a little girl, to see if she could recognize in the painting "The Children's Friend." She looked at it a long time and finally said, "A Great Man." His fondest hopes were shattered, and the sweetest rose had withered within his grasp.

Many days afterward an inspiration seized him. A halo of light encircled him, for he saw Jesus as he had never seen him before. He felt his presence and a sweet voice from the vision of glory whispered, "Take thy brush and try again, for my presence shall never leave thee, nor shall the vision fade until thou hast made me known from the greatest to the least."

When at last the picture was completed, the artist tried in vain to brush away the illuminating powder, but it was imbedded in the picture. Out of the vanishing form came the farewell message, "Call again the little girl, for the face shall bring her joy."

When, again, she stood before the easel, the tears came to her pretty blue eyes as she looked upward, and repeated, in child-like faith, "Suffer the children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

How the Lord Saved Me.

BY EDGAR M. HOFFER.

MORE than eight years ago an incident happened that I shall not soon forget. I was very sick of a fever, and I was near the point of death. I called for the elders of the church to anoint me, and this was done by Elders J. H. Longanecker and S. Z. Witmer. It was a glorious service, and at once I improved, and was well again shortly after. I would suggest to you, dear brother or sister, that you call for the anointing when you are sick. Many have been healed in this way. There is so much power in Jesus that you and I can be healed if we obey him. I have seen how some were anointed even on their deathbed, and how they enjoyed the sacred service.

I have met those who oppose the anointing as commanded by the apostle James, but we trust that no one in our beloved Fraternity will say a word against the anointing. We need more faith in God. His eye is ever upon us, his ear ever hears, and his mighty arm can always save us, if we approach him in the right way. Let us not despise these sacred precepts!

Happiness.

BY J. G. SCHMIDT.

HAPPINESS is a thing that is greatly coveted by every one. Real happiness is possible only by striving to live for that which is purest and best.

Happiness will not take up its abode with selfishness, nor evils of any kind, as a constant companion. Happiness is a thing for which all may enter the race and be rewarded. Wealth, or lack of wealth, does not enter as a factor. It is heaven-born and as enduring as eternity. It occupies many a lowly cottage and never calls at many a mansion. It never befriends those whose motives and efforts run counter to the will of God. Until conditions are favorable, it stands aloof. As soon as the spiritual house is set in order, happiness enters without special invitation. It cannot be purchased; it will not bear being trifled with. To possess it we must live in obedience to God, for happiness is God-given.

THE heart that is fullest of good works has in it the least room for the temptations of the enemy.

Imitators.

BY PERRY S. BRUNK.

"Be ye imitators of me, even as I also am of Christ" (1 Cor. 11: 1).

THESE are words of the great apostle Paul to the brethren at Corinth. Paul could truthfully write this message to the brethren at Corinth, for his life was in accord with the message. We are wondering how many Christians of today could truthfully proclaim such a message. How many have their lives in accord with the message?

Christ has a right to expect just such a life from us. We, as Christian men and women, have no excuse to offer him anything short of such a life. When all Christians begin to live such lives, the work of preaching Christ to the world will have such an impetus that a mighty power will be wielded for the kingdom of Christ. Are we imitators? Let each one ask himself the question.

THE goal of human history is the redemption of the world. If the field of Christ and the field of the church is the world, so the field of every man with the love of God in his heart is the world.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

Good Manners.

Rom. 12: 10.

For Sunday Evening, May 14, 1911.

The True Gentleman Is:

I. Kind.—1 Cor. 13: 4; Eph. 4: 32; Col. 3: 12; 2 Peter 1: 7.

II. Gentle.—1 Thess. 2: 7; James 3: 17; Titus 3: 2; 2 Tim. 2: 24.

III. Condescending.—Gen. 50: 21; 2 Chron. 10: 7; Prov. 15: 1; Jer. 52: 32.

IV. Compassionate.—Ex. 22: 21; Isa. 58: 7; Gal. 6: 2; James 1: 27.

V. The Foregoing Condensed.—Gal. 6: 10; 1 Peter 3: 8.

Planed and polished wood is much prettier than wood in the rough. A cut and polished diamond is more beautiful than the uncut gem. Manners are polished. The word "manners" comes from the word manus, meaning the hand. The original idea is that of doing something handily, neatly, well. Hence "manners" came to mean method of doing a thing. Manners are our method of treating other people. We can be rough and uncouth or we can be polished, considerate and kind like a gentleman. Manners grow. Let us cultivate them. There are people who have good manners. Others are ill-mannered. Let some young Worker tell what is the best kind of good manners.

PRAYER MEETING

What Christ Expects of His Church.

1 Cor. 3: 1-23.

For Week Beginning May 14, 1911.

I. Christ Expects that His Church Have a Stamp of Divinity Upon It.—The church of today should exalt Christ to his true place as head of the body. Then only can it demonstrate to the world its divinity as a Christ-commissioned body. Its message must be a heaven-sent one,—not the opinions and speculations of the age. Christ would have his followers, like himself, go about doing good. The age is spiritually hungry and wants heavenly manna; it is weary and wants rest; it is dying and wants the life beyond (1 Tim. 4: 15, 16).

2. Christ Wants a United Church.—He would have us possess the unity that Paul sets forth in Eph. 4,—a co-operative effort for the general good of the entire body. Such a union church will have the most complete success in every good work (1 Cor. 1: 10).

3. Christ Expects a Spiritual Church.—He wants it to be the incarnation and manifestation of the Holy Spirit. From the Spirit, not from human might, comes its wonderful power. Such a church, in bringing forth the fruit of the Spirit, witnesses for Jesus, but never courts popularity. It will seek the salvation of sinners, as well as the training of the young in the ways of the Lord. It will bring comfort to the sorrowing, strength to the fainting, and victory to the dying. It is all in all to a perishing world (1 Thess. 5: 11, 14, 15).

4. Christ Demands a Militant Church.—Christ was essentially a doer, and so he expects his people to be active along all lines of gospel ministration. "Go—save" is the all-inclusive commission. A church that does not save men, has lost the right to its charter (1 Cor. 9: 19-22).

HOME AND FAMILY

The Coming of the Green.

Now the spirit of the flood is awake,
And the spirit of the wood is stirred,
And the spirit of the air is beautiful and fair,
And so is the song of the bird.

And there cometh a whisper of spring,
And its footfall is light on the sea,
And it cometh from the South, with a jewel in its mouth,
And it bringeth a blessing to me.

And the bare bough is rustling with leaves,
And the dark earth is glistening with gold,
And the land is all sheen with the coming o' the green,
And a new world is born of the old.

And the hawthorn is snowy in the brake,
And the dear lark is springing up on high,
And the young things are sprouting, the young children shouting,
And the old tears awake in the eye:

For earth was a paradise once,
And life all a jubilee then,
But the glory once seen in the coming o' the green
Departs when we come to be men:

For sweet is the lily in the bed,
And sweet is the flower on the wall,
But sweeter the tear and the pity of the dead,
For the old things were sweetest of all.

Crushed Violets.

BY N. M. ALBRIGHT.

One beautiful Sabbath afternoon, as I sat musing over the contents of some books that I had been reading, my eyes fell upon an old volume whose covers were well worn, and whose pages were soiled with many a finger print. Upon opening the book (it was an old-fashioned Second Reader), a few faded violets, placed there many years ago, attracted my attention and caused me to pen these lines.

With the open book in my hands, I sat for several hours wrapped in thought. What was there, about these fragments of flowers,—the like of which we see every spring,—that so claimed my attention?

Did I say, "Flowers, the like of which we see every spring"? Ah, sad mistake! Yes, I have seen many of a deeper hue, and of a larger size. I have seen them in the great floral houses and beautiful parks of our cities. I have seen them as they graced the lawns of our homes, in the early spring. Many a time have I purchased them from some small lad, or unfortunate cripple, who was selling them for a livelihood, but never have I seen them one-half so lovely as, when a school-boy, I made my way, with dinner pail in hand, to the old country schoolhouse on the hill.

How well do I remember, when the rough days of winter were past, and but a small drift of snow was left on the north side of the hedge! The tiny blades of grass began to peep out from under their cover of fallen leaves, the first robin had come, and the sweet-scented breath of spring brought the flush of health and happiness to the cheeks of boys and girls.

It was on such a morning that I, in company with the son and daughter of a neighbor, who joined me on my way to school, was following the old, winding path that led to the opening in the fence where we might reach the main road.

Though we were but eight, nine, twelve years old,—it matters little,—it seems but as yesterday. As I look back I see, with lifelike clearness, the path as it wound its way close to the farm land, down by the meadow, and thence toward the old rail fence, toward the place where one of the middle rails had been broken out, and through which place we climbed and entered the road.

Once through the fence, we came to a place at the side of the road where the old grass, that had not been pastured the previous fall, had given shelter and protection to the tender roots below, and here, on this spring morning, there greeted us, from between the withered blades of grass, a dozen or more of early violets, fresh in their dew-besprinkled attire.

As I was the first to get through the opening in the fence, I had several gathered before my companions had a chance to know that I had found them. "They're all mine. I found 'em first," said I, having gotten ten of the twelve, but, seeing the sad look of disappointment on the faces of my companions, my better nature prevailed, with the result that, in a few moments,—had you been an observer of the occasion,—you would have seen three schoolchildren, with four violets each, held tightly in their hands, hurrying toward the schoolhouse, their faces aglow with the thought of a bouquet for teacher.

Ah, but those were bessed days! Methinks we must have been nearer God then! Taught by our mothers the "Golden Rule," we felt more vividly the truth that we are not only our brother's keeper, but our brother's brother.

Since launching out into the broader activities of life, I wonder if this simple, self-forgetful spirit is ours. I wonder if, when the good Lord, in his wisdom, allows some of us to enter into the richer blessings of life, we are not forgetful of our brother. Are we willing to divide our joys, to give of these possessions we call ours?

Are we not prone to say, "I made it; it's mine"? Ofttimes we say of the less fortunate, "Their state is the result of bad management; not of ill luck." This, at times, may be only too true, but be careful, my friend, for "by the words of thy mouth thou shalt be justified, or condemned." Remember, if you were born in a Christian home, a Christian nation, you were not the cause of it. If you have a strong physique it is a blessing from God, and he will expect you to divide with your less fortunate brother by bringing sunshine into his life. Whether you own one, two or three farms, and have bonds or a bank account, Deut. 8:18 would say, "But thou shalt remember the Lord thy God: for it is he that giveth thee power to get wealth, that he may establish his covenant which he sware unto thy fathers, as it is this day." You will observe that he not only gives power to get wealth, but he gives us this power for a special purpose,—to establish his covenant, or will, in the hearts of men.

You will agree that we were happier in those days when we thought well of all, when we had a child-like faith in others. Of course, we cannot always remain children, neither would we wish to, but we certainly would be happier, and prove a greater blessing to humanity, if we could apply the admonition of our Bro. Paul, "In malice and ill will be children, but in Christian courage and example be men."

I recall, very distinctly, the occasion of a quarrel between myself and a fellow-student at school, one day. We became very angry and called each other unbecoming names. A few mornings after this incident, as a group of us were crossing a creek, I had the misfortune to stumble, and, in my attempt to save myself, lost my dinner pail. Scarcely had I reached the dry land and begun to view my rather unsightly appearance, when the boys fished the dinner pail from the bottom of the creek, and each one "chipping in," as they called it, I soon had more than I would have had, if the accident had not occurred.

If we have, at any time since, seen a fellow-traveler stumble, financially, did we think of him as a brother, or did we make his extreme need an opportunity to get a bargain?

Have we seen our brother and neighbor fall morally, and made him the object of our scorn, denying him our love and pity? Have we seen him wander away spiritually, and silently passed by, not offering a helping hand, not shedding for him a tear, not seeking God in prayer in his behalf?

I fear that we often underrate the possibilities of our opportunities, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these, my brethren, even these least, ye did it unto me."

This should be an incentive for us all to make the welfare of "others" our motto. It might be well to frame this motto and hang it on the walls of our homes. Then, while enjoying the comforts of a Christian home, we would remember that there are "others" who would like the same privilege. "Do we enjoy our religion? If so, give it to others. Have we Christ in our hearts? If so, he will shine out through our lives and make us a blessing to others.

In conclusion, let us resolve that when the days of temptation come to us, when the lust and glitter of gold seeks to draw us from the path of right, when the spirit of envy and hate seeks control of our lives, we will go to God in prayer and ask him to give us a vision of our childhood days, when we had more of the spirit of unselfishness. Let us ask him to take us back to the days of yore, when we gathered violets.

And as these violets, when crushed between the leaves of our book, left an imprint that can not be erased, even so may we have stamped indelibly upon our characters, the impress of love and purity.

I Thought On My Ways.

BY ELIZABETH MILLER.

A society lady, dressing for a ball, one evening was standing before the glass, primping. In her hair she placed a diamond pin. As she stood there, admiring it, her little sister came running into the room and, looking at the sparkling gem, said, "I wonder if I will ever have any stars as bright as that in my crown in heaven?" Then the little girl, without further thought, left the room singing,

"Will there be any stars in my crown,
When at evening the sun goeth down?"

But the proud sister stood thinking. What did it all mean? She had never thought of such a thing before. "Oh! well," she said, "she goes to Sunday-school. I am going to the ball and have a good time. I am young but once."

She went to the ball but did not enjoy herself. The little girl had left a lasting impression on the sister's mind. Feeling very unhappy, she returned home quite early. When she arrived home, she took off that diamond pin, and slipped into the bedroom where her little sister lay sleeping in the moonlight. Beholding her pure, innocent face, she knelt beside her, and kissing her said, "Dear sister, there shall be stars in your crown and I shall be the first one."

And she was the first one! In the ballroom she appeared no more, for she had left the world and entered the church. The little sister had taught her to think on her ways and turn her feet unto the testimonies of her God.

It is good for us to stop, in this mad rush of life, and think for a few minutes on our ways. It makes us a little better, and draws us closer to him who thinks of us always.

The little hymn, "Just As I Am, Without One Plea," would, perhaps, never have been written had it not been for the author, Charlotte Elliott, stopping in her worldly course and thinking on her ways.

The story is told that she was walking down street, one day, from the dressmaker's, carrying under her arm a bundle which contained a fine dress. She met her minister and he asked her about the bundle. She told him she was going to a ball that night, and he advised her not to go. She did not heed his words, went to the ball, and was the gayest one there. When she went to bed that night she could not sleep, and lay all night thinking of her minister's words. The next morning she went and apologized to him, but he told her he was not the one, that she had not wronged him, but another. This led her to thinking, and as she turned her thoughts unto God, she wrote, "Just As I Am, Without One Plea."

The dying man, in his last moments, after having spent a worldly life for money and pleasure, looks back on his past life, and, seeing no other refuge, turns to God for help. The wanderer passing by the church-door hears the choir singing, "I was a wayward child and did not love my home." He stops for a moment and as he looks back he thinks how his mother sang these words to him at night as she tucked him in his little warm bed. In a moment his hard heart melts, and his life is changed. He turns his back on the world and enters the church; he finds his Father's house and learns to love his home.

Xenia, Ohio.

Don't measure God's mind by your own. It would be a poor love that depended not on itself but on the feelings of the person loved. A crying baby turns away from its mother's breast, but she does not put it away till it stops crying. She holds it closer. For my part, when I feel afraid I don't love God at all, I just look up to his love. I say to him: "Look at me. See what a state I am in. Help me!"

The recent revival at the Greensburg Mission, Pa., resulted in twelve additions to the church.

Bro. H. C. Early is booked for a series of meetings at Meyersdale, Pa., beginning June 10.

It is said that the recent baptism of ten, in the stream at Chico, Cal., was witnessed by a thousand people.

An interesting series of meetings in the Limestone church, Tenn., closed with five baptized and one restored to fellowship.

We call special attention to the additional Annual Meeting program found on page 285. Other announcements will appear soon.

Bro. Richard Dassdorff, of Jones Mills, Pa., has just returned from an extended trip to Europe. He occasionally lets our readers hear from him.

One of the churches in Ohio is sending the Messenger into forty homes, hoping in this way to reach more than a hundred people with the whole Gospel.

The Song Book Committee is pushing its work, and feel confident that the new book, to be known as "Kingdom Songs," will be ready for use at the Annual Meeting.

Bro. James M. Moore, of Chicago, is booked for a series of meetings in the Grundy County church, Iowa, beginning May 14. June 11 he begins a meeting in Sterling, Ill.

By an action of the late District Meeting of Western Pennsylvania the mission at Greensburg is permitted to canvass the District for funds to erect a new church in that city.

Bro. J. F. Souders writes us from Hongkong, China, which point he reached the first week in April. He hopes to complete his trip around the world in time to attend the St. Joseph Conference.

Bro. C. Fitz, who went from Colorado to Portland, Oregon, last fall, has located at Seattle, Wash., and is now in charge of the church in that city. He may be addressed at 1130 North Eighty-third Street.

The District Meeting of Western Pennsylvania was full of interest, as usual. One paper goes to Annual Meeting, and Brethren W. M. Howe and Silas Hoover were chosen to represent the District on the Standing Committee.

The District Meeting of the Second District of Virginia was held April 27 and 28, with Bro. H. G. Miller presiding. Considerable business was transacted, and Bro. S. N. McCann was chosen a member of the Standing Committee.

At the late District Meeting of Northern Virginia the advisability of establishing an Industrial School was considered, and a committee appointed to make further investigations and report one year later. The Eastern District also figures in the project.

It is stated that the end of the famine in China is in sight, and that further aid for the starving will not be necessary. By the liberal donations received thousands have been kept alive until the growing crops will enable them to take care of themselves.

The Sunday-school at Payette Valley, Idaho, recently decided to send a half dozen copies of the Messenger to the State prison one year, to be distributed among the inmates. This is one way of helping those in prison,—something that might be done in every State.

At the unveiling of the Alexander Mack Memorial Tablet in Germantown, Pa., Bro. M. G. Brumbaugh delivered a fine address that we had planned to have appear in this issue, but we find it necessary to hold it over another week. It will be read with more than ordinary interest by our patrons.

We can not keep track of all the little prospective workers that come into the homes of our missionaries in the foreign fields, but will now and then mention some of them at least. Bro. I. S. Long, of India, under date of April 7, says that Albert Emmanuel has come to his home and that the father and mother are delighted.

At the late District Meeting of the First District of Virginia a plan was submitted to divide the territory into three Districts; viz., First District, Middle District, and Southern District. This would mean six Districts in Virginia, and probably eight members on the Standing Committee. Action on the plan was deferred one year.

Bro. J. V. Felthouse is not returning from Florida, as stated last week, but has actually changed his place of residence from Logansport, Ind., to Seminole, Fla., where he may now be addressed. He seems much pleased with his location and will not only raise oranges for a living, but will preach the Gospel to the people of the South.

A large amount of business was transacted at the District Meeting of Northern Virginia, which convened in the Mount Zion church, April 13 and 14, with Brethren P. S. Thomas, Moderator; H. C. Early, Reading Clerk, and J. Carson Miller, Writing Clerk. Brethren D. H. Zigler and D. Hays were chosen to represent the District on the Standing Committee.

Bro. J. M. Blough and wife, of India, called at the Messenger sanctum on Thursday of last week. We were glad for a short visit with them. Bro. Blough gave a talk in the Elgin church on Wednesday evening that was very much appreciated. It had been announced for him to visit us last Sunday, but circumstances made some changes necessary, so he went to Girard, this State, to deliver several talks in that part of Southern Illinois.

We suggest that the churches that have decided not to send a delegate to the coming Conference, reconsider the matter and arrange to be represented in some way. If a small congregation does not feel able to pay the expenses of a delegate, there may be some member in the community going at any rate, who would be willing to represent his church. It might be arranged for a weak church to bear half of the expense of the delegate, who would be willing to bear the other half. This might do for poor churches, but for large congregations there should be no excuse. They should be represented without fail.

We are in receipt of the Minutes of the special District Meeting of Eastern Pennsylvania, held last September, containing an account of what was done regarding the proposed division of the District. This meeting was in charge of the committee appointed by the last Annual Conference, and the advisability of dividing the District was fully considered. The deliberations led to the appointing of a committee of five, authorized to canvass the situation carefully and report their recommendations, respecting territorial lines and the division of the church property, etc., to the regular District Meeting, which convened on Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

Bro. M. G. Brumbaugh, Superintendent of Public Schools of Philadelphia, writes us that his health will not permit him to attend the St. Joseph Conference. He has been sick for quite a while and unable to attend to his official duties. It had been planned for him to deliver an address, sometime during the Conference, but this is now out of the question, considering the state of his health.

Too late to appear in the Annual Meeting program, published last week, we received notice to the effect that the Historical Society of the Brotherhood will hold a meeting in the City Auditorium, St. Joseph, Mo., on Saturday, June 4, at 8 A. M. The subjects to be considered are: The Brethren in Southern Illinois, by J. J. Scrogum, and the Origin of the Brotherhood and the Transplanting to America, by G. N. Falkenstein. All programs, in their completed form, will appear in the Conference Booklet.

Next week we hope to publish a list of the elders, —about forty-eight in number,—chosen as members of the Standing Committee. From this list the Moderator, Reading Clerk and Writing Clerk for the open Conference will be selected. The doorkeeper will be chosen outside of the Committee. He should be a very active man, and may be a deacon, or a minister in the first or second degree, but ought not to be an elder. His duties are important and only a man in good health can stand up under the strain.

The following, which failed to appear in the Annual Meeting Program, published last week, is the program for the Educational Meeting, to be held in the Auditorium Monday, June 5, at 9 A. M.:

1. What Shall Be the Scope of the Courses and Work of the Brethren Schools and Colleges, in View of the Provisions Made by the State for Full Education in Public Schools and State Universities?—Juniata College.
2. The Education of Our Ministers.—Mount Morris College.
3. The School and the Local Church.—Manchester College.
4. The Advantages of Church Ownership of Our School Property.—Daleville College.

The Conference Booklet for the St. Joseph meeting will be in the hands of our printers inside of a few days. Those desiring copies should let us have their orders without delay. The Booklet will contain a list of the members of the Standing Committee, the program for the various services held from day to day, a number of reports and all the papers to be acted on by the Conference, along with other matters of special interest. It is an interesting publication, that should be in the hands of our people whether they attend the meeting or not. An announcement in each congregation would bring thousands of orders. Let our agents order enough to supply the full demand. Price, only five cents. A copy will be mailed as soon as possible to each member of the present Standing Committee. They are entitled to the Booklet free. All delegates may secure a copy free by applying to the Committee on Credentials at the Annual Meeting.

On Wednesday of this week President Taft opens the third American National Peace Congress, assembled in McCoy Hall, Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md. All the Peace Societies of this country will unite in making 1911 the most remarkable peace year in the annals of history. The object of this great Peace Congress is to arouse the people of America, and have them understand what has so far been accomplished in the interest of peace between the nations of the earth, and to realize what is yet to be done in the future. It is encouraging to note that the President of one of the greatest nations known to all history, consents to give the meeting the benefit of his presence and hearty sympathy, thus throwing his great influence on the side of the peace principles that have for centuries been earnestly advocated by the Brethren and a few other small religious bodies. Slowly but surely the great fundamental principle of peace on earth is coming to the front, and all thoughtful people are hoping and praying for the era when nations shall learn war no more.

A WRITER wishes us to suggest to the sisters that they make it a rule to put themselves in a condition for a season of prayer when the visit is paid to their home. This, of course, is the proper thing for sisters to do, but it might be well for those in charge of the congregations occasionally to instruct their members regarding the requirements of 1 Cor. 11, as these conditions relate to prayer for the brethren as well as for the sisters. Hundreds of members need to be instructed more perfectly in the way of the Lord.

ON page 282, this issue, will be found a petition addressed to the Annual Meeting, praying that real estate advertising be excluded from all of the Brethren literature. This, of course, does not affect the MESSENGER, but it does affect some of our other publications. For the information of our people we beg to state that for some time the Business Management has been carefully examining all the lands advertised in any of our papers, and some are held back for the want of time to make the necessary inspection. We can hardly understand how the Management could be more careful in this respect. To exclude real estate advertisements of all kinds means the loss of thousands of dollars to the House, to say nothing of crippling some departments of our business. The MESSENGER, of course, can live and pay its way without any advertising, but this can not be said of some of our other publications.

Railway Rates.

THE following letters are self-explanatory. These two Passenger Associations have granted one and a half fare for the round trip to our coming Conference:

Mr. D. L. Miller,
Chairman, Com. on Transp., Church of Brethren,
Mount Morris, Illinois.

Dear Sir:—Referring to my letter of April 21st: A special meeting of this Association was held on the 25th instant, when the subject of reduced rates to St. Joseph, on account of above occasion, was reconsidered, and, in lieu of the arrangements of which you were previously advised, it was decided to institute rate of one and one-half fare for the round trip to western gateways of this Association, added to tenders therefrom received from Western Passenger Association. The dates of sale and return limit will be as indicated in attached Circular Letter 12,291, namely, selling dates May 29 to June 4 from territory of this Association, except from Illinois and selling stations west thereof, which will be included in our tariff, the selling dates will be May 30 to June 5; final return limit will be to reach original starting point not later than June 30, 1911. We shall have pleasure in forwarding you copy of this joint publication when issued.

F. C. Donald, Commissioner.

Mr. D. L. Miller,
Chairman, Transportation Committee,
Mount Morris, Ill.

Dear Sir:

Referring to your application to Mr. E. E. MacLeod, Chairman, Western Passenger Association, for reduced fares, beg to advise that same was considered by the Trunk Lines yesterday, and they authorized the following, account above occasion:

One and one-half first-class limited fare to Chicago or St. Louis, added to fares tendered therefrom (Chicago $18.40 and St. Louis $13.08) for the round-trip, from points in Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, and West Virginia, also from points in Pennsylvania west of and including Lancaster and Reading, Pa., and south of and including Sunbury, Pa., going and returning via same route only; tickets to be sold and good, going, May 29 to June 1, and returning to reach original starting point not later than June 30.

The above are the only selling dates that the several lines felt they could authorize for your meeting, and it was their opinion that same would satisfactorily accommodate your members residing at points on their lines.

C. L. Hunter, Vice-Chairman.

Please do not write me for rates personally. Everything is being done that can be, and as soon as rates are granted they are published in the MESSENGER. Thus you have all the information the committee has.

The Anointing Question.

WHILE we do not purpose taking an active part in discussing the anointing question, now before the Brotherhood, there are a few things that we wish to say. As we understand the New Testament, there are three anointings. One for the saints only, referred to in James 5: 14, 15; the second as a loving preparation for burial, mentioned in Matt. 26: 7-13, and a third, intended solely for the healing of diseases. The latter is very clearly pointed out in Mark 6: 12, 13.

As regards the anointing mentioned in James 5: 14, 15, there can be no question about the purpose of this service. It is intended for the saints, is to be administered by the elders for the flock over which they preside, and then only when called for. "Is any among you sick? let him call for the elders," says the Sacred Record. The purpose of the service is threefold: for the restoration to health, for the forgiveness of sins and a preparation for the departure. One may have reached the period of life when his only concern is about his going; so he calls for the anointing for the remission of sins and as a further preparation for his burial in the light of the fact that the Lord is to "raise him up" "at the last day." There are others, however, who seek only the restoration to health and the forgiveness of sins, with a view of greater usefulness in life. But the service is a most sacred and solemn one, should be administered only under the most impressive circumstances, and be limited to the members of the flock. It is a service never intended for those outside of the pales of the church. This was clearly the understanding of the Annual Meeting when it was decided in 1869, Art. 17, "That no unbaptized person can be a member of the church, and therefore, can not be anointed." This cuts off the penitent unbaptized who, while upon a bed of sickness, wishes to be anointed for the healing according to Mark 6: 12, 13.

Just before his departure to the Father, and a short time before his burial, Jesus was anointed by a most spiritually-minded woman. This she did, though hardly understanding it at the time, in view of the day of his burial (Matt. 26: 7-13). Even the disciples saw nothing significant in the act, yet Jesus did, and commended the deep, earnest woman for her devotion and motives. It is the most unusual of all services; a special voluntary preparation for the burial of a most lovely and useful character. It is the outward expression of deep-seated love, or the overflowing of the fountain of love and affection, too sacred to be made common, and too spiritual to be criticised. Jesus was so deeply impressed with the conduct of the woman towards him that he directed that wherever his Gospel should be preached the story of this most sacred service for his burial should be told, and that, too, to the whole world.

Without commenting further on these two anointing services, we wish more particularly to call attention to the anointing referred to in Mark 6: 12, 13. Here we are told that the disciples, being sent by Jesus, "went out and preached that men should repent. And they cast out many devils, and anointed many that were sick, and healed them." By this we understand that the disciples not only preached the Gospel of the kingdom, telling men and women how to reform their lives, but they anointed the penitent and believing sick and healed them. While on behalf of the sick the anointing was made a specialty for healing, it was doubtless limited to those who could receive it in faith, accompanied by some kind of a pledge or promise to live the better life.

Those receiving this service may have been unbaptized believers, as well as newly-baptized believers, such as were able to receive the rite before the anointing. They were not anointed for the remission of sins, but for the healing of the body. Those baptized had their sins forgiven, whether anointed or not, but those merely anointed, though healed, had no promise of pardon until their faith and repentance was followed by the sacred rite of baptism. Neither were any of the sick anointed as a loving preparation for burial. It was for the healing of the body only.

We see no reason why one, who has faith in the God he serves, may not today anoint the penitent sick for the same purpose. Ministers are often called to the bedside of the unconverted sick to pray for them, and it is no more inconsistent to anoint such, after having evidence of their faith in Christ, and their purpose to serve him, than there is in praying for their recovery. It should, however, be understood that this anointing, when administered for the healing of the body, under such circumstances, is not for the remission of sins. The unconverted may desire to be anointed for the healing of his disease, so he may be able fully to comply with the conditions of pardon, and then live a faithful life of service. To have the faithful minister going among his neighbors, preaching the Gospel to them, anointing the sick, praying for their restoration to health, then baptizing them into Christ, would certainly be impressive as well as helpful and apostolic.

It is unfortunate, however, that ministers have abused this sacred privilege. They have anointed the sick, many of them have been healed, and instead of God receiving the glory, the men who did the anointing have received the credit for the benefits received. And this has been carried to the extent of reducing the sacred institution to a money-making affair. It is this abuse of the apostolic service that has brought it into bad repute among good-thinking and conservative people. If the preacher of today could hold up Jesus to the people, teach the reformation of life, anoint the penitent sick and have God heal them, he would soon find his influence for good greatly enlarged. But in view of self-exaltation, and the tendency to pose before the public as a popular healer, it is a problem just how to restore the service, and have it performed in the spirit that characterized the apostles, when they went forth preaching that men should repent, casting out devils, and anointing many that were sick, and healing them (Mark 6: 12, 13).

This we are saying in view of the anointing being an open question, and also in view of the further consideration, that when the three anointings are properly understoood there will be little danger of employing either of them where they do not apply. The service of James 5: 14, 15, as stated, is for the saints only, and should never be administered to the unbaptized. The anointing of Mark 6: 12, 13 is solely for the healing of the sick, and may be administered to the penitent unbaptized, as well as to the baptized. As regards the other anointing, prompted only by the highest and noblest of motives, we need make no provision. Its sacredness prevents it from becoming common, and when witnessed it should be looked upon as beyond the realm of criticism.

To Whom Shall We Go.

THERE always has been more or less unrest on the part of some of the followers of Jesus Christ, because of some of his truths and sayings or, rather, because of their misinterpretations of them. They say, "These are hard sayings; who can bear them?" So thought some of his early disciples. "And from that time many of his disciples went back and walked no more with him." Then said Jesus to the twelve: "Will ye also go away?" Peter answered: "Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life."

And so, for some cause, or causes, this unrest, on the part of some of the Lord's people, has been felt and expressed down through the ages. And so it seems to be felt and expressed among us today,—with this difference, however, not because of the hard sayings of Jesus, but because of the misinterpretations and additions, made as a means to an end. This has always been a sad thought to us, and we are made to ask ourselves: Are these things of sufficient importance to cause us to go back and walk no more with Jesus or the church? In contemplating this matter, the question has come with great force: "To whom shall we go?" If we could find a church or body of Christian believers holding more or even as much truth, and less objectionable features, of course there would be, seemingly, some reasonable ground for going away from our own church and people, and walking with the one that holds to the same doctrines and principles, and has in it the less objectionable features. This, indeed, would be a justifiable thing to do, and during all the years we have advocated this position. The most truth, the highest principles, and the best methods, are not too good for the true child of God to render in faith and practice to the Master.

But if we want to go away from the Brethren church because of a few things used by us as a means to an end, where would we go? Let us see. Are there any other churches or bodies of Christian believers that hold and practice more of the truth and less of the objectionable than we do? We ought to be quite sure that there are such before we think of making any change. And even in such a case all reasonable effort should be made to remove the objectionable before even contemplating a change of church home.

But let us see what we have as foundation principles and doctrines: (1) We believe in the Holy Trinity, —Father, Son and Holy Ghost. (2) We believe faith, repentance and baptism, by trine immersion, to be the essential rite by which believers are inducted into the church of Jesus Christ. (3) As ordinances to be observed by Christian believers we have feet-washing, the Lord's supper and the communion. (4) As Christian principles, to be observed and practiced for development and growth in the Christian life, we have nonswearing, nonlitigation, nonresistance, and nonconformity, which applies to all of our living, dealing, eating and dressing,—plain and modest apparel,—as recommended by the apostolic writers. We also observe the holy anointing, the Christian salutation and strongly advocate missionary work at home and abroad.

These are all Bible principles, doctrines and observances that are accepted as orthodox by the Christian world. Therefore it would be unwise for us to go away from the Church of the Brethren and unite with another church that does not have and practice all these, and, in addition, has better and more scriptural methods in carrying them out.

Especially does it seem unwise, on the part of any of the members of the Brethren church, to go away from us and unite with churches that practice only a single immersion, or those who practice sprinkling and infant baptism.

Indeed, it has been an unsolvable problem to us, how intelligent Brethren,—those who have been brought up in the faith and practices of the Brethren church,— can forsake their natural church home, where they have been born into the Christ-life through holy baptism, symbolical of the burial and resurrection of the crucified Christ, and enter into one whose initiatory rite is so deficient, in this respect, that all semblance to it is lost—where infant baptism is practiced without any scriptural warrant whatever, and where it is impossible for the person baptized to exercise faith. To those who have never been taught differently, this is not so strange, because they are nurtured to such environments, and are raised up in them in their home life. Thus it becomes their thought life and habit as naturally as it is for heathen children to walk in the ways of their parents and think like they did. But it can not be thus in the case of those who have been nurtured and brought up in Brethren homes, where they have been taught that their salvation depends on simple obedience to the plain teachings of the Scriptures, as taught and exemplified by Jesus Christ himself. How can we forsake a church home where the whole truth is not only taught, but where every member enjoys the privilege of exercising in all the precepts and examples which Jesus has given in his Word?

Now, for any of our people to leave such a church home and enter into one that has a membership made up largely of unbaptized persons, or those who were not baptized of their own choice, but forced into it, while infants, by their parents, and thus being robbed of the blessed experience of being "born again," where is the gain? This, it seems to us, should be a pertinent question. Indeed, it must be a serious one.

Well, first they lose the encouragement of leading the simple Christ-life, of doing all of the examples and commandments of Jesus; and he says: "If ye know these things happy are ye if ye do them." And this means too much for any of us to sacrifice for what we can get in the exchange.

But what do we gain? Well, we gain the liberty of living the worldly life in all that this means. We can indulge in all the foolish and vain fashions of the world,—smoke, chew, drink whiskey, play cards, go to the dances, attend the theatres and all places of amusements, drinking clubs, secret orders; in short, unite with and indulge in all the worldly "isms" that appeal to the worldly and carnal mind.

If such a change is gain to the men and women who desire to be humble followers of the blessed Christ, then, indeed, have we misunderstood the true teaching of the Christ and the great object and purpose of God sending his Son into the world to save sinners from the blighting and destructive power of sin. Again we say: To whom shall we go?

Guarding the Discussion.

With a few exceptions we have permitted our correspondents to say about what they thought proper, on the rebaptism question. A few wished to say, that, since John baptized by single immersion, it follows that his was not Christian baptism, and for that reason the twelve at Ephesus had to be rebaptized. This would have opened up the question regarding the form of John's baptism, which our people should know was not single immersion, for the reason that single immersion, as a religious rite, was not introduced until nearly 400 years later. Some articles contained propositions that, if sustained, would prove some of the doctrines held by the church to be false. All such points had to be considered when passing on the articles that were approved for publication. The study of these articles led us to conclude that a few of our people hold very loose views regarding the conditions of pardon. No one questions the necessity of faith and repentance, but there are some who fail to see clearly that, according to the New Testament, baptism is also one of the divinely-appointed conditions of pardon. Some would have us believe that there was no true church on earth when Alexander Mack and those who stood with him, began their reformatory movement in Germany, whereas we are told in the Scriptures that the gates of hell should not prevail against the church. Then some would have us think that the eight, including Mack, constituted a church of Jesus Christ before any of them had been baptized into Christ. What we are here saying has no bearing on the question in dispute, but it does show how we may easily weaken our claims by assuming untenable positions.

Temperance Articles.

We are always pleased to make room for good articles on the temperance question, but there are a few points that have to be considered when publishing an article written in the interest of prohibition. Some writers insist on discussing the party question denouncing the old parties and insisting on all our people lining up with the Prohibition party. This is, of course, the privilege of any one, but, should we publish articles of this class, we would be accused of running the Messenger in the interest of one of the political parties. Another class insists on our people entering the political arena, and taking an active part in the affairs of the Government. This would lead to the holding of any office in the Government, and lead to compromising some of the principles for which we, as a church, stand. A third class wishes severely to censure some of our honest and well-meaning brethren for not taking an active part at all in the important elections, especially when the temperance question is before the people. Now, while we would be pleased to have all of our brethren go to the polls when the temperance issue stands in need of their influence, we should bear in mind that the feelings of people who are conscientiously opposed to voting should be respected. Those who write on the temperance question should guard themselves on these points. We need strong arguments in favor of destroying the liquor traffic, but it should be remembered that the Messenger is not a party paper, is not a political journal, and must respect the feelings of good men who do not see their way clear to go to the polls.

The Southern People.

Three weeks ago there appeared in the Messenger a short news report from a correspondent in which something was said about trying "to civilize and uplift certain people of the South from their state of heathenism, ignorance and degradation." This report, in the rush of work, escaped our close scrutiny. We are told that some of the uncomplimentary expressions are being severely criticised, and justly so, by not a few of our Southern readers. In this connection we wish to say that while education in the South is not so general as it is in the North, still the people, as a rule, are well-informed, many of them splendidly educated, enterprising, fully as moral as their northern neighbors, and generally much more religiously inclined. They are not in a state of heathenism, in any sense, and, so far as degradation is concerned, one can find just as much of that in the North as in the South, if he will look at the right place for it. Of course, there are conditions in the South that we do not have to contend with in the North, and these must be taken into account. But there is no occasion to speak disrespectfully of the Southern people. They are our neighbors, kind and courteous, and, considering the condition in which the South was left by the war, the development in this part of the Union has been marvelous.

Annual Meeting Queries.

The following papers will be presented to Annual Meeting for consideration:

Eastern Maryland.

1. We, the Washington City church, petition Annual Meeting of 1911, through District Meeting of Eastern Maryland, to allow each organized church having two hundred members or less, two delegates,—and one delegate for each additional hundred members or fraction thereof,—to District Meeting. Any and all decisions of Annual Meeting conflicting herewith are repealed. Answer.—Petition granted, and paper sent to Annual Meeting.

2. Inasmuch as the Annual Conference is asked to consider the publication of another paper in the interest of saving homeless children, will not the Meadow Branch Church of Maryland ask Annual Meeting, through District Meeting, to appoint a committee of three, to investigate the advisability of adopting another new church paper, and report to the next Annual Meeting? Answer.— It is so decided.

Answer.—Passed to Annual Meeting with its answer.

Western Pennsylvania.

We, the Middle Creek congregation, assembled in council April 14, 1911, petition Annual Meeting, through District Meeting of Western Pennsylvania, to pass a decision preventing any real estate advertising from appearing in the literature of the Church of the Brethren. —Passed to Annual Meeting.

Regulating Calls for Money.

We learn that steps are being taken by the General Mission Board to regulate the many calls made on churches and individuals in the Brotherhood for money. It would appear that some of the calls made through the mails have never been endorsed by either the General Mission Board or any of the District Boards. Not only so, but statements of receipts and expenditures have not been made as should have been done. There is no reference here made to the misuse of money, but the methods referred to have not been business-like. With the consent of its District Mission Board, any mission point may call for help inside of that District, but should not go out into other Districts, either by mail or otherwise, without the endorsement of the General Board. Our people will soon learn not to heed calls that are not regular. Then, on the other hand, those who make calls without the necessary endorsement may be called to account. Nothing will be done to interfere with any good movement, but everything must be carried forward in a legitimate way.

In the Heart of the City.

Those who attend the St. Joseph Conference will bear in mind that the Annual Meeting is to be held right in the heart of the city, and that our members will be constantly in touch with men and women who know nothing whatever of the religious principles that characterize us as a Christian body. It will, therefore, be well for us to make some preparations for giving them the information that they may be seeking. We should know much about our own history, as well as the doctrine we preach. For this purpose some good tracts should be procured to study and to distribute. Every member should carry some good tracts and make a careful use of them. An effort should also be made to place the Messenger, for six months, in every family where any of our people lodge. But, above all things, we should let our light shine, and be prepared to make our short sojourn in the city as pleasant and as helpful as possible.

ANOTHER CHURCH ORGANIZATION.

The Rogue River church met April 15 to organize a new congregation. The congregation has now been divided, and the new congregation will be known as the Williams Creek church, located in Josephine County. Bro. S. E. Bosler, of said church, is the elder. Brethren Henry Brubaker and H. H. Keim, of Newberg, assisted in the organization. Eld. Henry Brubaker was chairman; Eld. Keim, clerk.

Officers were chosen as follows: Bro. George Hoxie, elder for one year; Sister Wertz, clerk; Sister Hoxie, treasurer; Bro. Jacob P. Moomaw, corresponding secretary; Sister Carl, Messenger agent. Bro. W. N. Carl was elected deacon and, with his wife, duly installed.

On the same evening Bro. J. S. Teeter, of McWillie, Okla., arrived to take up his abode in this new church. We are starting out with bright prospects, having two elders, one minister in the second degree and one deacon. We expect to build a churchhouse as soon as we can.

There is plenty of room here and a large territory, from the California line to the Southwest Coast. It is a good valley, with mountains all around. We have a good class of people. Any loyal brother or sister desiring to know more about the country and church, can write to the undersigned, enclosing stamp. Jacob P. Moomaw.

Williams, Oregon, April 17.

EASTERN MARYLAND.

The District Meeting of the Eastern District of Maryland met April 17 and 18 in the historic Middletown Valley, in the commodious Grossnickle church. The good brethren and sisters of this large congregation know how to entertain and care for a meeting of this kind. Those who were permitted to be present will never forget the good care taken of us by these kind people.

The meeting was organized by making Geo. S. Harp, Moderator, and W. Wine, Writing Clerk; T. S. Fike, Reading Clerk. Bro. Harp proved himself an efficient presiding officer,—patient and fair to all. Much business came before the meeting; about all of it of a constructive character. Some questions brought out some interesting discussions, but all business was disposed of in a Christian spirit.

About all the departments of church work received attention. The Mission Board reported two new congregations organized. The Sunday-school Secretary reported increases in all departments of the work. The Temperance Committee's report was received with enthusiasm. The Trustees of the Home for the Aged made a splendid report. Blue Ridge College, in the ministerial problem, the Sunday-school work, and many other things were discussed, letting in new light and interest.

Two papers were sent to the Conference at St. Joseph, Mo., and Bro. Geo. S. Harp was elected as a member of the Standing Committee.

Four new congregations were added to the District; two were organized from Mission points, one from the division of an old congregation, and one congregation was organized on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, most of the members of which formerly belonged to the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

In all, the meeting was an inspiration. Here the members from the city church and the country districts, the college man and the toiler from the mountains, could meet in the fellowship of faith, discuss the problems of the church, and plan for its onward usefulness and progress. May it always be so! W. M. Wine, Secretary.

Union Bridge, Md., April 22.

MISSION WORK IN FRESNO, CAL.

Just recently the Mission Board of this District opened work in the city of Fresno. It is one of the most favorable openings for the Brethren in this part of California. It is in easy reach of four congregations,—Raisin, Reedley, Kerman and Oak Grove, or Laton. These churches are all in Fresno County, and the brethren are finding this district well adapted to various lines of industry. A number of Brethren families reside in the city, as well as a goodly number of Brethren's children. We have found a number of such and would be glad to be informed of others, that they may be invited to the services, held regularly each Sunday. The first preaching service was held on Sunday, April 9, at 11 A. M., when, on short notice, a score or more of persons met at the place appointed, and gave excellent attention to the preaching of the Word. One aged sister, who formerly lived near Mt. Carroll, Ill., but in more recent years in Fresno, was present. She had not attended a Brethren meeting for a long time, but now rejoices once more in the opportunity, and is also interested in bringing others. A mission church has been secured at the corner of Howard and Davis Streets, one block from the car line on Fresno Street. By getting off at Davis Street and walking one block west, parties coming into the city can easily reach the place. No other preaching service is held here, and none, in fact, in this part of the city, till the Brethren came in. A mission worker is needed who can give his entire time to the work, and we hope one can be secured. One of the brethren living here has already pledged a very liberal sum for the purpose. The city of Fresno has offered most excellent service for holding our Annual Meeting for 1912, and if held here, the Brethren will be accorded a very hearty welcome, and be able to accomplish much for the Master's cause. A number of the Brethren from this part of California are looking forward with pleasure to the approaching Conference at St. Joseph, Mo. May the prayers of God's people go up for its success. Any one wishing to know more concerning Fresno as a place to live, will please address Bro. J. G. Parrett, Box 1013, Fresno, Cal. D. L. Forney.

Reedley, Cal., April 19.

SHALL I VOTE?

No doubt most of the older brethren have decided this question for themselves, but perhaps many of the younger are not aware of their grounds. This is one of the questions which must be decided from the tenor or spirit of the Scriptures, since we do not have any direct light upon it.

The Called Out

The church or "ecclesia" means the "called out" from the world, if it means anything at all. The call to Abraham was to separate himself from the ways and walks of the wicked world, and to follow the leading of God. As long as the Israelites did this they received a blessing, but were they would be "like all the nations," then God was displeased and finally rejected them. Does this not apply to those who are Abraham's seed by faith? In Philpp. 3: 20 (R. V.) Paul says, "For our citizenship is in heaven," and in 1 Pet. 2: 11 the brethren are addressed as "strangers and pilgrims." These words accord with the sentiment of the beautiful hymn:—

> "I am a stranger here, within a foreign land,
> My home is far away upon a golden strand;
> Ambassador to be of realms beyond the sea,
> I'm here on business for my King."

What business does the King direct us to engage in? He said, "I must be about my Father's business," and can we find one instance where He took part in state politics? He even avoided a direct answer when he was pressed to say whether it was right to give tribute to Cæsar. If ever a man were justified in championing social or political reform, Christ would have been, for the Jewish nation was in a most corrupt and degraded condition. But neither Christ nor his disciples concerned themselves with politics, for he said, "My kingdom is not of this world." Christ disdained to be an earthly king, and he further says, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me."

In the Apostolic Church.

There is abundant proof that the Christians held themselves aloof from all worldly entanglements, living "quiet and peaceable lives" in order to give none offense. Not until the Council of Constantine, in the fourth century, do we find Christianity and politics mixed, and immediately there followed apostasy, from which God has scarcely rid his church to this day.

The Brethren have nobly followed the example of the early church, unless we stop, at times, and get our bearings, I fear that we shall be driven from our course and cast upon the rocks of political entanglement. The fate of the early church should be a warning to us. Let us notice, briefly, some of the counter winds that tend to crowd us from our course.

God's Work and Ours.

It is argued strongly that since the mission of Christianity is to elevate the moral tone of mankind, the ship of state must be guided by its influence, and if the church, representing the best men, has nothing to do with politics, the government will fall into inferior corruption, thereby injuring the church's power for good. But Christ says, his church is "as a city set upon a hill, which cannot be hid," and it will ever be as a guiding star to the world, beckoning it on to higher and better things.

Brethren, let us not meddle in God wares. "The powers that be are ordained of God." We are not subjects of, but commanded only to be "subject to, the powers that be." Will not God overrule the affairs of nations that the church may accomplish the work he has given her to do? The history of the past answers this, if it means anything to us. Why should the church attempt to guide the ship of state, when he has reserved that work for himself? He can create and can destroy, and might we not attempt, in our blindness, to uphold that which he has decreed to fall! Our work is to help in saving men's souls. Every Christian is an ambassador for Christ, and when we "leave the Word of God to serve tables," we are neglecting our "high calling."

Voting to Compel is Using Force.

Yet, some may say, is it not all right to vote, though it may not be to hold office? But are we consistent in voting for that which we are unwilling to enforce? The philosophy of the case presses itself irresistibly upon us that if we vote, sooner or later we shall be compelled to permit office-holding. Then, where have our nonresistant principles gone?

A case to the point. We are urged to vote for local option or prohibition, but this law is of no use unless it be enforced. If we vote to use force to compel men to do right, we ought, consistently, help to enforce the law. If we shirk the duty upon others, we sanction, by our vote, their violation of the law, even though it may be taken in performance of duty placed upon them by us. This conclusion appears to me to be inevitable.

A Great Temptation.

I am aware that right here is the greatest temptation to vote, because of the awfulness of intemperance and the reproach cast upon us by others for not helping the noble cause along. Brethren, if I am wrong, I would rejoice to see the light of truth shed upon this subject, for it has been a struggle for me to take this ground.

In the past I have helped along prohibition and temperance in every way I could, but the inconsistencies which I have imperfectly pointed out have driven me to the present position. Since this is a question to be discussed by our coming Conference, may we all prayerfully consider its far-reaching influence!

Stonyford, Cal. E. C. Overholtzer.

TO THOSE COMING TO THE ANNUAL MEETING.

The remark is often made, "You people will have a splendid opportunity to make an impression on St. Joseph people, and do a world of good by having such a convention here." It is our prayerful desire to make this Convention the most spiritual one ever held by the Brotherhood. We should not make it a selfish affair, but come for the inspiration it will give us all, and the good it will do to many others who are not Christians. I trust we will keep in every way I could, but the inconsistencies which I have imperfectly pointed out have driven me to the present position. Since this is a question to be discussed by our coming Conference, may we all prayerfully consider its far-reaching influence!

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIFORNIA

Chico.—Bro. England conducted our dedication services and then preached for us each evening the following week. As it was impossible for him to remain with us longer, Bro. Forney continued the meetings for another week. Ten were brought into the fold, all except one being boys and girls from our Sunday-school. They were baptized the Sunday before Bro. England left for his home in Kansas. Large audiences throughout the meeting was good, and we feel much interest. The members of the brethren were appreciated encouraged. The labors of membership were read last Sunday by all. By letter 6. Treats of Redlands, Cal., began a series of meetings April 18, to be continued two weeks or longer.—Etta Pratt, El Centro, Cal., April 18.

Long Beach.—We certainly have great reasons to praise the good Lord for the abundant blessings that he has showered upon us, in this land of sunshine and flowers. We have peace and plenty.—April 15 Bro. A. L. Wilson, his wife and daughter, from Harrisburg, Pa., arrived here to take up the work of pastor for the Long Beach church. On Saturday, Bro. Bro. J. F. Dickey, of Lordsburg, Cal., delivered a most excellent Easter address to the Sunday-school and we also enjoyed by all in the evening Bro. Martin gave us an inspiring gospel sermon, and he also delivered two soul-stirring sermons during the day. We hope for great things in the future for the little band of workers here. We have had a great many tourists in the city during the winter, but as a rule they settlers seem to take their place. The city seems to fill up rapidly. We long and pray that the Lord will open the eyes of his children to cast their lot with us here.—J. M. Shively, 1219 East Broadway, Long Beach, Cal., April 23.

Raisin church held its love feast April 15. There were 107 communicants. The sisters broke the bread and the brethren the cup. We appreciated the presence of Brethren Brower and D. L. Forney, of Reedley, Cal. Bro. Brower officiated, and also gave two excellent sermons on Sunday.—Ivy Neff. We feel very much encouraged over our band of workers here, and many new ones are coming in.—Mrs. Ethel Cobb. We are very glad to have him locate in our midst. He has shown all the young people much love, and their interest is manifested by them. Our Sunday-school is growing rapidly. Sunday 13 we were privileged to hear Bro. Bro. Engle, from Merrill, Kans., has been visiting friends here, and seems very much impressed with the prospects for a rich harvest in her best, and we feel to thank our Heavenly Father for his blessings.—Emma Saylor, Raisin, Cal., April 29.

South Los Angeles.—Sunday morning, April 16, instead of having our regular services, a special Easter program was rendered by the Sunday-school. Bro. Wertenbaker gave a short talk on the resurrection of Christ. There was a good attendance,—214 being present,—and a collection of $9.86 was taken. We have many reasons to be thankful for the interest the children of this locality take in the Sunday-school. Many of them come from unchristian homes and it caused us to rejoice to see them standing boldly before the audience, speaking a word for Jesus. We also had a very interesting program in the afternoon.—Mrs. Martha Wertenbaker, 1st and Wall Streets. The children manifest great interest at this place, and they seem anxious to learn more about Jesus.—Bretnren W. H. Wertenbaker and N. J. Brubaker began a series of meetings at the Bethel church, commencing April 23. We hope these brethren will be able to arouse the fathers and mothers of this field to a greater interest in the words God.—Clara B. Custer, 1336 East Forty-sixth Street, Los Angeles, Cal., April 26.

CANADA

Battle Creek.—Our church met in council April 15, with our elder presiding. Seven letters of membership were received. We now number forty-eight members. We have good prospects for others moving in soon. The church selected a committee to look out for the prospects for locating a house of worship, which we are very much in need of. Since winter is past and gone, it is being built. Bro. Wm. Sutter, Jr., took quite encouraging. Any of the brethren, passing this way, are invited to stop with us.—Mrs. Marla L. Swihart, Kelvinhurst, Sask., Can., April 17.

COLORADO

Brandon.—Our members were greatly encouraged to have Elder Elsie K. Sanger, of Thomas, Okla., stop with us for a few days last week on her return home. Sister Sanger spoke very earnestly of the zeal and earnest efforts put forth by our dear members in California. It gives our little band great joy to have members who are true. We are to the main line of the Missouri Pacific R. R., from Kansas City to Pueblo, Colo. When members are moving here we would much appreciate to have them stop with us, especially will they be welcome if they will locate with us at this place and at Towner,—a town about twenty miles east of here. We wish to organize a church in the near future, forming Brandon and Towner into one congregation, and building a house of worship at Brandon. Any of our members are coming here this spring who will make this their church home and in all probability this will become a strong hold of the church. We have a very good class of people.—Bro. J. S. Ritchey, of Towner, and the writer. We want to add our house so as to have room for them in a series of meetings next fall.—J. M. Crouse, Brandon, Colo., April 25.

Visits to Brandon, Colo.—In company with other brethren I have made three trips to Brandon, Colorado, on mission and cheap homes. I found eleven members located there, two of whom are ministers. There are prospects of others locating there soon. Brandon is in Kiowa County, surrounded by a beautiful country, with rich soil, and in the shallow water district. The members are working for spiritual and temporal. They have preaching services four times each month, two in town, and one each in the two Sunday-school. They expect to organize a congregation soon, and build a house of worship this year. Brethren, if you change location where they can get cheap homes and be of use in the Master's vineyard, we recommend this place; for truly "the harvest is great and the laborers are few."—A. J. Smith, Argonia, Kans., April 22.

FLORIDA

Herndon.—April 15 Bro. J. V. Felthouse came to this place and preached one sermon at the writer's house, one at Zephyrhill, and one at the Greer schoolhouse. These discourses were listened to with much interest. Last week Bro. Felthouse bought a nice little farm and will locate here with his family (his wife and two daughters, all members of the church). This will give us a membership of ten. All aim to present their bodies a living sacrifice, which means a church at Herndon, Fla., by the Holiday season. Pray for us and the cause in this beautiful Southland.—Jesse Cripe, Herndon, Fla., April 29.

IDAHO

Leslie.—Several families of Brethren have moved to Leslie, Idaho, in the Big Lost River Valley, and have organized a Sunday-school. We have preaching every Sunday. This is a fine valley, with plenty of water and cheap land. It is fine for stock and grain. Any brethren looking for a home, Brethren would come and help us to build up a church at this place, as the Master's work is needed here. Any interviews will be cheerfully given by Wm. Sutter, Leslie, Idaho, April 21.

Payette Valley.—May 28 has been selected as the date of our love feast, to be held in the Pyatland house. Brother and Sister Henry Sanger and Bro. J. C. Wampler, Nampa, Idaho, attended our services this morning. Bro. Neher preached an excellent sermon on "Christ's Vision in Life." Our Sunday-school in town recently decided to send a half dozen boxes of Sunday-school papers to the mission one year, to be distributed among the inmates. The papers are to be sent from our birthday offerings.—S. J. Kenepp, Payette, Idaho, April 23.

ILLINOIS

Camp Creek.—Our council met in council April 22. Our elder, Bro. M. L. Hahn, presided. All the business of the meeting was disposed of in a harmonious manner. Bro. Hahn received a local temperance committee was appointed.—Mrs. Sarah Hahn, Colchester, Ill., April 28.

Milledgeville.—Our church met in council April 28. Our elder, Bro. D. E. Brubaker, and wife were with us. We have all quite a number present. Bro. Jesse M. Warner is our delegate to Annual Meeting; Bro. J. E. Gregory and Bro. Wm. Wrightsman, alternates. Bro. Jesse M. Warner is our pastor for another year. Our love feast will be June 11, at 2 P. M.—Mrs. Lizzie Wrightsman, Milledgeville, Ill., April 29.

Morrison.—Our Sunday-school gave a very interesting program on Easter, which was much enjoyed. Death has come for the first time in our midst, and has taken one of our little boys, six weeks old. Bro. James M. Moore will begin a series of meetings for us June 18. Bro. Flory will address our Sunday-school next Sunday.—Mrs. Ruth Smith, 1108 Avenue, Sterling Ill., April 24.

West Branch.—Our church met in council April 22, with Bro. W. H. Shull presiding. A temperance committee of two was chosen from each church. The following elders' committee was also appointed to select and purchase new lamps. Bro. Geo. W. Wrightsman was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting.—Chalmer G. Shull, Virden, Ill., April 25.

INDIANA

Bremen.—One sister put on Christ in baptism, administered by Bro. Hutchison, on Sunday morning, April 16.—Bro. Bailey.

Huntington City church will hold their love feast May 21. A few of the members have left us of late, one family, Thomas Downey, who lives with his daughter, Mrs. George Gill, on Broadway, moved to Ohio. We had a testimony prayer. The brother is past fourscore, but holds on to the faith of Jesus Christ.—Mrs. Laura Mentzer, 1 East Market. Our elder, Bro. Hutchison, and wife and Bro. Hutchison for the elders of the church and was anointed. He is afflicted with gangrene in his feet and has to remain in bed almost all the time. He is very patient under his trial of faith, and tries to make life as pleasant for him as possible, under the circumstances.—Mrs. Ida Hutchison, 1 East Market. Will time comes to be called up higher.—John B. Bailey, 709 Jefferson Street, Huntington, Ind., April 24.

Sampson Hill.—Our church met in council April 27. Bro. Peter Hoke, Bro. Jesse Hoke and Bro. Jesse Hoke, Jr., were chosen three interesting sermons and then went to other fields of labor. Bro. Hoke, Jr., has been with us for about a month. All the brethren here, and he greatly feels the need of the prayers of God's people.—W. L. Ross, R. D. 2, Shoals, Ind., April 29.

IOWA

Beaver.—The good work still continues. One young sister was baptized last Sunday after preaching services. Bro. J. Q. Coughnour, of Ankeny, Iowa, performed the rite. We feel we have much reason to thank God and take courage. We stated, a few weeks ago, that our love feast would be held May 13. We have since changed the date to April 18th, commencing at 6:30.—Belle Ruth, Beaver, Iowa, April 24.

Dallas Center.—April 2 Bro. J. Y. Yoder, of McPherson, Kans., gave us a very interesting discourse. Our Sunday-school is increasing in numbers and interest. The Christian Workers gave an Easter program, which was enjoyed by a large audience. April 16 Bro. Huffman, of the Home Mission, gave us two interesting lectures on the subject, "Preparation, Life Interest and Actual in the Mission Field." Three letters of membership have recently been received.—Mrs. Ella Hoff, Dallas Center, Iowa, April 24.

Panther.—The Lord's work at this place is moving along encouragingly. The interest in Sunday-school and prayer is on the increase. We have recently started a Sunday-school at our country church, Bro. Yoder in superintendent. Our elder, Bro. J. B. Spurgeon, gave us a most excellent discourse last Sunday morning on Rom. 12: 2. Our love feast will be held May 13, commencing at 10:30. Bro. Yoder is with us. We hope to have a spiritual revival from the presence of the Lord.—A. M. Stine, Adel, Iowa, April 24.

KANSAS

Burr Oak.—Bro. E. E. John, of McPherson, Kans., President of the Educational Board, was with us Sunday evening. He gave us an interesting talk on "Rescue Work." At the close of the talk a collection was taken for the work. Just prior to this we sent $15 to the sufferers in China. We expect Brethren Sword and Bertsche, of India, to be with us May 16 and 17.—Emma J. Modlin, Burr Oak, Kans., April 26.

Victor.—Bro. J. E. Jarboe and wife, of Red Cloud, Nebr., came into our midst April 2 and began meetings, which continued until April 26. The interest was very encouraging, which aroused the members to more active service, and many were encouraged to live better lives. Bro. and Sister Jarboe are splendid personal workers. Through their untiring efforts they created quite an interest. Two were buried with Christ in baptism. Our love feast was held April 15. Bro. Wagner and wife, of Portis, Kans., were with us. Saturday, at 10:30, we convened at the church, to hear the Word of God proclaimed by Bro. Wagner. Dinner was served on the ground. At 2:30 P. M. Bro. Wagner spoke again. Bro. David Heckman and wife, of Dorrance, Kans., being present. Bro. Wagner spoke on "Christian Obedience." In the evening another love feast was enjoyed. Bro. Wagner spoke on "Christian Consecration." The next day Bro. Jarboe officiated. We closed our series of meetings the following evening with a farewell meeting. Sister Jarboe won the hearts of many during their short stay with us. The prayers of our people go with them.—A. C. Daggett, Covert, Kans., April 26.

MARYLAND

Pipe Creek.—Our church met in special council April 22. Eld. W. M. Wise presided. Two letters of membership were received; one being that of a deacon. A good report of the church visit was given by the delegate. Several items of business was also reported. Eld. C. D. Bonsack was elected delegate to Annual Meeting. We decided to have Bro. J. W. Lear visit us, to help in the temperance work. At the close of the meeting one was baptized.—Elizaa I. Engler, New Windsor, Md., April 26.

Red Creek.—I left home April 21 to attend to the Master's work in the above congregation, and presided at the Wolfred (Christian) church the same evening. We held a council at Bethel the next day, and appointed the time for a love feast to be held Aug. 26, at the Bethel house. The same evening I preached at that place and "The Awakening." I attended Sunday-school and preached the next morning at Bonnie Mount schoolhouse. I then attended Sunday-school at the Canaan schoolhouse in the afternoon; also had preaching that evening at the same place. Monday evening I preached at the home of Bro. Hammond's near Bonnie Mount. Two have been restored to church fellowship, and there are also two applicants for baptism. It is thought best to have a series of meetings with these. I returned home April 24.—Emra T. Fike, R. D. 2, Oakland, Md., April 28.

MICHIGAN

Bear Lake.—Our church met in council April 13. Our elder, Bro. Samuel E. Bonsack, presided. Bro. Bonsack was chosen as elder for one year, Bro. Erwin Bala is our Sunday-school superintendent. It was decided to hold our love feast May 13, at 4 P. M.—W. E. Young, Clarion, Mich., April 23.

Grand Rapids.—Our dear souls,—Yesterday and today were received into the church by confession and baptism last Sunday. The sister has been teaching a Sunday-school class for several weeks, and we feel sure that they will be very helpful in the Lord's work here. Our Sunday-school spells gave a splendid program on Easter Day. There were six-six present.—Mrs. G. F. Culler, 829 Elm Avenue, Grand Rapids, Mich., April 24.

Long Lake.—Easter Sunday will be remembered at this place as a day of spiritual refreshing. Bro. Hutchison met at 10:15 A. M., followed by preaching. At the close of the services one was received and confessed Christ. Baptism in the afternoon he was baptized. All were much cheered by the sermon preached by Bro. D. M. Sowers, in the evening. On Monday we held a program for the younger classes of the 3 P. M. Sunday-school. Everything passed off pleasantly. We had a very large audience. We have been holding our services in a schoolhouse, which sometimes is too small for the crowds we have. We hope soon to have a more appropriate house of worship. Our attendance at Sunday-school is about forty-five.—Mrs. Hannah Mitchell, Mich., April 24.

Prescott.—The little band of forty members here are rejoicing this week over the reception into the church of another,—were received into the church by Christian baptism. Several of our neighbors were witnesses of the administration of the ordinance of immersion. Our services are well attended. We have Sunday-school at 9 A. M., followed by preaching at 10 A. M. Our meeting is held in the schoolhouse as soon as possible. There is none of any denomination, nearer than Standish, where there is a location here are earnest, consistent, and highly respected by the community. On the evening of June 18 we have Elders Gillin and Smith will organize us into a working body. Brethren, pray for us!—Ira G. Blocher, Prescott, Mich., April 27.

MISSOURI

Nevada.—Our series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Leander Smith, closed April 19. Eight souls made the good confession, and were buried with their Lord in baptism. Bro. Smith, of Joplin, Mo., conducted the services. The Sunday following was held our love feast and communion. The services were well attended and the interest continued to the close. We had much encouraging success at the above meetings, and thank God that we were able to lead some of his children back to the fold.—Bro. Jesse D. Mohler, April 24.

Warrensburg.—Our church recently enjoyed a few sermons by Bro. A. Hutchison, who had frequently visited the congregation in the surrounding country. Those who were present who had heard his first sermon. Evening services were held for a few days. About one-third of our members expect to attend the Annual Meeting this year. Bro. S. E. Miller is also our delegate.—Jesse D. Mohler, Warrensburg, Mo., April 24.

MONTANA

Medicine Lake.—The Easter program, given by the Sunday-school scholars, was very well rendered. We had a well-filled house. Some who were present had never heard any of the brethren preach before. We have received two more letters of membership.—Katie E. Keller, Enterprise, Mont., April 26.

NEBRASKA

Octavia.—We held our love feast April 14. Bro. J. Taylor, of Arcadia, Nebr., and Bro. Ray Dye members communed. Bro. Tawzer also preached for us on Sunday morning. On Sunday and Sunday evenings Elder Tawzer, of India, gave us talks on India. A collection of $29.98 was taken for the benefit of mission missionaries in the foreign field. We enjoyed these services very much.—Lillian R. Keller, Octavia, Nebr., April 24.

NORTH DAKOTA

Bowbells.—We reorganized our Sunday-school with a full corps of officers.—P. A. Miller, R. D. 2, Box 18, Bowbells, N. Dak., April 24.

Kelvin.—Bro. D. H. Pouts, of Surrey, N. Dak., came to this community on Saturday evening, April 15. We welcome him into our midst, as we realize the need of his services. Two members were received by baptism. The writer was chosen superintendent. Bro. Pouts is expecting his family in the near future.—Mrs. Ella Schroeder, Kelvin, N. Dak., April 24.

OHIO

Ashland.—Bro. Blough, of India, came to us and gave a very interesting discourse on "The Educational Lines of Home." Only one letter of membership was received, made only a small audience attended. An offering of $6.30 was taken for the benefit of our mission. We had many readings and declamations; also Easter songs by different classes. April 21 the church met in council. Bro. Bessenyei was chosen as delegate to Annual Meeting. Our love feast will be May 27, at 10 A. M.—Mrs. E. E. Desenberg, R. D. 7, Box 6, Ashland, Ohio, April 25.

Covington.—On Wednesday evening we had a members' meeting at the church. Bro. J. H. Miller spoke to the members on the importance of cultivating a spirit of fellowship and sympathy. Thursday evening the regular meeting of this kind must prove beneficial to all. Our attendance at Sunday-school is fair, but might do good. We decided to have our July council in the evening.—Ida M. Helm, Ashland, Ohio, April 28.

Lexington.—Our little band of workers surrounded the Lord's table April 15, at 6 P. M. Eld. Allen Ockerman officiated, assisted by Bro. Bonsack. Our hearts were benefited and encouraged to press on in the good work. On Sunday after the communion Bro. Bonsack made an earnest appeal in an Easter sermon from Col. 3: 1, 2.—L. E. Ockerman, R. D. 3, Hillsboro, Ohio, April 24.

Lima.—The District Missionary Meeting of the Northwestern District of Ohio was one of the best we have ever had. Thursday, the 20th, was spent in addresses and the discussion of important topics relative to mission work. Bro. Galen. B. Royer was with us and inspired us all with more missionary zeal. He spoke to us on Wednesday night and three times on Thursday, along with the ministry to usher on Thursday evening. We also had an interesting Educational Meeting. On Thursday evening an offering of more than $100 was taken which is to be used for the support of the District's missionaries. Brother and Sister Royer and Bro. D. Sherfy-bile, a brother to S. P. Berkebile, was moderator of the missionary meeting the writer, secretary.—G. A. Snider, Lima, Ohio, April 26.

Lower Twin.—Our church met in council April 4, with Eld. Aaron Bilhimer presiding. Our home ministers, Bro. John J. Franklin Brubaker is to represent the church at Annual Meeting; Bro. Noah Erbaugh, alternate. Sister Mary Ellen Brubaker and Jonas Horning are our delegates to District Meeting, with Bro. Andrew Brubaker and Bro. Noah Erbaugh, alternates. Our love feast was set for May 11.—Ruth C. Kinsey, R. D. 4, West Alexandria, Ohio, April 24.

Middle District.—On Easter Sunday three of our Sunday-school boys of Morris were buried with Christ in baptism. The sacred rite was administered by Bro. John Gump.—C. V. Coppock, R. D. 3,-Tippecanoe City, Ohio, April 25.

OKLAHOMA.

Guthrie.—I just returned from Stillwater, Okla., where I have been holding a series of meetings. The meetings lasted two weeks, and while there were only a few conversions, the best of attendance and interest prevailed throughout. There are only a few of the Brethren in Stillwater, but they are keeping up the services regularly every Sunday. The State Agricultural and Mechanical College is located at Stillwater, which affords a great opportunity for young people to prepare themselves for a life of usefulness.—J. C. Ninninger, Guthrie, Okla., April 24.

Plains church held their love feast April 22. Fifty-two members participated in the Lord's Supper. Visiting ministers present were Brethren I. H. Miller, Ernest Shenefelt and Joseph Gilke. Since our last report we have had seven baptized; seven scholars have been received into the church by baptism.—Hulda Pettijohn, R. 3, Aline, Okla., April 24.

Stillwater.—Last Sunday night we closed one of the most spiritual and inspiring series of meetings we have had for we have a house of our own in which to worship. They were conducted by Bro. J. C. Ninninger, of Guthrie, Okla. He preached at least one excellent sermon, and was untiring in devotion to the work, as well as his kindness, won the hearts of all who came to hear him. The house was full every night. Bro. Gilke said: "That young man was the best preacher we have ever heard in Stillwater, and he can preach Jesus and the love of God." All were sorry he could not stay with us any longer. There were baptisms, and reclaimed, and the kingdom. We feel much encouraged. If we could get a few more families in here we would have a nice congregation.—J. H. Cox, Stillwater, Okla., April 26.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Bart Creek.—Our union Sunday-school opened again April 2, with good attendance and much interest. Our love feast two ago it seemed as if great rivers and mountains were in our way, but we have all safely and well been present.—Mary Ellen Chambersburg, Pa., April 2.

Dallas Creek.—We had a glorious meeting at the Trout Run churchhouse. Bro. Walter Hamilton preached nineteen soul-inspiring sermons. Three accessions by baptism. Attendance was deferred on account of sickness. As we are greatly in need of a good, energetic and faithful minister, in order to bring our congregation to a higher standard, the members are urging Bro. Hamilton to move into our midst.—Richard A. Dasaderf, Jones Mills, Pa., April 25.

Juniata.—The Church of the Brethren met in council April 8. We decided to hold our love feast May 13. We closed our Easter evening by singing the sacred cantata, entitled "The King of Glory." It is a most beautiful and inspiring story of the life of Christ from his birth to his resurrection. The house was filled with people and everyone seemed very much pleased with the entertainment.—Elma C. Brumbaugh, Roaring Spring, Pa., April 24.

Ligonier.—Our church met in council April 15, with Bro. P. J. Blough presiding. We elected Sister Mary Wolford and Brother Ed Wolford as delegates to Annual Meeting. Bro. P. J. Blough was reelected as our elder. Our love feast was set for June 3 at 2 P. M. We decided to have a series of meetings sometime this summer. We also decided that our church needed a new carpet and paper. A committee was appointed to look after this work. Bro. Sanner has a class of ten boys and girls whom he is teaching to sing. They usually have several numbers ready for Sunday evening.—Verda V. Wolford, R. D. 2, Ligonier, Pa., April 24.

Little Beaver.—Our church met in special council April 14. Our elder, Bro. E. M. Wenger, presided. Adjoining elders, Brethren Jessie Nineley and William Hoover were present and conducted the election of calling Bro. Henry C. Ziegler to the ministry, and Brethren Lavern Ziegler and Samuel Ziegler to the office of deacon. Bro. Ira D. Gibble was also advanced to the second degree of the ministry. Bro. William Oberkircher conducted the installation services. Five letters of membership were recently granted.—H. M. Frantz, Frysville, Pa., April 24.

Maple Spring.—The District Meeting of Western Pennsylvania was held at the place April 6. Bro. Jacob Myers extended. Bro. Jasper Barnthouse was elected moderator; Bro. H. S. Bomgardner, clerkthree. Bro. H. Hoover and Bro. Hoover will represent the District on the Standing Committee. The following petition was passed to Annual Conference: "We, the Middle Creek congregation, assembled in council April 14, 1911, petition Annual Meeting through District Meeting of Western Pennsylvania to take some steps preventing any real estate advertising from appearing in the literature of the Church of the Brethren." Bro. Jesse Myers was elected on the Mission Board. The mission at Greensburg was granted permission to canvass the church at large to build a new church in that city.—H. S. Replogle, R. D. 1, Shanksville, Pa.

Meyersdale.—Bro. H. C. Early will conduct a series of meetings for us, beginning June 16 and continuing over Sunday. Our love feast will be held June 25. April 23 three brethren and their wives were installed into the office of deacon. Bro. B. T. Buford, of Garrett, Pa., officiated.—Mrs. Addison Miller is getting along nicely.—Ellen M. Pike, Meyersdale, Pa., April 24.

Middle Creek.—Our church met in council April 14. Our elder, Bro. Jesse Hoover, presided. Adjoining elders present. Meeting are Elders Silas Hoover and H. A. Stahl. One letter of membership was received. We expect to hold our love feast June 11. Our council, in connection with the communion, will be held May 26.—Mrs. D. F. Walker, Rockwood, Pa., April 24.

Norristown.—Our church met in council April 20, with our elder, Bro. G. B. Shisler, presiding. Delegates were elected before the church, and was disposed of. Four letters of membership were received, and one was granted. One dear brother was restored to fellowship. Our officers for the Christian Workers' program were elected for the coming year. Our delegates to District Meeting are Brethren E. F. Nedrow and E. L. Fretz, and J. H. Ellis as alternate. Bro. Nedrow will represent at Annual Meeting by letter. Our love feast will be held June 11.—Hattie M. Nedrow, 737 George St., Norristown, Pa., April 24.

Shady Grove.—Our love feast at Chambersburg, Pa., is May 21,—at all-day service. Our brethren have made a large additional Sunday-school room for our primary classes. Our Sunday-school is growing in number and interest. Bro. Blaine Bare is our superintendent. We are blessed with a strong body of brethren and sisters as teachers. The school rendered a special program on Easter Sunday. The scholars all received a treat, after which Bro. Melvin Jacobs, of Waynesboro, Pa., gave us an interesting sermon on "The Resurrection." A man and wife applied for membership.—Wm. A. Anthony, Shady Grove, Pa., April 19.

Upper Canowago.—Our church met in council at the Mummert house April 22, preparatory to our love feast at this place, May 13. Eld. Jacob S. Miller, Lindsey, presided over the meeting. Two were received by letter, and two letters were granted. Brethren Andrew Bowser and Noah Bowser were elected to the deacon's office and duly installed. Brethren S. M. Lehigh and Jacob S. Miller were elected to the second degree of the ministry.—Andrew Bowser, East Berlin, Pa., April 23.

West Greentree.—April 23 we baptized two persons. Since our last report three certificates of membership were received. At a special council, held recently, Bro. Nathan Martin was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. He and his wife will be installed the same day.—S. R. McDannel, Elizabethtown, Pa., April 25.

TENNESSEE.

Bristol.—Bro. S. H. Garst, of Blountville, Tenn., recently preached two able sermons for us. The house was fairly well filled. Bro. Garst is well pleased. What we need is a churchhouse. More and more souls are coming to the Lord.—Geo. Bristol, Tenn., April 26.

Hartford.—This has been a mission point in the Knob Creek congregation for about a year. Recently the church purchased the building and Bro. Lee Sherfey began a Sunday-school with Bro. P. G. Bowman as superintendent; Sister Nora Hodges, secretary-treasurer. The Brethren have preaching services on the third Sunday of each month. We are planning to hold a series of meetings here in the near future. Much interest is manifested in the Sunday-school and in the Sunday-school. We hope that much good will be accomplished here for the Master.—Angie Clark, R. D. 6, Johnson City, Tenn., April 24.

TEXAS.

Bethel.—Bro William Johnson, of the Tropico church, Glendale, Cal., having come here to visit his daughter, Sister Ethel Stover, who is our Sunday-school and preached for us in the evening. Our Christian Workers' Meeting is increasing and progressing nicely. The members here all seem to be prospering and rejoicing.—Lee Dachtman, R. D. 1, Sweedy, Texas, April 24.

Mound Valley.—Bro. J. A. Miller, of Manvel, Texas, came to us a short time ago and preached three sermons for us. The attendance was good and the interest was manifested. Many inquire: "When are you people going to build a house of worship?" At present it is hard for us to answer. Quite a number have expressed a willingness to help us. One man, a friend of the Brethren, says he will give two acres of good land to any one who will build a church on it. We have a good union Sunday-school, with an average attendance of 125, but we have no church house. Who will come?—John Barnhart, Montalba, Texas, April 23.

VIRGINIA.

Timberville.—The series of meetings which Bro. W. K. Conner has been conducting for us at Mount Olivet, since April 2, closed April 16. Although we had some very inclement weather during the meetings, the attendance was good. Bro. Conner spoke to us on some of the most practical subjects that we have ever had. The soul-inspiring sermons we have heard. As a result of Bro. Conner's efforts we had seven to unite with the church by baptism, five reclaimed. We feel that we are strengthened spiritually, and hope to keep on growing.—Lena Wampler, R. 1, first opportunity.—A. C. Garber, Timberville, Va., April 29.

WASHINGTON.

Centralia.—We have just closed a glorious revival meeting. Bro E. M. Studebaker came to us April 9 and remained two weeks. He conducted a Bible Institute in the forenoon, and revival services in the evening. Seven were baptized. Two baptized. The day before the meetings began one was baptized, making 10. The church was added to in number by confession and baptism. On the evening of April 23 we held our love feast, which was enjoyed by the Lord's Spirit. Many of these for the first time. Eld. Silverson, of Tacoma, Wash., officiated. At this time Bro. J. L. Weddle was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. Our church is growing in number, and much zeal and interest are being manifested. Last there is also much work for the Sunday-workers are few, any one desiring a healthful climate and a good field to work for the Master, do well to come this way. Since our last report two letters were granted.—Anna Myers, Centralia, Wash., April 27.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Shiloh.—Bro. C. W. Guthrie, formerly of Los Angeles, Cal., now of Greenville, Ill., spent the month of March with us, giving his one week's series of lectures on his trip around the world. We certainly appreciated his efforts very much.—Dora Lavelle, Valley Furnace, W. Va., April 19.

CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

OUR TROUBLES AT MUSCATINE, IOWA.

The Muscatine church is passing through a siege of opposition which reminds us of that encountered by the church at Jerusalem, and which, if continued, will scatter the true ones abroad. A few have gone with the Button Rulers' Union, while others of members are showing their true colors, and must suffer taunts and violence in order to work and secure a livelihood. They must be guarded while they work and on the way to and from their homes.

They have endured some violence. Rocks, etc., were hurled at them, and missiles were thrown at their windows after night. A dynamite bomb was thrown at one brother's window and, striking the screen, fell back into a puddle of water without exploding. It was powerful enough to have blown the house up, but Providence protected.

Four troops of soldiers are now on duty day and night, patrolling the streets, enforcing martial law. This prohibits all gatherings after night; hence our meeting tonight, on Bible work, must be deferred.

The trouble has been on for several weeks, and no end of it is in sight. It is sad, indeed, to see how our labors and work are being destroyed and hindered by evil ones, and that we are a target for their persecution because we are loyal to Christ, and stand for the right. We are surely in troublesome times. We crave the prayers of God's people that we may come out more than conquerors for the cause of Christ. But we must rejoice that we are counted worthy to suffer for Christ and his church; for "if God be for us, who can be against us?"

Muscatine, Iowa, April 26. T. A. Robinson.

CONSISTENCY IN PRAYER.

As a people we have great faith in prayer. We rely upon the promise that when we ask, believing that we shall receive the things we pray for, they will be given unto us. Since we have this confidence in prayer, it becomes us to be very careful to pray for everything we need that we will be for our good, and which we can receive in no other way than through our Heavenly Father's favor.

We are apt to use stereotyped forms of prayer, regardless of what the occasion may be, and pray for certain things at certain times, while many things equally important are entirely omitted. Then, too, we sometimes pray very earnestly for God to do some things which he has made it our duty to do, and given us the strength and the means to perform, and where there is nothing lacking but the will to do our duty.

With some, the workers in certain fields are always remembered at a throne of grace, while others, who are just as weak, and in the confessing just as much need, whose work is equally important, are overlooked. All who are engaged in any line of the Lord's work are fit objects for prayer, because all need the grace and strength which only Divine Power and Divine Wisdom can give. However, those who are not workers, but who ought to be, may need prayer just as much. Those who are weak, those who are young in the Christ-life, those who are discouraged, are much in need of prayer. While we hear many appeals for prayers for the ministers, that is a prayer offered for the care-worn, overburdened minister's wife, whose self-denying faithfulness makes it possible for the minister to accomplish what he does. The deacon, whose work is very important, often very difficult and trying, is seldom the object of prayer.

Prayers for the widow and the orphan are very common, and always in order—perhaps. God has, on several occasions, performed a miracle to relieve the distress of these unfortunate ones. He increased the widow's oil and meal in the time of Elijah, so that she and her son perished not. In the time of Elisha the multiplied pots widow's oil for sons need not go into slavery. However, both these events occurred when God's children were poor and could not relieve the wants of the poor widows Now God works through means, and he uses his children as his means or instruments, to carry out his work here upon earth. He has expressly commanded that those who have realized what pure and undefiled religion is should visit the widows and fatherless (James 1: 27) and these visits should bring comfort and consolation to the sad and lonely ones, and reveal to those who are doing the visiting what are the real needs of the unfortunate ones. The Christian who has been blessed with the good things of this world, who knows the state of the widow and the orphan, and shuts up his bowels of compassion towards them, how dwells the love of God in him?

What is most needed, then, is not so much more prayers for the widow and the orphan, as more prayers for the more fervent children of God, that they might more fully realize their duty to the poor and unfortunate, and that they might be more willing instruments in his hands to carry out his work of mercy here upon earth. We can hardly expect God to perform a miracle to feed the hungry, when even the crumbs that are gathered off the rich Christians' tables would provide for their needs if they were but given them. We can not expect him to perform a miracle to provide a home for the destitute orphan, when so many of the world's orphans whom he has adopted, whom he has blessed with large and comfortable homes, and plenty of everything good, will not open their doors and give home and shelter to a single one.

Perhaps, if our prayers were directed more to the end that we could partake more of the divine nature, have more love and concern for our fellow-men, more self-sacrificing devotion to the good of others, they would accomplish more practical results in alleviating of distress and of uplifting humanity than they now do. If we understood that living the Christ-life daily is as important as preaching the Gospel, many prayers would be answered,

THE FIRST DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA.

The Educational and Sunday-school Meetings of the First District of Virginia were held at the Antioch church, Franklin County, April 13 to 16. Educational program opened at 9: 15 A. M. Eld. W. H. Naff was moderator. The topics discussed were along the line of present-day issues, and referred particularly to Daleville College, thus bringing our own school prominently before the meeting.

"What Place Shall the Bible Have in Our Church?" was the first topic. Some strong arguments were brought out in favor of our own schools rather than State Institutions. The strong tendency to eliminate the Bible from our State institutions, the skeptical inclination of many instructors, and the present efforts to remove the Bible from the public schools, make it the more imperative that the Bible be prominent in our own institutions.

Many of our children will go to school, whether we foster the educational spirit in them or not. We ought to send them to our own schools where religious influences are at a maximum. Thousands of children drift away from the church because of influences brought to bear upon them in other schools.

The high standard of Christianity for which our school stands was strongly emphasized. The school has not yet reached its ideal of perfection; nor are the students perfect,—neither are the homes nor the communities from which they come. The church can help to approach the standard by rallying to her support. Some of the undesirable things in our schools could be eliminated if our people would fall in line and would more fully support the school.

At noon refreshments, such as our sisters know how to prepare, were served, and an hour of pleasant, social intercourse was enjoyed by all. The social feature of such gatherings is both pleasant and profitable. The association of kindred minds is one of the highest enjoyments of this life and is a foretaste of what we should enjoy in the life beyond.

At 1: P. M., Eld. C. E. Eller being chairman, the Sunday-school session began. The first topic brought the temperance movement into prominence. The Sunday-school can accomplish mighty results by raising up temperance advocates through the influence of temperance lessons. The best way to get rid of liquor is to vote it out. The Sunday-school can make it possible to do this.

Weather conditions were most unfavorable, yet the attendance was good and all enjoyed a most excellent, spiritual feast.

Daleville, Va., April 19. J. W. Ikenberry.

He was the father of a family of twelve children. He was married to Lucinda Row Aug. 15, 1850, in Jackson County, Ind. They moved to Indiana in 1854, and in 1871 they moved to the State of Michigan, settling near Clarksville, where he has since made his home for nearly forty years. To them were born seven children. Two children died in infancy. The mother departed this life in 1900. Eld. Long was baptized in 1846 by Bro. Gabriel Neff, of Ohio, elected to the ministry in 1857, advanced to the second degree in 1858, and ordained to the first degree Orange County, Ind., by Brethren Jacob Berkey and Michael Shotts. He served in the ministry for fifty-three years. Four sons, four daughters and one sister. His children tenderly cared for him in his declining years. Since coming to Michigan he was identified with the Old Order Brethren. In good years he was a faithful worker throughout life for the interest of the church.—Lydia Smith, R. D. 42, Clarksville, Mich.

McCormick, Bro. John, died of tuberculosis in the Manor congregation, Tilghmanton, Md., April 11, 1911, aged about 39 years. He united with the Church of the Brethren some years ago and lived a consistent Christian life. He is survived by his wife and four children. Services in the Manor church by Eld. D. V. Long, assisted by Eld. J. E. Otto and Dr. V. A. Mowen.—Mrs. Elizabeth Hoffman, Hagerstown, R. D. 8, Fortin Rowland, Fairplay, Md.

Miller, Sister Ida, eldest daughter of Harrison and Margaret Zerfoss, born near Harrisonburg, Rockingham Co., Va., Aug. 10, 1877, died at the home of her son-in-law, Bro. H. E. Miller, in the bounds of the Spring Creek church, April 16, 1911, aged 33 years, 8 months and 6 days. She was married to Daniel Miller, Dec. 24, 1896. To this union were born two children, one of whom survives. She moved to Greene County, Tenn., where she united with the Church of the Brethren and lived a faithful life until called by death. In 1874 the family removed to Macoupin County, Ill., where they lived for a short time, then to Douglas County, Kans., in 1881. Since Bro. Miller's death, in 1893, Sister Miller has made home with her mother, Sister Margaret. In December, 1911, she went with them to Quinter, Kans., where she died. She leaves eight children. One child preceded her. Funeral services at the home in Douglas County, Kans. Services by Bro. W. A. Kinzie in the Appanoose church, Tenn., and by Bro. Wertenberger at the Brethren cemetery.—Ada E. Beckner, Overbrook, Kans.

Miller, Sister Susanna, died of consumption, April 19, 1911, in the bounds of the Dunnings Creek congregation, Bedford Co., Pa., aged 60 years, 3 months and 7 days. She was a daughter of Eld. John B. Miller. She never was hearty and strong. Sister Miller was a kind and loving Christian woman, taking great interest in the work of the church, and was always ready to do her part. She was much respected by all in the neighborhood and community, and will be greatly missed. She leaves a kind father, two brothers and two sisters. Services in the New Paris church by Eld. Jacob Metzger, assisted by Bro. T. B. Mickie. Text, Job 14: 10. Interment in the Mock cemetery. A short time before her death she called for the elders of the church and was anointed.—Levi Rogers, Alum Bank, Pa.

Musgrave, Bro. Howard A., born July 27, 1892, died of typhoid fever, at the home of his parents in the bounds of the Brothers Valley congregation, Somerset Co., Pa., April 9, 1911, aged 18 years, 8 months and 12 days. He is survived by his parents and three brothers. He became a member of the Church of the Brethren in his youthful days. He called for the elders and was anointed. Services by Elders D. H. Walker and P. U. Miller. Text, Job 8: 9.—Chas. P. Mosgrave, Berlin, Pa.

Moyers, John B., died in the hospital in Enid, in the bounds of the Hyde congregation, Major Co., Okla., April 13, 1911, aged 28 years, 2 months and 21 days. His death was caused by an automobile accident. He was married two years and prior to the day of his funeral. He leaves a loving young companion, his parents, three brothers and six sisters. Services by the writer in the Baptist church in Ames. Text, Gen. 3: 19.—A. J. Smith, Argonia, Kans.

Nischer, Stella Inda, daughter of Bro. Simon and Sister Caroline Nischer, born Oct. 8, 1899, died of typhoid fever, April 11, 1911, at the home of her parents in the bounds of the Pine Creek congregation, near Tegarden, Ind., aged 11 years, 6 months and 3 days. Stella was a bright and intelligent girl, of a kind and loving disposition. She was a regular attendant at the Brethren Sunday-school at the same house. She leaves a father, mother, three sisters and one brother. One brother and one sister preceded her. Services at the Otter township church by Jacob Hildebrand. Text, John 5: 28, 29. Interment in the Center cemetery.—M. S. Morris, R. D. 1, Walkerton, Ind.

Palmer, Irene E., little daughter of Brother Elmer and sister Mae Palmer, died Feb. 12, 1911, aged 1 year, 5 months and 2 days. Thus a little bud was taken from earth to bloom in heaven. Services at their home by Eld. Jesse Strycker. Text, Luke 8: 52. Interment in the Maple Creek cemetery.—Mrs. L. Swihart, Kotzebued, Sask., Can.

Reif, Sister Lydia, nee Rittenhouse, born in Worcester township, Montgomery Co., Pa., Oct. 20, 1832, died at the home of her daughter, Collegeville, Pa., April 14, 1911, aged 78 years, 5 months and 24 days. She was married to Benjamin O. Reif in December, 1852. Her husband died in 1881. She was a member of the Church of the Brethren over forty-five years. She is survived by two sons and four daughters. A son and a daughter preceded her in death. Services April 19, at Collegeville, Pa. Interment in the Methacton cemetery. Services by Elders Abram Grater and Jesse Ziegler.—A. H. Rittenhouse, Eagle, Ill.

Replogle, Bro. Noah, born in Ohio, Feb. 15, 1835, died at Donaldson, Marshall Co., Ind., April 17, 1911, aged 82 years, 2 months and 2 days. He leaves five sons, one daughter and three sisters. He has been a member of the Church of the Brethren for a number of years. Services at the Maxville house by Eld. Jacob Hildebrand. Interment in the Bitsville cemetery.—M. S. Morris, R. D. 1, Walkerton, Ind.

Royer, Foster, son of Brother and Sister Noah E. Royer, died at his home in Empire, Cal., April 5, 1911, aged nearly 4 years. He leaves his parents and one sister. Services at the house by Eld. S. F. Sanger.—Myrtle M. Jullus, R. D. 3, Box 212, Modesto, Cal.

Smith, Sister Mina B., only child of Bro. J. H. and Sister Sarah J. Christian, died of cancer, in the Oakland congregation, near Bradford, Darke Co., Ohio, aged 37 years, 7 months and 4 days. She united in marriage with Bro. H. Z. Smith Nov. 5, 1891. To this union were born three children, the eldest preceding her in spirit where she now waits and watches to her Master at the early age of fourteen, and fully consecrated her life to his service. In her death the family loses a kind and affectionate wife and mother, the parents a loving and obedient daughter, the church a consecrated worker, and a leader in the service of song. During her illness she received the anointing, which was a great comfort to her. She was fully resigned to the Lord's will. A few days before her death she called her dear ones around her bed and bade them each affectionate good-by, telling them of her departure, and requesting them to meet her in heaven. At the going down of the sun, April 1, 1911, her spirit took its fully fell asleep. She leaves a broken-hearted husband, two children, and loving parents. Services by Brethren D. M. Garver and J. J. Rosenberger at Hyatt's Creek church. Interment in the Harris Creek cemetery.—Maria Miller, Bradford, Ohio.

Snider, Bro. William Otto, son of D. M. and Hettie Snider, born near Silvercreek, Delaware Co., Ind., Sept. 26, 1881, died after a year's illness, at Covina, Cal., April 14, 1911, aged 29 years, 6 months and 19 days. He was married to Minnie D. Overholtzer Dec. 23, 1907. To this union was born one son. Deceased was always patient, kind and cheerful during his long illness. His last request was that his little son be brought up a missionary. He joined the Church of the Brethren at the age of sixteen and lived a devoted life. He leaves a wife, a son, a father, three sisters and five brothers. A mother and little brother preceded him. Services were held at the Covina Church of the Brethren by Bro. Harvey Senft. He "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." Interment in Oak Dale cemetery.—Harvey Senft, Covina, Cal.

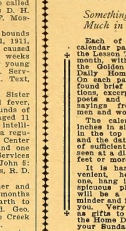
Stump, Sister Sarah Jane, nee Miller, the youngest daughter and child of Bro. and Brethren Miller, born in Darke County, Ohio, in the bounds of the Beech Grove congregation, July 4, 1840, died April 16, 1911, aged 70 years, 7 months and 12 days. She was united in marriage to Bro. John W. Stump, Jr., May 5, 1900. This happy relation was blessed with four children, one having died in infancy. She leaves, three small children, an aged mother, six brothers, three sisters, one half-brother and three half-sisters. While sitting in the family circle, with her two-year-old baby boy on her lap, in spite of death claiming her, and while entertaining another word she ceased breathing, and "was not, for God took her." Sister Stump united with the Church of the Brethren at the age of seven years, lived a faithful life and died in the hope of a blessed future. Services by the writer, assisted by Eld. J. W. Bloser.—Wm. Beery, R. D. 14, Dayton, Ohio.

Troxel, Mary Hannah, nee Arnold, born near Jefferson, Harrison Co., Ohio, March 13, 1819, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Simon Keck, Washington, Iowa, March 19, 1911, aged 91 years and 1 day. March 18, 1845, she was married to Jacob Worley, near Canton, Ohio. To this union were born six daughters. One preceded her in death thirty-six years. Mr. Worley died March 16, 1852. A second marriage took place March 16, 1859, to Geo. Troxel, near Monroe, Ohio. To this union were born two children. Both of them died when young. Mr. Troxel died July 3, 1881. Grandma Troxel led a ragged constitution and outlived many of her loved ones. One brother, two sisters, two husbands and three children preceded her in death. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. Troxel and her family with whom she resided, one brother, about twenty-five years, having come to this place with her father when in her teens. They moved from Ohio to Iowa, from Ohio, in 1844, at which place she resided until about seven years ago, when she was brought by her daughter, Mrs. Keck, to Iowa, to be cared for in her remaining years. Mrs. Troxel was converted when a girl and united with the Church of the Brethren. She was a faithful, quiet Christian and often spoke about going home. Often she gave the assurance of her readiness to go: "Everything is all right, let me go home," were some of her last words. Short services at the home, on Wednesday by the pastor of the Methodist church of Pierson, assisted by Rev. J. A. Parker. General funeral services at Eagle Grove Star Grove church by the writer, assisted by Bro. H. Wingert, of Klingsley, Iowa. Interment in the Star cemetery.—Phoebe Fort, Kingsley, Iowa.

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL CALENDARS

Something Unique Much in Little

Each of the twelve calendar pages contains the Lesson Titles for the month, with references, the Golden Texts, and Daily Home Readings. On each page, also, are found brief Bible Quotations, selected from the poets and other pithy sayings, for memorization and meditation.



The calendar is 8x8 inches when folded for every-day use, and is easily carried in the top to hang by, and the Bible figures are of sufficient size to be seen at a distance of ten feet or more.

It is handsome, convenient, helpful. Get one, hang it in a conspicuous place, and it will be a constant reminder and inspiration to you. Very appropriate as a gifts to members of the Home Department of your Sunday-school.

Price, each, 10c; per dozen, $1.00; hundred, $8.00

BRETHREN PUBLISHING HOUSE, Elgin, Illinois.

THE LORD'S PRAYER and The Ten Commandments

A most appropriate and beautiful ornament for any home. The Lord's Prayer is printed inside an oval figure, and the Ten Commandments, each aptly illustrated, and artistically arranged around this figure, three at the top, three at the bottom and two on each side.

Each of the illustrations is an object lesson, and helps much to make the meaning clearer and more forceful. Especially will the picture appeal to children, to whom knowledge comes most readily through the eye-gate. As they read the words the pictures explain their meaning, and the impressions will be lasting.

The picture is not only beautiful, but artist well. It is printed on heavy paper, in bright colors, beautifully blended. Size, 16x20 inches.

Price, single picture,	15c
Two pictures,	25c
Four pictures,	50c

TWO CENTURIES

OF THE CHURCH OF THE BRETHREN

No Brethren home library is complete without a copy of this book. Another book of equal value and interest to the present and future members of the church will not soon be published. In the twenty-five addresses delivered at the Bicentennial Conference, Des Moines, Iowa, 1908, are admirably portrayed the beginnings, persecutions, struggles, growth and development of the church in the Fatherland, Colonial America and the United States; what the church stands for, her higher spiritual life, her relation to the great moral issues of civilization; the work of women in the church, the Sunday school, missionary and educational work; her publications; the noble deeds and sacrifices of the pioneer preachers.

The book is printed in large type and contains 400 pages. The frontispiece is a fine picture of the five Brethren who were chosen by the Annual Conference of 1907 as the Bicentennial Program Committee, and the portraits of the brethren and sisters on the program are found in connection with their addresses, respectively.

A more fitting souvenir gift book from parents to child, or from friend to friend, would be hard to find.

Price, artistic cloth,	$1.50
Half leather, gilt top,	$2.50

NOTES NOT CLASSIFIED

Limestone.—We have just closed a very interesting series of meetings held in the Limestone church by Bro. J. D. Clark. They began April 10 and closed April 21. Eight were baptized. One was reclaimed. All in all we feel that we had a good meeting.—Anna Arnold, Limestone, Tenn., April 26.

Nampa. church met in council April 7 for elder Bro. J. C. Nehrer, being absent, Bro. J. K. Waltman presided. Not much business came before the meeting. Seven letters were received. The interest seems to be growing at our regular services.—Rose E. Bradley, 208 Sixteenth Avenue, Nampa, Idaho, April 24.

SOUTHWESTERN MISSOURI AND ARKANSAS.

The Sunday-school Meeting for this District convened at Nevada, Mo., April 16. After the opening exercises Bro. R. Wyatt gave us an interesting talk on Easter, leaving the impression of observing the day. The meeting proper was then organized by electing Bro. D. W. Teeter moderator and the writer secretary.

Bro. A. Killingsworth was then called on to explain the duties of the Sunday-school teacher. After that came other talks by those who discussed the subjects in hand with much interest. The various topics were treated in a most interesting and helpful manner. The roll call showed seven schools represented by delegates and letter.

In the afternoon the Nevada Sunday-school gave an excellent program. After this the District program was taken up, and considered by different speakers. The Christian Workers' Meeting and its aims was well treated by Bro. D. W. Teeter. What he said was well appreciated. Later the Round Table demanded the attention of the meeting, being in charge of the District Secretary.

The meeting closed with the best of interest, and then we all took the parting hand.

A. W. Adkins, Secretary.
